

0 2007 1201988 0
California State Library

ORNIA

LIBRARY.

Accession No. 183393

Call No. qc051 S 19 n 91

Established July 20, 1856

V. 31
1161

CALIFORNIA STATE

SAN FRANCISCO News Letter

AND
California Advertiser

PRICE 10 CENTS

SATURDAY, JANUARY 1, 1916

$4.00 PER YEAR

Misuse by Novices Now Impossible
Longer and Even Better Service made doubly certain by new refinements added to the tremendous superiorities of

THE NEW SERIES

Genemotor

Neither Weather Nor Altitude Interfere With This Powerful

$75 f. o. b. Starter for
Lynn, FORD CARS
Mass.

And Its Reliable Electric Lighting System

WINNER of the GOLD MEDAL
at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition

Power transmitted direct from the GENEMOTOR to the engine shaft through a single silent chain and sprockets — thus insuring silent operation.

BUILT BY THE
GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY

CHANSLOR & LYON CO., 1238 Van Ness Avenue

PACIFIC COAST DISTRIBUTORS

SAN FRANCISCO

PORTLAND

SEATTLE

OAKLAND

LOS ANGELES

FRESNO

MISS HARKER'S SCHOOL

PALO ALTO, CALIFORNIA

*Boarding and Day School for Girls,
College Preparatory,*

Grammar and Primary Departments.

Special Care Given to Younger Children.

Spring Term Opens January 3, 1916

HITCHCOCK MILITARY ACADEMY

THIRTY-EIGHTH YEAR

Located one mile from San Rafael in the healthiest part of beautiful Marin County. School fully accredited. Highest rank accorded by U. S. War Dept. High morals and strict attention demanded. Special attention to Physical Culture and Athletics. Expert and experienced instructors. Separate room for each pupil. Juniors in separate building. Thirty-eighth year begins in August. Write for catalog.

ADDRESS

President Hitchcock Military Academy
SAN RAFAEL, CALIFORNIA

The Beringer Conservatory of Music

926 Pierce Street, near McAllister

PHONE FILLMORE 840 SAN FRANCISCO

Directors: Joseph Beringer (Concert Pianist)

Mme. Jos. Beringer (Concert Contralto)

Thorough education in Pianoforte Playing and Singing. Special departments for beginners, amateurs and professionals. Pupils prepared for the operatic and concert stage. Opportunities given to advanced piano and vocal students to join the well known Beringer Musical Club for public appearances.

ARRILLAGA MUSICAL COLLEGE

SAN FRANCISCO

MUSIC IN ALL ITS BRANCHES

Sight Reading, Ear Training, Theory,

Musical Form, Appreciation

TERMS ON REQUEST-CATALOG

2315 JACKSON STREET PHONE WEST 4737

MISS HAMLIN'S SCHOOL FOR GIRLS

2230 PACIFIC AVENUE

2117 } BROADWAY SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
2123 }

Boarding and Day Pupils. "Accredited" by all accrediting institutions, both in California and in Eastern States.

TELEPHONE WEST 546

California Conservatory of Music

Offers Instructions and Training in All Branches of MUSIC, ELOCUTION, DRAMATIC ART, DANCING
Private Lessons in All Branches to Suit the Convenience of the Pupil

Studios and Recital Hall

1509 Gough Street, near Sutter San Francisco, Cal.

Oakland Branch---Pacific Building---16th and Jefferson Streets

A. W. BEST

ALICE BEST

BEST'S ART SCHOOL

1625 CALIFORNIA STREET

Life Classes
Day and Night

Illustrating Sketching
Painting

TYPICAL OF CALIFORNIA

PALACE HOTEL

Since 1875 the Historic Hotel of San Francisco
NEW MANAGEMENT NEW POLICY
European Plan Only. Rates from $2 per day upward.

FAIRMONT HOTEL
The Most Superbly Situated Hotel in the World.
Under Same Management.

The Hotel St. Francis

will never lower its rates beneath the point at which it is possible to provide a service at least equal to that of the best metropolitan hotels in the world. It respectfully invites comparison between its charges and the tariff established by any other hotel of the first rank.

HOTEL OAKLAND

Oakland, California

Overlooking Lake Merritt and the Mountains

Ministering generously to the epicure, the artist, and the lover of a beautiful natural environment.

European Plan: From $1.50 a day up American Plan: From $3.50 a day up

Extraordinarily low rates to permanent guests

CARL SWORD, Manager

400 Rooms—400 Baths

Hotel Adelpia

Chestnut at 13th Street

(Next to Wanamaker's)

Philadelphia, Pennsylvania

For all purposes the most conveniently located hotel.

MODERATE TARIFF

David B. Provan, Managing Director

HOTEL WORTHY

WM. W. BENSON, Manager

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

Two minutes from station, in center of business district

$1.50 UP EUROPEAN PLAN

PORTRAITS

PHOTOGRAPHS

Whigham's Art Studios

739 Market St., opp. Grant Ave.

Phone Douglas 3780

1615 Fillmore St., nr. Geary

Phone West 7831

Elevator Sundays and Holidays: 10 to 4

Special Rates to News Letter Readers. San Francisco, Cal.

VIRGIL STATE

183393

Established July 30, 1856

SAN FRANCISCO NEWS LETTER

California Advertiser

Devoted to the Leading Interests of California and the Pacific Coast.

Vol. XCI

San Francisco, Cal., Saturday, January 1, 1916

No. 1

The SAN FRANCISCO NEWS LETTER AND CALIFORNIA ADVERTISER is printed and published every Saturday by the Proprietor, Frederick Marriott, 21 Sutter street, San Francisco, Cal. Tel. Kearny 3594. Entered at San Francisco, Cal., Post-office as second-class mail matter.
Chicago Office—Geo. Hlsche, 1310 Westminster, Westminster Building, Chicago.
London Office—George Street & Co., 30 Cornhill, E. C., England.
Matter intended for publication in the current number of the SAN FRANCISCO NEWS LETTER AND CALIFORNIA ADVERTISER should be sent to the office not later than 5 p. m. Wednesday.
Subscription Rates (including postage)—1 year, $4.00; 6 months, $2.25; Foreign—1 year, $6.00; 6 months, $3.25.

—Several Eastern cities lamented because they couldn't have a "white" Christmas—while Californians rejoiced in their usual green Christmas.

—Ford took many things into consideration in planning his peace trip to Europe, but left out of his calculations the most important element—human nature.

—San Francisco merchants beat all records for holiday trade this year—and in spite of the croakers who said that the Exposition wouldn't do us any good.

—Even the Congressmen from the Middle West, who have always fought the development of the American merchant marine, are awakening to our need of it.

—The United States, in concealing the facts about the Panama Canal, is following British censorship methods—and may find the plan just as futile and faulty.

—"The goal to which you are striving draws nearer into sight," King George tells his army. He is to be congratulated on having farther-seeing eyes than any one else.

—Why the lack of the Leap Year joke, which was once an American newspaper standard? Does the modern woman feel that she is entitled to propose in any old year?

—England is keeping German commerce off the seas by the use of her navy. We are keeping American commerce off the seas by the employment of criminal stupidity.

—"Wilson's bride plays golf in high boots," says a newspaper headline. These incomplete descriptions of the lady's costume are not only misleading, but, to a modest person, embarrassing.

—If the high-priced special war correspondents who send stories of their dinners with generals to the daily papers were paid for news instead of words, they would have to dine with officers or go hungry.

—New York City was visited Sunday by a storm that included fog, rain, wind, snow, thunder and lightning all at once. All that was lacking to make the thing complete was an earthquake mixed with a cyclone.

—The Supreme Court of West Virginia has decided that the railways of that State must not let their passengers carry liquor. It is easy enough to beat that—drink it before you board the train and carry it inside you.

—Who put the stopper on the noble work of preserving the artistic architectural gems of the Exposition? Even the daily papers have taken the tip, and there's nothing doing. Something's in the wind, for the appealing letters of "A Constant reader," "Pro Bono Publico" and even "An Old Subscriber" are turned down.

—The spirit of peace went to pieces.

—For what's left of the Christmas turkey: "Requiescat in hash."

—Santa Claus must have found hard sledding in Europe this year.

—San Francisco will blow the horn of plenty in her New Year revels.

—Ford is against preparedness—and his peace trip failed because of the lack of it.

—Europe, instead of turning over a new leaf, will turn over the soil for a fresh batch of graves.

—There is only one thing easier than making New Year resolutions—and that is breaking them.

—The mess in China indicates that Yuan Shi Kai had a premonition when he tried to dodge the crown.

—Roosevelt's hat is going into the ring on March 1st. Here's hoping it will be shot full of holes.

—Lads of the boys got out of the trenches by Christmas—were carried out and buried in soldiers' graves.

—A New York woman doctor says that certain foods produce criminal instincts. So does the lack of food.

—It has been demonstrated that the ability to make automobiles does not presuppose talents as a diplomat.

—Missourian, aged ninety-four, has married. He said he was lonesome. One could hardly imagine any other reason.

—With a new mistress in the White House, Washington's society is wondering who's going to be who and who isn't.

—To be up-to-date in war time, little old New York has decided to allow the carcasses of horses to be listed at butcher shops for human consumption. That's a hard blow at the high cost of living. Next!

—An Eastern visitor who has returned home from San Francisco writes to a daily paper expressing gratitude because he was given the finest of care at our city and county hospital when he was stricken with typhoid. He considers the attention he received true hospitality.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

HETCH HETCHY BONDS THE KEY TO EARLY WATER.

A majority of the voters of San Francisco have registered their approval of the Hetch Hetchy water plan, and now, to be logical, it is up to them to render all the assistance possible on their part to assist in the sale of the bonds now on the market. The development of the Hetch Hetchy construction work cannot begin until funds are forthcoming from the sale of these bonds. The city administration has just awarded a contract for a railroad into the Hetch Hetchy Valley at a cost of $1,543,080 for the purpose of transporting the necessary materials into the valley. Work cannot begin until these bonds are sold.

These securities are gilt edge $4\frac{1}{2}$ per cents, and are among the best for investment purposes, as will be found by comparing them with the bonds of Eastern cities of the same size. In fact, the securities of California cities and counties rank as very desirable investments in the East. The Hetch Hetchy bonds are exempt from all taxation, State and local, in this State, and from all contributions from income taxes under the Federal statute. It is not obligatory to list them for income taxes. They are also approved security, legal investments, and may be registered in the name of the owner and against theft or other loss. All that the owner is called upon to do is to detach a coupon, deposit it in bank, or present it at the City Treasury, where payments are made twice a year. Out of \$2,015,000 in the bonds originally placed on sale, \$185,000 were sold up to December 18th. Banks, capitalists, ordinary investors and others are buying them, but the administration is anxious to see them absorbed more quickly, in order to work on the Hetch Hetchy railroad as early as possible this season. The 69 miles of railroad will give employment to about 2,000 men, and the contractors stand ready to attack the work as soon as the required amount of funds are available. Mr. Citizen, as soon as you receive the regular annual interest on your deposit at the bank, invest part of it in several Hetch Hetchy bonds. Your annual income will thereby be increased, and at the same time you will be materially helping the city.

PROSPERITY HERE WITH THE HOLIDAYS.

One large department store entered into the playful game with itself of attempting to score the record of $100,000 in sales transactions during one day, and the indefatigable management came within a few hundreds of dollars of that total several times. On all sides business is reported to be gradually improving in an encouraging manner, and the merchants are beginning to believe that the slowly creeping wavelet that began with the big war orders on the Atlantic seaboard over a year ago has at last reached the Pacific Coast. Naturally there will be a little reaction in trade after the New Year, but local bank clearings, increasing savings deposits, post office receipts, increasing port clearances, and the crowds at all the local amusement places furnish a background of substantial improvement. The bank clearings for November were 25 per cent above the bank clearings of November, 1912, the high record for that month. For the cities of the country outside of New York, the total was the highest ever reported. In the ten months ending October 31, 1915, San Francisco's exports by sea increased $17,354,783.

TEAM-WORK (NEW STYLE).

—Burwell in the Washington Herald.

The excellent holiday trade which developed in the local shopping districts indicates that the attractive goods on sale at the recent Exposition had a very small influence on bay shoppers. Months ago the Exposition management promised to close the gates early in December, so that local merchants would have the city's holiday trade exclusively to themselves, as usual, the underlying reason being the fact that the merchants had contributed freely and largely to the original financing of the Exposition.

The plan of the Southern Pacific Company to erect its own big home office building on lower Market street, the several large world's shipping concerns which are preparing to make San Francisco an agency port of call for their vessels, and the decision of the Government to locate on this bay shore the second largest military and naval camp of the country, are indicators of the prosperity with a big P that the future has in store for San Francisco.

UNCLE SAM'S FIGHT FOR INTERNATIONAL TRADE.

It is generally recognized by the big merchants of this country engaged in international trade that intense competition among the nations of the world will follow the close of the European war. England is neglecting no opportunities to block Germany in trying to recover her trade, which has been cut off by the tie-up of all her big passenger and freighter fleets. The exigencies of war have compelled England, France and Italy to use many of the huge vessels of their merchant marine for purposes of transporting troops and munitions of war. England has drawn heavily in this quarter in order to furnish the necessary supplies and troops for the Gallipoli and Salonika base stations. These international traders of all three of these nations stand prepared to fling every vessel they can command into ocean transportation service the moment signs of assured peace appear on the horizon. There will be a rush on their part to grab every chance of enlarging and making as permanent as possible their prospects in foreign trade. Just now all of them are nervous over the increased imports and exports being made by the United States, while they are monopolized by the business of war.

The financiers and traders of the United States recognize the importance of this situation, and are actively engaged in developing the peculiar opportunities afforded them, as is illustrated in a referendum just sent out by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States for the purpose of endorsing a report of its Department of Commerce Committee. This report recommends an increase in Congressional appropriations for the general broadening and improving of the government's foreign commercial service. The referendum will be considered by seven hundred affiliated organizations, representing every State as well as the territorial possessions. For some time past the consular service has been furnishing very valuable data as to conditions in commerce and the desirable changes to be made in order to render American trade successful in the foreign lands where they, the consuls, reside. Efforts will be made to furnish them with more funds as well as to enlarge the system. The committee in charge of this movement hope to score their five points: Americanization, adequate clerical service, promotion of certain consular agencies to the rank of consulates, the establishment of new consulates, and adequate inspection of the service. Special consideration has been given to the development of trade with the American republics. A present congressional appropriation of $50,000 is available this year for that purpose. Next year the amount will be $75,000. On the showing promised, it is hoped that the United States will be able to hold their own against foreign competition in international trade when the war closes.

PROBLEMS OF A SELF-MADE EMPEROR.

Emperor Yuan Shih-Kai must realize he has mounted to a very ticklish position when he planned to elevate himself to the imperial throne of China. Whether he will be able to complete his plans with the usual ceremonial of ascension is still doubtful. His power in China has for a long time been absolute; he has the confidence of the various parties who regard him as a true patriot willing to step into the dangerous breach where China finds herself in this threatening period of her career, when outside enemies are eagerly seeking opportunities to weaken her for purposes of dismemberment. He espoused the cause of the progressives in the revolution because he realized that China must progress or perish. For a long time he has been recognized as the strongest man in China and the hope of the modernists. He is anti-Japanese, and for that reason Japan is credited with neglecting no opportunity to mine his path to office with revolutions, newspaper attacks and political intrigue. The revolution of Dr. Sun Yat Sen is accredited to Japan, as he sought that country for refuge when his plans failed. Japan and the other nations that are eager to witness the dismemberment of China are greatly opposed to Yuan's action because it will not weaken China. With Yuan Shih-Kai on the throne there begins a dynasty strongly anti-Japanese. If Japan is doing anything to check this movement it is likely taking such steps as seem possible to prevent the coronation of the Emperor Yuan Shih-Kai. By his friends, Yuan Shih-Kai is credited with organizing imperial government from a republican form for the reason that the imperial form is more flexible and stronger to use in defending China against the machinations of several of her unscrupulous neighbors. Under any form of government the United States will remain her strong friend.

STILL SEEKING A CANDIDATE.

Whatever national interest has developed in things political centers on the nebulous condition of the Republican party. There is an embarrassment of profusion in second rate candidates ambitious of first honors in carrying the colors of that party. Roosevelt continues cleverly to play the enigma. He has declared that he will not allow his name on any primary ballots in the presidential preliminaries, and takes the stand of a private citizen who will support any strong candidate of the Republican party, which means that he is back in the Republican fold. His presence at the recent Gary dinner at New York, attended by a number of men prominent in business, finance and politics, has impressed numbers of publicists in reasoning that Roosevelt was there for examination and to state personally how he stood on certain questions supposed to be vital to the country's welfare, or the welfare of the Republican party, such as the tariff, revenue and preparedness. In some sections of the country Roosevelt is still regarded as a very likely candidate on the Republican ticket. He is still considered by certain leading industrial, commercial and financial interests of the country to be sounder on the tariff than Taft, which counts for a great deal with most of the financiers of the Republican party.

Out of a recent poll of 700 votes among prominent Republicans, 249 favored Root and 152 followed Hughes. Hughes is satisfactory to the Progressive element that has rejoined the Republican party, but he still refuses to consider a nomination. Taft supports Root's candidacy. Behind these candidates trail Vice-President Fairbanks, Senators Weeks of Massachusetts and Sherman of Illinois, and ex-Senator Burton of Ohio. The Western contingent of the Republican party is to the fore with a trio of candidates: Senators Borah of Idaho and Cummins of Iowa, and Governor Johnson of California. The Progressives, as a party, making a showing in several Western States only, their strongest position being in California. By and large, numbers of them have returned to the Republican ranks and others have joined the Democrats. Despite all the confusing talk of the Republicans on the present tariff, revenue, war policy and preparedness they realize that Wilson and his policies have caught the confidence of the great thinking public, and they are in serious straits to find a candidate to beat him; this is illustrated by wide combing of the country for a candidate that stands a show of attracting votes. For over a year the leaders of the party have been industriously seeking, seeking, seeking. So far they are still fuddled and undecided over a list a yard long.

It is now fairly well agreed by financial experts that no business set-back will follow the announcement of peace in the European war. A sharp drop will follow, of course, in the purchase of munitions, but the demand for munitions is already slackening on account of the allies furnishing capital and other aid to their colonies so that they may provide the required munitions in extraordinary quantities, which they are now doing. These same experts feel confident that the war will never see another winter campaign, and that the attrition on Germany is already obvious in her financial, food, political and trench skirmish developments. Her dash into the Balkans is considered to be her last programmed spectacular event. The steel ring around her is stronger than at any time during the past eighteen months, and is increasing its strength with the weeks. So confident are the allies of the result that they are already ordering materials and machinery in this country for reconstruction purposes following the close of the war. These growing orders have convinced leading business men of this country that Europe will continue to make like demands on this country for several years after peace is signed. Signs are plentiful that great changes in European industrial affairs will follow the war, and that the great land holdings of Germany, England, Austria and Russia, will be largely cut up into small acreages and distributed among the soldiers on long-time, small payments, in order to prevent an exodus to the Americas and other foreign lands. A back to the land movement would create a tremendous demand for American farming machinery.

TOWN CRIER

—This is a highly rational world, my masters. Look you: one-half the neutral world interested in the European war is energetically engaged in giving donation parties and other entertainments to raise funds for the purpose of relieving distress in Belgium, Poland, Servia and other plague-ridden territories in the war zone; the other half of the neutral world is as keenly and zealously intent in manufacturing and devising new man-killing devices, poisonous gases and electric bolts to wipe out human beings by hundreds. Experts declare that for greater destruction the rifle must be discarded, and a machine gun using belt of cartridges be adopted in order to destroy the enemy by wholesale. Inventors are forcing new machinery to the front so fast that there is an excellent chance that if the war will last another 6 months the new machines, poisons and "devastators" will more than quadruple the number already slain. Nicholas Tesla has a new device which is said to be an imitation of hurling thunderbolts at the enemy. It is a wireless mechanism by which an ordinary aeroplane, manless, can be sent to any point over a ship or an army and drop explosives of enormous strength. The new style of poisonous gas bombs are certainly more insidious than those in vogue four months ago, and face masks afford little protection against them. But why should neutrals worry! Under Professor Jordan, Millionaire Ford and other impulses the peace propaganda seems to be spreading silently and very extensively—in the depths of the sea.

—Special curiosity and quizzing focused on our own Rev. Charles F. Aked when the adventurous Ford crusaders reached the tide waters of England. Not having the proper passports, they were not allowed, of course, to land. As an old-time London resident and divine, Dr. Aked was asked numbers of conundrums regarding the object and prospects of the adventure. As none of those on board the vessel had any more general knowledge of the objects and prospects of the voyage than the bulkheads of the vessel, naturally they winked the other eye and inquired regarding the prospects of crops in London. Very likely the party will monocle the bird of peace as exhibited in Stockholm and return in the same state of equable mind, an excellent ballast to trim the ship.

—The new $5,000,000 background and resting place provided by the enthusiastic and generous taxpayers of San Francisco for their kindly disposed, hard-working and underpaid officials, was formally opened for business this week, when Mayor Rolph flung wide the temporary wooden doors with an immense souvenir key. At his heels trooped his official family, luggage in hand. Naturally, the occasion gave spread-eagle opportunities for the orators, and they beplastered the empyrean with laudations of their surroundings, the cost in mental anxiety on their part, and the number of dollars on the part of the taxpayers.

—Another bunch of feathers was shot out of the Ford Pieced Dove when Bryan sent his greetings to the party doing the Copenhagen sights, and added the P. S. that he could not find time to join the party. With Ford's desertion and Bryan taking the back trail to Chautauqua, the Fordless party will likely run into a cul de sac, impasse and other good dinners with foreign names till Ford pays their trips back home. Of all the rummy events and surprises occasioned by the war this Quixotic adventure is the rummiest and only a genius with millions at hand could transform it into an actual "movie" for the world to grin at.

—Capitalist John H. Spring made an easy mark of himself in the press and pulpit when he selected a pretty nurse for his affinity bride. He should have made his selection from a profession more shy and retreating than nurses. That line of affinity is always so exceedingly plump, impulsive, rosy, joyous and clinging that when a man, married or single, plays the Lochinvar he becomes a mark for his jealous fellows, especially the married men. Spring may be able to get away with the persimmon, but he will have to pay some very heavy express charges before he signs a receipt for his Christmas gift. The only Christmas waifs of the occasion were Rev. Francis Van Horn of Oakland and his smirking shadow. Naturally such a clean-cut, diffident divine as Brother Van Horn has none of the arts of a publicity man, of course, and it was only by a slip that he unconsciously hoisted himself by the slack of his breeches into the limelight. Such an excellent stroke of fine business acumen will stand on the church's bulletin board for at least a week to rouse the envy and chagrin of the advanced radicals heading our gifted Sunday pulpit purveyors of made-over newspaper sensations. For such a stroke of acumen, a tour on the Pantages circuit is open to Brother Van Horn for the season.

—To-day is a black, gloomy, pestilential and fateful day, mates, January 1, 1916. The Town Crier on his rounds has been wallowing through despair and strong language announcing that Minnesota, Colorado, Washington, Oregon and Idaho are as "dry" as the infernal regions and not unlike them in other respects, and that any chance intimacy there with an alcoholic drink means a prison cell. The worst is yet to come, for it falls on our own hearthstones. California and a number of other States in the Union will be put on the operating table at an election this year in order to discover whether they are "wet" or "dry." Oh, for a political doctor that knows his business! The contest will be of the knife and bayonet, chlorine gas and knock-out drops character, and raise merry blazes throughout the State. Whet up your snickersnee and prepare to get busy, for there will be no chance to dodge the issue when the night riders of either side surround a waverer and demand "Under which flag, Bezonian?" And sousing brings no remedy.

—Captain Karl Boy-Ed and the other emissaries of Germany who have been actively instigating trouble in the manufacturing plants of this country, providing German money to subsidize the cheap daily papers of the country and employing knaves to secret bombs on board vessels for destruction at sea, show their all-round nerve in the way they criticise the methods of this country when they are invited officially to depart. Of all the kaleidoscopic sides of war developed in the present contest, this phase is the most extraordinary and novel. The German war party apparently has developed an intense case of rabies to kill, kill, kill anybody and destroy property and everything else that stands in their way to victory. Killing innocent bystanders, as it were, on neutral vessels at sea and in manufacturing plants in neutral lands in no wise advances Germany's legions towards victory. It is war gone mad.

—Workmen are tearing down the Tower of Jewels this week, which means the beginning of the end of our great delight, the Exposition. It develops that these glittering ornamental jewels cost $125,000, a rate of one dollar each, which is about the cost of many of the jewels we see exhibited in the prominent rows and boxes at the grand opera. Local money lenders and pawnbrokers will suffer a terrible war scare if the managers of the Exposition throw these sparkling baubles on the market. There is a report, deleted but not confirmed by the daily press, that well known local society women have formed a steel clad syndicate to snap up these jewels in bulk in case the management offers them for sale.

At the Theatre

By MAY ISABEL FISK.

She speaks over the heads of line standing at the box-office window, to her husband:

Now, Richard, don't take anything but aisle seats—you know I don't like anything else—having those men drag over you between the acts. . . . What's that? . . . Eighth row? Is that the best he can do? . . . Well, ask him again if he's positive. . . . I don't believe it, because just look at all these people waiting he's got to give seats to. Well, if he's perfectly sure I suppose we had better take them. . . . Now, Richard, I believe if you had been a little more decided with him, we would have done better. . . . Of course he said so—they're all disagreeable, but I think. . . . (They enter the house.)

The ushers are all busy. I never went into a theatre in my life that they weren't showing some one to a seat and I had to wait. And it's late at that. . . . Well, dear, it's almost time for the curtain to go up—I call that late. . . . If it's the eighth row we can find them ourselves. Come on. . . . Yes, we can; come on. . . . There, this is it. What are the numbers? . . . Oh, Richard, I told you on the aisle. . . . Well, suppose he did, I said on the aisle, didn't I? . . . I don't care, I said. . . . Well, I'm not going to stand up here before all these people and argue about it—I know what I said. . . . I'm not, either, but you will make me if you continue like that. . . . All right, have it your own way—you are so obstinate, Richard, when you get an idea in your head. . . . I shan't quarrel with you, no matter what you say—I'm good-natured, if you're not.

Oh, bother—now we've got to squeeze past all of them. It will pull my bodice all crooked. . . . There, I knew you would—you are so clumsy, Richard. . . . Done? Why, you've stepped on my skirt and torn it loose from the belt. You might have been a little careful. . . . How could I hold it up passing in front of all these people? You are so unreasonable.

These vacant seats must be the ones. I don't believe I'm going to be able to see a thing. You know, Richard, it wasn't my idea to see this play at all. I should have much preferred to wait until next week when they put on a fresh play, whatever it was—they've been playing this so long. . . . If that woman down in front doesn't take her hat off I shan't be able to see a thing. . . . Now, isn't that horrid of you, Richard, and just like you. What did you bring me for—to have a good time or not? . . . Well, all right; then let me enjoy myself in my own way.

What is that usher beckoning to us for?—what does he want? . . . Well, here are our tickets. . . . What! They're balcony seats! Then what in the world did you drag me down here for? . . . I didn't insist any such thing. I told you at the box-office the eighth row would do. . . . You couldn't hear with all those people talking? . . . I don't believe these seats are sold at all. . . . I don't believe it, with all that line waiting behind you. Of course there's no use standing here in the middle talking about it. (They crush their way out.)

I don't see how I'm going to climb these stairs in this tight gown. . . . No, I don't want to go home—how hateful of you to suggest it. . . . There, we're up at last.

Eighth row in the balcony! Horrible! Go and see if you can't get others. . . . All sold out? I don't care if he did say so—maybe he's changed his mind by now. . . . Very well; I see you are determined to make me uncomfortable. . . . I can't help it if they don't like it—we've got to get by—you will kindly remember I told you to get aisle seats.

I don't feel as if I were going to enjoy this a bit. . . . You don't either? Thank you, that is pleasant. Take me out for a nice evening and then do all you can to spoil everything.

These seats are worse than ever when you get in them. There, I've dropped my boa climbing over these people. You'll have to go back and look for it. . . . Why, I certainly did wear it, and I haven't taken my coat off yet—I couldn't have left it anywhere. Just ask them all to get up while you look. . . . Well, it's a matter of perfect indifference to me whether they like it or not. I'm not going to lose my new boa just for the sake of not disturbing them.

You don't see it? Then poke about underneath with your cane. . . . You don't see it? Well, you'll have to ask them all to get out in the aisle while you look under. . . . There, what's that big black thing? . . . Oh, that lady's foot. . . . No, it isn't there. . . . Now, don't ask me again if I left it at home. But it must be there—I remember stepping on something as we were getting past. There, what's that? . . . Oh, that man's hat! It does look badly. That must have been what I stepped on. It is too bad, but you know really it is a risk to put a hat on the floor—you know if you held it in your lap or pinned it on the back of the seat the way we do—(All seat themselves again.) . . . No, I didn't wear it to-night—I remember, now. I was afraid I'd lose it just like this.

Oh, Richard, you didn't get a program. . . . You have one? That won't do—I want another one to use now and one to put in our program book. . . . No, I won't wait till later—they may be all gone. . . . Now, I ask you, did we come here for the comfort of these people or to amuse ourselves? . . . I should think so—go and get it. (Every one again rises.)

They're all gone? What did I tell you—didn't I say they would be? Now, what good would it have done to have waited till the end of the performance if they are all gone already? If you would only listen to me. . . . Good gracious, Richard, I forgot to tell the nurse to be sure to give baby the bottle in the top of the ice-box instead of the one at the bottom. What shall we do? . . . You'll have to go right out and telephone—that's all there is to it. . . .

If you say anything more about disturbing these people I shall lose my temper—what are they here for? (Every one again rises.)

Well, you're back again just in time—there goes the curtain. . . . Why, for goodness' sake, if this isn't that stupid thing I went to see with Alice!

—There was a crowd at Techau Tavern on Christmas eve which taxed the capacity of this famous cafe. The place was aglitter with electric bulbs cunningly distributed through garlands of evergreen. There was, of course, the usual good dancing floor and the usual good music, but a most unusual crowd even for this popular cafe. Every one was merry and light-hearted, and the time was all too short before Christmas Eve had slipped by and it was Christmas morning. One would think to look in at the Tavern any evening in the week that there was some special celebration afoot, the crowd of dancers is so large and so obviously happy. But it is only the regular nightly Candy Dance, at which the ladies receive a truly handsome souvenir in the form of a fancy box or basket of Lyon's Perfection California Glace Fruits. The gentlemen are not forgotten, either. The souvenir for the Cigarette Dances is a large box of Pall Mall cigarettes, presented without competition of any kind.

—"Would you like some views of the hotel to send to your friends?" "Sir," said the disgruntled guest, "I presume it will be better for me to keep my views to myself."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

—Our friend, Walter E. Hettman who was formerly Assistant United States Attorney, here in San Francisco, has now established well-appointed offices in rooms 407 and 409 Mechanics' Institute Building, 57 Post street.

WHITE HORSE

SCOTCH

From MACKIE & CO.
ISLAY, SCOTLAND

Never in Bulk

CHARLES MEINECKE & Co.

AGENTS PACIFIC COAST 314 SACRAMENTO ST., S. F.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES

BY OUTSIDER

"Outsiders see most of the game."—Old Saw

The Year of 1915

The year 1915 will be known to the future historian of sport as the year of idol smashing, and in no previous period of the same length have there been so many favorites dethroned. No longer can we be said to have an oligarchy or even an aristocracy in sport of any kind, with the possible exception of balk-line billiards, in which Willy Hoppe appears to be still supreme, but billiards is a game to which the public is indifferent nowadays.

The war has withdrawn competition by England and her colonies, and in this respect has eliminated international flavor. Polo, lawn tennis, rowing, track athletics and boxing practically have been all merely national affairs.

The most noted feature of the year is the complete entry and exit of the Federal league in baseball, and the falling off in attendance at the games in the East. Perhaps one caused the other, and there is no doubt that if you increase the number of attractions in any branch of amusement you are bound to a certain extent to lessen the quality and therefore the drawing power.

The American League team of Boston—the Red Sox—won the world's series. They defeated the Philadelphia Club of the National League by four games to one. It is probably fair to say that, the country over, the feat of the Boston Red Sox in winning the American championship and that of the Philadelphia Club in winning the National championship were extremely popular, for the Philadelphia Nationals had not won a league championship for thirty-four years, and Pat Moran, the manager, and his star pitcher, Alexander, were the talk of the country. When it came to the world's series, it was believed that Alexander, if he could pitch enough games, would win for Philadelphia. As a matter of fact, he won only the first one played, and Boston took the next four games. Other matters of interest were the deep slump of the New York National League team and the weakness of the Philadelphia Athletics.

In football our local interest was largely diminished by the silly split between Stanford and California, but in the East more than 30,000 games were played last fall, and the general spread of football knowledge throughout the country was remarkable. There is no longer any monopoly of skill and knowledge of the game. Cornell and Pittsburg went through the season without defeat, and Cornell gathered the greater prestige on account of their victory over Harvard—a very strong team, which defeated all its other opponents. The absolute elimination of Yale as a factor, and the playing of such minors as Washington and Jefferson, and Colgate, were some of the features aside from the supremacy of Cornell and Pittsburg.

Of greater interest to us perhaps was the victory of the Oregon Aggies over the Michigan Aggies, who in turn had defeated the University of Michigan, rated as one of the strongest teams in the East. The subsequent defeat of the Oregon Aggies by Oregon, themselves lower in power than the Washington State or the University of Washington, gave rise to interesting speculation as to how we might have stood as compared to the best in the East.

It was unfortunate that the strong wind at the P. P. I. E. track events should have prevented any of the times being accepted as records, as we had the classiest field ever gathered in the west.

However, Meredith of Penn in the quarter, Kolehmainen of the Irish-American in the five mile, Worthington of Boston in the broad, Ryan of the Irish-American in the hammer, were really the only ones of Eastern favorites who made good. Loomis of Chicago won the 100 yard. Morse of the Salem Crescent the 220, Ray of Illinois the one mile, Murray of the Olympics the high and low hurdles, Mucks of Wisconsin the discus and the shot, Bellah of Multnomah the pole vault, Horine of the Olympics the high jump, Talbot of Kansas City the 56-pound weight, and Richards of Cornell the Decathlon.

But in the line of track events the real features of the year stand out in the work of Taber, formerly of Brown, and of Meredith of Pennsylvania. Meredith made good whenever called upon, and Taber's clipping three-twentieths of a second off Walter George's world professional record for the mile run 4:12 3-5, was the outstanding feature of the year, however dubious this "record" may be, it being a paced performance and not in competition. Goulding's work as a walker was remarkably good. Kolehmainen still remains the star of our distance running.

In tennis, still more extraordinary events transpired, principally the overthrow of the national singles champion, McLoughlin, by his team-mate, Johnston of California. Johnston went through the field in such a manner that every one who followed the game closely was convinced that there was no fluke about it, and that at the time of the contests right through to the end he was the best man in the game. He and his partner, Griffin, won the national doubles. Molla Bjurstedt, the Norwegian, won the national women's singles, and Mrs. Wightman and Miss Sears won the women's doubles.

All these heroes and heroines, however, succumbed at one time or another later, Johnston being defeated by a Stanford undergraduate, H. V. P. Johns, so that the mere holding of the championship does not always insure the road to continued victory. Subsequently Molla Bjurstedt was beaten two out of three by May Bundy, and suffered defeat also at the hands of Mrs. Wightman, and our own Anita Myers, who had hitherto never figured in national competition.

In rowing, Yale, under Coach Guy Nickalls, proved that her victory by a margin of a few feet over Harvard in 1914 was no fluke, by giving the Crimson eight a thoroughly convincing defeat at New London this year, taking the freshman contest as well. In the varsity they defeated the Crimson by a half-dozen lengths. At Poughkeepsie Cornell again came to her own, winning decisively, but the remarkable feature of the contest was the excellent work of the visitors from Leland Stanford, who, with intense heroism, pushed the more skillful Ithacans to the very end.

In golf the upsets were quite as remarkable as in tennis, for there were three men, Jerome Travers, Francis Ouimet and "Chick" Evans who, before the contest at Detroit, were sufficiently above the field as to make it a fair proposition that one of the three would win. In addition to these, Marston and one or two others were looked upon as dangerous, but no one had a word for Bob Gardner, the ultimate winner.

—Hepsy—That boy of ours seems mighty fond of tending to other folk's business. Hiram—Guess we'll have to make a lawyer of him. Then he'll get paid for doing it.—Boston Transcript.

This Little HUMAN DOCUMENT tells the story of

Gail Borden
EAGLE BRAND
CONDENSED MILK

Its uniformity enables the mother to determine with accuracy the proper modification desired. Its absolute purity assures her that the baby is getting a thoroughly safe and wholesome food. It keeps well and is easily prepared.

Many mothers cannot nurse their little ones. When this contingency arises the problem is to get the substitute that is best suited to the baby's individual requirements.

"Eagle Brand" has been successfully used as an infant food for half a century, and the thousands of recorded cases of children who have been carried through the critical period on "Eagle Brand" have established it as the leading product of its kind.

Borden's Condensed Milk Co. "Leaders of Quality"
Est. 1857
New York

Borden's Condensed Milk Co. R.L. 1-16
108 Hudson St., New York
Please send me "Baby's Welfare" also "Baby's Biography" as well as "Borden's Recipes"
Name.....
Address.....

PLEASURE'S WAND

"Obey no wand but Pleasure's."—Tom Moore.

"Daddy Long-Legs" at the Columbia.

It's been a long time since we have had a sweeter, finer and cleaner play in this town than "Daddy Long-Legs." There's something almost exalting about it—something which makes you feel like doing better and bigger things in your own life. The play makes for the kind of sentiment which is real and human. Plays of this kind have a mission. They should be fostered and encouraged. Renee Kelly is seen again as Judy. This time she returns as a kind of near-star. Her tutelage under Henry Miller has made a finished actress of her. Ruth Chatterton, I believe, is the original in the role, but here we are more than satisfied and delighted with the beautiful performance of the role which Miss Kelly gives. She adds just the right touch of wistful tenderness to a character which may be easily spoilt. She makes her a genuine living personality. Miss Kelly has learned the value of repression and consistency. She seems not to be acting the part, but to be living it. This is probably the chief reason why her performance is so impressive. With one or two exceptions, the cast is practically the same as before. Byron Beasley has the Henry Miller role, and he deserves credit for a sincere performance moulded a great deal on the lines of his distinguished predecessor. Dear Mrs. Eberle is again seen as Mrs. Semple, and she is happy in the fact that on this trip she has her husband with her, who is doing the part of Walters in the last act. That the play has not lost a vestige of its popularity is attested by the large and enthusiastic audiences. It is a pleasure to listen to the comments of the audience as they leave the theatre. Here comes the true and unvarnished test of the success of a play. To have missed witnessing "Daddy Long-Legs" is to have missed one of the most charming plays seen here in years. I know of people who have gone to see it two and three times.

PAUL GERSON.

Oriental Houris Capture Pantages.

Pantages contributed a capital bill to boost the holiday joy of this week. The cream of the offering was "The Girls of the Orient," who were purely Oriental as far as the diaphanous draperies revealed—if there was any room for doubt it was laid bare by the harem songs that nunciated the dark and fathomless plot of the Grand Pasha to steal a $5,000,000 American heiress who drifted into his clutches, just as the curtain lifted. In the dancing, fun and confusion of love making which followed, the Pasha married the wrong woman, and the heiress cuddled herself in the arms of an amorous youth who had been singing very sweet ivrics to her. Throughout the lively courting and comedy, there danced a comedian with hinges all about him, even in his hair. As an eccentric dancer he deserved a bronze Exposition plaque. John and Mae Burke hit the house so hard that it shouted salvos of calls for more. Burke explained that his wife had contracted a San Francisco cold, and the best Mrs. Burke could do was to invite the audience over to the house for supper after the performance. Burke puts over the experiences of a "raetime soldier" under the coaxing of Mrs. Burke, and he does it in a way that is a scream. The dancing violinist, Naomi, contributes a pretty bit of artistic playing and dancing, and does it so naturally and attractively in her clever handling of the violin as to score a distinct place in high class vaudeville. Francis Dyer has a good voice and charming personality, and exercises both in a way to win spontaneous encores. The four Portia sisters have no bones in their bodies, and are apparently able to contort themselves into any shape. The handsome red plush draperies furnished a beautiful background to their act. The playlet was a light comedy skit by Willard Mack, enacted by Lee Morgan and Beryl Gray on the antics of a late commuter in catching his daily train. An excellent reel relating an adventure in the great serial, "The Red Circle," completed an unusually entertaining bill.

Lillian Russell, who will appear at the Orpheum next week.

ADVANCE ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Lillian Russell at the Orpheum.—The Orpheum announces for next week a program of extraordinary interest. Lillian Russell, the most famous American woman on the stage, "The Queen of Comic Opera," has returned to the footlights to play a brief tour of the Orpheum Circuit. Miss Russell's engage-

Not
Gray
Hairs
but tired
Eyes
Make us look older than we are.
Old age
and Dull
Eyes—
tell-tale.

Don't Tell
Your age

After the Movies
go home
and Murine
your Eyes.
Two Drops
will rest, refresh
and cleanse.
Have it
handy.

Murine Eye Remedy Company, Chicago. Sends Book of the Eye upon request.

ment in this city, which begins next Sunday matinee, is positively limited to one week. She will sing old songs and wear dazzling gowns.

Fatima, one of Abdul Hamid II, the deposed Sultan of Turkey's dancing girls, will appear in a repertoire of Egyptian dances. At the outbreak of the Turkish revolutions, she was one of the ten dancing girls who escaped from the harem. Nine of the number were captured and returned. Fatima made her way into Russia, and thence to Berlin. Her appearance in New York proved a tremendous sensation.

Ben Ryan and Harriette Lee, a clever team of singing and dancing comedians, will present the comedy skit, "You've Spoiled It." Comfort and King will make a bid for laughter in Junie McCree's skit, "Coon Town Divorcons." George Austin Moore and Cordelia Haager will swap yarns, sing songs and dance nimbly. Max Le Hoen and Mlle. Dupreece will give an exhibition of fancy marksmanship. Mlle. Dupreece lights matches by snipping the end and the next bullet extinguishes the flame. Le Hoen plays an accompaniment on a target of chimes while his associate sings. Florrie Millership, formerly of Harry Fox and The Millership Sisters, is doing a "single" entitled "Little Miss Dainty." Arthur McWatters and Grace Tyson and Page, Hack and Mack, will be included in the attractions. "Uncle Sam at Work," one of the most remarkable films ever taken, has been exclusively secured by the Orpheum Circuit. It is in ten consecutive installments, the first one, "Where Uncle Sam Makes His Laws and Keeps His Relics," will be the finale to this splendid bill.

Second Concert of Symphony Orchestra.—The San Francisco Symphony Orchestra anticipates that the gratifying results of the first pair of concerts will not only be equaled, but exceeded, at the second pair of concerts which will be given at the Cort on Friday afternoon, January 7th, at 3 o'clock sharp, and Sunday afternoon, January 9th, at 2:30 o'clock. Seats for both concerts are on sale now at the usual places. The beautifully balanced program for the concerts of January 7th and 9th includes "The Peri" (Danced Poem) by Paul Dukas, which will be played for the first time in America by the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra; the British Folk-Music Settings of Percy Grainger and the "Scheherazade" Symphonic Suite of Rimsky-Korsakow.

The symphonic suite, "Scheherazade," of Nikolous A. Rimsky-Korsakow, is an attempted translation into the universal language of music of four of the many stories told to the Sultan Schahriar by Scheherazade in the Arabian Nights. The British Folk Music Settings of Percy Aldridge Grainger, lovingly and reverently dedicated to the memory of Edvard Grieg, by the composer, are under the following titles: (a) My Robin is to the Greenwood Gone; (b) Molly on the Shore; (c) Irish Tune from County Derry; (d) Shepherd's Hey. "The Peri" (Danced Poem) of the great French composer, Paul Dukas, has a score of great beauty, in every way worthy of the mastermind which also conceived the musical translation of Goethe's "Apprentice-Sorcerer."

Big Attractions at Pantages.—Mme. Doree and her fourteen operatic vocalists, offering "A Grand Operatic Revue," will be the stellar attraction on the new eight-act show which opens at the Pantages next Sunday. Mme. Doree played the Pantages circuit with the "Imperial Grand Opera Company" about two years ago, and at that time scored a tremendous success with her condensed versions of the standard operas. This season she has elaborated on her former offering, and will stage moments from "Lucia di Lammermoor," "Martha," "Cavalleria Rusticana," "Il Trovatore," "Carmen," and other well liked favorites. During the engagement the operas will be changed four times. Laurie Ordway, the merry little comedienne, who is also a prime favorite with Pantages audiences, will return with her mirthful character song hits, including her newest travesty entitled "The Cross Red Nurse." "Kings of Harmony" is the catchy typing of four big singing fellows who have arranged a rollicking vaudeville specialty with a program of striking song numbers. "Alice Teddy" is a shaggy-haired brown bear that skates, clowns with her partner, and indulges in a comedy wrestling match. Al Luttringer and company will present "The Girl from the West," a typical frontier playlet with plenty of gun play and virile love making. Billy Strong, a black faced funster, and the San Diego skating four, who have been creating a furore in the South, will round out the vaudeville numbers. The third installment of "The Red Circle" will also be shown.

Monster Benefit to M. B. Leavitt.—M. B. Leavitt, one of the prominent old-time San Francisco theatre managers, who later went to New York, will be given a monster testimonial benefit in the latter city by "the combined managers and distinguished personages of all parts of the world" at the Manhattan Opera House, Tuesday afternoon, January 11th. The Shuberts, Daniel Frohman, Al Heyman, George Lederer, Buffalo Bill, Fred Niblo, the Selwyns, Oscar Hammerstein and hundreds of others are among those working hard to make the benefit a great success. This testimonial marks Leavitt's retirement from the amusement world after an experience of fifty years.

Big Hit of "Daddy Long-Legs" at Columbia.—"Daddy Long-Legs" is again crowding the Columbia Theatre to the doors, just as it did a year ago when Henry Miller gave San Francisco its first opportunity to see the dramatization of Jean Webster's much read story. Renee Kelly is once more the Judy of the cast, and is surrounded by Byron Beasley and the players who were here before in the play. "Daddy Long-Legs" will start the second and final week of its run on Monday night, and will be seen for the last time on Sunday, January 9th. It tells with exquisite skill a dainty love story that is as fresh and sweet and wholesome as an early summer breeze. It is to-day the biggest dramatic success on the American stage. One of the reasons for the play's tremendous appeal is that it fairly bubbles with whimsical humor and sparkles with the irresistible buoyancy of youth. "Daddy Long-Legs" is an exceedingly up-to-date version of Cinderella and Prince Charming, and centers around Judy Abbott, a pretty founding girl, and Jervis Pendleton, a lonely bachelor who likes to do good deeds and surround them with absolute secrecy. Matinees Wednesdays and Saturdays.

—"You remember that chap Jones, who made a bet of $10,000 that he would walk from San Francisco to New York without a cent in his pocket?" "Yes; did he win the bet?" "Not quite. He got as far as here, was arrested as a vagrant and forced against his will to ride three blocks in a patrol wagon. That disqualified him."—Exchange.

Orpheum

O'Farrell Street Bet. Stockton and Powell
Phone Douglas 70

Week beginning THIS SUNDAY AFTERNOON. MATINEE EVERY DAY.

A GREAT NEW SHOW LILLIAN RUSSELL

America's Loveliest Woman Singing Her Favorite Songs
ONE WEEK ONLY

FATIMA Principal Dancing Girl of Abdul Hamid II, Deposed Sultan of Turkey; BEN RYAN & HARRIETTE LEE in "You've Spoiled It"; COMFORT & KING in Junie McCree's Colored Classic "Divorcons"; GEORGE AUSTIN MOORE & CORDELIA HAAGER, Songs and Stories; IF BOEN & DUPREECE, FLORRIE MILLERSHIP; ARTHUR MCWATTERS & GRACE TYSON; PAGE, HACK & MACK; UNCLE SAM AT WORK. Greatest Motion Picture Ever Filmed. Secured Exclusively for the Orpheum Circuit.
Evening Prices, 10c., 25c., 50c., 75c. Box seats $1. Matinee prices (except Sundays and holidays) 10c. 25c. 50c. Phone Douglas 70

S. F. Symphony Orchestra

ALFRED HERTZ CONDUCTOR

SECOND PAIR OF CONCERTS

Friday Afternoon, Jan. 7, at 3 o'clock; Sunday Afternoon, Jan. 9 at 2:30 o'clock

CORT THEATRE

Programme—"The Peri" (Danced Poem) Paul Dukas (first time in America.) British Folk-Music Settings Percy Grainger. "Scheherazade," Symphonic Suite, op. 35. Rimsky-Korsakow

Prices—Friday, 25.00, 1.50, 1.00, 75c.; box and loge seats, $3.00. Sunday, 1.00 75c. 50c. box and loge seats, 1.50. Seats on sale Monday at box offices Sherman Clay & Co., Cort Theatre, and Kohler & Chase.

Pantages' Theatre

Market Street Opposite Mason

Commencing Sunday Afternoon, January 2, 1916

A FINE NEW BILL

Farewell Vaudeville Tour of MME. DOREE & CO. in "GRAND OPERATIC REVUE," Great Moments from Standard Operas, Cast of Fourteen Operatic Stars. Program changed three times during engagement: The Merry Comedienne, LAURIE ORDWAY.

EIGHT GREAT PANTAGES FEATURES.

Columbia Theatre

Corner Mason and Geary Streets
Phone Franklin 150
The Leading Playhouse

SAME GREAT SUCCESS AS BEFORE

Up to and including Sunday Night January 9th

Most fascinating comedy of the day

DADDY LONG-LEGS

By Jean Webster—Renee Kelly as Judy

(Henry Miller Manager)

Matinees Wed. and Sat.; Prices 25c to $1.50.

HUGHES ART COLLECTION ON EXHIBIT.

Local art lovers will be interested to know that the Rose Caldwell Hughes collection of paintings has been placed on exhibition in San Francisco at the William Keith Gallery, Sutter street, above Powell. Mrs. Hughes, whose husband was the late Lieutenant-Commander Hughes, of the U. S. S. Philadelphia, and was at one time in command at the Mare Island Navy Yard, is a prominent figure in social circles in San Francisco, New York and Washington, D. C. Through her intimate acquaintance with many celebrated artists and art connoisseurs, and her residence in the great art centers of the world, she acquired a fine understanding in selecting the best productions to be obtained. The incomparable Whistler's wonderful portrait of Lady Archibald Campbell, as Orlando, brings the realization of its great perfection.

Though Mrs. Hughes has seen the greatest canvases in the world, it is gratifying to note that some of her most prominent selections are works of American artists, though there are many rare European masterpieces in her collection. The great American master, George Inness, is represented by two pictures done at widely different periods: the Delaware Valley in 1864, painted early in his career, and The End of the Day, done years afterward, are distinctly different in style, but equally wonderful in execution.

There is a beautiful J. Francis Murphy, in the most delicate of sunset tints; Gustav Weigand's Apple Blossoms; a P. P. I. E. gold medal creation of Robert Reid's, and a Wood Nymph by Lillian Genth, whose pictures are more in demand than those of any other American woman. Bruce Crane, George H. Smilie, Carlton Wiggins, George H. Bogert, Carleton T. Chapman, George McCord, E. Loyal Field, A. Stover, Arthur Hoeber, Gilbert Saul, Homer Martin, R. A. Blakelock, George Breustle, Max Weyl, Thomas B. Craig and Charles P. Gruppe, Americans of the highest standing in the world of art, are among those represented by their pictures. Noteworthy European pictures are a portrait by Nicholas Largilliere, a landscape by Richet, who was a pupil, and the reputed son of Diaz, Daubigny's House by Fournier, and a head by Jacquet. Etchings by Pennell, Whistler, Tissot and others form an exquisite adjunct to the collection.

THE BOYS OF LA BASSEE.

You'll see from the La Bassee Road on any summer day,
The children herding nannygoats, the women making hay,
You'll see the soldiers, khaki clad, in column and platoon,
Come swinging up La Bassee road from billets in Bethune.
There's hay to save and corn to cut, but harder work by far
Awaits the soldier boys who reap the harvest fields of war.
You'll see them swinging up the road, where women work at hay
The straight, long road, La Bassee road, on any summer day.

The night breeze sweeps La Bassee road, the night dews wet
the hay,
The boys are coming back again, a stragglng crowd are they.
The column's lines are broken up and gaps in the platoon.
They'll not need many billets now for soldiers in Bethune.
For many boys, good lusty boys, who marched so very fine,
Have now got little homes of clay beside the firing line.
Good luck to them, Godspeed to them, the boys who march away,
A-singing up La Bassee road each sunny summer day.

—Patrick MacGill.

—Emil Steinegger, a native son of California, begins his twenty-seventh year as a piano pedagogue this term. For ten years Mr. Steinegger has been the leading teacher of the Hitchcock Academy, San Rafael, and is thoroughly acquainted with improvisation, form and the genuine Leschetitzky system of technical development on the violin. If preferred, lessons will be given at the homes of pupils or at the professor's residence.

—The minister was dining with the Fullers, and he was denouncing the new styles of dancing. Turning to the daughter of the house, he asked sternly: "Do you yourself, Miss Fuller, think the girls who dance these dances are right?" "They must be," was the answer, "because I notice the girls who don't dance them are always left."—Exchange.

ROCKEFELLER AND THE DARKY MINER.

While at Lester, Colorado, Rockefeller made the rounds of the mining camp and held conversation with a number of the miners, among them a darkey known as a "character" among his fellows.

In front of the camp boarding house he met two very black negro miners. He walked up to the men, introduced himself, and shook hands.

One of the darkies held the millionaire's hand and pumped it vigorously, while he let out a loud exclamation:

"Is you Mistah Rockyfeller?" he gasped. "Fo' de love ob Gawd, man! Now, is dat so! And you-all heah shaking hands wid a black boy like me! Now, can you beat dat!"

The darkey pumped Mr. Rockefeller's arm vigorously again, and still held his hand. Then he continued:

"You! De great and genuine Mistah Rockyfeller! Good Gawd, man! Ain't you got a crust now! Jest hear dat! De only true Mistah Rockyfeller!"

The speaker is one of the camp's most eccentric characters. A crowd quickly gathered, when it was seen he was talking to the New Yorker.

"My name's William Hood, Mistah Rockyfeller," the darkey went on, grinning from ear to ear. "I done heah about you-all forever, but I sho never expected to be standing heah shakin' you-all by de hand. Mr. Rockyfeller! Ain't dat a name now! Everybody's allus yelling and a-hollering about you-all in de newspapers. Nobody don't holler about me in de papers. Well, now, suh, I wants to tell you-all dat I'se a most faithful employee for you-all, suh. And I wants to know, suh, when I'se going tuh git in on de pension list? I deserves a pension, suh; 'deed I does!"

"Well," replied Mr. Rockefeller, "I am not on the pension list myself yet, William."

"Yes," argued Hood, "but you-all ain't doing no laborious labor!"

CUTS OFF HIS FINGER AS OBJECT LESSON.

We have heard of the absent-minded man who struck at a fly on his nose with his razor, but never of a human being who cut off a second finger in explaining how he happened to lose the first one. In the current issue of Farm and Fireside is the following story of a man who succeeded in this remarkable achievement:

"He did not know much about machinery, but thought he would put one of his hands down near a rapidly whirling circular saw to see if he could feel any rush of wind. He ventured too far and lost one of his fingers, cut off as by a mighty knife.

"How did you do it?" some one asked, hearing the cry of terror and pain from the man's lips.

"'Why, I wanted to feel the wind and held out my hand like this,' was the reply, as the thoughtless man put out the hand which had not yet suffered from contact with the pitiless saw. That hand, too, was thrust too near the teeth of the saw and another finger went too."

WHY COBB LIKES AMERICA.

No smirking degenerate undertakes to sell you nasty photographs or escort you to nasty places, as in Paris; no beggars spring out of the ground or materialize out of the air, as in London; no military man crowds you off the sidewalk, as in Berlin of yore; no pickpocket trails you about, awaiting his chance to pilfer your purse or filch your watch, as in Rome; no baggage-man rifles your baggage, as in Switzerland; no guide steers you into shops with a view to collecting private commissions on your purchases, as everywhere on the Continent. Why, you may go for days and days without being pestered or mulcted, or cheated or mistreated, or called hard names in foreign languages. In their quaint, crude, unsophistication these American people exact payment only for what they deliver, and no more than a fair payment for that. It certainly is not in the least like Europe.—Irvin Cobb in Saturday Evening Post.

—"Look here," said the head of the firm addressing the new stenographer. "This letter is all wrong. Your punctuation is all bad and your spelling is worse. I can't find it hard to put any sense into the letter." "Well, sir," said the girl, "I'm sorry if my work isn't to your liking, but how can I expect to get a Mrs. Noah H. Webster for $13 a week?"—Exchange.

This is the season of the year when the calendar of the average woman shows that she is not entirely intent upon her own pleasures. Every one is concerned more or less in the affairs of the less fortunate, and during the holiday time this concern is translated into terms of activity. Every organization bestirs itself at the year-end to make good its promise of helpfulness, and the women who serve on the directorates of these organizations find it difficult to make their spare moments square up to the demands made upon them.

The woman whose whole holiday concern is her family and personal friends has no idea of the toll that is taken in time and money and sympathy from the women who have wider horizons. The other day I happened into the Recreation Club for girls who work, and there I found Mrs. Daniel Jackling, Miss Josselyn, Mrs. George Cadwallader, and half a dozen others whisking around in big cover-all aprons, busily helping to cook a holiday turkey dinner for the hundreds of girls who use this club house in their scant margin of leisure and find in it the only dabs of color in otherwise drab lives.

The cynic would visualize a group of women of this sort standing around in the latest postures, looking highly decorative and altogether pleased with themselves for throwing a sop to the dispossessed. But as a matter of fact they looked anything but decorative, for they were aproned up for the real business of work, and they showed that they knew how to fall in and do the practical things. And as for their mental attitude, they were not doing logarithms in sociology, and wondering whether it is right to throw a sop now, or to wait until the ultimate day of more equal distribution; nor were they enamored of themselves in the role of Lady Bountifuls. They just went about the business of getting up that dinner in the simple, efficient manner of women who have found that there are a lot of less fortunate girls in the world who are willing to let others become shareholders in providing a little happiness for them.

This scene that I happened in on is typical of the sort of thing that most of the women in that set have been doing this year-end, and it is significant of the quickened social conscience that the word "charity" never falls save from ashamed lips, and that the idea that our scheme of things is not perfect seems to have percolated through the top strata that is still privileged to dispense largesse.

The woman who poses as the beneficent good angel, who goes about with one eye on the bystanders, and drips silly philosophy sweet as honey from the comb, has gone out of style as thoroughly as the mid-Victorian lady with the simper. So many of the modern young women in society have gone to college and have studied economics and sociology, and many of those who have not gone to the university, have read along those lines, with the result that all the charitable work that is done by that group is done with the full understanding that it does not solve any problems, and should not be used as a salve to personal conscience. But after all, it helps to smooth a few of the rough spots out of the lives of those who must travel along the thorny paths, and so long as it does that, praise be that the work shall go on.

Every one is still talking about the Italian fete which Mrs. Crocker gave the other night and set a new standard for benefits of this sort. It was far and away the most triumphant affair of the kind that has ever been given here, and small wonder that congratulations are thick and numberless. That it would be a success from the standpoint of numbers was a foregone conclusion, for Mrs. Crocker is in a position that commands a large attendance. But the artistic success of the program was a surprise even to the most kindly disposed. The only flaw in the evening, and one that was only felt by the early comers, was the fact that while tickets read for ten o'clock, the performance did not begin until after eleven. As there was a benefit theatre performance on, and a number of private dinner parties, it was only natural that the performance should be late, but the mistake was in setting the hour at ten and bringing out a goodly number of people who had to sit in more or less resentful anticipation for over an hour. But when the performance did begin, all resentment vanished, and the most blase person, with a mute challenge that dared any one to break through the ice, found himself thawing out into warm responsiveness.

The surprise of the evening was Mrs. Francis Carolan. Those who came with their musical ears attuned to flaws, and criticisms all done up in neat packages for general distribution, had to undo their bundles and refill them. Those who had never heard her before had fancied that her musical studies had not been pursued with anything more than dilettante concentration, but her voice showed a finish and charm that comes only with the hardest kind of work, and she sang with an intelligence that proved that she had never tried any of the futile short cuts to musical accomplishment.

Mrs. Carolan has for a number of years spent the winters in Paris, where she has worked with the best masters, and her voice, while it is not big enough perhaps for the concert stage or opera, is of a quality and finish that makes her singing a delight to her friends, and charming for such an occasion as the other night.

Miss Ethel Mary Crocker was the other singer about whom there has always been a great deal of curiosity among those who have not had the opportunity to hear her sing, but have followed her musical ambitions. She has never let social engagements of any kind interfere with her studies, and in Paris, where there are so many wealthy girls flirting with the Goddess of music, she is known as one of the few who earnestly submit to all the rigorous denials imposed by the Goddess in her serious mood. She sang very sweetly the other night, and with a good deal of poise for an amateur, her performance on the whole rich in promise and surprising in fulfillment. The costumes worn by those taking part were unusually stunning, many of them showing the daring and artistic touch of John McMullin. Miss Crocker's gown was his inspiration and created a sensation.

Never has the old year gone out in a madder whirl for the younger set and the oldsters have almost as mad a pace set for

Now On Free View

in

THE WILLIAM KEITH GALLERY

532 SUTTER STREET

Daily from 9 a. m. to 6 p. m.

The Collection of

Mrs. Rose Caldwell Hughes

Of San Francisco and New York

PAINTINGS BY

Whistler	Geo. Inness	J. Francis Murphy
Robert Reid	Lillian Genth	Gustave Weigand
Hommer Martin	Geo. H. Smillie	Chas. P. Gruppe
Bruce Crane	Geo. H. Bogert	Geo. McCord
Carleton Wiggins	Max Weyl	Carlton T. Chapman
N. Largilliere	Jacquet	Andre Brouillet
E. Loyal Field	Ralph A. Blakelock	Thos. B. Craig
A. Stover	W. C. Emerson	E. W. Christmas

ETCHINGS AND MEZZO TINTS BY

Whistler	Brangwyn	Pennell	Stevenson
Cameron	Haden	Cox	Webb
Van Muyden	Millar	Tissot	Newman

THE COLLECTION—To be Sold at Absolutely Unreserved Auction in THE ITALIAN ROOM of the ST. FRANCIS HOTEL on

Monday, January 10, at 2 Afternoon

Sale to be conducted by Mr. H. Taylor Curtis

Catalogs on Application

them. On Friday afternoon, Mr. and Mrs. George McNear will present their young daughter to society at a dansant at the Fairmont Hotel, and there several hundred people will congregate, not only to meet the young debutante, but to wish each other a Happy New Year. It was a very happy idea of the McNeares to choose this day for the reception, for the added lilt of starting the New Year merrily is sure to give a swing to the affair.

There are parties galore for Friday and Saturday, the pre-eminent New Year's eve celebration for the younger set to be hosted by Mrs. William Irwin in honor of Miss Helen Crocker. The debutante set has been looking forward to this as the climax of the first part of the season, which has been a season of merry moods and a gay forecaster of events to come.

Mr. and Mrs. Walton Moore and family are at the Hotel Oakland, and will remain there until their new home is finished.

Among some of the hostesses at afternoon teas at the Hotel Oakland are Mrs. L. Starling Beatley, who entertained for Mrs. Louise H. Chapin of Los Angeles and Mrs. Chas. H. Freeman, Mrs. M. McGauley, Mrs. P. Isenberg and Mrs. C. Bachelder.

The first Winter Assembly will be held at Hotel Oakland Tuesday, December 28th, which were so popular in Oakland last year. Mrs. Wm. H. High, 406 Van Buren street, is in charge of the arrangements.

δ δ δ

Cards are being received in this city by the hosts of friends of Wallace Irwin announcing his marriage with Laetitia McDonald at the home of her parents in St. James Court, Louisville, Ky., Wednesday, January 5th.

CAPTAIN MARRIOTT ORGANIZES MACHINE GUN COMPANY

Those who object to the increase of our army on the ground that it tends to establish a military caste, and that the professional soldier has an itch to draw his sword and thereby is inclined to precipitate war, surely can have no opposition to a citizen soldiery, which is in keeping with the best American traditions.

There has been a quiet movement in the line of preparedness on the part of our National Guard, and the mustering in of the machine gun company attached to the Fifth Infantry, N. G. C., by Adjutant General Thomas, last week, is in line with this tendency, and was its first concrete evidence here.

The ceremony took place in the State Armory at Fourteenth and Mission streets, and was attended by many of the notables connected with military affairs. The company was organized by Captain Fred A. Marriott, of this city, and great credit is due him for the bringing together of such a splendid body of picked men, many of whom were recruited from the Exposition guards and are ex-soldiers with considerable machine-gun and other military experience. Captain Marriott, who was highly complimented by the Adjutant-General on the appearance and efficiency of his men and on his energy and patriotism in bringing them together, will retain command of the new organization.

Through the experience in the present war, the machine gun is recognized as the weapon of the future, and many think that it will practically supersede the rifle, especially in trench or defensive warfare. It has been adopted by the State, and a company will be attached to each regiment. Already the Seventh Infantry has a machine gun company.

After the mustering-in and the formal turning over of the command to Captain Marriott, the entire company was given its first order: To proceed forthwith to the Vienna Cafe at 171 O'Farrell street, and there attack a succulent supper prepared by host Galindo. The order was obeyed with cheerful alacrity and carried out prodigiously.

Aside from the members of the company, among those present were: Adj.-Gen. C. W. Thomas, Jr., Col. D. A. Smith, Lt.-Col. Hunt, Major Ralph Forrest, Captain Pratt, U. S. A., and Lt.-Col. Mattheson and Captain Fred A. Marriott.

—They never do anything by halves at Techau Tavern. Expense cuts no figure. Hence it is that the souverirs which are presented to the ladies at the Candy Dances each evening are elaborate and costly, consisting of unusually attractive fancy baskets and boxes of Lyon's California Glace Fruits. The gentlemen are equally fortunate at the Cigarette Dances, each one receiving a large box of Pall Mall cigarettes.

EXPEDITIONAL.

Troops to our England true
Faring to Flanders,
God be with all of you
And your commanders.

Clear be the sky o'erhead,
Light be the landing;
Not till the work is sped
Be your disbanding.

On the old battle-ground
Where fought your fathers,
Faithful shall ye be found
When the storm gathers.

Fending a little friend
Weak but unshaken—
Quick! there's no time to spend
Or the fort's taken.

Though he defy his foes,
He may go under.
Quick! ere the battle close
Speed with your thunder.

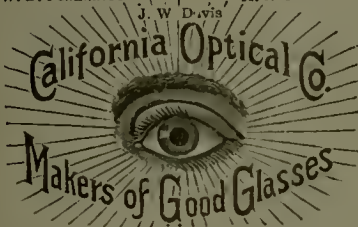

He hath his all at stake:
More can have no man.
Quick! ere the barrier break
On to the foeman.

Troops to this England true
And your commanders,
God be with all of you
Fighting in Flanders.

—C. W. Brodrigg.

W. D. Fennimore J. W. Davis A. R. Fennimore

California Optical Co.

Makers of Good Glasses

Special Demonstration for the DEAF
Beginning Monday, January Third to Eighth, a factory representative will demonstrate and fully explain the most wonderful of all hearing devices

The Little Gem Ear Phone
Awarded Highest Award
P. P. I. E.

181 Post Street } San Francisco
2508 Mission St. }
1221 Broadway, Oakland

EMIL STEINEGGER
TEACHER PIANOFORTE (27TH YEAR)
(10th year Hitchcock Academy, San Rafael)

Plano, technique, harmony, thoroughbass, improvisation, form.
The genuine Leschetitzky system of technical development.
ADDRESS 2315 BANCROFT WAY, BERKELEY
(Lessons, if preferred, at homes by request)

Dewar Scotch Whisky

Awarded Gold Medal
At Panama-Pacific International Exposition
San Francisco

Sherwood & Sherwood
Pacific Coast Agents
San Francisco Los Angeles San Diego
For Sale by the trade

CALIFORNIA'S MANUFACTURING CONCERNS THREATENED.

The salvation of California's manufacturing interests is dependent upon the preservation of California's oil industry, according to Herbert Fleishhacker, president of the Anglo and London Paris Bank. "The public, or a considerable portion of the public, seems to be of the opinion that the parties most deeply concerned in the government's attempt to take over 35,000 acres of developed lands in the California Midway oil district are the oil producers and the Federal Government. That is a mistake. The party vitally concerned is the California public, the manufacturer, the tax-payer, wage earner, merchant, the house wife who uses gas for cooking fuel.

"If the agents of the government succeed in the program which means the elimination of the independent producer and the virtual destruction of the California oil industry, the tremendous losses suffered by citizens who developed that industry will be insignificant in comparison with the losses suffered by the general public.

"Prior to the discovery and development of the oil industry, manufacturing, as anything more than a negligible quantity, was impossible in California. The excessive cost of coal fuel, coupled with the necessarily greater cost of transportation and labor, put a handicap on the Californian which effectually barred him from competition even in his own State with the Eastern manufacturer.

"Then in response to the Federal government's invitation, California citizens put courage and money into oil lands. They developed a fuel so cheap that the California manufacturer could save enough from coal prices to equalize the labor and transportation cost handicap. They put the California factory and the California manufactured product on the map.

"California oil has builded California communities and made wages for thousands of men and women. When gas was made from coal the price per thousand feet was around $1.50. With the advent of California oil, gas prices went down steadily. In many places the rate is 75 cents, and gas is now the cooking fuel throughout the State. The government's activities have within sixty days resulted in an oil production one million barrels short of the actual sales in California, and a consequent increase of from ten to twenty-five per cent in the price of fuel oil.

"Now, if the government succeeds in its program to seize and stop approximately 30 per cent of the oil production in this State, prices must inevitably soar to a plane that will make manufacturing in California impossible."

PRESIDENT LILIENTHAL'S SPECIAL XMAS GREETING

President Jesse W. Lilienthal of the United Railroads, with characteristic kindness, took occasion of the holiday season to send a general message of greeting and good cheer to all the employees of the company:

"I wish that it were practicable for me to pass right down the line and shake each one of you and your wives and children by the hand and assure you how sincerely I hope that the coming year may bring to you all good health, steady employment and freedom from care. The company is going through a very trying period. Its earnings are falling off—its taxes have been increased—there is no lessening in the competition of the jitney and the municipal lines—there is very little abatement in the hostility of the public—and yet we are as concerned as ever to do everything in our power for your physical and material welfare. I do not hesitate to say that you deserve the best from the company of which it is capable. With so few exception that they do not need to be mentioned, the unusual burdens put upon you during the year just closing, due to the great amount of strangers in the city visiting the Exposition, and the attendant congestion of travel, have shown you to be as loyal, intelligent and industrious a lot of men as are employed elsewhere in the world. You are entitled to this tribute. We are happy to pay it. With this thought in my mind, and because I look upon you all as my brothers and fellow-workers, you will understand how sincere and cordial are my wishes to you all and to those who belong to you for the coming year. May it realize for you your fondest hopes, and, at all events, bring you good cheer and happiness and may it bring us all closer together."

SAM LAID DOWN HIS HAND.

Since the death of Frank Unger some good stories are floating about the clubs regarding some of his early madcap escapades. The following was related at the Bohemian Club the other evening:

Nearly forty years ago, Frank and Clay Green were attending a dance somewhere up the country in Solano County. The hop took place at a rural hotel where Sam Davis, the Nevada newspaperman, happened to be stopping. Sam was not a guest at the dance, and the merry-making kept him awake most of the night.

About four in the morning, after the hop had spent its momentum, Green and Unger told the crowd in the bar room that they were going up-stairs to make Sam Davis vacate his room.

The idea took with the gathering, and in a few moments the two worthies were at Sam's bedside, demanding that he get up, dress himself and vacate the room all inside of two minutes, or be thrown out bodily. Davis remarked that their hand would have to hold over his before he complied with their somewhat peremptory request.

"What do you hold?" demanded Unger.

"Six high," was the reply, as Sam, after a sidwinding motion toward his pillow, stuck a gun about a foot long under Unger's nose.

"We pass-out," was Unger's bland reply, as the two bowed themselves through the door and disappeared.

When the two got downstairs and recounted their adventure there was considerable hilarity at their expense.

Suddenly Unger pitched twenty dollars on the bar, and offered to bet that he could go upstairs and make Davis lay down his hand. The bet at this stage seemed a pick-up, and the money was promptly covered. At once Unger ordered the bar-keeper to mix twenty cocktails, and when they were ready, Unger loaded them on a tray and again made a raid on the room of the Nevada journalist.

When he and Green came in, Green bore a lighted candle and Unger the cocktails.

"Does a tray full count here?" was the query.

Davis took a quick survey of the contents of the tray and replied: "It certainly does."

"Do you lay down your hand, Mr. Davis?"

Davis, reaching for his gun, pitched over in the corner of the room, and a moment later the three men were drinking each other's health.

When the landlord visited the room about noon the glasses were empty and the three men were snoring together in the same bed.

—Numberless are the stories told of George Washington. Upon one occasion, while the American army was in camp, Washington heard that the colored sentries were not altogether reliable. He determined to test the matter for himself. One night, therefore, when the password was "Cambridge," the General went out and walked up to a colored sentry. "Who goes there?" cried the sentinel. "A friend," was the reply. "Advance, friend, and give the countersign." "Roxburgh," said Washington. "No, sah," replied the soldier. "Medford," said Washington. "No, sar," was the response. "Charleston," said Washington. The sentry lost patience. "I tell you, Massa Washington," he said emphatically, "no man can go by here without he say Cambridge."—Exchange.

MELLOW AS MOONLIGHT
CASCADE
For your HI-BALL today

The finest, purest and mellowest whisky that brains and money can produce, cost to you no more than inferior grades; so why not ask for and insist on getting CASCADE.

Instead of saying whisky, just say CASCADE, you will enjoy it and feel much better.

Special enjoyable drink recipes for the asking by writing
J. H. Norton, care San Francisco News Letter

The Devil's Prayer

By Fred Emerson Brooks

The Devil made a prayer and said:
"Who started hell just overhead?"

These war lords set the earth aflame
And rob the devil of his fame;

While Christians slay their fellowmen
And make the earth a slaughter pen.

Aye, let them rave and belch and roar
And millions slaughter millions more;

Mow down the quivering ranks of men,
The shattered phalanx fills again.

Grim Death has laid his scythe away
To harvest by machine, the day.

I hear them falling as they tread:
Count those that live, I'll count the dead!

Turn on the thunder-guns of hate;
Tear men to fragments—call it fate;

Loose poison gas and burning oil;
With dead, in trenches, plant the soil.

"Thou shalt not kill" means thou alone,
But not the legions of the throne.

Tho murder retail be a crime,
Yet murder wholesale is sublime.

'Tis slaughter brings the Victor bays:
The dead are dead for all their days.

Like Pharaoh they seem to me
To flounder in a bloody sea.

Kill off the righteous and the wise,
Who would the planet civilize.

Destroy the arts, the poor condemn
And let the heathen finish them;

Turn on the furnaces of hell,
Blow up the globe, 'tis but a shell;

Plant death-bulbs in the hungry sea
And blame the righteous—don't blame me.

Bid submarines to lie in wait;
Sow death and reap a world of hate;

Let monster vultures crowd the skies
And do dark deeds that men despise;

Show heathen what you battle for
And how the Christians go to war.

All peace destroy, all joy and mirth,
And bid me come and rule the earth.

Excuse the lengthy prayer I've made—
'Tis the only time I ever prayed."

FADS AND FASHIONS

Just as the tinkling of sleighbells delighted the hearts of the children and grown-ups of yesterday, so are we of to-day enraptured with the thought of winter, when tiny coasters may once more be brought into use, and the snow king zealously guards his domain—mountains and streams in glittering snow-clad loveliness.

For these days of sleighing and skating, not forgetting the gorgeous wintry mornings when a brisk walk over frozen paths brings a glow to our cheeks and brightness to our eyes, clothes must play an important part as for any other occasion.

Attractive Fur Sets.

Fashion decreed at the beginning of the season that fur was to be popular, and old Father Winter has approved the notion by sending us a brisk, crisp winter that makes the touch of fur, no matter how small or how large, quite consistent.

In muffs and neckpieces, there is wide choice both as to models and materials. It is no longer considered "home-made" to carry a muff of velvet, heavy silk or velours, with just a band or two of fur, by way of trimming, or for that matter no fur at all. These sets are often made to match coat or suit; one especially pretty set worn recently with a tailored suit of dark brown duvetyne, was of silk plush in the same tone as the suit, trimmed with strips of beaver to match the trimming on the suit. The muff was made in the popular melon shape, the plush being shirred to a very small opening at the hand, and banded with a two-inch strip of beaver. A broad Puritan collar of the plush completed the set, and a small hat, with a band of the plush around the edge and a beaver ball on the tip-top of the crown, was a chic accompaniment. This set was to be worn with the suit and also with a heavy, belted and pocketed top-coat of dark green velours, intended for sleighing, motoring and like purposes, when warmth was necessary as well as becomingness.

Another pretty set of close-haired fur, made from an old seal coat, had a barrel muff and the regulation throw-scarf. This set was completed by a long tasseled cap made of the same material as the loose box-coat, which was of dark green duvetyne, also banded and cuffed with seal. Gold cord, silver and gold lace is used for the more dressy muffs and neckpieces, and oftentimes there is a metal or velvet rose as an attractive bit of color.

Popular Tam-o-Shanter

With the coming of the out-of-door spirit there has come a demand for comfortable headgear; not the freakish hats and caps that were introduced when the motoring fad came in, so hideous and unbecoming, but chic, little caps and tams made up in sweater cloth, lamb's wool, the material of the coat or suit, or knitted to match sweater or scarf. These caps are extremely youthful and chic, easily made, and the height of comfort.

Sets of cap, scarf and sports' coat, or sweater, are used for skating, cross-country walking, and motoring. One especially pretty cap with scarf or muffler attached, is being made up in chiffon for sum-

Melon Muff and Puritan Collar of Plush.

Barrel Muff and Throw-Scarf of Seal.

Nevertheless, quite practical—especially for mountain climbs and hilly roads.

—"Well, Tom, what d'ye think of this prohibition business?" "We ought to do like France and Russia." "You're givin' it all up, then?" "No; France is giving up absent and Russia's giving up vodka. So I'm not going to touch absent or vodka till peace comes. Give me beer."—Exchange.

—Bank Cashier—This check, madam, isn't filled in. Madam—Isn't what? Bank Cashier—It has your husband's name to it, but it does not state how much money you want. Madam—Oh, is that all? Well, I'll take all there is.—New York Sun.

—Laundry Proprietor (showing visitor the plant)—This is the mangle room for all the clothes. Visitor (sarcastic)—Ah, that explains it. Some of the shirts that come back look as if they were sent through half a dozen times.—New York Sun.

mer motoring use; the idea is wonderfully practical, as the full, gathered scarf end may be brought over the head and face, veil-fashion, protecting the complexion and eyes very efficiently.

Leather is being used for these sets quite extensively too; a fur trimmed set of dull red Russian leather, trimmed with sable and combined with a short tab-ended scarf, also trimmed with sable, is unusually smart and becoming. These leather sets may be made at home of suede, or a soft kid. They are practical for many purposes as they are not injured by dust, rain or snow.

There are some attractive velveteen and velvet sets, also, trimmed with a vividly contrasting color.

The Utility Walking-Stick.

One of the novelties following the popularity of walking, skating and general out of door winter sports is the walking stick with a soft silken or velvet bag attached for handkerchiefs, powder puff and other articles necessary to Milady's beauty and comfort. Although somewhat extreme, these sticks are,

Fashion's Requirements

Gives that pearly white complexion so much desired by the Women of Fashion.

Gouraud's Oriental Cream

We will send a complexion chamois and book of Powder leaves for 15c. to cover cost of mailing and wrapping.
At Druggists and Department Stores
FERD. T. HOPKINS & SON
87 Great Jones St. New York City

The Background of the War Zone

Among the interesting documents in the old Bohemian city Saaz, on the Eger River, is a picture showing an attack on the fortress Glatz, in Silesia, in which war automobiles were used. The mechanically driven cars were flat vehicles, protected by huge shields in front, in which the soldiers turned large cranks, the rotary motion of which was transferred to cog-wheels and to the road wheels. These 15th century "chauffeurs" got a speed of four miles an hour out of the armored cars.

John Hay, Secretary of State in the McKinley regime, recounts in his reminiscences of the Boxer rebellion in China that the German Emperor, whose minister, Ketteler, had been shot in Peking, sent out a punitive expedition under Count Waldersee, bidding his soldiers to comport themselves so like Huns that for a thousand years to come no Chinese would dare to look a German in the face.

Between twenty and thirty Peers have lost their direct heirs in the war. The Vice-Chancellor of Cambridge says the University has shrunk to less than one-third of its former numbers. Of Cambridge men not less than 10,000 are fighting or preparing to fight for the defense of their country; that some 700 have been wounded; that over 300 have won distinctions in the field. We know, too, that of the whole number between 2,000 and 3,000 would in the ordinary course still be living and studying among us. Four hundred and seventy Cambridge men have fallen; a hundred and fifty of them, at least, should have been undergraduates still.

It will be interesting to learn when the war is over how the British submarines managed to break through the narrow straits leading from the North Sea into the Baltic. That they have done so, probably in considerable numbers, is shown by their great activity against the contraband trade between Scandinavia and the German Baltic ports. Apparently the fleet has recently been augmented by at least two flotillas of submarines; for according to a despatch from Copenhagen, a flotilla of destroyers headed by a light cruiser of the "Undaunted" type convoyed the submarines to the entrance of the Cattegat, at the Northern-most point of the Jutland coast.

INTERESTING ART EXHIBIT.

Interesting to the general public, as well as to artists and cartoonists, is the exhibition now being given at Best's Art School, 1625 California street. This display is of works by the pupils at this school, which has graduated many men and women who have become famous during the last few years, several now carrying on their art work abroad.

The walls of the studio are covered with drawings, illustrations and posters, pen and ink, charcoal, water color, wash drawing are all represented in the display, also clever cartoons and caricatures of the students, all showing talent and technique of a high order.

There are on view at the exhibition several canvasses by Best, with the Berkeley hills as the subject.

Best's school originated several years ago, when a group of newspaper artists, who have since become famous, formed a class for the study of art in the studio of Best. Among them were Maynard Dixon, Gordon Ross, J. A. Cahill, Theo. Langguth, G. W. Fischer and others. The mode of study was based on actual experience of these artists with the object of producing results in the shortest time.

Pupils work under the direct supervision of the teacher, receiving advice and helpful suggestions. The work is gone over each day, the instruction is made personal, and the talent of the pupil is developed in a way that makes his work individual.

In Best's school the pupils commence drawing from the model at once, and do not spend from six to twelve months drawing from casts and still life. Best is known in the East, as well as on the Pacific Coast as a landscape painter and illustrator, and Mrs. Alice Best has a wide reputation as a painter of portraits, designer and poster artist both here and abroad.

—"Say, Johnsing," commended Rastus, looking up from his paper, "it says heah dat in Sumatra a man kin buy a wife foh foah dollars." "Foah dollars!" gasped Johnsing. "Ef a nigger's got foah dollars he don't need no wife."—Dallas News.

A FUR for HER for NEW YEAR

If Gassner's label is inside, She will know it is RIGHT.

LOUIS GASSNER

MANUFACTURING FURRIER

112-114 GEARY ST.

SAN FRANCISCO

STYLE AND FIT

Are a man's first consideration when he is about to buy a suit. Price is the next. We have studied both very closely and we are prepared to make a first-class stylish suit to order at cash prices, on installments, weekly or monthly.

C. H. NEUHAUS, Merchant Tailor
787 MARKET STREET, Upstairs

Los Angeles

Pasadena

Oakland

Fred Hartsock

PHOTOGRAPHS

41 GRANT AVENUE

San Jose

Sacramento

San Francisco

Novelties for "Welcoming" and
"Bon Voyage" Packages

Flowers Delivered to Any Part of the World

SEND YOUR HOSTESS A DISTINCTIVE BOX OF FLOWERS

FROM JOSEPH'S FLORISTS

GRANT AVENUE, NEAR SUTTER STREET

Phone Kearny 2842

Cosgrove's Hair Store

Established 20 Years

239 Powell Street
San Francisco

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL ITEMS

ENGAGEMENTS

CLIFT-CAMPELL.—Mrs. William Clift announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Jean Bawden Clift, to Dr. Howard Campbell, son of Dr. and Mrs. Edgar R. Campbell, of Berkeley. Dr. Howard Campbell is one of the leading physicians of Santa Barbara, where he will take his bride to reside. Mrs. Clift and her daughter resided at the Clift Hotel, of which they are part owners. No definite plans have yet been made for the wedding.

WEDDING ANNOUNCEMENTS.

HARRISON-LAWSON.—Miss Theresa Harrison has chosen February 14th as the date of her marriage to Andrew Werner Lawson. It will be solemnized in the evening at the home of the bride, on Washington street. Mrs. Melvin Pfaff will be her sister's matron of honor, and only attendant. Only relatives and close friends will witness the ceremony and take part in the reception that will follow.

WEDDINGS.

ALEXANDER-KAUFMAN.—The wedding of Mrs. C. O. Alexander and Mr. H. L. Kaufman took place Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the home in Burlingame of Mrs. Alexander's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Mountford S. Wilson. After the ceremony the bride and groom went south on their wedding trip. They will reside in Hemet Riverside county.

BASSETT-CLARK.—Miss Amy Bassett and Robert E. Clark were married Wednesday evening at Grace Episcopal Church. The Reverend Wilbur J. Gresham read the ritual. Mrs. Harvey E. Bassett was the bride's only attendant. A. W. Follansbee was best man. Following the ceremony there was a reception at the Harvey Bassett home on Union street. Mr. and Mrs. Clark will enjoy their honeymoon in the East, returning to San Francisco about March 1st, and sailing for Manila a month later.

FRIEDMAN-STEIN.—Notable among the brilliant weddings of the winter season was the marriage of Miss Lillian Friedman and Abraham Cass Stein. The nuptials were solemnized in the ballroom of the Palace Hotel Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock. Immediately after the ceremony an elaborate dinner was served in the rose room of the Palace. After the honeymoon the young couple will make their home in Pittsburg, where the bridegroom is a prominent business and club man.

SLY-HOLT.—The marriage of Lieutenant Ralph Waldo Holt and Miss Fara Sly of Fairfax, Mo., took place on the afternoon of December 2d, at the home of the bride's parents, Colonel and Mrs. Oscar Sly, at Fairfax, Mo. The wedding is a culmination of a school day romance. Lieutenant Holt and his bride arrived in San Francisco Friday, and will sojourn at the St. Francis Hotel.

TAYLOR-DODGE.—Mrs. Franklin Cushing Taylor announces the marriage of her daughter, Margaret, to Captain Julian Lee Dodge, U. S. A., son of Mr. and Mrs. Lemuel Pomeroy Dodge, of San Francisco, on Saturday, December 25th. Rev. Norman Hutton officiated at the ceremony, which took place at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Sherman Taylor, 1411 North State street, according to a Chicago despatch.

LUNCHEONS.

BRYAN.—With a table decoration that combined maldenhair ferns with red and white tulle, one of the delightful luncheons of the season was given yesterday by Miss Linda Bryan at her home on Vallejo street. The complimented guest was Miss Marion Stovel.

HOOKER.—Mr. and Mrs. Osgood Hooker were hosts at an informal luncheon Christmas day at their home in Burlingame, when they entertained a group of relatives.

JOHNSON.—Miss Helen Johnson will be a luncheon hostess Monday afternoon. It will be given at her home on California street, and Miss Marion Stovel will be the complimented guest.

KLAMP.—A luncheon party at the St. Francis was the enjoyable function at which Mrs. Frederick Klamp of Honolulu presided Thursday. It was in the nature of a farewell, as she is leaving shortly for an extended stay in the southern part of the State.

MARTIN.—Mrs. Eleanor Martin will entertain all the members of her large family at a luncheon on New Year's Day, and later in the afternoon will be at home to her friends.

STONE.—An informal buffet luncheon was enjoyed by more than a score of the relatives and friends of Miss Kate Stone and Miss Dorothy Baker on the afternoon of Christmas day.

DINNERS.

HOPKINS.—Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Hopkins were hosts at a handsomely appointed dinner Saturday evening, seating their guests about a table decorated with Christmas greens and poinsettias.

EYRE.—With Miss Elena Eyre as the guest of honor, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Moody entertained at dinner Tuesday evening at the Fairmount, where their guests took part in the Tuesday evening dinner dance.

IRWIN.—Mrs. William G. Irwin gave an elaborate dinner Friday evening at her home in Washington street preceding her ball. About twenty-four guests were invited to the dinner.

JACKLING.—Mr. and Mrs. Daniel C. Jackling entertained all day Sunday and at dinner Sunday night on board their yacht, the Cyprus. With but one or two exceptions the guests were members of the family party, which has met for the last few nights at a succession of holiday reunions.

KLINK.—Little Miss Elinor Klink complimented some of her friends at a dinner given Wednesday evening at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Klink, on Fillmore street. They attended the Junior dance at the California Hall after the dinner.

MERRILL.—The home of Mrs. John E. Merrill in Palo Alto was the scene of a merry gathering on Christmas eve, when members of her family and others enjoyed her hospitality at dinner.

THOMAS.—A delightful dinner party of Christmas day was that at which Mr. and Mrs. William Thomas were hosts at the Fairmount Hotel.

WHEELER.—Miss Jean Wheeler's home on Washington street will be the setting for a dinner on Friday evening, January 28th. After dinner the party will attend the dance to be given by the Gayety Club at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Miller.

TEAS.

BAKER.—An informal tea was enjoyed by a coterie of the friends of Miss Maion Baker Sunday afternoon, at her apartment on California street. Mrs. Wakefield Baker received with her daughter.

NERNEY.—Mrs. Stephen Nerney entertained informally at a small tea at her home Wednesday afternoon, having some of the engaged girls in to see her new home.

SHEA.—Mrs. William Shea greeted many of her friends Wednesday at a tea at her mother's home. Mrs. Shea is spending the winter here while Lieutenant Shea is away on service.

THEATRE PARTIES.

DONOHUE.—Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Donohue, Jr., chaperoned a jolly party of young people Wednesday evening at a theatre party at the Orpheum.

SHIPP.—Mrs. Earl Shipp gave a theatre and supper party Wednesday night to compliment her cousin, Miss Katherine MacAdam. After the play, the party enjoyed an hour or so of dancing at the St. Francis.

DANCES.

GAYETY CLUB.—The handsome home of Miss Leslie Miller on Pacific avenue will be the setting for the dance of the Gayety Club, which is scheduled to take place this year on January 28th.

KLINK.—Mr. and Mrs. William Klink will entertain a party of friends at the Palace Hotel, Friday evening, when with their guests they will take part in the supper dance that is being given for the benefit of the Infants' Shelter.

PARTIES.

HALE.—A number of the friends of Mr. and Mrs. Prentiss Cobb Hale will enjoy their hospitality at an informal eggnog party on New Year's day. Miss Linda Bryan will assist them in welcoming the guests.

HUNTER.—Colonel and Mrs. Alfred Hunter will entertain at an eggnog party to be given to-day, New Year's day, at their home at Fort Scott. Many will go out from the city to supplement the list of the army officers and their wives who are stationed at Fort Scott, and who will be among the guests of that afternoon.

LENT.—Mrs. Eugene Lent gave a pretty children's party Tuesday, having between forty and fifty of the young friends of her daughter, Miss Ruth. There was a big Christmas tree, about which the children danced, and several pretty dancing figures directed by Mrs. Fanny Hinman.

DE YOUNG.—A children's party was given at the M. H. de Young home for the little friends of Patricia and Consuelo Tobin and Charles Theriot.

THE HOTEL PLAZA

overlooking the beautiful Plaza of Union Square, the Hotel of refinement and service, is offering special rates to permanent guests.

Hotel Plaza Company

DE YOUNG.—Mr. and Mrs. M. H. de Young will be at home to their friends on New Year's Eve. A dance for those who like that pastime and cards for the rest will provide diversion until the momentous hour when the toast to 1916 will be drunk, and all of the guests sit down to supper.

CARDS.

BROWN.—Miss Elizabeth Brown entertained at an informal card party Thursday afternoon, half a dozen guests assembling at her apartment on Pacific avenue.

FARNSWORTH.—Mrs. E. P. Farnsworth presided at a bridge party Friday afternoon at her home in Washington street. The guest of honor was Mrs. E. F. Dickins, wife of Captain Dickins of the United States Coast Survey.

ARRIVALS.

BRECKENFELDT.—Miss Meta Breckenfeldt has gone to New York, where she will spend the remainder of the winter visiting relatives and friends.

HUNTINGTON.—Mrs. Mary Huntington and Miss Marion Huntington, who have been enjoying a motor trip through Fresno County, returned Thursday afternoon to their home on Maple street.

MAY.—Mr. Henry May has arrived from the Orient and is visiting his cousin, Mrs. Wm. Babcock, at her home in San Rafael.

PAGE.—Captain John M. Page, Coast Artillery Corps, arrived Tuesday from Fort Rosecrans, and was admitted to Letterman Hospital for treatment.

WALLACE.—Mrs. Ryland B. Wallace returned last Friday from Los Gatos, where she has been visiting for several weeks.

DEPARTURES.

LOWE.—Mr. and Mrs. Edward Lowe, Jr., accompanied by their infant son, have gone to Grand Rapids, Mich., where they will spend several weeks visiting Mr. Lowe's parents.

WALLER.—Miss Evelyn Waller and her father, C. W. Waller, left on Friday afternoon, December 19th, for New York.

INTIMATIONS

BAIN.—Mr. and Mrs. Ferdinand Bain will arrive shortly from New York, and will go directly to their home in Santa Barbara, where they will spend the remainder of the winter.

BENDEL.—Lieutenant and Mrs. C. Stockmar Bendel, who have been enjoying their honeymoon in Honolulu, arrived in San Francisco on the Lurline Tuesday morning.

BODWELL.—Miss Innes Bodwell, who came down from Victoria, B. C., to visit Miss Leslie Miller, will spend the next ten days in Burlingame as the guest of Miss Helen Garritt.

FOLGER.—Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Folger are planning an extended visit in the East, and will leave about the middle of January. They will divide their time between New York and Pittsburg.

GANTZ.—Lieutenant and Mrs. Henry Gantz are settled in an attractive home at Fort Sam Houston, Texas, where they will be stationed for the next two years.

GRAVES.—Mrs. Walker Coleman Graves will leave February 1st for New York for an indefinite stay. Later in the spring Mrs. Graves will go to Cuba and travel as far into the interior as is compatible with comfort.

HAYS.—Mr. and Mrs. John Coffee Hays, Mrs. John McMullin and Miss Bessie Leam made up a party that enjoyed the holidays at Del Monte.

HEGER.—Mrs. Robert Haynes of Los Angeles is spending the fortnight as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel C. Heger. The latter will be at home informally to their friends on New Year's day.

HEWITT.—Mr. and Mrs. Dixwell Hewitt, who returned last week from an enjoyable visit in the East, will pass New Year's at Del Monte.

HOPKINS.—Mrs. Charles H. Hopkins, who has been in New York for many weeks, has returned and is at the Fairmont for a short time before going south for the remainder of the winter.

JEFFERSON.—Mr. and Mrs. John P. Jefferson, who were married last week in Montecito, are spending their honeymoon in this city. They sail for the Orient in a few days, to be gone six or eight months.

KARNS.—Captain Frank D. Karns, U. S. N., and Mrs. Karns will keep open house Saturday at their home at Vallejo in observance of New Year's Day. The families at Mare Island and Vallejo and a few friends from town will be the guests.

LOWRY.—Miss Annie Lowry has returned to her home in Sacramento, after having passed Christmas and the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Richard Bayne at their home on Jordan avenue.

McINTOSH.—Mr. and Mrs. Charles K. McIntosh have closed their country home near Woodside and have taken the Kittle home on Steiner street and Pacific avenue for the winter months.

NICKEL.—Miss Beatrice Nickel and Miss Ruth Zelle will leave Sunday for New York on an indefinite visit. Miss Zelle will spend several weeks near Boston, where she will visit Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Rice.

O'CONNOR.—Miss Lily O'Connor, who is spending the holidays at Bakersfield with Mr. and Mrs. William Tevis, will return to the Fairmont the first of next week.

PAINTER.—Mrs. Eugene D. Painter and her little son Terry are spending the holiday fortnight at the home of Dr. and Mrs. S. P. Terry.

PARKER.—Mrs. James Parker and Mrs. Richard Hammond are spending the holidays at Norfolk, Virginia, where Lieutenant Parker's ship is stationed.

PILLSBURY.—Their San Francisco friends will be pleased to learn that Major and Mrs. George R. Pillsbury will soon be transferred to California to make this State their home for the next three years.

VANDERBILT.—Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Vanderbilt, who have leased the William Miller Graham residence at Montecito, will be in San Francisco for a few days before taking possession of their home. They will be in Santa Barbara on about the 10th of next month.

WHEELER.—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stetson Wheeler and Miss Jean Wheeler will keep "open house" on New Year's day at their residence on Washington street.

THE LAND OF LARGE FAMILIES.

In his article on the winter life of the French Canadians in Harper's for November, Howard E. Smith tells of the extraordinarily large families of these simple folk.

"Soon the twilight grew to night, and the large lamp on the table cast its orange glow over the room, and the long table filled with steaming dishes.

"'You have a large family, madame,' I remarked, as they gathered about the table.

"'Oui, monsieur, we are sixteen. It is a good gift to le bon Dieu, nest-ce pas?' she said, turning toward the cure.

"'C'est vrai, mon enfant. It is. There is no better gift than that of another child to His kingdom.'

"I could not but remember that the law also had encouraged large families by passing a bill at Quebec giving ten acres of land to any family having, from that time forth, twelve or more children, and how in two years the law was repealed because the demand on those ten-acre lots was in excess of the supply."

—A man walked into a grocer's shop and handed to the assistant a paper containing some white powder. "I say," he said, "what do you think that is? Just taste it and tell me your opinion." The grocer touched it with his tongue. "Well, I should say that was soda." "That's what I said; but by wife said it was rat poison. You might try it again and make sure."

Hotel St. Francis Announces the
Club Room Special
A Busy Man's Luncheon
Beginning January 10, 1916
50 Cents
Service From 11:30 to 2:00

DIVIDEND NOTICE.
Italian-American Bank.

Member of the Associated Savings Banks of San Francisco.

For the half year ending December 31, 1915, a dividend has been declared at the rate of four (4) per cent per annum on all savings deposits, payable on and after Monday, January 3, 1916. Dividends not called for will be added to the principal and bear the same rate of interest from January 1, 1916. Money deposited on or before January 10, 1916, will earn interest from January 1, 1916.

A. SBARRO, President

Office—Southeast corner Montgomery and Sacramento streets.

DIVIDEND NOTICE.

The Hibernia Savings and Loan Society.

Member of the Associated Savings Banks of San Francisco.

For the half year ending December 31, 1915, a dividend has been declared at the rate of four (4) per cent per annum on all deposits, payable on and after Monday, January 3, 1916. Dividends not drawn will be added to depositors' accounts, become a part thereof, and will earn dividend from January 1, 1916. Deposits made on or before January 10, 1916 will draw interest from January 1, 1916.

R. M. TORIN, Secretary.

Office—Corner Market, McAllister and Jones streets.

DIVIDEND NOTICE.

French-American Bank of Savings (Savings Department.)

Member of the Associated Savings Banks of San Francisco.

For the half year ending December 31, 1915, a dividend has been declared at the rate of four (4) per cent per annum on all deposits, payable on and after Monday, January 3, 1916. Dividends not called for are added to and bear the same rate of interest as the principal from January 1, 1916. Money deposited on or before January 10, 1916, will earn interest from January 1, 1916.

A. LEGALLET, President.

Office—168 Sutter street.

DIVIDEND NOTICE.

Mutual Savings Bank of San Francisco.

Member of the Associated Savings Banks of San Francisco.

For the half year ending December 31, 1915, a dividend has been declared at the rate of four (4) per cent per annum on all savings deposits, payable on and after Monday, January 3, 1916. Dividends not called for are added to and bear the same rate of interest as the principal from January 1, 1916.

C. B. HOBSON, Cashier

Office—706 Market street, opposite Third

DIVIDEND NOTICE

Union Trust Company of San Francisco.

Member of the Associated Savings Banks of San Francisco.

For the half year ending December 31, 1915, a dividend has been declared on savings deposits at the rate of four (4) per cent per annum, payable on and after Monday, January 3, 1916. Dividends not called for will be added to and bear the same rate of interest as the principal from January 1, 1916.

H. VAN LUYK, Cashier

Office—Market and O'Farrell streets and Grant avenue.

CONFIDENCE IN THE FUTURE. The year is ending under conditions which suggest that the coming twelve months will be an exceptionally interesting period in the financial history of the United States. The public is evincing its confidence in the future by purchasing more securities than it has bought at this season in many years, and the country's bank position is so strong as to make possible an expansion of world-trade upon a scale never before attempted by American business men. Some $18,000,000 of railroad and industrial bonds mature this month, and nearly $150,000,000 in December dividend and interest payments is being disbursed. The January disbursements—for dividends and interest—will reach about $230,000,000, and most of this fund will probably be reinvested. There is an encouraging increase in the volume of retail trade noted at various commercial centers. There are very few idle men in the country to-day, and relatively few idle cars, in contrast with the conditions which existed a year ago. It is stated that fifty times the freight room available on the trans-Atlantic liners could be employed to good advantage were it possible to increase shipping facilities to that extent. As it is railroad traffic is heavily congested at seaport points, and it is not easy to see how the situation can be immediately relieved. Bank clearings for November were 25 per cent above the November figures of 1912, which was the previous high record for that month. For the cities outside New York City the total was the largest ever reported. It is significant that there seems to be nowhere a boom in business; just a sustained and healthy recovery. The results of the crop year now closing in California have been very satisfactory. The demand for our agricultural and horticultural products has been and continues to be excellent. And this applies practically to all our products, canned fruits, dried fruits, including prunes and raisins, beans and barley. The salmon pack, especially the higher grades, is being rapidly marketed. All the shipyards on the coast are working up to capacity.

—The government's final report shows the harvest to be the largest and most profitable on record. Our agricultural output for the year is valued at $9,873,000,000, or $83,000,000 in excess of the bumper year. The farmer classes of the United States are enjoying greater prosperity than ever. Even in the South, where there was some difficulty owing to the embargo on cotton, there is no real complaint, because cotton has almost doubled in price, thus offsetting the small crop and diminished exports. Trade reports from all parts of the interior, but especially from the West, are exceedingly encouraging, and many distributors in that section are confident of at least six months of good business.

—According to the latest trade returns our merchandise exports this calendar year will exceed imports by nearly $2,000,000,000. This amount has been almost completely offset in various ways—by good imports of about $400,000,000, by security imports of not less than $500,000,000, or probably more, by foreign loans and credits of $700,000,000 or more, to which must be added various remittances for dividends and interest freights, commissions, etc. Meanwhile, our exports to South America, China and other neutrals actually show a decrease.

—Exports from San Francisco for the eleven months ending November 30th reached $74,229,421, an increase of $16,348,112 over the corresponding period of last year, according to figures made public by customs officials. November, 1915, showed a decrease in exports of $1,006,671 compared with the same month of 1914. This decrease is attributed by shippers to the Panama Canal slide. Europe was San Francisco's best customer during the eleven month period, with the Orient a close second.

—The Railroad Commission has granted authority to the Great Western Power Company of California to issue $27,498,600 par value of common capital stock; $5,263,200 par value of 7 per cent preferred stock, and $5,000,000 face value ten-year 6 per cent convertible gold debentures for the purpose of acquiring the stock of the Great Western Power Company and to provide funds for extensions and improvements.

—After January 1st, all receipts of the San Francisco Custom House and the Internal Revenue Service, including Northern California and Nevada, will be deposited with the Federal Reserve Bank in this city. This will deprive local banks of Federal deposits of some $16,000,000 annually.

—The net profits of Tonopah Mining Company for November were $92,800, and for Belmont $64,500. For the week ending December 18th, the Tonopah camp produced 9,716 tons of ore, of an estimated value of $200,848.

—A special New Year's dinner will be served at Galindo's famous Vienna Cafe, 971 O'Farrell street, near Powell street, which will be decorated with all the fantastic merry-making and frolicsome scenes that have made San Francisco famous for this annual celebration. Manager Galindo will be at hand as usual to direct the merriment and throw confetti at Princess Jollity till the clock strikes 12. After the stroke of that hour the house will very likely belong to the joyous guests. If there is any speciality you want done to make the evening a whirl of joy to yourselves and those present, make it known to Manager Galindo, and he will likely help you out in any fantastic design that will prove popular and entertaining.

—Chuggerton—How's your chauffeur? Carr—Had to fire him; he used to be a motorman. Chuggerton—Too reckless, eh? Carr—Reckless, nothing! Why, I couldn't break him of the habit of slowing up at crossings!—Puck.

E. F. HUTTON & CO. BANKERS

Members—New York Stock Exchange; New York Cotton Exchange, New York Coffee Exchange; New Orleans Cotton Exchange; Liverpool Cotton Association; Chicago Board of Trade.

Private Wire—New York, Chicago to San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Branch Offices—San Francisco, 490 California St., and Hotel St. Francis; Los Angeles, 118 Fourth Street, I. W. Hellman Building.

PIONEER HOUSE OF THE PACIFIC COAST

DIVIDEND NOTICE.

The German Savings and Loan Society
(The German Bank)

Member of the Associated Savings Banks of San Francisco

For the half year ending December 31, 1915, a dividend has been declared at the rate of four (4) per cent per annum on all deposits, payable on and after Monday, January 3, 1916. Dividends not called for are added to the deposit account and earn dividends from January 1, 1916.

GEORGE TOURNY, Manager.

Office—526 California street, Mission Branch—Corner Mission and 21st streets, Richmond District Branch—Corner Clement street and 7th avenue, Haight Street Branch—Corner Haight and Belvedere streets.

DIVIDEND NOTICE.

Humboldt Savings Bank.

Member of the Associated Savings Banks of San Francisco

For the half year ending December 31, 1915, a dividend has been declared at the rate of four (4) per cent per annum on all savings deposits, payable on and after Monday, January 3, 1916. Dividends not called for are added to and bear the same rate of interest as the principal from January 1, 1916.

H. C. KLEVESAHN, Cashier.

Office—783 Market street, near Fourth.

DIVIDEND NOTICE.

Bank of Italy.

Member of the Associated Savings Banks of San Francisco

For the half year ending December 31, 1915, a dividend has been declared at the rate of four (4) per cent per annum on all savings deposits, payable on and after Monday, January 3, 1916. Dividends not called for are added to and bear the same rate of interest as the principal from January 1, 1916.

Money deposited on or before January 10, 1916, will earn interest from January 1, 1916.

A. P. GIANNINI, President. A. PEDRINI, Cashier.
Office—Southeast corner Montgomery and Clay Sts. Market St. Branch—Junction Market, Turk and Mason streets.

The McCloud River Lumber Co.

McCLOUD, CAL.

Our Entire Plant—Saw Mills, Planing Mills, Factories,
Dry Kilns, Lumber Sheds, Etc.—Covers over 700 Acres.
Our Lumber Yards Alone Cover Over 50 Acres.

Offices, Mills, Factories McCLOUD, CAL. We Solicit Your Inquiries

Laws Effective New Year's Day

Ignorantia Legis Nemine Excusat

Beginning with today, a number of new laws concerning motorists go into effect, and, naturally, it behooves all owners and drivers of autos to learn their import at least.

Dimming Law

The most important of the new regulations affects lighting, and the glaring headlight may no longer be used as before, but all headlights must be provided with dimmers. To this all motorists will agree as being an act designed for their safety and convenience. The News Letter has led the agitation for this change, but just as all virtue in excess becomes vice, so there can be an extreme in this direction which might in individual cases prove more disastrous than the original evil. Incidentally, there is no reason why the dimming law should not apply equally to street cars, and, for that matter, to steam locomotives as well. Where the road runs for a space alongside of the railway tracks as in the peninsula between Beresford and Redwood the glare is just as baleful as in the case of other autos.

Right of Way

The law also as to right of way has been modified, and now it is unlawful to pass either of two machines passing in opposite directions. Furthermore, there will be no short turns allowed at intersections of streets; a car must make a big, sweeping turn; and the car which is proceeding from an intersection at your right hand has the right of way.

Registration Fees

The provision in the new laws concerning registration fees will remedy a manifest injustice in the old laws, by which, for instance, if you took out a license in June, say, you would be obliged to pay for a full year, and if in December for a full six months period. Now the year is split into quarterly periods, and at most the owner can be out only a fraction of three months; which is fair enough, considering there is a certain basic cost to the State in registration to maintain overhead and cost of number plates, etc. To this expense all should contribute equally.

Cash Bail Unnecessary

The law on bail for speeding also has been changed to advantage, for in many instances motorists, especially when returning home, do not have sufficient cash in their pocket to satisfy the local justice. As it is, you give your name and address to the arresting officer, unless you demand to be taken to the nearest magistrate forthwith; also a written promise to appear before a designated magistrate, for which you will have at least five days' written notice. Failure to keep your promise shall make you automatically guilty of misdemeanor, regardless of your guilt or innocence on the charge for which you were originally arrested. This is following out the English practice in many misdemeanor cases where it is the rule for the arresting officer merely to take the name and address in minor offenses.

Taxation Reduced

Especially in view of the fact that motorists everywhere are subject to undue taxation, as the News Letter has frequently pointed out, and in California the motor taxes are higher than elsewhere in the United States (we pay more taxes than New York, for instance, although owning seventy thousand less machines), the reduction of approximately 25 per cent in taxes will be welcomed.

The present law for rating the horsepower of a car is that one known as the Cubic Inch Displacement. The new law provides that the horsepower shall be rated according to the American Licensed Automobile Manufacturers' Formula, which is known as the A. L. A. M. Formula, and is used by every State in the Union taxing automobiles on the horsepower basis. The formula is as follows:

"Square the diameter of the cylinder in inches; multiply this product by the number of cylinders; divide this product by 2.5."

The tax under the new law is 40 cents per horsepower. If the rating of the horsepower of a car should result in a certain number and a fraction over, the fraction is not taken into consideration unless it is a major one, and then it is figured as an additional horsepower.

Under the present law the dealer pays $50 for the first five number plates and a fee of approximately $11 for each additional pair of plates. Under the new law he has to pay only $25 for the first five pairs of plates, and a fee of $2 for each additional pair of plates.

Lights Law

The text of the law regarding lights is appended. Section 13, Division "A," reads:

"Every motor vehicle other than a motorcycle, while on the public highway, whether in operation or otherwise, during the period from a half hour after sunset to a half hour before sunrise, and at all times when fog or other atmospheric conditions render the operation of vehicles dangerous to the traffic on and use of the highway, shall carry at the front at least two lighted lamps showing white lights visible under normal atmospheric conditions at least five hundred feet in the direction toward which said motor vehicle is faced, and shall also carry at the rear a lighted lamp exhibiting one red light plainly visible for a distance of five hundred feet toward the rear and so constructed and placed that the number plate carried on the rear of such motor vehicle shall be illuminated by a white light in such manner that the number thereon can be plainly distinguished under normal atmospheric conditions at a distance of not less than fifty feet toward the rear. At the times and under the conditions in this section hereinbefore specified, all other vehicles, except motorcycles and bicycles and such vehicles as may be propelled by a pedestrian, shall carry at the left side thereof a lighted lamp visible front and rear, and from the left, for a distance of not less than two hundred feet."

Other Provisions

The dimming provision is, in effect, that the front lights must be permanently dimmed so as to prevent any glare, and the center rays shall strike the ground at not more than 75 feet in front of the auto.

Unusual noise and cut-outs shall be avoided, and number plates are to be kept legible and free from dirt and grease.

Speed limit: 30 miles per hour anywhere; 20 miles in closely settled territory; 15 miles in business districts; and not exceed 10 miles at any approaching or intersections.

Vehicles passing from the rear to give an audible signal and not to turn in too soon.

* * *

Motorists Pay State $1,954,312

The following statistics were issued last Saturday by Superintendent H. A. French of the State Motor Vehicle Department for 1915, to December 25th: Automobile registrations 163,604, receipts $1,861,950; motorcycle registrations 26,210, receipts $51,396; chauffeur registrations 20,633, receipts $40,966; total receipts, $1,954,312. Receipts for 1916 licenses, all kinds, $360,724.90. Automobile licenses for 1916, between 35,000 and 40,000.

Nation-Wide Recognition of State Licenses

Washington, D. C., Dec. 27.—If the measure introduced in Congress by Representative W. C. Adamson of Georgia becomes a law, it will be possible for an automobile owner with his home state registration number freely to travel in other parts of the United States without additional taxation or tagging.

This is the concise manner in which Mr. Adamson sets forth what to all intents and purposes is a sensible substitute for a Federal automobile registration number:

"No person personally qualified under the laws and regulations of the State, Territory or District of his residence to use and operate such vehicle or vehicles shall be required in any other State or Territory or District into which he may go for business or pleasure to make any additional registration or take out any additional license or tag or pay any additional tax in order to use and operate any such machine; nor shall any owner of such vehicle who has complied with the laws of his own State as to registration, license, tagging or tax be required, in order to operate the same vehicle in any other State, Territory, or District, to make any additional registration or secure any other license tag or pay any additional tax."

It is set forth that nothing contained in the measure "shall be construed to exempt any persons from the police regulations of any State, Territory or District into which he may go, save only the additional registration, and the taking out of additional license or tag or paying of additional tax in case he shall have complied with the laws and regulations of his own State, Territory, or District."

Since the Congressman from Georgia is the chairman of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, to which the bill has been referred, it is reasonable to assume that he will interest himself markedly in its passage if he finds that there is a sufficient country-wide demand for its enactment.

Hence the American Automobile Association is calling the attention of its clubs and automobilists generally to this common sense legislation which will make it possible for the motor car road users in this country to enjoy the same liberty possessed by the automobilists of Great Britain, France and Germany, and other European countries. Abroad a single registration does for the entire country, and furthermore an international plate of identity is obtainable at a moderate cost which is recognized by all the countries. Previous to the war conflagration, plans were under way for the general adoption of an international trip-tych which would have reduced to a minimum the difficulties of customs regulations: A single payment and a checking in and out of each country visited comprising the brief incomplex procedure.

* * *

Vanderbilt Cup Race Will be on Track

The Vanderbilt Cup race of 1916 will be run May 13th on the Sheepshead Bay speedway, and for the first time will be a track race instead of a road race. By this means the event that originated in the East, in New York City, will be brought back to its birthplace, but in a changed form, and the number of big racing events for 1916 cut down by one. Race fans at Indianapolis are much exercised over the proposal to hold the Vanderbilt May 13th at Sheepshead, because of the closeness of the date to that of the annual Indianapolis event, to be run May 29th.

* * *

Britain Wants Mechanics

The British government has advised Canadian recruiting officers to try especially to get motor car drivers and repairmen, at least 3,000 being needed. The drivers must be able to do repair work in order to qualify. This was reported at the Windsor Armory, Windsor, Ont.

* * *

New Eight on Market

Nelson S. Gotshall, representative of the Lewis Spring and Axle Company of Jackson, Mich., builders of the Hollier eight, who recently arrived in this city, has announced that he has closed a deal with the Cole Pacific Motor Company, whereby that company will become the Northern Californian distributors for the Hollier eight. The present offices and sales rooms of the Cole Pacific Motor Company will likewise be the principal Northern California headquarters for the new eight, as well as Gotshall's personal offices while in this territory.

According to Gotshall, the Lewis Spring & Axle Co. were the first concern to realize the public demand for a modern eight cylinder car selling below one thousand dollars, and met this demand by building a car that embodied all the ideas of the multiple cylinder principle. With a record of fifteen years of building behind them, during which they have produced thousands of motors, transmissions, axles, steering gears, forgings, sheet metal work, etc., the Lewis Spring & Axle Co., Gotshall states, is fully equipped to build an eight cylinder car that will stand comparison with anything now before the motoring public, selling at anywhere near the price.

"This is the second season of Hollier eights," remarked Gotshall. "It throws an interesting side light on the automobile situation of last year when I state that almost all of the past year's models of the Hollier were sold to the allies governments for ambulance work in the armies fighting in France."

* * *

Big Advertising Agency Man Here

W. H. Rankin, vice-president and general manager of the Mahin Advertising Company of Chicago, paid us a visit last week, and in conversation said that the outlook for the motor trades was never better. Mr. Rankin is particularly well fitted to judge, as advertising feels the pulse of commerce earlier than any other business. Among other large lines carried by the Mahin Company is the Goodrich Company's tires and rubber goods generally.

* * *

Gray & Davis Service Station Popular in Oakland

Automobile owners will be interested to learn that the Auto Electric Equipment Co., located at 460 20th street, Oakland, has been appointed official service station for Gray & Davis. This appointment fills a long-felt want as heretofore all service work on Gray & Davis equipped cars has been taken care of by the San Francisco Service Station, which, needless to say, has been of considerable inconvenience to the owners of these cars.

Hughson & Merton, after surveying the field carefully, decided that not only was a branch service station in Oakland absolutely necessary, but that the Auto Electric Equipment Co., being well equipped to take care of this class of work, would care for Gray & Davis equipped cars to better advantage than any other.

* * *

Cadwalader Defies Competition

"It has been interesting to us to learn how exhaustively the modern prospective automobile purchaser goes into the matter of detail and specifications," said George Cadwalader, of the Logan-Cadwalader Company, the Northern California distributors of the Velie cars and trucks.

"All motordom, apparently, saw our challenge last week, wherein we challenged every intending purchaser to compare the car which had best represented his ideal with the Velie, and to ascertain whether the Velie car did not have in every specification and in every detail of finish, design, roominess and power a manifest superiority over the car he had in mind. A large number of persons have kept us busy this week pointing out the differences between the Velie and other cars."

* * *

A First-Class Garage

There are many garages in town, and the motorist is often in a quandary as to where to go, especially for permanent service. There are very few who give you the QUALITY of service of Dow & Green, in Taylor street, between O'Farrel and Geary. Here your car will receive something more than the "once over," and the prices are moderate.

* * *

Star Dimmer a Practical and Inexpensive Device

With the first of the year, the State dimmer law will go into effect, and it will behoove all motorists to look to their lights and see that they are equipped with some form of dimming device.

None of these is more practical or cheaper than the Star Dimmer, manufactured by the Star Dimmer Co. of Santa Rosa, of which B. I. Bill Co., 543 Golden Gate avenue, is the local distributor. Properly this should be called a diffuser, as the quantity of light is not diminished, as would be the case with a dimmer, but owing to the scientific breaking of the rays, a soft starlight glow is obtained instead of the harsh, blinding glare from the ordinary light.

Winton Annual Contest is Unique

A unique annual contest is held by the Winton Company to determine the drivers who run their car a given mileage at a minimum of expense. This year more than 300,000 miles of travel without a single cent expended for repair expense is the record made by twenty-five winning drivers in the contest for Winton Six chauffeurs.

This is the first time in the eight annual contests for Winton prizes that every money winner came through with a clean score. Although the expense of previous years aggregated but $383.68 for 1,992,995 miles traveled by 135 cars.

Average repair expense for the entire distance of nearly two million miles is 19¼ cents per thousand miles—undoubtedly the world's record.

The Winton Six contest was inaugurated when the Winton Company first produced sixes exclusively and has been renewed annually. It is open to all employed drivers of Winton Six cars. Drivers are required to submit monthly reports of daily mileage and repair expenses, the car owner attesting each report. At the end of the contest both the owner and the chauffeur supply an affidavit covering the season's work. All reports are submitted to a committee of judges not connected with the automobile industry, and these judges pass upon the merits of the various performances and award the prizes, $3,500 in cash being divided annually.

Vivian Pritchett, of Millville, N. J., winner of first prize of $500, in Winton "Six" Eighth Annual Repair Expense Contest

The purpose of the contest is to prove by sworn records that the Winton Six is a car that does not add to the bank accounts of repair shops. And the Winton Company believes that the figures prove its belief.

The judges this year were R. G. Howse of Literary Digest, John A. Dickson of Youth's Companion, D. G. Newton of Cosmopolitan, S. C. Rawlins of Vogue, and Robert M. Bankhart of the National Geographic Society. In order not to place a premium on excessive mileage, to the disadvantage of many drivers whose employers do not tour extensively, mileage records this year were restricted to a maximum of 12,500 miles. Twenty winning drivers covered the maximum distance. Five district prizes went to drivers who did not cover the maximum distance. A special prize for owners, to be awarded on the best record made by a Model 21-A car, was won by Mr. H. K. Browning, of Tarrytown, N. Y., who will receive a new Winton car in even exchange for the car he is now driving.

Johnson's Shock Absorber Attracts Crowd

A very neat exhibit at the Auto Salon at the Palace Hotel was staged by the Johnson Shock Absorber Company, and was always well attended.

This shock absorber has been on the coast for less than a year, and has certainly made a name for itself. Judging from the number of this type of absorbers that are seen on cars, W. G. Ehrhart, the local representative, has smashed all precedents by placing them on cars on a ten day approval plan. Going still further by giving a two year guarantee with each set.

This sort of service is always appreciated by the public. Proof of this can be found in Ehrhart's order book, which shows that over one hundred sets of Johnsons were sold during the three days' exhibit, and Ehrhart isn't mad at anybody.

Rules 36 M. P. H. Legal Speed

As no life or limb was endangered, judgment against R. N. Rhineland, who was convicted of speeding in Long Island, when his car was going 36 miles per hour, was reversed at Mineola, L. I., recently. An appeal was made on a $10 fine which was paid under protest. It was ruled that, although a person driving a car at a rate of speed in excess of 30 miles per hour outside of incorporated villages is presumed guilty of reckless driving, yet it does not follow that such speed is conclusive proof that the driver is endangering the life and property of others.

MoToRoL

"It suits because it doesn't soot"

If you want to prolong the life of your engine
If you want to eliminate smoke and carbon
If you want to reduce your oil expense

Use MoToRoL

Hughson & Merton, Inc.
530 Golden Gate Avenue
San Francisco, Cal.

AUTOMOBILE STARTING and LIGHTING SYSTEMS

Give Satisfactory Results When Given Proper Attention

We specialize on electrical equipment, storage batteries, etc., and guarantee satisfaction.

GUARANTEE BATTERY COMPANY
BRAND & CUSHMAN

639 Van Ness Ave., S. F. Phone Franklin 2772

AUTOISTS
SHOULD NEVER BE WITHOUT THEM
=
Your Grocer Sells 'Em

HOOVER SPRING COMPANY

Guaranteed Auto Springs
617 Turk St., near Van Ness Ave.
Quick Repair Work
Phone Prospect 460

TIRES

VULCANIZING

TOM H. ELKINGTON
Long Mileage Tires and Second-Hand Tires
Everything Needed for the Bus

1135 VAN NESS AVE.—Near Geary Phone PROSPECT 1566

PANHARD OIL

FREE FROM CARBON

BERNARD I. BILL
543 GOLDEN GATE AVE. SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

SOMETHING NEW

Durand Luggage Carrier

The Durand-Ferry Mfg. Co., 260 National Life Building, Chicago, has brought out a device for carrying luggage on the running board of the car. It has a capacity of six or seven ordinary sized suit cases, and quantities of robes, coats, etc., which can be securely fastened, kept clean and dry and handy when needed.

The device, or carrier, consists of three metal upright arms each fitted with two leather straps, bolted to the running board. These arms hold the luggage in place. The carrier is adjustable to fit articles of various sizes. By loosening the thumb-screws the sliding arm may be moved toward or away from the car as desired. It may be removed from the car readily when not wanted.

The Triplex, or three-arm rack, is used for large cars and the Duplex for smaller types. It is so designed that it does not interfere with the rear door, and when loaded lightly the front door may be used. Rack, complete, including six straps, rope and waterproof cover, $8. Duplex size, $6.50.

* * *

Wilcox Dirigible Headlight

A practical dirigible headlight device for motor cars is the claim of R. Wilcox, Chicago. By means of this invention the headlights can be rotated at will horizontally and vertically, while the car is in motion or at rest, control being by a small universal lever located on the dash. The lights may be turned to right angles with the car in either direction, and when released automatically are returned to the normal forward position, and firmly held there, so that when not being manipulated they are as steady as the ordinary fixed lights.

One of the most serious problems the modern high power electric headlights furnish is that of glare. This is solved by the downward shifting of the lights, without depriving the driver of a sufficient light to make the road safe, and he is able to meet the requirements of the dimming ordinances and of courtesy. The lamps are held by a ratchet device at any elevation in the vertical plane.

The principles involved are applicable to any design of car, by varying the details of construction, and the apparatus is very simple, there being nothing unsightly necessitated, and nothing to get loose or rattle. The control is carried from the lever to the lamps by flexible wire cables, passing over small pulleys, and this cable is the only part likely to wear.

* * *

To Determine Proper Firing

It has been found that the temperature of the spark plug will indicate whether it is missing or properly firing, according to the Carter's Spark Plug Detector Co., Detroit, Mich. It is upon this principle that the Carter spark plug detector produced by this company operates.

This thermal device is placed against the metal of the spark plug below the porcelain. Each plug is tested separately while the motor is running, or within ten minutes after it is shut off, so as to permit the detector to register the temperature inside of the cylinders, through their respective spark plugs. The device sells at $1.50 and tells instantly whether the plug is functioning properly. Its appearance is somewhat like that of a thermometer, the position of the liquid in the glass tube showing whether the plug is missing or firing.

* * *

U-Sav-Your Dressing Supplants Soap

U-Sav-Your dressing for automobile bodies is being offered by the U-Sav-Your Mfg. Co., Warren, Mass. The company advocates the use of this dressing in place of soap and water for the varnish of the car. It is put up in 12-ounce bottles, listing at 60 cents, and also in gallon cans, listing at $3. It is easily applied with a piece of cheese cloth.

TELEPHONE FRANKLIN 1836

FOR A

Touring Car, Limousine or Taxicab

The White Star Line

AUTO TOURING COMPANY

RATES: 7 Passenger Touring Cars $2.00 per Hour
7 Passenger Closed Cars $2.50 per Hour
Special Rates by week or month.

TAXICAB RATES FOR SHORT TRIPS

Day and Night Service

Our Taxi Service is Most Reasonable and Unexcelled. We use seven passenger closed cars as above for this service which bear no mark of identification signifying a rent car. The "Zone" rate applies to all Taxi service so when ordering a car ask the tariff first.

We Make a Specialty of Repairing Auto Lamps, Radiators and Fenders at Short Notice
PHONE MARKET 7S1

Beuer Lamp Reflectors
Be Electric Sign Co., Inc.
528 GUGH ST. SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Manufacturers of LAMPS, LANTERNS, REFLECTORS of all Description
METAL SPINNING

Tips to Automobilitists

(CUT THIS OUT.)

The News Letter recommends the following garages, hotels and supply houses. Tourists will do well to cut this list out and keep it as a guide:

PALO ALTO.—LARKIN'S CAFE—just opened. The only strictly first-class cafe on the Wishbone Route devoted to the patronage of automobile owners and their families. Corner of University avenue and The Circle.

SAN JOSE.—LAMOLLE GRILL 36-38 North First street. The best French dinner in California, 75 cents, or a la carte. Automobile parties given particular attention.

PALO ALTO.—PALO ALTO GARAGE, 443 Emmerson St., Tel. P. A. 333. Auto livery at all hours. Tires and sundries in stock. Gasoline, oil, repairing, lathework, vulcanizing. Open day and night.

Mitchell
MOTOR CARS

The Six of Sixteen

Osen McFarland Co.
Golden Gate Avenue

CLASS "A" GARAGE, INC.

Strictly Fire Proof Building

STORAGE SUPPLIES REPAIRS
BEST SERVICE ASSURED
735-751 POST STREET SAN FRANCISCO
TELEPHONE PROSPECT 2280

WHERE SERVICE MEANS SERVICE

M & H GARAGE

819-835 ELLIS ST. Between Polk and Van Ness Avenue

WHERE THE PRIVATE OWNER FEELS AT HOME

BY EDNA BUCKBEE

"The Secret Memoirs of Count Tadasu Hayashi."

This volume contains a revelation of the Japanese point of view regarding themselves, their neighbors, and their destiny, which is of immediate importance to all interested in the policies and future of our Western States.

The secrecy of these memoirs is due to censorship rather than to the author's intent. He was earnest for their publication. But certain Japanese officials considered them indecent—which they certainly are—and attempted their suppression. Mr. Pooley gained private access to the manuscripts, and by his alacrity was able to get him out of the country.

Count Hayashi, through whose efforts the Anglo-Japanese Alliance was consummated, makes disclosures concerning that bit of statesmanship which vividly shows the excitement and chicanery of diplomacy. Following, he gives the official history and scope of the agreements between Japan and Russia, France and the United States. And while his opinions concerning the latter are of decided interest, still they are more veiled and less enlightening than what follows.

It is in his estimate of the Chinese that the fearlessly straightforward attitude of the author surprises one, and clears away a fog of misconceptions. Of them he says: "They are not bumptious or conceited as the Japanese, but are very large-minded, learned and leisurely . . ." and makes the frank observation that "if the Japanese will only strip off their gold braid they will find that they have left only that which they have imported originally from China, and consequently it is clear that they are behind the Chinese in every point of civilization."

But the most engrossing and significant chapter, wherein lies the high local importance of this volume, is that which tells of Japan's future policy. In it, with that same candor with which Bernhardt so amused a complacent England, he says: "What Japan has now to do is to keep quiet, to lull the suspicions that have arisen against her, and to wait; meanwhile strengthening the foundations of her national power, watching and waiting for the opportunity which must one day surely come in the Orient. When that day arrives, she will be able to follow her own course, not only able to put meddling powers in their places, but even, as necessity arises, meddling with the affairs of other powers. Then truly she will be able to reap advantages for herself." Here is a policy of "watchful waiting" with a vengeance.

Mr. Poole has ably arranged and edited these documents. Being himself familiar with Japanese sentiment, he speaks of the carefully fostered belief in their own superiority—"One expression of it, which is worth remembering in these days of land agitation in California and British Columbia, is the refusal to allow foreigners to own land, because such ownership would be a 'pollution of the sacred soil.'" It is little wonder that he says further on that "Japan is a country to be treated with cautious courtesy." "Cautious courtesy" is indeed an alliterative antidote for "watchful waiting." This book is enlightening, even startling, and merits the most serious consideration from every Californian.

"The Secret Memoirs of Count Tadasu Hayashi." Published by Putnam Company, New York. Price $2.50.

"Clementia's Crisis."

A charming California love story, with one of Admiral Dewey's officers as the hero. Clementia's crisis came when she had to choose between her love for the man who had won her heart, and a vow which, though made in childhood, was to her irrevocable. Edith Ogden Harrison has made a name for herself in her former works, especially "The Lady of the Snows" and "Princess Sayrane," and in the present volume Lt. Arslan Barrington, who won his spurs in active service at Manila during the Spanish-American war, plunges like the ardent heroes of old into the very heart of romance with the opening of the story. With a California background, decorated with old Spanish Missions, and historical fretwork and the poetic romance that naturally belongs to the part of California described by the author only an absorbing story could develop.

Price, $1.25. Published by A. C. McClurg, Chicago.

"The Hundredth Wave."

Grantley Sanderson has endeavored to make this volume a beacon light for truth seekers. His key note is "Are you willing to be taught the higher truths about God, even though they destroy conceptions which you have cherished as your most sacred faith in Him, and though they compel you to accept a new faith founded in the great truths of the universe which science reveals?" He frankly issues the book as a challenge of the truth of orthodoxy.

Price $1.35 net. Published by Charles H. Kerr & Co., Chicago.

BURBANK'S FLORAL COMPLIMENT

TO INA COOLBRITH

Recently, F. C. Smith, a prominent business man of this city, asked Luther Burbank, the plant wizard, to undertake the task of fixing some selected color upon the poppy, eschscholtzia, California, and name it after Miss Ina Coolbrith on account of her life work in developing California poetry and other noble forms of art. Mr. Burbank replied that he had developed a crimson eschscholtzia, the most beautiful of all the eschscholtzias, without any name, and Miss Coolbrith's name might very appropriately be given to this flower. Formal arrangements to this end are now being made. Singularly enough, one of Miss Coolbrith's most captivating poems is a song of the Golden Poppy, "Copa de Oro." Miss Coolbrith has expressed her great delight over this floral compliment.

Dr. Byron Haines, Dentist, has resumed practice at his office in Gunst Building, S. W. corner Geary and Powell streets.

The New Poodle Dog

Hotel and Restaurant

At Corner
Polk and Post
STREETS
San Francisco

Phone:
Franklin 2960

San Francisco's Leading French Restaurant
MUSIC

French Dinner Every Evening, 75 Cents
Sunday, $1.00

NEW DELMONICO'S

362 Geary Street

Above Hotel St. Francis Telephone Sutter 1572

BLANCO'S

O'Farrell and Larkin Streets

PHONE FRANKLIN 9

No visitor should leave the city without seeing the finest cafe in America

J. B. Poe J. Bergez C. Meilbeuan C. Lalanee L. Courtard

BERGEZ-FRANK'S

Old POODLE DOG Co.

HOTEL AND RESTAURANT
MUSIC AND ENTERTAINMENT EVERY EVENING

415-421 Bush St., San Francisco (Above Kearny) Exchange, Douglas 2411

INSURANCE

The report sent out from San Francisco last week to the effect that the Pacific Coast Automobile Conference had disbanded and that there would follow a rate war seems to have been a bit premature, in that there has been no such action taken, and that the association has reorganized and is at present on a sound basis. In fact, automobile underwriting conditions on the coast are in better shape than at any time since the phenomenal growth of the industry in this part of the country first took shape. The three companies charged with withdrawing and disrupting the conference—Royal and Queen, Liverpool & London & Globe, and Aetna—are the members that have been the backbone of the association, and the reorganization effected last Friday is, in a great measure, due to their good work. The St. Paul has been out of the conference for months. All board fire members have now agreed to bring their automobile companies into the organization, which eliminates, practically, all chances of a rate war. While non-board companies are paying brokers as high as thirty-five per cent commissions, they have as a rule maintained full rates. The new schedule on practically all makes of automobiles became effective December 10, and automobile underwriting conditions, to repeat, are in better shape in this field than ever before.

* * *

The 47th annual insurance report for California, just issued by Commissioner Phelps, is the most complete and comprehensive document ever compiled by the commissioner's office.

There are 57 California insurance companies licensed by the State, 5 fire and marine, stock; 8 legal reserve life; 1 assessment life; 21 county mutuals, fire; 14 casualty and miscellaneous stock companies; 6 inter-insurance and 2 fraternal. Of other State organizations there are 259; 93 fire and marine, stock; 9 fire and marine, mutuals; 43 legal reserve life; 3 assessment life; 3 assessment accident and health; 50 casualty and miscellaneous, stock; 9 inter-insurers and 50 fraternal. Of foreign corporations there are 47 stock fire and marine, and 6 casualty and miscellaneous.

* * *

On the subject of mechanics' liens the Supreme Court has ruled that even though the owner of a piece of property fails to file the surety bond provided under the act of 1911, the bond is still valid. In such cases, says the decision, the owner's liability is not limited to the contract price, and laborers and material men may have recourse to his property to satisfy their liens. The ruling was made in Hammond Lumber Company and the Maryland Casualty.

* * *

It is announced that the indefinite closing of the Panama Canal has compelled the cancellation of an offer to absorb certain increased insurance, and shippers must bear the full cost of insurance via the Straits of Magellan or Cape Horn on cargo after January 15th moving on liners of the American-Hawaiian service. There are insurance rates quoted which show that those via the Magellan or Cape Horn routes will be from 85 cents to $1.10 on cargo destined for Portland or Puget Sound. On the opening of the canal rates will be 40 to 50 cents to the same ports.

* * *

A careful canvas of the different fire offices discloses that the average loss ratio for the Pacific Coast this year will approach fifty-three per cent. The experience of the past two months has had the effect of materially decreasing the average, as losses have been comparatively light.

* * *

Commissioner Phelps has revoked the California license of the Independent Order of Puritans. He claims that the order is being operated unlawfully, owing to its relations with the American Guaranty Company of Delaware, with which it has an agency contract, and the Puritan Life and Annuity of Columbus, O., for whom it was selling stock with the intention of merging the Independent Order of Puritans when the Puritan Life should be organized.

* * *

Secretary Robert J. Giles was banqueted by the agents of the Occidental Life, last Saturday, and presented by them with a handsome silver loving cup.

Following the discovery of a technical impairment of the California Standard's capital stock as a result of the recent examination by the California insurance department, the license of the company has been revoked, and President Hoover announces that immediately following the close of the present year stock selling will be resumed at twice par value to make up capital and provide a working surplus. He reports the situation to be in every way encouraging.

* * *

Cesar Bertheau, until recently senior member of the general agency firm of Bertheau, Selbach and Bertheau, will on January 1st accept the appointment of city manager of the German Alliance Insurance Association, under George H. Tyson. The Association has not been writing in the city heretofore.

* * *

The San Francisco office of the Mutual Life, under the management of W. L. Hathaway, has distinguished itself by being the only San Francisco office of an Eastern Company that, during the present year, made a gain in business written over the preceding year. The office closed the first eleven months of this year with one million dollars more business than was secured during a corresponding period in 1914. Although it was an exposition year the local office dropped no stitches.

Wedding Presents.—The choicest variety to select from at Marsh's, who is now permanently located at Post and Powell streets.

Mayerle's New Double Vision Glasses

Combine both reading and distance corrections in one lens—avoiding the annoyance of changing glasses when you wish to see far or near.

Mayerle's glasses relieve eye strain, freshen your memory and strengthen your eyes.

Two gold medals and diploma of honor awarded at California Industrial Exposition. George Mayerle, graduate optometrist and optician, established 20 years, 960 Market street, San Francisco. Mayerle eyewater freshens and strengthens the eyes, at druggists' 50c.; by mail 65c.

VISIT CAPITOL CITY of your STATE

A Day's Trip—Well Spent

Visit beautiful Capitol Grounds—Capitol Building—Sutter's Fort—Crocker Art Gallery—Riverside Drive, etc.
$3.35 Round Trip Saturdays and Sundays, with return limit Monday.

OAKLAND, ANTIOCH & EASTERN RAILWAY

NEW PARISIAN FRENCH LAUNDRY

Mme. C. La FON

First Class Work at Reasonable Prices
Laces and Lace Curtains a Specialty
Club, Restaurant and Hotel Service

991 OAK STREET
SAN FRANCISCO

Phone Park 4962

BRUSHES 623 Sacramento Street, between Kearny and Montgomery Streets.

With full line of brushes, Brooms and Feather Dusters, on hand and made to order. Janitor supplies of all kinds. Ladders, Buckets, Chamols. Metal Polish and Cleaning Powders. Hardware. Wood and Willow Ware.

Call, write or telephone Keary 5787

WM. BUCHANAN

Tel. Kearny 1461 Private Exchange Connecting all Warehouses SAN FRANCISCO WAREHOUSE CO.

Warehousemen Forwarding Agents Distributors Public Welghers
Spur Track Connection with all Railroads

Main Office—625-647 Third St., San Francisco, Cal.

AUSTRALIA and NEW ZEALAND

BANK OF NEW SOUTH WALES

(ESTABLISHED 1817)

Paid-up Capital	-	$17,500,000.00
Reserve Fund	-	12,750,000.00
Reserve Liability of Proprietors	-	17,500,000.00
Aggregate Assets 31st March 1915	-	$47,750,000.00
		$267,918,826.00

J. RUSSELL FRENCH, General Manager

348 BRANCHES and AGENCIES in the Australian States, New Zealand, Fiji, Papua, (New Guinea), and London. The Bank transacts every description of Australian Banking Business. Wool and other Produce Credits Arranged.

Head Office: GEORGE STREET, SYDNEY
London Office: 29 THREADNEEDLE STREET, E. C.

Fire and Automobile Insurance

PACIFIC DEPARTMENT

The Williamsburgh City Fire Insurance Co.	Organized 1853
Merchants Fire Assurance Corporation	Organized 1910
New Jersey Fire Insurance Co.	Organized 1910
The New Brunswick Fire Insurance Co.	Organized 1826
The North River Insurance Co.	Organized 1822
United States Fire Insurance Co.	Organized 1824

WM. H. ALVERSON, Manager

374 Pine Street, San Francisco, California. Telephone Sutter 485
AUTOMOBILE AND TRANSPORTATION DEPARTMENT
HERBERT W. BAILEY, Superintendent

SPECIAL AGENTS

R. L. ELLIS, San Francisco
T. J. KELEHER, Los Angeles
A. M. LOVELACE, Portland
W. T. BOOTH, Spokane
T. B. CLARKE, San Francisco

AMPLE FACILITIES FOR HANDLING LARGE LINES

SECURITY AND SERVICE

That's What You Get When You

Bond Your Employees

With

Pacific Coast Casualty Company

Of San Francisco, Cal.

A California Insurance Company

$250,000.00 on Deposit with State Treasurer as a Guarantee to Policy Holders
Agents in Every California City

1863

1915

FIFTY-SECOND ANNIVERSARY

Fireman's Fund Insurance Co.

Capital $1,500,000 Assets, $10,000,000

FIRE MARINE AUTOMOBILE

California and Sansome Streets, San Francisco, California.

The Connecticut Fire Ins. Co.

OF HARTFORD

CHARTERED 1850

PACIFIC DEPARTMENT

The Insurance Exchange, San Francisco

Benjamin J. Smith, Manager

West Coast---San Francisco Life Insurance Company

Pine and Leidesdorff Sts. San Francisco, California

Thomas L. Miller, President

A strong, well managed institution; organized under the rigid insurance laws of California. Its policy forms are clear and explicit, and define and guard the interests of policy-holders as do those of no other company. Ask any agent, or write the company for sample of policy forms.

The Home Insurance Company

Organized 1853 Cash Capital, $6,000,000

Insurance on personal effects of tourists and temporary sojourners anywhere in United States, Canada and Mexico. Insurance against loss by fire. Automobile Insurance. Indemnity for loss of rental income by fire.
H. L. ROFF, General Agent. J. J. SHEAHAN, Ass't General Agent
333 California Street.

City Index and Purchasers' Guide

CHIROPODISTS.

Dr. R. T. Leaner, Surgeon Chiroprapist, formerly of 6 Geary street; removes corns entirely whole—painless—without knife. Bunions and ingrowing nails cured by a special and painless treatment. 212-214 West bank Bldg., 830 Market St. Tel. Kearny 3578.

NOTARY PUBLIC.

Martin Aronsohn, Notary Public and Pension Attorney. All legal papers drawn up accurately. 217 Montgomery St., above Bush, San Francisco, Cal. Phone Douglas 601.

ATTORNEYS-AT-LAW

Samuel M. Shortridge, Attorney-at-Law, Chronicle Building San Francisco. Tel. Sutter 36.

Marcus Lorne Samuels, Attorney-at-Law, Pacific Building, Market St. at Fourth, San Francisco, Cal. Tel. Douglas 374

The German Savings & Loan Society

Savings (The German Bank) Commercial

526 CALIFORNIA ST., SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Member of the Associated Savings Banks of San Francisco

The Following Branches for RECEIPT AND PAYMENT OF DEPOSITS ONLY:

MISSION BRANCH S. E. Corner Mission and 21st Streets
RICHMOND DISTRICT BRANCH S. W. Cor. Clement and 7th Ave.
HAIGHT STREET BRANCH S. W. Cor. Haight and Belvedere

JUNE 30th, 1915

Assets	$ 60,321,343.04
Deposits	57,362,899.35
Capital actually paid up in Cash	1,000,000.00
Reserve and Contingent Funds	1,958,443.69
Employees' Pension Fund	199,164.12
Number of Depositors	66,965

OFFICE HOURS: 10 o'clock A. M. to 3 o'clock P. M., except Saturdays to 12 o'clock M. and Saturday evenings from 6 o'clock P. M. to 8 o'clock P. M. for receipt of deposits only
For the 6 months ending June 30th, 1915, a dividend to depositors of 4% per annum was declared.

The Anglo & London Paris National Bank

SAN FRANCISCO

Paid-Up Capital	$4,000,000
Surplus and Undivided Profits	21,400,000
Total Resources	$40,000,000

OFFICERS:

SIG. OBERNEBERG Chairman of the Board
HERBERT FLEISHACKER President
WASHINGTON DODGE Vice-President
J. FRIEDLANDER Vice-President
C. F. HUNT Vice-President
C. R. PARKER Cashier
WM. H. HIGH Assistant Cashier
H. CHOTNSKI Assistant Cashier
O. R. BURDICK Assistant Cashier
J. W. LILIENTHAL, Jr. Assistant Cashier
A. L. LANGERMAN Secretary

THE CANADIAN BANK OF COMMERCE

HEAD OFFICE, TORONTO

ESTABLISHED 1867

SIR EDMUND WALKER C.V.O., LL.D., D.C.L. President	Paid-up Capital	$15,000,000
ALEXANDER LAIRD General Manager	Reserve Fund	13,500,000
JOHN AIRD Assistant General Manager	Aggregate Resource	245,000,000

London Office, 2 Lombard Street, E. C.
New York Office, 16 Exchange Place

Branches in all parts of Canada, including Yukon Territory and at Seattle, Wash., Portland, Ore., and Mexico City

All Kinds of Commercial Banking Transacted

SAN FRANCISCO BRANCH---450 CALIFORNIA STREET
Bruce Heathcote, Manager

PILLSBURY'S PICTURES, INC VIEWS OF CALIFORNIA

KODAK finishing done by EXPERTS. We will send for your films.

219 POWELL STREET Phone Kearny 3841

To New York by Rail and Ocean

Through fare from San Francisco same as All-Rail and includes Berth and Meals on Steamer

"Sunset Limited"---74 Hours to New Orleans

Leaves Third Street Station 5:00 P. M.

Connects at New Orleans With

Southern Pacific's Ocean Liners

Sailing to New York Wednesdays and Saturdays

The Marvelous "APACHE TRAIL" Auto Trip, Phoenix to Globe, Made by Detour Maricopa to Bowie, Arizona

For Fares and Berths Ask Agents

SOUTHERN PACIFIC

FIRST IN SAFETY

Hotel del Coronado

Coronado Beach, California

American Plan

Polo January 1 to March 20

Annual Polo Tournament March 1 to 20

Bay and Surf Bathing

Boating Deep Sea Fishing Tennis

Motoring

18 Hole Golf Course

Write for Booklet

John J. Hernan -:- Manager

RAJAH SPARK PLUGS

Fourteen years of successful manufacture, continuing the original design and workmanship proving that the

RAJAH PLUGS

cannot be improved upon.

For Sale by All Dealers

PACIFIC COAST DISTRIBUTORS

Hughson & Merton, Inc.

530 Golden Gate Avenue

San Francisco

To CHICAGO, KANSAS CITY and ST. LOUIS

2 Daily Trains

via

Los Angeles, Tucson and El Paso

"Golden State Limited"

Through Standard and Tourist Pullman cars from San Francisco, Ferry Station, 6:00 p. m. and 10:40 a. m., respectively.

"The Californian"

Standard Pullman and Tourist car connection to Kansas City, from San Francisco, Ferry Station, 9:00 p. m.

BEST DINING CAR IN AMERICA

For Tickets and Berths Ask Agents of

Southern Pacific

Palace Hotel
Flood Building

Thrd St. Station
Ferry Station

El Paso & Southwestern Rock Island Lines

691 Market Street

SAN FRANCISCO
NEWS LETTER
 California Advertiser.

Devoted to the Leading Interests of California and the Pacific Coast.

Vol. XCI

San Francisco, Cal., Saturday, January 8, 1916

No. 2

The SAN FRANCISCO NEWS LETTER AND CALIFORNIA ADVERTISER is printed and published every Saturday by the Proprietor, Frederick Marlott, 21 Sutter street, San Francisco, Cal. Tel. Kearny 3594 Entered at San Francisco, Cal., Post-office as second-class mail matter.

Chicago Office—Geo. Hische, 1310 Westminster, Westminster Building, Chicago.

London Office—George Street & Co., 30 Cornhill, E. C., England. Matter intended for publication in the current number of the SAN FRANCISCO NEWS LETTER AND CALIFORNIA ADVERTISER should be sent to the office not later than 6 p. m. Wednesday.

Subscription Rates (including postage)—1 year, $4.00; 6 months, $2.25; Foreign—1 year, $6.00; 6 months, $3.25.

—The peace talk in Europe is hardly able to get beyond a whisper.

—Two onion peddlers were found with molds for making counterfeit money. A strong case.

—Pretty tough, to turn from honeymooning to struggle with a stubborn and recalcitrant Congress.

—"If at first you don't succeed, try, try again," is the motto of the war prophet and military expert.

—That occasional dull thud that you hear is a New Year resolutioner falling off the water wagon.

—Bryan may really be planning to head a third party next year; or it may merely be that his lectures need advertising.

—By the time the last diplomatic note on the Ancona has been exchanged the public will have forgotten what it was all about.

—It seems paradoxical that the advocates of preparedness are better able to hold their tempers than are the advocates of peace.

—It can't be denied that there is something comical in watching the other fellow scramble out of the way of the speeding automobile.

—The opening of the race track at Tia Juana means prosperity for the San Francisco policemen who have secret pool rooms on their beat.

—One defender of Ford remarks that while he may be a fool, he is no bigger one than the men who started the war. Yes, but they got results.

—The discovery that North and South America have interests in common was a long time coming; but let us be thankful that it did not come too late.

—It is proposed to nail school desks to the floor to prevent the pupils dancing. No better means could be found to drive them to worse places for their dancing.

—San Francisco is averaging about one murder a day at present. But hangings are lamentably few. Therefore, we may look for a further increase in slayings.

—Washington, Oregon, Colorado, South Carolina, Arkansas, Iowa, went dry with the coming of the new year. How long is California to remain on the list of free States?

—Lynchings in the United States last year totaled 69, which was an increase of 17 over the year before. That's a gain of only twenty-five per cent. Hurrah for civilization!

—Nineteen-sixteen came in weeping and shivering. Never mind, stranger. You'll find it a good world, albeit a little foolish in the head sometimes, and by springtime you'll be laughing at it.

—"We enter the New Year with God for the protection of the Fatherland and for Germany's greatness," says the Kaiser in a message to his troops. Rather impudent of him to put the Deity in the un-neutral list.

—Alameda boy who joined the Canadian fighting contingent, and is now in the trenches, has written to his mother begging her to get him out. Why doesn't he apply to Ford, who is an expert at getting 'em out?

—The big movie concerns are talking of leaving Los Angeles because they cannot furnish the brand of purity demanded by that town. Come on up here, filmers: you'll find more real decency here and less hypocrisy.

—Prohibition for California is to be on the ballot again this year. The only way to choke off these enemies of personal liberty is to give them such a drubbing at the polls that they will not have the nerve to try it again.

—The average Los Angelan is trying to forget that snow fell there the other day. Inside of a month he will so thoroughly have persuaded himself that it was a delusion that he will be violently denying such a thing ever happened.

—San Quentin's prisoners were given a big feast on New Year's day, and provided with a four-hour vaudeville entertainment. The honest man shakes his head over such news, and wonders where the punishment for dishonesty comes in.

—Canada will have nearly half a million trained soldiers when the war is over. And England might take a notion to pick on us. And there are no forts on the border. And we have no army. And if the pacificists prevail we will continue to have no army. Therefore, it may not be entirely out of place to call the pacificists fools.

—Some annexation cranks advocate naming the group of cities across the bay "East San Francisco." Cut it out. We who love San Francisco do not want to tack a cheap handle onto her name and present it to any community. And a community that cannot find a name for itself, but has to borrow another's, isn't worth annexing.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

PANAMA CANAL SETS SIZE TO U. S. WARSHIPS.

As has been forecasted by naval experts, the width of the Panama Canal marks the limits of the beam of the future dreadnaughts and cruisers of the United States navy. The matter came up in a recent communication of Secretary Daniels to Congress, wherein he stated that it would be unwise to build dreadnaughts so large that they could not easily pass through the Canal. Under this ruling the new dreadnaught California, 32,000 tons and 97 feet beam, marks the largest vessels at this period to lead Uncle Sam's fleets. The canal locks are 110 feet wide and 1,000 feet long, thus giving vessels of the California class a freeboard on each side of 6½ feet, scant room for the handling of a 32,000 ton vessel. Two cruisers of 35,000 tons and 800 feet long are listed for construction; their width will offer no obstacle, as being vessels of higher speed than the dreadnaughts they will be built longer and narrower. It is judged that their beam will be inside 95 feet. The 97 feet beam of the California ranks high with the present giant vessels of the sea belonging to other nations. For instance, the liner Vaterland of Germany, 58,000 tons, 950 feet long, has a beam of only 100 feet; the largest dreadnaught of the British fleet, Queen Elizabeth, 27,500 tons, 650 feet long, has a beam of 94 feet; the ill-fated Titanic, 52,300 tons, 850 feet long, had a beam of 92 feet. In the foreign navies, just now, there is a tendency to provide the new dreadnaughts with an intermediate speed between the fast cruisers and the orthodox slower-going dreadnaughts; for this reason the type of vessel like the new Queen Elizabeth is several knots faster than vessels of her older type. The new dreadnaught California, with her 32,000 tons of impressive strength, stands in the van of the vessels mustered by Great Britain, and of course of this country. How much larger sized war vessels foreign nations will construct is a problem for the future to disclose. The width of the Panama Canal will, of course, be no deterrent with them. The close of the present war may see efforts on the part of the victors to impose great restrictions on both the armies and the navies of the vanquished nations. Under the immense floating debts of the nations involved, and the fact that there is little likelihood of a war to break out in the near future among the dominant governments, a policy of retrenchment in both the military and naval branches of the victors is most likely. Accordingly at the present rating of the big war vessels of the world practically all of them can pass the present locks of the canal. Of the commercial fleets of the world only a few of the latest giant passenger liners are barred by size.

The new American ambassador to Mexico, Henry P. Fletcher, is credited with being one of the best men in line for the job. He has had a round of experience at Pekin, Lisbon, Havana, before going to Chili as American minister in 1909, where he made a special study of the South American republics. He is roundly regarded as a notably handy, capable and discriminating diplomat in dealing with Latin temperament and affairs. His standing is reflected in the fact that no signs of criticism in the press has dented his appointment. He has sufficient acumen and strength of character to avoid that wretched pitfall which has tumbled most of our representatives in Mexico City, playing favorites with one of the several parties disputing there for absolute control.

"IT'S MOTHER!"

Ambassador Fletcher will reach his post at the opportune time when Mexico will have reached the most promising period, in several years past, for recovery from the protracted internecine strife which has prostrated her. Fletcher's mission is first aid to the injured in advice and material assistance to the Carranza government, the first promising practical attempt to restore Mexico to its feet. Just now Carranza is recognized as the de facto chief of Mexico. Villa and his rabble of guerrillas have, for the time at least, been swept from the field, and prospects are promising that bushwhacking and looting are at an end. Felix Diaz is trying to start an uprising in the south, in Oaxaca, but his record in this respect is chiefly strewn with failures. To all appearances Carranza commands the situation, and has a force at hand capable of grappling readily with success against any nearby opposition. Time will place in his hands the ability to crush such attempts at a distance. Prostrate Mexico has been trampled into a condition where she is hungry for peace. Carranza will make a formal triumphant entry into the City of Mexico, which is regarded as letters patent to government by the Latins, who adore such shows. He must then attack the intricate problem of resuscitating the various vitals that were the life of Mexico, her finances, industries, commerce, natural resources and the like. Capital is absolutely necessary to vitalize commerce, and if Carranza's plans promise success, a large stream from the United States will readily appear. It is more than likely that Uncle Sam will advance a large sum of money to the Carranza government for the purpose of relieving the present distress among the harried and distressed people of Mexico, to be distributed under the eye of Ambassador Fletcher.

In the light of this new regime, Mexico should be greatly assisted by this government on a line already instituted by Carranza, the sending of Mexican school teachers to this country for the purpose of studying the best methods of common school education. This would be in line with the noble and splendid methods of the United States in the Philippines, a line that is the most efficient in transforming peons into primary citizens and eventually into a democracy worthy to found a great commonwealth. Only with such a basis of citizenry will Mexico become a substantial and successful republic. This is her opportunity, and her future looks promising through the policy now being inaugurated by President Wilson.

OUR OIL INDUSTRY THREATENED.

Acting in good faith under inadequate location laws of the government for taking up land, 250 companies, organized to mine for petroleum in the San Joaquin Valley, transformed the forbidding deserts of Kern County into one of the richest oil fields in the world. These prospecting companies made it possible for California and the Pacific States, where coal and other fuels for manufacturing purposes is comparatively high, to use a cheaper fuel, oil, thereby revolutionizing the prospects of the manufacturing industries of the West and placing them on a broader and bigger basis where they are able to compete with Eastern manufacturers. More than $200,000,000 was expended by these oil companies in developing these located lands and demonstrating their value, of which the world was ignorant till the pioneer locators ventured their fortunes, time and prospects.

Now comes the government, despite the fact that the lands were unpatented and open to entry by qualified locators, and brings suit to oust them because of the failure of Congress to enact proper laws for the protection of the equities of the prospectors immediately following the temporary withdrawal of President Taft in September, 1910. If the government wins this suit and dispossesses these men, who did so much to develop the oil industry of the State, it will deal a heavy blow at an industry that is now contributing $50,000,000 annually to the State, and is meanwhile growing enormously. The fault, if any, lies with the national lawmakers who neglected to provide adequate remedies to protect the investment and work of the oil men who were led to believe at the time that their ventures and investments were secure. Accordingly, the act of the government is viewed by them as an act of confiscation.

The Oil Industry Association, composed of the leading oil producers and oil consumers of the State, has been organized for the express purpose of seeing justice done in this matter. A committee is now in Washington seeking Congress to bring about a square deal. As there are no charges of crooked dealing, the question can be handled in an unprejudiced and dispassionate way. It is a vital matter to have these suits dropped by the government. Any resident of the Pacific States who has a particle of interest with a member of Congress or who commands the slightest influence with any chamber of commerce or like body, should exert his voice through such channels to Congress and have an embargo placed on the further pressing these suits by the government against the oil men in the Midway field.

✎

The gathering of the delegates of the thirteen Western States at the Western States Water Conference at Portland, Ore., is significant of the growing strength of the movement to divorce a State's right in its water power from the Federal claim of jurisdiction. The result is fraught with immense importance to the Government, the State, the people and water power corporations, and naturally the issue, as in all questions of State rights, will be stoutly contested. Since the close of the Civil War it has been the tendency of Congress to more and more extend its powers of jurisdiction at the expense of the States. The high curve of power in this line was recorded in the Roosevelt regime, and the legislation under the so-called Progressive methods.

The water power companies of the West have altogether different natural problems to contend with as compared with their fellows in the East, and for some time past they have sweated and strained under the irksome and hampering laws of the Government which, nolens volens, aggrandized to itself the power of dictating how the water privileges of the State should be acquired and developed. It was this growing friction which impelled the Governor of Oregon to call a gathering of delegates of the thirteen Western States to thresh out the situation and formulate a plan of campaign to recover the right of a State to exercise certain jurisdiction over waters within its borders. It was felt that the fact that the Federal Government still holds the technical title to large tracts of vacant lands in these States, with the power and duty of making needful rules and regulations for disposing of these lands, should not be allowed to obstruct, or in any way interfere with, the legitimate exercise by these States of their governmental powers to declare what uses are public within their borders, and to provide for the establishment, operation and regulation of such uses. It was realized that if the Federal Government could exercise governmental functions over the internal affairs of these States merely because of its temporary proprietorship of vacant land situated therein, these States would be subjected to the arbitrary control of distant bureaus, their industrial progress would be arrested, their equality with the original Eastern States in this respect would be taken away, and that a government of men, in whose selection they would have no choice, would be substituted for a government of laws enacted by their own representatives. The Governors of most of these thirteen States, backed by delegates, threshed out these and collateral issues, and resolved that they were opposed to any legislation which was in conflict with their fundamental principles; that the States have the constitutional right and power to control and regulate the appropriation and use of the waters within their boundaries for all beneficial purposes except navigation, and also the right and power to control and regulate the rates and service of their public utilities; that they are opposed to any policy that looks toward imposing the system of leasing generally upon the public domain for the reason that such system is contrary to the spirit of our free institution and that they are opposed to ownership or control either direct or indirect by the U. S. Government of intra-State public utilities. The movement along this line is growing stronger and more persistent, and remedial congressional legislation along this line is only a question of time. The next shift in the administration at Washington will unquestionably crown the success of this Western movement for a State's rights to absolute control of its waters for public utility and other purposes.

✎

THE EXTRA SESSION.

Governor Johnson called a special meeting of the legislature this week to clean up several odds and ends that affect his administration policy, the leading one being to straighten out the tangled question of party affiliation in the new registration which began January 1st. This tangle was occasioned by the defeat of his non-partisan ticket bill at the polls. Forty-five counties announced they will provide party affiliations on the 1916 registration books, ten counties will be non-partisan, and three are undecided regarding their classification. The administration has taken advantage of this call to take the legal measures necessary to preserve the California building at the Exposition for use as a State Normal school. Claim is made that this will save the State $500,000. The directors of the Normal school have gone on record to the effect that the California building is ideal for such purpose. Of course, it is expected that this property will greatly increase in value with the great improvements planned for the preservation of the Palace of Fine Arts, the Marina, the new Yacht harbor, and the general improvements in that locality. Assistance will also likely be given San Diego to continue her very attractive exposition. The proposed measures are in ship shape order to rush through, so the session should not last longer than five days and cost inside $20,000.

TOWN CRIER

—The Republican national convention will be called a week before the Democratic convention, and the G. O. P. managers profess to see a grand piece of political strategy in this procedure. A stranger from Mars might dub this flubdub process of reasoning a mote on the brain. In such a claim, of course, the Republican sawsmiths bank on turning out the first planks on preparedness, tariff reform, fuller dinner pails and no more gunning in the courts to bring down corporations. With the G. O. P. in power, such sport, as played by the Democratic administration, will be given a perennial closed season. Just now the G. O. P. is sloshing around in the political mud puddle looking for a likely candidate to beat Wilson, and they seem to be in a quagmire. They don't want a dyed in the wool Republican, and they dare not select a short-horn bull moose, else a ruction may ensue, a bolt of some kind follow. The leaders realize that to beat Wilson they must commandeer every vote they can from both the Republican party and the recent, scattered Progressive element. Hence their keen anxiety to find the proper compromise candidate who will appeal through his record, personality and "promises." The leaders feel like the fellow tied to a barrel of powder, with a sputtering fuse growing shorter and shorter every second. Meanwhile the Democrats are sitting easy, while formulating legislation in Congress that satisfies the general voter and demonstrates that the government is in safe, sane and competent hands to meet the big national and international problems confronting the U. S. A.

—It is evident that politician Eddie Wolf has won for himself the title of "kink" of the board of supervisors. With his legislative experience and his forays into the ways and byways in politics between this city and Sacramento, he has acquired a second sense in his profession. He is the only one hereabouts that has been able to develop the proper "come-back" by effacing a defeat with a recall. In a recent camera conference of the members composing a new clan among the board of supervisors, he easily dominated the gathering, and gave himself the choice chairmanship of the board, that of public utilities. The former labor leader of the board, Gallagher, has stepped into the background under the superior political tutelage of Eddie. He is chairman of the supplies committee, a mighty fine job in the hands of a mighty fine man. McCarthy, the other labor leader, missed winning the coveted job of city assessor at the last election, and his office of supervisor expired with 1915. Wolf will work with labor and form combinations with any one that will drop subconsciously into line with his political plans, which are usually successful without any assistance from the pro-German element and munition plant destroyers. The new boss will, of course, treat the Mayor very cordially so long as his honor engrosses himself with the social activities of his office. If the Mayor ever encroaches over the line into the domain of public utilities he is likely to bump into an entanglement of crossed wires very much alive.

—And now they are canning rebel yells in the South—to be more precise, in Austin, Texas. The Daughters of the Confederation in that section rounded up the strongest bellow lungs and most vociferous shouters from among the surviving veterans of the early '60's, and after a vigorous training, they were bunched up before a yawning phonograph recorder and the compressed terrorizing explosive yells packed in their lungs turned loose. The idea is a good one, and should be paralleled in the present session of Congress when the yell of the raiders on the grimy battle scarred pork barrel resounds through the corridors of the Capitol. Phonographs bearing these records could then be distributed readily throughout the congressional districts of the country and prizes of plaster plaques be presented to those rarely intelligent voters who recognize the yawp of their own representative to "get next," and demonstrate audibly that he is tirelessly on his job of striving for an appropriation to put a million dollar lightning rod on the local post office and a new $500,000 bridge across the puddle in the town's backyard. This character of team work in Congress by the people's enthusiastic representatives is hardly allied to thuggery, rather to jugglery, which is sometimes amusing on a vaudeville circuit but seldom in congressional legerdemain.

—Luther Burbank is a recognized wizard in grafting and breeding plants into almost any shape, color or kind; his weak point is in incubating business schemes to market his products. His first big venture in marketing his plants on a world wide plan was with the successful Law brothers. He split with them, as he has with some half dozen other agents of keen business ability. In his last venture he seems to have fallen into the clutches of shenanagin wizards of finance, and these parasites have a more sapping effect on plant wizards than any other parasite yet discovered. They capitalized Burbank and his crops for several hundred thousand dollars in stock, and peddled it out among the staunch admirers of the plant wizard. Some $350,000 of stock was sold to prominent people at par, and of these returns the promoters turned in or will be compelled to turn in about $25,000 to Burbank. As a capitalizer of plant wizardry, Burbank has skirted only the outpost of success. He can transform plants into any shape except money. In that predicament he is in the same class as most of us. Indifferent Providence lambastes one human and coddles the next one, and the devil take the hindmost that can beat this game of life.

—Oregon is already feeling the first pricking pangs of prohibition. The Union Club was raided this week by the police, and the president and a bunch of members were arrested and all the liquor found on the premises was confiscated. It's a dry state that makes a man unfeeling under the law, and that same dry state has driven numbers of citizens to travel with suit cases. In a dozen cities of Oregon the trunk stores sold out all their suit cases on January 1st, the day the new prohibition law went into effect. Later it developed that all these suit cases were being used as carriers of bottled goods being taken to homes and other safe depositories. A plague on all radicals, wet and dry, who formulate rigid laws which drag in all outsiders and compel them to eat, drink and live according to the voting strength of the victorious radical faction. If A wants a drink of liquor and knows how to carry it properly, as he has done for years, what right has B to conspire with C and deprive him of that privilege. Such doings smack too much of the sumptuary laws of the Dark Ages. In fact, the new engines of slaughter now being used in the European war and many of the petty laws now being soberly legislated in this country naturally show the penumbra of the Dark Ages.

—Hurrah! The twenty-one American republics have entered into a tentative agreement to form a league of neutral nations, backed by the combined military and naval strength of all the republics. Such a movement puts a steel ring around the Americas of 17,000,000 men, and nails the Monroe doctrine to the mast. Of course, the United States is the defensive center and strong point of the combination, and the strength of this country is practically the test of the strength of the organization as it now stands, but every year adds to the material strength and organization of the Latin republics as a unit. Just now it is the aspiring spirit of the movement which counts: it indicates progress in the ripening of a united Americanism.

A Farmer's Boy Emperor of China

Yuan Shih-Kai, who has just placed himself on the imperial throne of China, is generally regarded as the man of destiny by the most influential men of his country. To an outsider he appears to be a duplicate of Napoleon, but many of his countrymen aver that Yuan is a patriot, and is working solely for his country, while Napoleon schemed to crown his mighty ambition with world-wide, absolute power. Yuan has made several efforts to step down and return to his country home, of which he is inordinately fond, but at every occasion there was not one qualified to take his place. The leading men of China regard him as their Chinese wall to block the plans of the Japanese, Russians and other nations in the persistent movement to dismember China.

Yuan Shih-Kai was the son of a poor man—an agriculturist and provincial official—and is a self-made man in the fullest sense of the phrase, as it is understood in the United States. He did not obtain in his youth that fair Chinese education which is generally required to qualify a man for office in the central government. He was in command of the military forces in Korea, where the acts under his administration became one of the contributory causes of the Chinese-Japanese war. Next he went to Tientsin to command the headquarters division of the troops of Chihli province. In September, 1898, he became the ally of the famous Empress-Dowager Tze Hsi in the coup d'etat in which the Emperor Kuang-Hsu was imprisoned and Tze-Hsi reassumed the regency.

Following the Boxer uprising of 1900 Yuan Shih-Kai became one of the advisors of the Emperor, nominally restored to power, but still absolutely under the domination of Emperor Dowager Tze Hsi. He became councillor of state and tutor to the heir-apparent. In 1908 Tze Hsi fell mortally ill. The day before her death was officially announced the demise of Kuang-Hsu, whom she had always considered a weakling, was gazetted. In the interim of a few hours between the "official" deaths of Kuang-Hsu and Tze Hsi edicts were drawn up ostensibly by the latter naming the infant Pu Yi, son of Prince Chun, brother of the dead emperor, as successor to the throne. Yuan Shih-Kai and the venerable statesman, the late Chang Chih-tung, handled these arrangements.

On the heels of the announcement that the father of the baby Pu Yi and brother of the dead Huang-Hsu, Prince Chun, had become regent two armed men attacked Yuan in the gardens of his palace in the Forbidden City and wounded him severely. One of the assailants met death on the point of Yuan's German sword-cane, and the other fled. A few days later Yuan Shih-Kai, now emperor, was banished in disgrace to his home in Hanan province on the excuse that he was suffering from rheumatism.

When the revolution gained threatening headway in the summer of 1911, Yuan was urged to return to Peking, and assist in restoring order. He pleaded his rheumatic joints would not permit the journey, until Regent Chun, in despair, gave him dictatorial powers. Yuan found the capital a greater hot-bed of intrigue than ever. The two empresses—the widow of Kuang-Hsu and the mother of Pu Yi—headed rival factions. Yuan sided with the widow and forced the retirement of Prince Chun.

Empowered with the office of defending the capital against the revolutionary armies, he treated with them and arranged for turning over the government on the understanding that he would be president of the republic. The members of the imperial family fled, while he remained to head the revolutionary forces which had overthrown the dynasty.

The plan of himself and party now is to end the government that made him its first and only chief and establish a new dynasty—the dynasty of Yuan. According to custom, he will select an imperial name and the written characters therefore will not be permitted for any other use thereafter. Through him will the Chinese people receive the grace of heaven.

From farmer's boy to emperor of four hundred million is quite a rise in the present age. History gives only a few parallel cases. History also shows that not more than one person in a million live in the literature of peoples 1,000 years. How long the fates will continue to smile upon him is uncertain. There are plenty of potential leaders of counter revolutions in China—members of the ousted Manchu dynasty who will venture to oppose a man who has raised himself up as emperor where they would not dare challenge the "government of the people." The pretenders to the throne of the families of Ching, Pu Yi, Pu Lun, Yu Lang and Chun will be more numerous than those who from time to time have threatened the tranquility of the French Republic.

The explanation of Yuan Shih-Kai and the coalition of parties behind him is that, through an imperial form of government, with its quick and elastic methods of action, there will be more energy and promptness ready to defend China against the plots of several nations to strip her of territory and treasures. Japan is endeavoring in every day, through inciting revolutions in China and otherwise to prevent Yuan from being officially crowned Emperor in the forthcoming ceremonies.

SAN FRANCISCO'S OPPORTUNITY TO START AN ART GALLERY.

The movement to establish an art center here in San Francisco, something which will stimulate the entire West in this respect, is growing stronger than ever since the close of the Exposition, last month. Some practical attempt along this line should be made, so that the nucleus of a collection may materialize. The News Letter suggests that the board of supervisors of the city appoint a committee to attend the forthcoming auction sale of the collection of selected paintings of Mrs. Rose Caldwell Hughes, to be held in the Italian room of the St. Francis Hotel, next Monday afternoon at 2 p. m., and consider the excellently characteristic canvas of George Innes, one of the greatest landscape painters that America has produced. Several weeks ago the late Mrs. Alice Skae provided in her will that $10,000 be set aside to the city for the purpose of purchasing a painting for the Park museum, so a fund necessary for the purchase is at hand. Mr. Butler of Chicago paid $120,000 for twelve paintings of George Innes, and presented them as a gift to the art gallery of the city of Chicago. San Francisco possesses no canvas of this great American artist, and this is an unusual opportunity to acquire an excellent expression of his notable work.

—With the New Year the Western States Life Insurance Company has issued a captivating re-arrangement of its Twenty Payment Life "Coupon Savings" Policy contract, and adds thereto a double insurance benefit. This addition provides that the company shall pay double the face of the amount of the policy in case of the death of the insured shall occur from accident while traveling as a passenger on a street car or railroad train or other public conveyance operated as a common carrier. A slight extra premium charge will be made for this benefit, which will, for the present, only be given in the newly arranged Twenty Payment Life "Coupon Savings" Policy Contract. Until further notice, this double insurance benefit will be confined to policies with face amounts not in excess of $5,000.

—"I observe," said the fiend, "that Mr. Rockefeller says he owes much of his success to golf." "It was my notion," said the low-brow, "that most men owe much of their golf to success."—St. Louis Republic.

CHAMPAGNE

PIPER-HEIDSIECK

Anc^{ne} M^{on} HEIDSIECK fondee en 1785

KUNKELMANN & C^o Succ^{rs}

REIMS

CHARLES MEINECKE & Co.

AGENTS PACIFIC COAST

314 SACRAMENTO ST., S. F.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES

BY OUTSIDER

"Outsiders see most of the game."—Old Saw

Those Amateur Rules Again

The News Letter has come squarely out for the abolition of all distinctions in sport between amateur and professional, on the ground that such distinctions are archaic and hark back to England at a period when there were only two classes in the community—the gentlemen and all others—in other words, practically a feudal conception of life. These rules are outmoded in this day, and especially in this country.

But the Amateur Athletic Union has been tinkering with the rules again, as it has found out that it is impossible to avoid certain violations, such as summer baseball being played for money, or its equivalent, by college men. At best, this is only a patchwork, and further change will be necessary from time to time, whenever it is ascertained that there is a large number of athletes not in sympathy with the existing regulations. In this respect, amateur rules do not differ from ordinary law, but experience has proven since time immemorial that laws which do not have the support of practically the entire people cannot be enforced satisfactorily, e. g., sumptuary laws such as prohibition, and those relating to morality.

Granting, however, that these laws are to be made, at least they should be consistent within themselves. The absurdity of not permitting an athlete to have his name used to promote the sale of sporting goods—as, for instance, tennis racquets—when no mention is made of a much more evident capitalization of athletic ability in the signed article in newspapers. It may be argued that the distinction between a legitimate sporting writer and the other kind would be difficult to draw. Not so, however. And one who knows anything about golf, for instance, knows that Chick Evans would not have been hired for his ability as a writer, and that it is the use of his name only that enables him to draw his pay, which, incidentally, in the case of this kind of reporter, is much greater than the ordinary reporters receive.

By the way, what is the use of permitting summer baseball and then adding that the Union disapproves it? It is similar to a legislature passing a law permitting saloons and then to save its face adding a rider to the effect that it does not favor drinking.

At the final meeting of the A. A. U. held in New York last week it was unanimously agreed that an amateur sportsman is one who engages in sport solely for the pleasure and physical, mental, moral and social benefits that he derives therefrom, and to whom sport is nothing more than an avocation. By competing or giving an exhibition in any of these sports under an assumed name or by being guilty of any fraud or any other grossly unsportsmanlike conduct in connection therewith, it was decided the penalty should be disbarment for life from amateur eligibility of any person guilty of any infringement of the rule.

For other infractions of the rules, such as receiving pay or pecuniary benefits in consideration of or as a reward for participating in any public athletic competition or exhibition, or disposing of prizes for personal gain, the offender shall never thereafter be permitted to compete or exhibit as an amateur in the sport or sports in which such act was committed.

On the question of summer baseball and summer camps where amateurs take part in games with professionals, or where the amateur is a player on a team or playing against a team on which there are professionals, it was the sense of the meeting that such competitions between amateurs and professionals should not be favored, but that under exceptional conditions and with proper safeguards such competition may be permitted without jeopardizing the amateur status of the player.

The capitalization of athletic fame by granting or permitting the use of one's name to advertise or promote the sale of sporting goods, prizes or other commodities for use in connection with athletic games, shall not be permitted.

* * *

New Year Golf Tourney

The Del Monte New Year's golf tournament drew quite a large representation from the bay clubs, and with the outside visitors at the hotel a large entry list was obtained.

The victory of Roger Lapham in the first flight was very popular, as this sterling golfer has made many friends since settling here. In the ladies' events the return of Edith Chesbrough to the game, after having been out for a couple of years, was the feature. With a start of three holes, Mrs. Max Rothschild defeated her in the finals, while her versatile husband was winning the third flight of the men's competition. Pretty little Mrs. Duncan won the third flight for ladies, which was her first victory in open competition, and she was the recipient of the warmest congratulations from her many friends.

* * *

A New Physical Culturist

That eminent peace advocate and literateur, Dr. Aked, who makes a specialty of reporting salacious trials for the press—he covered the Thaw trial in New York and the Diggs-Cammetti case here—is pictured in a morning paper as playing leap frog on the deck of the Oscar II. It is an even bet that he will be run in opposition to Jess Willard as a physical culturist and all around bromide.

* * *

The Passing of Jack De Witt

The death by his own hand of Jack De Witt, the wellknown sporting writer, has cast a gloom over the whole colony of devotees of the great outdoors. For not only was Jack a popular writer, but he had a most engaging personality, and belonged to a class of big-hearted, hard-bitten men who stood squarely on their two feet. He was such another man as the late Bill Naughton of the Examiner, and had a following wherever there was a gun fired or a dog run.

In addition to being the rod and gun editor of the Breeder and Sportsman, he covered these sports for the Chronicle and Bulletin.

MY GHOSTS.

I heard the bell on the distant hill,
The laughter and joy in the street,
Within my heart all was lone and still—
No word to cheer, and no form to greet—
But companions were mine, very close at my side,
For I sat with my ghosts at Christmas tide.

No lips gave Godspeed; no friendly hand
Reached forth from the hurrying throng;
But love I had, from a silent band,
That gently thrilled like a helpful song;
And the love that I gave, though the world is wide,
Found the souls of my ghosts at Christmastide.

—Mabel Porter Pitts.

—The popular Rock Island Railroad lines have just issued an unusually attractive illustrated booklet on traveling on "The Golden State Limited," the foremost transcontinental train through Chicago and St. Louis, with the specially good connections with California. For that reason the booklet is illustrated with numbers of the great scenic features of the Golden State. The text is a pithy and inducing plea for Easterners to come to California in any season, but especially in the winter, when the East is suffering the cold and buffeting attacks of the Storm King. "Why go to California?" asks the booklet. "The answer is: California itself. For no other State offers you such a varied choice of attractions, such a diversity of entertainment." For those Easterners who are seeking the best route to California, there is the "Golden State Limited," via Rock Island, El Paso & Southwestern and Southern Pacific. Going east from California is simply a reverse of this route, as it carries the traveler, with the best of modern comfort and speed, through some of the very best scenery to be had on an overland trip.

Not Gray
Hairs
but tired
Eyes
Make us look older than we are.
Old age
and Dull
Eyes—
tell-tale.

Don't Tell Your age

After the Movies
go home
and Murine
your Eyes.
Two Drops
will rest, refresh
and cleanse.
Have it
handy.

Murine Eye Remedy Company, Chicago, Sends Book of the Eye upon request.

PLEASURE'S WAND

"Obey no wand but Pleasure's."—Tom Moore.

Orpheum Bill Packed with Big Hits.

Lillian Russell has "come back." She made the statement herself in a neat little speech. Incidentally she poked a good deal of fun at herself, and stated that she retired officially from the stage two years ago, but was firm in the belief that every woman should have an occupation in life, so that in spite of herself she had to obey the call of the footlights—hence her reappearance. Previous to her speech she sang a number of song hits which she had used at various times during her career. In all sincerity, Miss Russell is as lovely as ever. She may not exactly be the same "Airy, fairy Lillian" we knew some years ago, but there is much of the old beauty and dash and style. There is only one Lillian Russell, and she can never be replaced. We have to thank the Orpheum people for several good things lately. In successive weeks we have had Weber and Fields and Anna Held, and now Lillian Russell. There is a team on the bill this week doing a stunt which precipitates a near riot. They are undoubtedly the popular hit of the program. They are Ben Ryan and Harriette Lee. The lady of the duo has a method all her own. She is original, and that is the secret of her success. She is, moreover, different—decidedly so. In Ben Ryan she has an excellent foil, and between them the fun becomes fast and furious. Best of all, their jokes are new and their brand of fun is all their own. Max LeHoen and Mlle. Dupreece have a novelty act wherein both of them do some clever shooting. They combine singing and dancing in a very agreeable manner. Geo. Moore and Cordelia Haager sing clever songs and relate capital stories in a fetching manner. They are a clever couple. Fatima is an Egyptian dancer who performs three of her weird dances in a thoroughly artistic way. She is a sensuous appearing lady, who is able to move her abdominal muscles in an alarming manner. Comfort and King are two black face comedians who present a new act brim full of good fun and loaded with plenty of laughs. Arthur McWatters and Grace Tyson have a screamingly humorous act which they call "A Revue of Revues." The act is constructed solely for laugh making purposes. Florrie Millership is called on the program "Little Miss Dainty." She is undoubtedly small and undeniably charming and petite. She can sing clever songs in a clever way and dance adorably. Page, Hack and Mack are a nifty acrobatic trio who accomplish the seemingly impossible. There is finish to their work, and their final stunt has the audience gasping. It is an extraordinarily fine bill.

PAUL GERSON.

Another Big All-Star Bill at Pantages.

Pantages has a rattling good bill, this week, a show that will make the most blase vaudeville habitue sit up with keen delight. It is one of those prime star bills of class that the management is rapidly developing. The interest ranges from a cleverly trained wrestling bear to interpretations in grand opera, given by excellently selected principals from the Imperial Grand Opera Company. They contribute a strong, spirited and exhilarating exposition of the gem scenes of Traviata, Faust, Carmen and Il Trovatore, any one of them worth more than the admission charged at the door. Laurie Ordway is something new in her class as an eccentric character comedienne, and she rigs herself out as a "sight," something that few actresses care to do, but Laurie has a twinkle in her snappy eye, a laugh in every move and utterance, and a generous touch of dare-deviltry in her original methods, wherewith she upsets the dignity of the orchestra musicians and the grinning audience. As a ready bride persistently praying for a husband, she is bound to make a mark in vaudeville, even if she nets only an "easy mark." The Big Eva Gauthier and Nila Devi, who will appear next week at the Orpheum.

Four is one of the best quartettes that has ambled on a San Francisco stage; they combine excellent songs garnished with the proper touch of comedy, and the audience could not get enough of them. Earl Flynn and his Beauty are clever whirlwind dancers, and exhibit several captivating novelties in that popular line. Paula gets an everlasting lot of music out of an accordion, the brand that starts an audience to humming the tune and keeping time with their feet, a symptom which indicates that they are in perfect accord with her, and they were, as was proved by the recalls. The playlet, "The Boob," is capitably carried off by Charles King and Virginia Thornton, and contains several diverting surprises that skirt for a time very close to the risque. The movie gives another exciting installment in the unraveling of that absorbing serial mystery, "The Red Circle."

ADVANCE ANNOUNCEMENTS.

European Vaudeville Sensation at Orpheum.—The Orpheum bill for next week will have as its headliners Eva Gauthier, prima donna, and Nila Devi, prima ballerina, in a series of international songs and dances. The association of a prima donna and a prima ballerina is unusual enough to be considered a novelty. Dancing to vocal accompaniment has been a continental custom for some time, but was introduced in Europe as it has been in the East by Eva Gauthier and Nila Devi. These two come to New York at the very height of their European popularity, and appeared in vaudeville with unqualified success. They are assisted by a quartette of dancing girls, and the efforts of the six result in a beautiful and fascinating stage offering. Bayone Whipple and Walter Huston will present their mysterious comedy creation "Spooks," the object of which is to create an air of spookiness by grotesque song, dance and weird music, with mechanical and electrical effects. A very spectacular riding novelty is offered by the society equestrians, James Dutton and his two pretty assistants, who perform a number of clever and difficult feats of bareback riding. Earle Reynolds and Nellie Donegan will introduce a beautiful, elaborate and novel performance which is a happy combination of skating and dancing. Miss Donegan's dresses are marvels of beauty and richness. One of her hats has three thousand aigrettes, while another is the largest Paradise hat in the world. Bert La Mont and his cowboys in their round-up of mirth and melody, constitute an exceptionally fine sextette and one of the most picturesque vaudeville acts. Ben Ryan and Henriette Lee, in their immense comedy skit, "You've Spoiled It;" Comfort and King in Junie McCree's laughable skit, "Coon Town Divorcons;" George Austin Moore and Cordelia Haager, in songs and stories, and the second installment of the ten-reel production, "Uncle Sam at Work," which is entitled "How Uncle Sam Gets His Coin," will be included in the attractions.

* * *

Big Bill at Pantages.—"Colonial Days," one of vaudeville's pretentious musical offerings, will head an excellent eight-act show at the Pantages on Sunday afternoon. Melodies of early Virginia days, stately minuets, and quaint colonial costumes, made the production an elaborate and delightful number. There are fourteen members in the company: S. H. Dudley, the famous colored minstrel man, and his comedy trick mule, is a special feature of the new program, with a playlet of the South, entitled "The Stranded Minstrel." Lasky's seven "Hoboes" will return with their revised edition of "Knights of the Road," a jolly travesty on tramp life. This act recently returned from Australia, where it scored one of the biggest hits of any American act that has visited the colonies in years. Herr Bolke, a German scientist, will present "Creo," an artistic illusion wherein a beautiful model is "created" from a life-sized still study in an artist's studio. Anita Heymans, a well known local singer, will make her vaudeville debut with the new show in a repertoire of popular song numbers. Les Arados, daring acrobats, have a splendid novelty in "The Devil's Cavern." The fourth installment of Pathe's thrilling serial, "The Red Circle," will show further adventures of the criminal family which bears the stigma of the circle brand.

* * *

Big Play Ready at Alcazar.—Next week will prove a red letter one for the Alcazar Theatre and for the Lytell-Vaughan Company of players, for it will mark the first production in this city, and at popular prices, of the big, compelling play, "The Law of the Land," by George Broadhurst, author of "Bought and Paid For," "The Man of the Hour," "To-day," and other widely known successes. Further, this peer of modern dramas will have the advantage of being produced under the personal direction of the distinguished author, himself, Mr. Broadhurst coming to personally attend all the rehearsals. "The Law of the Land" ran for an entire year in New York, with Julia Dean in the leading feminine role. Bert Lytell will be seen in the role opposite to Miss Vaughan, that of a healthy, straightforward, manly young American, and the two will have many fine scenes together.

* * *

Interpretative Readings of Great Modern Plays.—Leo Cooper is to give a course of six interpretative readings of great modern plays in the Art Gallery of Paul Elder & Company, commencing January 12th. In each of the plays selected by Mr. Cooper for this course, he has been influenced by a desire to show a corner of creation seen through a temperament that reveals human nature in its environment, culture and ideals. The first play in the series will be "Search Lights," by the English dramatist, Horace A. Vachell.

* * *

Tuesday Morning Musicales.—A most interesting announcement to society and musical folk is that of Rudolph Aronson, director of the Riviera Italian Grand Opera Company, and formerly manager of the Metropolitan Concert Hall, New York, who purposes giving eight Tuesday Morning Musicales in the Elsa Ruegger, the famous 'cellist, who will play at the Tuesday Morning Musicales at the St. Francis Hotel.

Colonial ballroom of the St. Francis Hotel, beginning January 11th, at eleven o'clock. The most noted vocalists and instrumentalists will be presented, and these musicales will be similar to those given with so much success at the Waldorf-Astoria and Baltimore Hotels. The first program is particularly alluring; one of the vocalists of the occasion will be Tilly Koenen, the famous Dutch contralto. Miss Koenen, who created a marked sensation on her first appearance in this city six years ago, is a prime favorite all over the concert world. The other singer will be Ralph Errolle, the well known American lyric tenor, who will be heard in numbers by Puccini, Giordano, Barthelemy, Hue, Pessard, Fontanailles and Cadman. The instrumental soloist will be Elsa Ruegger, the 'cellist, whose fame is world wide, her selections being a sonate by Pietro Locatelli and compositions by Schumann, Saint-Saens, and Popper. Uda Waldrop will be at the piano. Box and seat reservations may be made by addressing Rudolph Aronson, room 315, Hotel St. Francis. The patrons and patronesses include Mr. and Mrs. Edson F. Adams, Mrs. C. W. Clark, Mrs. Francis Carolan, Mr. and Mrs. C. Templeton Crocker, Mr. Wm. H. Crocker, Mr. and Mrs. M. H. de Young, Mr. and Mrs. Atherton Folger, Mr. and Mrs. William Fries, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph D. Grant, Mrs. Phoebe Hearst, Mr. Frank H. Hitchcock, Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Hale, Mr. and Mrs. I. W. Hellman, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. C. Frederick Kohl, General and Mrs. Oscar F. Long, Mrs. Eleanor Martin, Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Martin, Mr. and Mrs. Leopold Michaels, Mr. and Mrs. George P. McNear, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Newhall, Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Oxnard, Mr. and Mrs. George H. Pope,

W. D. Fennimore J. W. Davis A. R. Fennimore

California Optical Co.

Makers of Good Glasses

Double Vision Glasses
Will Predominate in 1916

There is no doubt but what eventually all people requiring two pairs of glasses, one for reading and one for distance, will wear the new Bifocals as both corrections are combined in one lens. Naturally those people who want the very best will wear the new "Caltext One-piece" double vision glasses. The objectionable features of other bifocals have been entirely eliminated and those who are obliged to wear two pairs of glasses and cannot wear the old style bifocals can wear the "Caltext" with comfort.

181 Post Street } San Francisco
2508 Mission St. }
1221 Broadway, Oakland

Mr. and Mrs. James Rolph, Jr., Mrs. I. L. Requa, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Requa, Mr and Mrs. Henry T. Scott, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. E. Sharon, Mrs. John T. Wheeler, and Mr. and Mrs. Mountford Wilson.

* * *

Symphony Concerts Next Friday.—The third pair of Symphony concerts, Alfred Hertz, conductor, will be given at the Cort Theatre, Friday afternoon, January 14th, at 3 o'clock sharp and Sunday, January 16th, at 2:30 o'clock sharp. The program will include the overture "Iphigenia in Aulis" of Gluck, which was arranged by Richard Wagner, the Symphony, G minor, op. 54, of Mozart, the concerto, D major, for violin, op. 61, of Beethoven, the soloist being Louis Persinger, the distinguished violinist and concert-master of the orchestra; and "Don Juan," tone poem (after Lenau) of Richard Strauss. Louis Persinger, the violinist, has for several years enjoyed the distinction of being recognized as one of America's most genuinely gifted artists. After a year's concertizing in America Persinger was enabled to return to Europe again, this time to Brussels, to study with that master of masters, Eugene Ysaye. In the meantime he was heard in Concerts throughout Belgium and in London, and was "violon solo" of the Orchestra du Theatre Royal de la Monnaie, Brussels, for one season. Extremely successful appearances in London, Vienna and Copenhagen added considerably to Persinger's growing reputation, and in the season of 1912-13 he was able to undertake his first extended American tour, appearing as soloist with many of the leading symphony orchestras—New York Philharmonic, Metropolitan Opera House, Philadelphia Orchestra, San Francisco Orchestra, etc., and playing recital engagements in most of the larger cities. During the season of 1914-15 he accepted an engagement as concertmaster of the Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra, appearing as soloist with that venerable organization more than forty times in the course of his engagement. The tickets, in future, will be on sale at the box offices of Sherman, Clay & Co., and Kohler & Chase, and on the days of concerts at the box office of the Cort Theatre.

HERE, THERE AND PERSONALLY.

Standard Oil Company has perfected a mechanical system in the Midway oil field whereby a large quantity of flowing natural gas is returned to the lower stratas of the earth and conserved, instead of letting it go to waste as heretofore. Under natural pressure the gas is pumped down the boring of an old well and distributes itself naturally.

Aviator Glenn Curtis declares that as soon as the war ends, some of the aviators will fly across the Atlantic to New York in their latest pattern big planes without making a stop. He declares the feat could be accomplished any day now. He looks forward to a regular trans-Atlantic service of airships. A new seaplane has been invented, one that can ride at anchor, if necessary, on the waves, even in a bad storm. The war has greatly increased the size as well as the power of these strong new airships.

The wills of Elbert Hubbard and his wife, who were drowned on the liner Lusitania, were filed at Toronto, Ont., recently for ancillary probate, as both held stock in the Northern Crown Bank of Canada. The amount of Mr. Hubbard's total estate was declared as $397,845, and that of Mrs. Hubbard at $35,735. In each case the estates were divided equally between their children, Elbert and Miriam. A direction in each will read: "I desire that my body be cremated and not buried in the ground."

The White Star line has agreed to pay $664,000 in settlement of all claims arising from the sinking of the Titanic in April, 1912, when more than 1,500 persons were drowned, lawyers for the Line announced in New York recently. Of this amount $500,000 would be distributed among American claimants, $50,000 to British claimants, and $114,000 would be required for interest and expenses in connection with the numerous suits. If all the claimants, both in this country and Great Britain, agree to the proposition, the White Star line will be released from all further liability growing out of the Titanic disaster.

A STORY OVER SIX THOUSAND YEARS OLD.

Here is a story some 6,000 years old, according to the inscriptions on certain Babylonian bricks uncovered in the ruins of the ancient city of Nippur. It deals with the old story of Adam and the flood which destroyed life in this world. How old this story really is no archaeologist dare guess. The form of the story here given is a new version written by Sumerians, who invaded Babylonia about 4500 B. C., and recognized as possessing the highest civilization and culture of any nation antedating the great period of Greek culture. A brief outline of the story is as follows:

Enki, the god of the sea, and his wife or daughter, Ninella, ruled over Mankind in Paradise. Paradise was the land of Dilmun, or the modern island of Bahrein. In Paradise sickness was unknown. Sin had not entered. Though the years passed, it was a land of perpetual youth. No wild beasts destroyed the flocks, and no storms raged. Enki, the god, decided to destroy mankind with a flood, and he revealed his purpose to Nintud, the goddess who had created mankind. For nine months and nine days the flood raged, and men were dissolved in the water "like tallow and fat." But Nintud, the mother-goddess, determined to save the king, Tagtug, and him she called to the shore and embarked on a boat. Tagtug, who was thus saved, corresponds to the biblical Noah. It was the custom of the Babylonians to deify their kings after death. The goddess Nintud explained to the god Enki how Tagtug had escaped the universal destruction, and had become a god. He then became a gardener. Enki revealed to him the secrets of trees and plants. Tagtug was permitted to eat of the fruit of all the trees, excepting that of the Cassia. But he ate of the fruit of the Cassia tree, and at once the goddess Nintud took from him immortality. He was compelled to labor and suffer until the gods took pity on him and taught him various arts to comfort him.

"Tell me, now, Jamie, what was the most wonderful thing you saw when at sea?" "I think the strangest thing I saw was the flying fish." "Noo, loddie, dinna make a fule o' yer mither. Wha ever heard of a fish flying?" "Another strange thing I saw when crossing the Red Sea. We dropped anchor, and when we raised it again there was one of the wheels of Pharaoh's chariot entangled on it." "Ay, laddie, I'll believe that. We've Scripture for that."—Tit-Bits.

"A young fellow anxious to enlist, had just been examined by the doctor. "I am sorry," said the doctor, "but your teeth are not good enough." "What!" exclaimed the indignant recruit; "my teeth ain't good enough, aint they? Well, they're the same teeth what you passed my brother with yesterday."—The Strand Magazine.

Orpheum O'Farrell Street Bet Stockton and Powell
Phone Douglas 70

WEEK beginning THIS SUNDAY AFTERNOON. MATINEE EVERY DAY.

AN UP-TO-DATE BILL

EVA GAUTHIER Prima Donna and NILA DEVI Prima Ballerina and Ballet in a series of International Songs and Dances. HAYONE WHIFFLE & WALTER HUSTON in the mysterious Comedy Creation Spooks. JAMES DUTTON & CO. Society Epitaphians. EARLE REYNOLDS and NELLIE DONEGAN. The International Faculty Decorative Danc-ing Sisters. BETT LE MONT & HIS COWBOYS. A Round-Up of Alrth and Music. COMFORT and KING. GEORGE AUSTIN MOORE & CORNELIA HAWER. HOW UNCLE SAM GETS HIS MONEY. See and hear most of the Great Motion Picture secured Exclusively for the Orpheum Circuit. Last Week BEN RYAN & HARRIETTE LEE in "You've Spoken It."

Evening Prices, 10c, 25c, 50c, 75c. Box seats $1. Matinee prices (except Sundays and holidays) 10c, 25c, 50c. Phone Douglas 70.

Pantages' Theatre Market Street Opposite Mason

Commencing Sunday Afternoon, January 9, 1916

VAUDEVILLE DE LUXE

FRANK BOHM presents Vaudeville's Most Fabulous Musical Offering "COLONIAL DAYS" with H. DUDLEY AND HIS MULE. The Star of Musical "LASKY'S SEVEN HOLIDAYS." King of the Road "Harry Burke" offers the mysterious "SUN CREW." Creating a beautiful woman from "A rag, a bon, and a hunk of hair."

EIGHT PANTAGES FEATURES

St. Francis Hotel COLONIAL BALL ROOM

Tuesday, January 11 at 11 A. M.

First of the

TUESDAY MORNING MUSICALES

Directed by R. J. A. ...

Artistes: TILLY KOENEN, Soprano, RALPH FRANK, Tenor, ELSA RUEGER, Contralto.

Apply for seats and boxes at Room 11, 1110 St. Francis.

In spite of the magnificent response to the needs of the Belgians, the suffering in that stricken country is still so heart-breaking that the American commissioners under Hoover, who are distributing the relief, write home letters that stir any heart that does not pump ice water.

As there are so many Californians doing the work, the people in this State naturally have their sympathies played upon constantly.

One never goes to any affair, from the simplest Oolong fest to a real debauch in the way of an afternoon tea without someone quoting from a letter from the Hoovers, or Professor Vernon Kellogg, or Dudley Gunn, or Father Lathrop, or Secretary Gibson, or one of the other Californians who have gone on to succor those dispossessed patriots. The other day some one started a story about a little Belgian girl, and one of the belles who is supposed to be a very self-centered, hardened young butterfly, burst into tears and said: "Oh, I wish that you would all stop pressing the Belgian button and turning on the sob stuff—it gets me!"

Whereupon one of the guests pressed another button and produced a story which shows that the California youngsters have a somewhat humorous view of the war situation. The other day, when this lady returned home from a meeting with Mrs. William Crocker, the subject under discussion war relief, and therefore lasting far into the afternoon, she found guests invited to tea already assembled in the drawing room. Suddenly her two small sons, one aged twelve and the other ten, burst into the room, bellowing wildly: "I wish that I were a Belgian!" Over and over again they shrieked this refrain, and you may imagine the effect.

And at that very moment in many smart households, from Pacific avenue to the Peninsula, the same cry went up from a hundred boyish throats. Some team work that!

It was organized by a group of boys from the Potter school, who went to the Orpheum and heard a facetious gentleman sing a song, the burden of which was "I Wish that I Were a Belgian." The lads decided that there was something in the charge that Europe is draining off a lot of sympathy that is needed here at home, and one of these boys with a great gift for action decided that the thing to do was for every one of them at the same hour to shriek aloud "I wish I were a Belgian." Even the boys have no complaint to make against all this emotioning going Europeward, thought it was a great joke anyway, and they, too, agreed to join the chorus.

A change has come over the spirit of the dance in New York, and the first translation into Western terms was at the Irwin dance the other night, when suddenly the orchestra began to play some lovely classical bit, and some of the girls who have been on in New York and have taught their favorite partners the steps, took the floor and danced intricate measures with the finish of professionals. The dancing of the Templeton Crockers was particularly admired.

In New York the ice skating craze has caught the multitude, and the dancers who kept the cafe floors crowded have been lifted out of the one-steps and the more or less leisurely dances of the past seasons into the highly stimulating, tingling twirls of ice skating.

Those who still dance may be classified among the survival of the fittest.

One reason for the dancing craze was that the one-step and its modifications were within the athletic limitations of all ages and degrees of agility and grace. Men and women danced who, in the elder days of the dance, would never have qualified as ball room material.

Now the dancing set in New York, reduced in numbers, but lifted in quality, is making of the dance Art to the 'nth degree. The accessories at all the private dancing clubs are beautiful and costly in the extreme. At one of the clubs, Belasco was called into conference, and his decorators arranged a lighting system that would add a glamour to fairyland. With wonderful orchestras playing classical music and the lights flooding the place with moonlight, or playing on it the raptures of the desert, one may imagine the marvelous effects produced.

It was hoped that the projected Club de Vingt would arrive at such luxurious and artistic distinction, but instead of that it has died in the "borning." There have been various conjectures about the demise of the idea before it became a reality, but most of these conjectures were of the stuff that dreams are made of. The truth of the matter is that in spite of the success of the New York club under the same management, the projectors of the plan were afraid to finance it unless assured of the intimate social touch that an interested stockholder like Mrs. Alexander would have given it. They are counting on her to keep the thing going during its infancy, and if a thing of this sort can survive infant mortality, it is all right. But Cupid came along and removed Mrs. Alexander from her sphere of usefulness, as far as dancing clubs are concerned. In the tussle between the little fellow and the goddess of the dance, Terpsichore was counted out in the first round.

Mrs. Alexander's engagement to Mr. Kaufmann was a genuine surprise, in spite of the "I told you so's" who will never admit that anything has the element of surprise. One of this ilk was proclaiming that she had suspected it ever since—naming a time that antedated the acquaintance of the bride and groom!

Those who were at the wedding are enthusiastic over the pretty little ceremony arranged by Mrs. Mountford Wilson for her sister. There were none of the frills of the elaborate wedding. Even the music being omitted, but the happy spirit of every one was so contagious that all agreed that never was there a more joyous wedding party. The bride looked so young and pretty that all decided that she could pass for the older sister of her son, Douglas. One of the nicest things about this marriage is the evident delight of Douglas and Miss Harriett Alexander in acquiring so thoroughly desirable a step-father. Mr. Kaufmann has won the hearts of all the friends of the family, and many a belle is asking herself how it happened that the unmarried but willing contingent let Mrs. Alexander walk off with a prize like Mr. Kaufmann. The Kaufmanns plan to spend part of every year in San Francisco, so that there will not be any real break in the large circle of friends which Mrs. Kaufmann has in San Francisco.

The last letters from Mrs. Wakefield (Edith Huntington Spreckels) are posted in Egypt, whither she and her honeymooning husband went from China as the most direct way of getting back to San Francisco! When the cables informing her of the death of her father in New York reached her, they were in Shanghai, and tried to engage immediate passage back to San Francisco, but the steamers were so crowded that it was impossible to get a booking for months, and they finally decided to go on to Egypt and come home by way of New York. Huntington is not credited with having much worldly goods to pass on, but whatever his estate it will undoubtedly all go to his daughter.

The New Year's eve celebration at the Hotel Oakland was a brilliant affair. From nine o'clock on, there was a constant

NOW ON FREE VIEW IN
THE WILLIAM KEITH GALLERY
532 SUTTER STREET
Daily from 9 a. m. to 6 p. m.—The Collection of MRS. ROSE CALDWELL HUGHES of San Francisco and New York
PAINTINGS BY

Whistler	Geo. Inness	J. Francis Murphy
Robert Reid	Lillian Genth	Gustave Weigand
Hommer Martin	Geo. H. Smillie	Chas. P. Gruppe
Bruce Crane	Geo. H. Bogert	Geo. McCord
Carleton Wiggins	Max Weyl	Carlton T. Chapman
N. Largilliere	Jacquet	Andre Brouillet
E. Loyal Field	Ralph A. Blakelock	Thos. B. Craig
A. Stover	W. C. Emerson	E. W. Christmas

ETCHINGS AND MEZZO TINTS BY

Whistler	Brangwyn	Pennell	Stevenson
Cameron	Haden	Cox	Webb
Van Muyden	Miller	Tissot	Newman

THE COLLECTION—To be Sold at Absolutely Unreserved Auction in THE ITALIAN ROOM of the ST. FRANCIS HOTEL on
MONDAY, JANUARY 10, AT 2 AFTERNOON
Sale to be conducted by MR. H. TAYLOR CURTIS
Catalogs on Application

string of motors arriving at the hotel. The ball room, restaurant and grill were the scene of a brilliant display of the smart set engaged in the great annual frolic. The demand for the beautifully decorated tables was so great that additions were placed in the Tapestry Room to accommodate the late arrivals, who had participated in the civic celebration or parties elsewhere. Contrary to the former custom of closing the hotel to those who had failed to make table reservation, the doors were kept open to the public, and the true carnival spirit prevailed throughout the evening. When the guests were seated, they found thereon souvenirs from the hotel management—paper caps, hat, horns and noise makers galore. At eleven o'clock the New Year's spirit was in full swing, and the eye was filled with a moving picture of color, brilliancy and beauty. At five seconds before twelve the rooms were darkened, and sixteen cooks, arrayed in fantastic garb for the occasion, walked through the various rooms, bearing on trays over their heads the letters "Happy New Year, 1916." These letters were cut from huge blocks of ice, pieces of green and red glass were frozen in the ice, and on the inside Christmas candles were lighted. Some 1,500 people participated in the festivities.

☺ ☺ ☺

The first of the series of popular Musical Mornings will be inaugurated at the Hotel Oakland on January 11th, at eleven o'clock. These affairs had their inception at the Waldorf in New York some few years ago, and met with popular favor there. Already luncheon parties are being arranged at the Hotel Oakland, following the entertainment. Mr. MacFadyen announces a delightful program for the first of these series.

Mr. H. Walsh, 814 First National Bank Building, is in charge of arrangements for a dinner and dance to be given at the Hotel Oakland, January 8th. Dinner is to be served in the attractive Tapestry Room of the hotel, with dancing in the Rose Room from 8 to 12 p. m. About sixty guests are expected.

☺ ☺ ☺

Maude Fay, a sister of Postmaster Charles Fay, prima donna of international renown, who was singing leading roles at the Munich Opera House at the beginning of the war, and who later joined the ranks of the Red Cross nurses, is returning to America. Her brother will meet her in New York this week. Miss Fay was a protegee of Madame Johanna Gadski.

☺ ☺ ☺

The Monday Morning Musicales, which emulate, but are expected to surpass in interest and popularity their prototype in the Waldorf-Astoria of New York, will begin next Monday in the Colonial ball room of the St. Francis. This series, which follows out the lines of the Bagby concerts in New York, is one of the most gratifying results of the musical inspiration of the Exposition. The first concert will be given by Mme. Betty Drews, a dramatic soprano, and pupil of Mme. Gerster, teacher of Julia Culp; and Miss Mae Mukle, a member of the Innisfel Quartette, who has gained fame abroad as a 'cellist. The best artists available will be secured for each of the musicales, and it is believed that these will prove even more popular in local society than the concerts at the Waldorf-Astoria have been among the smart set of New York. Parties of prominent society people are already being made up for the first concert.

—Mrs. Brown was entertaining friends, and somewhere between angel cake and chocolates the fair guests began to pay tribute to their respective husbands. "When we were first married," said Mrs. Brown in her turn, with a reflective sigh, "Billy used to kiss me every time the train went through a tunnel." "How deliciously beautiful!" ecstatically exclaimed one of the young women. "Does he still do it?" "Well, I should say not," responded Mrs. Brown, sadly. "Every time we hit a tunnel now, he takes a drink."—Exchange.

—The New Year certainly received a royal welcome at Techau Tavern, where all the jovial rites which are the feature of New Year's eve at this famous cafe were observed with spontaneous enthusiasm. The place was crowded with merry-makers, each striving to outdo the other in good fellowship. The decorations, the fun-making and noise-making souvenirs, the festoons of serpentes, all combined to furnish the proper atmosphere for a glorious good time. At one large table Colonel Charles F. Hanlon, the well known San Francisco attorney, bon vivant and prince of entertainers, was the host of some twenty guests, among them Anna Held and Lillian Russell.

Pears'

Soap, like books, should be chosen
with discretion.
Both are capable of infinite harm.

The selection of Pears' is a perfect choice and a safeguard against soap evils.

Matchless for the complexion.

HOLIDAY PLEASURES AT DEL MONTE.

Del Monte had the first Paper Chase of the season this week, and it was a great success. There were thirty-five riders in the party, including ten ladies. There were no accidents, the fences were low, and all the horses jumped well. The hares did a good piece of work in laying the papers, and were not caught by the hounds. At the end, every one wound up at the Officers' Club at the Presidio, on the invitation of the officers in the chase. There was tea and dancing till dinner time. Everybody had a good and exciting time, and from now on there will be two chases a week open to all.

The tournament crowd is beginning to arrive, and all the Christmas guests are staying over. There are good matches every day, both morning and afternoon.

New Year's eve was observed in an especially fitting manner. There was a supper dance in the main dining room, seats for three hundred and dancing space for at least that number of people. Special cabaret entertainers came down from the city. The orchestra was complete, and there were hundreds of favors distributed for fun and general amusement. As at Christmas time, it was a banner celebration, and many new features were provided.

BIG CHEMICAL DISCOVERY BY CHARLES MARCHAND

As forecasted in the News Letter, some time ago, Charles Marchand has made a complete success of his discovery of saving certain valuable by-products from the waste liquors from wood sulphite plants, a discovery which will place him in the millionaire class in the near future. His patents have been amply protected at Washington, and he is now deep in the work of installing a plant on a commercial scale for the Kimberly-Clark Company of Neenah, Wis., which will be completed by March. The company has a daily output of 240,000 gallons of waste liquor, containing about 2.45 per cent of fermentable dextrose, which will yield 1.40 per cent of 180 degrees proof denatured alcohol at such a low price that the savings will be $650 per day, approximately $200,000 per year, out of which Marchand will receive an extraordinarily handsome percentage. This plant is only one of several score which will reap the advantage of Marchand's ingenious and very important chemical discovery. His success is considered a brilliant coup, as, since his announcement, it has developed that thousands of chemists of all nationalities have been attacking the same puzzling problem for the past thirty years. Mr. Marchand will take his family from Portland, Or., where they are now residing, to Wisconsin, so that they may be near him during the time he is installing the new plant.

—Most of the public benefactors you read about are making money.

BIG NEW YEARS ENTERTAINMENT AT-CORONADO

Hotel Coronado at Coronado Beach, off San Diego, capped all its former brilliant successes in entertaining enjoyment during the recent midwinter holidays. Manager John J. Hernan composed a captivating program, which covered both indoor and outdoor entertainment, and as the weather was ideal, as usual, the crack polo tournament, the golfing, boating, fishing and surf bathing kept the 500 guests and the hundreds of holiday visitors keyed up to a high pitch of pleasure. New Year's day introduced a special program, opening with a thrilling polo game. Some of the guests motored down to witness the opening of the racing season at Tia Juana. In the evening, after the usual famous Christmas dinner given with all the novelties of Yuletide surprises, dancing ruled with undisputed sway. Three big dancing floors were covered by the merry guests—the main dancing floor, a portion of the floor adjoining the big bowling alley, and the large room adjoining the grill. Enjoyment ruled unconfined. Admiral McCallum allowed the band of his war vessel to attend the festivities, and three orchestras were going all the time in the main ballrooms. Punctuating the night's dancing exhibitions were given by the Millers, who have won fame by their marvelous athletic dancing, and the Misses Smoller, the regular exhibition dancers of the hotel. Of course, there was the usual concert music, and the other capital devices offered by the management to keep the guests amused at every turn. Dr. Lorini, a well known physician of Southern California, and on the staff of the hotel, was on hand, as usual, but large as was the number of guests, no call was made on his services. "Safety first" is a cardinal rule of the management.

COST OF THE CLOSING OF THE PANAMA CANAL.

The cash-loss to ship owners from the closing of the Canal cannot be computed, as it involves not only increased insurance in cases of perishable freight, which will have to be carried through the Suez Canal or around the Horn, but the estimate must also include the added cost of coal and provisions and many other details of expense. To the United States government there results a loss of at least $200,000 between the closing and November 1st. Another disturbing effect of the tie-up is the prospect that a considerable proportion of highly profitable freight, which has been recently diverted from the all-rail lines on transcontinental routes, and the Southern Pacific Sunset-Gulf Route (Morgan Line) via Galveston, will be turned back to these carriers.

There are assurances that the waterway will be cleared as fast as possible and at no very late date.

It is the weight of the hills which forces the dirt up the channel of the waterway. When the weight of the smaller hills was diminished the upheavals ceased; when the greater hills are relieved of their excess load there will be no more trouble in the cut. It is a question of time only, and not a very long time at that.

General Goethals intends to blast away the tops of the offending hills in order to bring into the channel all loose earth, and thus remove forever the source of the slides. We are told, moreover, that no effort will be made to maintain a temporary channel for the use of a few ships, and General Goethals is quoted as saying: "When the Canal is reopened, it will be with a permanent channel through the cut, even if this work takes the rest of the year."

—The Archbishop of Canterbury was to officiate at an important service in London. The main entrance to the Abbey was opened, and a great space roped off so that the dignitaries might alight from their equipages unmolested. When a dusty four-wheeler crossed the square, driven by a fat, red-faced cabby, bobbies rushed out to head him off. "Get out of 'ere," one of them called briskly; "this entrance is reserved for the Archbishop." With a wink and a backward jerk of his thumb the irresistible cabby replied cheerfully: "I 'ave the old duffer inside."—Christian Register.

—It's funny how a man whose health is so poor that his wife has to carry the baby when they go out anywhere can walk fifteen miles around a lodge-room with sixty pounds of robe and a miscellaneous assortment of knickknacks attached to his person.—Puck.

WHAT'S YOUR HURRY?

Slack up, brother, what's your hurry
That so recklessly you scurry
With your elbows jabbing sideways and your glance fixed straight ahead?
Is a minute's time so precious
That you needs must be ungracious
And go tramping on your fellow like a hungry quadruped?

Can't you spare a nod of greeting,
Pass the time of day on meeting?
Swap a joke or laugh a little when a neighbor drifts along?
Is the dollar so enticing,
Is "success" so all-sufficing,
That you can't devote a second to a brother in the throng?

Do you know your destination?
It's a quiet little station
Where ambition never troubles and the dollars jingle not,
Where there is no bootless striving,
Sordid scheming or contriving,
And the richest man's possession is a little grassy plot.

Why be over-keen for speeding
On a trail so surely leading
To that lonely little village where we all must come at last?
Slack up, brother, what's your hurry,
That so recklessly you scurry?
You may head a slow procession ere another year is past.

—Peoria Journal.

THE MEN IN FLANDERS.

The men go out to Flanders
As to a promised land;
The men come back from Flanders
With eyes that understand.

They've drunk their fill of blood and wrath,
Of sleeplessness and pain,
Yet silently to Flanders
They hasten back again.

In the low lands of Flanders
A patient watch they keep;
The living and the dead watch on,
Whilst we are sound asleep.

—Margaret Sackville.

—"I can't say I like your new tooth-paste." "That's shaving cream."—Yale Record.

Louis Gassner Inc.

Manufacturing Furriers
112-114 GEARY STREET

FURS

Annual Clearance

SALE

BIG REDUCTIONS

During this sale there will be no
goods sent on approval,
no returns and no
exchanges.

"Court Life from Within."

One of the most interesting recent volumes of reminiscences is that of the Infanta Eulalia of Spain, aunt of the present king, who has very frankly described "Court Life from Within." The author will be recalled by those who can remember the Chicago exposition of 1893 as being the official representative of Spain in the celebration of Columbus's achievement 400 years earlier: and she devotes one chapter to adventures in America on that occasion. But for the most part she describes the life of Europe's reigning families as it has come under her personal observation as a guest in the different palaces. First of all she gives a picture of her own childhood and the social restrictions she endured perforce. Eulalie is essentially a democrat; she was one in her earliest years and has become more so with experience and observation. One reads here, quite possibly with astonishment, of the rigidity of royal etiquette, even in private life. The infanta found herself bound hand and foot by conventionality, even in the palace, far from court, where she lived with her sisters and mother in the first years of her brother's reign. And even now, particularly in Berlin, she finds that a royal guest in a palace is a sort of bird in a gilded cage, as the old song writer puts it. In happy contrast she writes of the comparative freedom in the Scandinavian democracies and of the extreme simplicity of Haakon and Maud of Norway. The infanta's childhood was spent partly in France, in exile, during the republican interregnum some 40 years ago, and she is rather more French than Spanish as a result. As a matter of fact, she is quite cosmopolitan, happy in any court, but happier still in the freedom of private life. Separate chapters are given to England, Germany, Russia, Scandinavia and Italy. There is another, "The regal pose," dealing with the minor royalties with or without thrones and courts, the latter especially exciting the author's commiseration for the absolute uselessness of life as they live it.

Published by Dodd, Mead & Co., price $2.50 net.

"Ordeal by Battle."

A special American edition of F. S. Oliver's "Ordeal by Battle," now in its twenty-third thousand in England, has been prepared in this country. The history of the success of this volume is interesting and goes to prove that our public is not slow to recognize merit. As is customary with many English books, a small edition was first imported from the London publishers, but almost at once it began to be talked about. Theodore Roosevelt, for example, said: "In its practical teachings the best book that this war has produced is Oliver's 'Ordeal by Battle.' I wish that every American would read it, and would realize that everything there said, as to both the shortcomings and the needs of the English people, applies with far greater force to the American people at the present time."

Published by the Macmillan Company, New York. Price, $1.50 net.

"Master Skylark."

Apropos of the large number of Shakespeare Tercentenary celebrations already planned for April, this year, The Century Company, New York, announces the early publication of "Master Skylark," a five-act dramatization of John Bennett's novel of the same name. The play, it is said, opens in Stratford-on-Avon, showing Nick Atwood, a youthful cousin of Shakespeare's, dissatisfied with the monotony of his home life. Then comes a company of strolling players, who kidnap the boy because of his voice. After a number of adventures along the English countryside, Nick reaches London and becomes a famous choir-singer. While there he meets his kinsman, William Shakespeare, who brings about a reunion of Nick Atwood and his Stratford relatives. A love interest is supplied by the daughter of the master-player who had managed the kidnaping of the sweet voiced boy. "Master Skylark" introduces as dramatic personae, in addition to Shakespeare, Ben Jonson, Thos. Heywood, Queen Elizabeth, and other famous historical figures of England's Golden Age of the Drama.

"The Story of a Pioneer."

Anna Howard Shaw tells in her recently published autobiography, "The Story of a Pioneer," the interesting story of her first public speaking. It was while she was at the Big Rapids High School that she was to recite a poem, "No Sects in Heaven." When she faced her audience, she says: "I was so appalled by its size and by the sudden realization of my own temerity that I fainted during the delivery of the first verse. Sympathetic classmates carried me into an anteroom and revived me, after which they naturally assumed that the entertainment I furnished was over for the evening. I, however, felt that if I let that failure stand against me I could never afterward speak in public; and within ten minutes, notwithstanding the protests of my friends, I was back in the hall and beginning my recitation a second time. The audience gave me its eager attention. Possibly it hoped to see me topple off the platform again, but nothing of the sort occurred."

Published by Harper & Brothers, New York.

New Edition of Madison Cawein's Poems.

Under the energetic and able management of Mme. Clarence de Vaux-Royer a number of literary entertainments have been given at the Cameo Club salon in New York to further the publication of a new selection of the best poems of the late Madison Cawein. At the last gathering of this character the guests of honor were Dr. David Starr Jordan, Ella Wheeler Wilcox, Mrs. Samuel Untermyer, Mrs. Florence Wier Gibson and others of equal prominence. The "Kentuckians" gave a dinner at Delmonico's to forward the success of these rarely meritorious poems. So did the Cameo Club at the Waldorf-Astoria and at the Shakespeare Club. This volume, composed of the best poems of Cawein, is now on sale at all leading book stores in New York, and at the Cameo Press, 627 West 136th street, New York. Theodore Roosevelt, who is substantially supporting this effort to give Madison Cawein the high standing he deserved in life, says of the work: "To acknowledge unfamiliarity with the poetry of Madison Cawein is to acknowledge a woeful ignorance of contemporary American literature."

Edward H. Sothern began his reminiscences in the January Scribner Magazine. He opens at "the very first page of my remembrance," a scene on the stage of the old London Haymarket, in 1863, the little boy looking into a pair of twinkling gray eyes, the eyes of his father, who was made up for his famous part of Lord Dundreary. The elder Sothern's children were "The Blessed's," and were brought up in an atmosphere of romance, the land of jolly make-believe, of fairy legends and drollery. About this period there is an irresistible personal charm in Mr. Sothern's narrative. It is fanciful, rich in anecdote, and pervaded by genial humor.

Wedding Presents.—The choicest variety to select from at Marsh's, who is now permanently located at Post and Powell streets.

MELLOW AS MOONLIGHT

CASCADE

For your HI-BALL today

The finest, purest and mellowest whisky that brains and money can produce, cost to you no more than inferior grades; so why not ask for and insist on getting CASCADE.

Instead of saying whisky, just say CASCADE, you will enjoy it and feel much better.

Special enjoyable drink recipes for the asking by writing J. H. Norton, care San Francisco News Letter

The New Poodle Dog
 Hotel and Restaurant
 At Corner
Polk and Post
 STREETS
 San Francisco
 Phone:
 Franklin 2960

San Francisco's Leading French Restaurant
 MUSIC
NEW DELMONICO'S
 362 Geary Street
 Above Hotel St. Francis Telephone Sutter 1572

French Dinner Every Evening, 75 Cents Sunday, $1.00

BLANCO'S O'Farrell and Larkin Streets
 PHONE FRANKLIN 9
 No visitor should leave the city without seeing the finest cafe in America

J. B. Pnn J. Berger C. Mailhebuau C. Lalannc L. Coutard
BERGEZ-FRANK'S
Old POODLE DOG Co.
 HOTEL AND RESTAURANT
 MUSIC AND ENTERTAINMENT EVERY EVENING
 415-421 Bush St., San Francisco (Above Kearny) Exchange, Douglas 2411

Los Angeles Pasadena Oakland
Fred Hartsook
 PHOTOGRAPHS
41 GRANT AVENUE
 San Jose Sacramento San Francisco

Novelties for "Welcoming" and "Bon Voyage" Packages Flowers Delivered to Any Part of the World
 SEND YOUR HOSTESS A DISTINCTIVE BOX OF FLOWERS
 FROM JOSEPH'S FLORISTS
 GRANT AVENUE, NEAR SUTTER STREET

Phone Kearny 2842
Cosgrove's Hair Store
 Established 20 Years
 239 Powell Street
 San Francisco

Gouraud's Oriental Cream
 Gives that pearly white Complexion so desired by the Women of Fashion.
 AT DRUGGISTS AND DEPARTMENT STORES

FADS AND FASHIONS

When the practical quality steps in, illusive chic, they say, steps out. This may be true when the idea of the practical is carried to an extreme. We have learned, however, to add a touch of trimming here, and a note of color there; to slash a sleeve, or band a skirt in a way that quite overcomes the predominance of practical over chic and preserves both.

The Dress for General Wear.

Suitable for the business woman, or the young girl just beginning her days at college, is the popular serge in various qualities and weights. This material is appropriate for the stormy days of the heaviest of winters, and also for the most balmy of climates. Wool poplins, gabardines and tweeds are also serviceable, and make exceedingly attractive costumes. These models, often simple in design, permit of a smart touch of some distinctive color or effect, perhaps a motif, symbolic of the mystic Orient, or of the most fantastic cut-in-stone relics of our aborigines, the Indian mound builders, which have been brought to view after almost numberless decades. Details of this kind often close the high collar, being in the form of buttons, oddly shaped, or medallions, serving as buckles, or simulating belts on the dress itself. With these effective novelties a dress or suit may be rendered unique to a degree, and carry an individual note, difficult to obtain but very satisfactory to the wearer, as she may be sure that her creation is for her wear alone, and will not be duplicated.

The Use of Lace and Net for Blouse or Frock.

Net has once more come into popular use for dainty blouses and frocks, both for daytime and evening wear; thread run nets are especially favored for the latter purpose. Plain net is used considerably for blouses in simple designs, tucked here and there and with tiny frills that fold softly about the neck, or lend grace to the sleeve. Chantilly, that charming lace of web-like texture in almost too delicate a weave to be worn, is also used to fashion many gorgeous creations. Shadow lace, too, has its part in the making of the more elaborate dresses, in combination with soft taffeta or satin, as trimmings in narrow bands, for sleeves, or in softly flaring bretelles. Strange as it may seem, velvet in vivid colors is often used for trimming these filmy costumes in panels and bandings, making a wonderful effect.

Satin or Taffeta As Trimmings.

Narrow pleatings and ruchings of lace and net seemed to be used universally for trimming the dainty evening costume; soft satin, too, in the narrowest of bands or folds, occasionally beaded with small pearls, edges the tiny ruffles and sleeves as well as tunics or flounces which compose the costume. These tunics are draped up often with loops of satin folds having perhaps an end here and there weighted down with metallic ornaments of various sizes. Fancy braid and folds of satin are often combined in applique designs, bow-knots and similar details on tunics of lace or net, with charming effect. Very often one finds the underslips of flouncing embroidered with bows of narrow metallic ribbon or braid, either silver or gold, or in delicate pastel shades, matching the bodice trimming. Taffeta ribbon with the fascinating picot edge is also favored for these underfounce trimmings, and airily bob up and down, the weight of the tiny pearl or cut-bead ornamentations bringing it again into place.

Lace and Satin Dinner Dress

Serge Daytime Frock.

Is the Wide Skirt Losing Favor?

At the Fashion Fete held at the Ritz some time ago, the crinoline effect was still the most accentuated feature; there were many dainty, airy creations, all made with the bouffant skirt, corded or lightly boned. The more conservative afternoon, and the majority of the street costumes, however, are gradually narrowing down in width. Many of the street suits and dresses have an underskirt nearly as narrow as it was a season or two back, the width and flare being confined entirely to the long tunic or overskirt, which is again a much favored detail. Within a short time it is being whispered the full skirt will be seen only on dressy afternoon costumes and evening frocks.

400 Rooms—400 Baths
Hotel Adelphia

Chestnut at 13th Street

(Next to Wanamaker's)

Philadelphia, Pennsylvania

For all purposes the most conveniently located hotel.

MODERATE TARIFF

David B. Provan, Managing Director

HOTEL WORTHY

WM. W. BENSON, Manager

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

Two minutes from station, in center of business district

$1.50 UP EUROPEAN PLAN

NEW PARISIAN FRENCH LAUNDRY

Mme. C. La FON

First Class Work at Reasonable Prices

Laces and Lace Curtains a Specialty
Club, Restaurant and Hotel Service

991 OAK STREET
SAN FRANCISCO

Phone Park 4962

Hotel del Coronado

Coronado Beach, California

American Plan

Polo January 1 to March 20

Annual Polo Tournament March 1 to 20

Bay and Surf Bathing

Boating Deep Sea Fishing Tennis

Motoring

18 Hole Golf Course

Write for Booklet

John J. Hernan -:- Manager

Hotel St. Francis Announces the
Club Room Special
A Busy Man's Luncheon

Beginning January 10, 1916

50 Cents

Service From 11:30 to 2:00

TYPICAL OF CALIFORNIA

PALACE
HOTEL

Since 1875 the Historic Hotel of San Francisco
NEW MANAGEMENT NEW POLICY
European Plan Only. Rates from $2 per day upward.

FAIRMONT HOTEL

The Most Superbly Situated Hotel in the World.
Under Same Management.

HOTEL OAKLAND

Oakland, California

Overlooking Lake Merritt and the Mountains

A pleasing focus of social amenities and public affairs.

European Plan: From $1.50 a day up
American Plan: From $3.50 a day up

Extraordinarily low rates to permanent guests.

CARL SWORD, Manager

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL ITEMS

ENGAGEMENTS

BOETTCHER-BRYAN.—The engagement of Miss Ruth Boettcher, eldest heiress in the West, and Eusign Hamilton Bryan, U. S. N., son of Mrs. Frentiss Cobb Hale, was formally announced Monday. Miss Boettcher spent many months here and in San Diego, and Mr. Bryan's attentions were so marked that the engagement was no surprise. He is a graduate of the naval academy at Annapolis. No date for the wedding is known.

WEDDING ANNOUNCEMENTS.

AMOSS-McLAREN.—One of the weddings scheduled for this month is that of Miss Marguerite Amoss and Loyall McLaren, which will be solemnized at noon on January 15th, at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Thomas Amoss, in Napa. Only members of the two immediate families will be in attendance.

BAKER-WILLCUTT.—Miss Dorothy Baker's marriage to Dr. George Willcutt will be solemnized on the evening of February 16th at Trinity Church. Following the ceremony a small reception for relatives and a few close friends will be held at the Century Club, which will be beautifully decorated for the occasion.

HERRSCHER-FRIENDLY.—The marriage of Miss Emma C. C. Herrscher and Julius Charles Friendly, a prominent business man of Portland, Or., will take place in the ball room of the Palace Hotel, next Wednesday, January 12th. Rev. Dr. Martin Meyer will officiate before a limited number of intimate friends and relatives. The bride is the beautiful and accomplished daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Herrscher of this city, and is widely known in charity and kindred work. After an extended honeymoon as far as Palm Beach, Fla., and New York, the bridal couple will make their home in Portland after April 1st.

THOMAS-BOCQUERAZ.—A wedding of note will be that of Miss Gertrude Thomas and Roger Bocqueraz. The exact date has not been decided upon, but it will occur the latter part of February, and will be one of the brilliant events of the season. The ballroom of the Fairmont Hotel will be the scene of the marriage, which is scheduled for four o'clock.

WETMORE-HUBBARD.—Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Jesse Wetmore have issued invitations to the wedding of their daughter, Miss Phelma Camden Wetmore, to Mr. Herbert Lincoln Hubbard, on Tuesday evening, January 18th, at 9 o'clock at the family residence on Monte Vista avenue, in Oakland.

WEDDINGS.

BOWEN-COOPER.—Mr. and Mrs. William Nelson Bowen announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Ruth Bowen, to John Walter Cooper, on December 29th, the Rev. Mears officiating, at the First Congregational Church of Alameda. The relatives and a few friends joined in celebrating the nuptials at a bridal supper at the Hotel Oakland.

JONES-GORDON.—A romance which began in childhood resulted in the marriage of Miss Katherine Forbes Howell Jones of Newark, N. J., and Colin John Gordon of Tarkdale, Ore., at Grace Cathedral, 1180 California street, on New Year's day. Dean J. Wilmer Gresham performed the ceremony, after which a few invited guests attended a reception at the home of Mrs. A. B. Forbes, the bride's grandmother, 2135 Sacramento street. The happy couple will reside at Tarkdale, where the groom has a large fruit ranch.

ROTHENBERG-BERNER.—Miss Madeline Rothenberg and S. W. Berner were married Sunday night at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. Rothenberg, on Washington street. There were no attendants, and the festivities were limited to the relatives and a very few family friends. Mr. and Mrs. Berner will reside at the Palace for a time until their own home is ready for them.

TAY-MIGHELL.—Fashionable society attended the marriage of Miss Elinor Tay and John Edwin Mighell this week at Sorosis Club. It was an unusually pretty wedding. The decorations were in lavender and pink. The Rev. George G. Eldredge of Berkeley officiated. Mr. and Mrs. Mighell will reside at their new home on Lake street, the gift of the groom's father, Captain William E. Mighell, and of the Henshaw family. The many gifts received by the youthful couple were almost enough to furnish the home.

LUNCHEONS.

BOURN.—Mrs. William B. Bourn was hostess at a luncheon at her home Sunday, having about a dozen guests.

HOPKINS.—Miss Gertrude Hopkins gave a farewell luncheon in compliment to Misses Beatrice Nickel and Ruth Zelle, who left Sunday for the East. The impromptu affair took place Wednesday afternoon, December 29th, at the St. Francis Hotel.

JOHNSON.—Miss Helen Johnson entertained some of her friends at a pretty luncheon party Monday, as a compliment to Miss Marion Stovel.

LA MONTAGNE.—Mrs. Clinton La Montagne was hostess Tuesday at a luncheon given at her home in honor of Miss Marion Stovel, who is to be a bride a week from to-day.

LANGSTROTH.—Mrs. Lowell Langstroth was hostess at an informal luncheon recently, having complimented Miss Helen Bertheau on that occasion.

MACOMBER.—Mrs. A. Kenneth Macomber was hostess Monday at an informal luncheon.

THOMAS.—Miss Gertrude Thomas will entertain a coterie of congenial friends Tuesday at a luncheon which she will give at the Francisca Club. The affair will be in honor of two popular brides-to-be, Miss Helen Bertheau and Miss Dorothy Baker.

TUCKER.—Mrs. James Ellis Tucker will give a luncheon for twelve guests for Miss Hannah Hobart at the Town and Country Club, January 12th.

WALES.—An informal luncheon was enjoyed by a group of the friends of Major and Mrs. Philip Wales on Sunday. This affair took place at their handsome home in Menlo Park, where they passed the week-end.

DINNERS.

BENNETT.—A delightful affair on Wednesday evening was the dinner given by Miss Dorothy Bennett at her home at Mare Island.

HOWELL.—Lieutenant and Mrs. Howell presided at an informal dinner Saturday evening.

HUNTINGTON.—Miss Marion Huntington has invited a number of her friends to enjoy her hospitality at dinner this evening in her home on Maple street.

McCORMICK.—Mr. and Mrs. Ernest McCormick presided at dinner Wednesday evening at their home on Washington street, and afterward with their guests attended the ball of the Wednesday Evening Dancing Club at California Hall.

MARTIN.—One of the most interesting functions of last week was the dinner given Saturday evening by Mrs. Eleanor Martin at her home on Broadway, where decorations in keeping with New Year's day filled the house.

PARKER.—White carnations and maidenhair ferns, placed in graceful arrangement in a silver basket, formed the effective decoration at the dinner given Tuesday evening by Mrs. E. Grahame Parker. It was in honor of Major and Mrs. Philip Wales, and was held at the hostess' home on Clay street.

POETT.—The debutante set was in evidence at the dinner dance given Tuesday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Henry Poett at the Fairmont Hotel. Miss Emily Timlow was the incentive for the delightful affair.

POMEROY.—Miss Harriet Pomeroy has asked some of her friends to dine at her home on Friday, January 28th, and all later on will go to the C. O. G. Miller home for the Gayety dance.

WILSON.—Preceding the dance of the Neighbors, this evening, Mr. and Mrs. Neighborhood dance, and Miss Marion Huntington will also entertain dinner guests.

TEAS.

CROCKER.—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Templeton Crocker entertained a number of friends Sunday afternoon at a tea which they gave at their home in San Mateo.

HALE.—Mr. and Mrs. Frentiss Cobb Hale and Miss Linda Bryan were at home informally on New Year's day. Many of the guests attended the other neighborhood teas from here.

PERKINS.—An informal tea will be given next week by Miss Ruth Perkins at her home on Jackson street. Miss Emilla Gordon will be the guest of honor.

THEATRE PARTIES.

GARRITT.—Miss Helen Garritt will give a theatre party next Monday evening for a number of the debutantes and their escorts.

PARTIES.

DAVIS.—Yellow chrysanthemums and ferns formed an effective decoration for the home of Mr. and Mrs. Francis H. Davis on Scott street, where an egg-nog party was enjoyed New Year's day.

McCUTCHEEN.—Mrs. E. J. McCutchen's "freak party" on the evening of January 11th for the benefit of the Belgian relief promises to be a very jolly affair. Mrs. McCutchen already has eighty acceptances from friends who promise to attend as freaks. No men will be admitted to the McCutchen home, 2016 Pacific avenue, on that night.

DE YOUNG.—"Telephone Invitations" brought about an informal gathering of friends at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. H. de Young on New Year's eve. The guests enjoyed a delightful evening of dancing and music.

THE HOTEL PLAZA

overlooking the beautiful Plaza of Union Square, the Hotel of refinement and service, is offering special rates to permanent guests.

Hotel Plaza Company

RECEPTIONS.

CROCKETT.—At Burlingame there was the time-honored reception of Mrs. Joseph B. Crockett, who has held open house every New Year's for many years. She was assisted in welcoming her guests by Mr. and Mrs. Laurence Irving Scott.

BELL.—The officers of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps, together with the feminine portions of their families, were bidden to the New Year's reception given by Major-General and Mrs. Franklin Bell. Green and holly were used in profusion throughout the house at Fort Mason.

BOYD.—Miss Louise Boyd greeted scores of her friends on Saturday afternoon, an informal invitation having been extended. The John F. Boyd home on Pacific avenue was a center for many of the families in town that day to greet each other.

CAEDMON CLUB.—The Most Rev. Edward J. Hanna, D. D., Archbishop of San Francisco, will be the honored guest at a reception to be given at the home of Mrs. Eleanor Martin on the evening of January 18th. The reception will be given under the auspices of the Caedmon Club.

GWYN.—Mrs. William Gwyn was hostess at a reception Saturday at her home in Pacific avenue.

JOHNSTON.—Holiday decorations were in evidence at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John G. Johnson, who greeted a number of their friends Saturday afternoon. They were assisted in receiving by Mrs. W. H. Landers.

MASTEN.—Miss Marion Stovel was the guest of honor at a reception recently given by her aunt, Mrs. Joseph M. Masten.

MEIRE.—Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Meire, Misses Hildreth and Lloyd Meire, entertained informally on the afternoon of New Year's day at their residence on Broadway.

DANCES.

POETT.—The debutante group were entertained at a dinner dance which Mr. and Mrs. Harry Poett gave Tuesday night in honor of Miss Emily Tinlow at the Fairmont Hotel.

WACHHORST.—Dr. and Mrs. Newton Booth Wachhorst gave a large New Year's eve dance at California Club, decorating the place in an artistic way for a carnival evening. Supper was served during mid-night, and dancing continued for several hours.

CARDS.

ASHE.—Mrs. William Ashe presided at an informal bridge party Thursday afternoon in her attractive apartment on Pine street.

ASHE.—Mrs. Porter Ashe was hostess at a bridge party Thursday afternoon at the Cecil Hotel, where she is passing the winter, having closed her handsome home in San Rafael.

FENNIMORE.—Mrs. Arthur W. Fennimore will entertain some of her friends at a bridge tea on the 21st, to meet Miss Gertrude Hanna.

HOWELL.—Two tables of bridge were entertained this week by Mrs. James B. Howell, whose guests assembled in her attractive apartment on Van Ness avenue.

OWEN.—Mrs. Arthur Owen will give a bridge tea on the 21st, in honor of Miss Gertrude Hanna.

SPRECKELS.—Mrs. A. B. Spreckels will give a bridge party on Monday, January 10th, at her studio in Vallejo street, to assist in the fund for the Belgians.

ARRIVALS.

HERRIN.—William F. Herrin and his daughter, Miss Katherine Herrin, who went East several weeks ago in their private car, have returned to their home on Broadway.

SHARP.—Mrs. Alexander Sharp has arrived in San Francisco, where she hopes to organize one or more chapters of the woman's section of the Navy League of the United States.

WILDER.—Mrs. Jane Wilder sailed Wednesday from Honolulu and will arrive here to-day. She has taken an apartment on Taylor street and plans to remain here indefinitely.

DEPARTURES.

DIBBLEE.—Mrs. Thomas Dibblee and Miss Inez Dibblee, who have been at the Bellevue for several weeks, have returned to their home in Santa Barbara.

BODDY.—Mrs. Spencer Eddy accompanied her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. C. Augustus Spreckels, left Tuesday afternoon for their beautiful home, El Mirasol, Santa Barbara, where she will be their guest for a week.

LYMAN.—Edmunds Lyman will sail to-day for South America, and he contemplates being away about two months. He will spend some time in Chile, where he will visit Wallan Hallway, who resides there.

SUTTON.—Mrs. Ellingham Sutton left Wednesday for Pomona, where she will visit Mrs. Robert Henderson, who went south several weeks ago.

INTIMATIONS.

ARMSBY.—Mr. George Armsby will leave shortly for Pasadena, where he will join Mrs. Armsby, who went south several weeks ago in the hope that the mild climate of Southern California would benefit her health.

CROCKER.—Mrs. Henry J. Crocker and Miss Marlon Crocker are at the Hotel Belmont in New York, and have named no date for their home-coming.

FELTON.—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Felton have taken a house in Santa Barbara, where they contemplate spending the remainder of the winter.

GRIFFITH.—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Griffith have come up from Pleasanton and will live here for the next three years. They have rented the house on Pacific avenue formerly occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Roy M. Pike.

JACKLING.—Mr. and Mrs. Daniel C. Jackling will sail next Sunday on their yacht Cyprus for Mazatlan and various Mexican ports. They will be accompanied by a number of friends, and they contemplate being away about three weeks.

LAIDLAW.—Mrs. Horace W. Laidlaw has taken an apartment at the Warren, with her son, Beverly Laidlaw.

MARTIN.—Mrs. Eugene Murphy and Mrs. Walter S. Martin went to Del Monte for the week end.

MARTIN.—Lieutenant Martin J. Martin, U. S. N., fiance of Miss Katherine MacAdam, will arrive from St. Louis next Sunday. The wedding will take place January 18th.

MORGAN.—Mr. and Mrs. Cosmo Morgan, Jr., who have been spending the holidays with their son, Cosmo Morgan, have returned to their home in Los Angeles.

MULLINS.—Mr. and Mrs. Carlton Mullins and their little son, who have been residing in Mill Valley for the past year, have moved to Oakland, where they have taken an attractive bungalow on Moraga avenue.

PEROTTI.—Mr. and Mrs. Eduardo Perotti and their family will leave some time between January 15th and January 20th for their home in Uruguay. Meanwhile they are at the Hotel Richelieu, where their friends are calling to say good-bye.

SHARP.—Mrs. Alexander Sharp, who is in San Francisco for a few days en route to Washington, D. C., gave a talk at the Fairmont Hotel on Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock on the work of the women's section of the Navy League of the United States.

SPRECKELS.—Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Spreckels have been passing the Christmas holidays and the New Year with Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Eddy at Burlingame.

WILDER.—Judge Arthur A. Wilder, who has been spending the past few months in Washington, D. C., arrived in San Francisco and sailed Wednesday on the Lurline for his home in Honolulu.

—An old Scotswoman who had put herself to considerable inconvenience, and gone a long way to see a sick friend, learned on arriving that the alarming symptoms had subsided. "And hoo are ye the day, Mrs. Crawford?" she inquired in breathless anxiety. "Oh, I'm quite weel, noo, thank ye, Mrs. M'Callum." "Quite weel," exclaimed the visitor, "after me haein' come sae far to see ye!"—Exchange.

—Shronk stopped his motor car at a desolate crossroads, and yelled to a farmer who lay on a cart of fertilizer: "Hey, Cornsilk, is this the way to Croydon?" The farmer raised himself from the fertilizer in astonishment. "By heck, stranger, how did you know my name was Cornsilk?" "I guessed it," said the motorist. "Then, by heck," said the farmer, as he drove off, "guess your way to Croydon."—Exchange.

To New York by Rail and Ocean

Through fare from San Francisco same as All-Rail and includes Berth and Meals on Steamer

"Sunset Limited"---74 Hours to New Orleans

Leaves Third Street Station 5:00 P. M.

Connects at New Orleans With

Southern Pacific's Ocean Liners

Sailing to New York Wednesdays and Saturdays

The Marvelous "APACHE TRAIL" Auto Tnp, Phoenix to Globe, Made by Detour Mancopa to Bowie, Arizona

For Fares and Berths Ask Agents

SOUTHERN PACIFIC

FIRST IN SAFETY

BIG CONSOLIDATION OF OIL PROPERTIES.

By long odds the biggest financial and commercial deal which has happened in California properties in a long while is the consolidation of the oil holdings of the Associated Oil Company, Union Oil Company, the Independent Oil Producers' Agency, comprising 175 independent oil companies, General Petroleum and California Petroleum Company. The organization of these five big companies into a corporation styled the Pan-American Petroleum and Transportation Company, is now going on in New York. The proper financial assistance stands ready for underwriting purposes, and the plan gives every promise of going through. Mark Requa, a pioneer in the oil game, and an expert in its details, has been working on this promotion for more than a year past. For over a year he has had experts in the field making careful surveys regarding strict values of the five properties mentioned. Payments in stock of the new organization will be given on a pro rata valuation of these properties. The stocks of all five companies have been very strong for the past several months. Associated Oil has advanced from about 46 to 76. This big consolidation will reduce the big companies of this State to three huge corporations, Standard Oil, the Shell Company (British-Dutch), and the Pan-American Petroleum. They control all the big refineries, pipe lines, fleets of oil tankers, transportation cars and more than one-half the productive wells of the State. They practically control the oil reducing and transportation of the State, and thereby set the price of oil in this territory.

MINING PROSPECTS ENTERING BRIGHT ERA.

Mining in the West gives every sign of being on the eve of entering one of the most prosperous eras in its history. Prospects are the brightest in years from Juneau, Alaska, to the extraordinarily promising camps in Arizona, where the new mines in the Oatman district are attracting national attention. Now that Carranza is in the saddle, peace has come to prostrated Mexico, and the mines there will shortly be back on their old-time stable production. The reorganization of the leading Comstock mines and the present exploration of the old-time rich lower levels, by the able assistance of the great modern pumps which literally gulp up the water there by the thousands of gallons, has given immense impetus to public interest in the work going on there. The prospects are that the famous old lode, which has always shown periodic surprising "come backs" in its history, will uncover another bonanza lode in the near future. Experts have staked their reputations that the ore is there, and that it is only a question of steadfast persistence to uncover it. Tonopah continues to be the banner camp of Nevada, by reason of its steady output of values in ore. Any half dozen mines that can produce close on to $200,000 per week, year in and year out, is some camp, especially when the shareholders get their dividends regularly. The Rochester mines are now solidly on the production map, and are naturally improving right along. Goldfield also has its steady producers, and is being vigilantly watched by investors on account of the excellent prospects of several big properties. The values are in the ground there, as has been demonstrated time and again; the problem is to find them in a permanent ledge at depth, as in the case of Goldfield Con. and Jumbo Ex. Just now the big companies are turning their attention to milling the vast quantities of low grade ore on hand. With the opening of spring in these camps a bigger impetus to mining will be given all along the line.

—United Dry Goods and Associated Merchants companies are to be reorganized into a single company, with capital stock of $50,000,000.

—Figures for the United States for week ended December 25th show exports of $55,539,607, and imports of $30,799,640.

—Although the number of merchant ships under the American flag decreased during the fiscal year ending with last June, the tonnage of the merchant marine showed a record-breaking increase, according to the annual report of the Commissioner of Navigation. On June 30, 1914, 26,943 vessels, having a total gross tonnage of 7,928,688, were under American registry. A year later the number had increased to 26,701, but the aggregate tonnage was 8,389,429. Figures made public recently by the Commissioner showed that since the fiscal year closed there had been a steady increase, both in the number of ships and tonnage, the merchant marine on December 1st comprising 26,888 vessels, aggregating 8,444,258 tons gross.

—Alaska Packers are expected to go on a higher dividend basis at the meeting of the board of directors on January 18th next. Of late the price of the stock has been very strong and is now close to par.

—Dow, Jones & Co. estimate the interest payments and dividend disbursement for January at $350,000,000.

Dr. Byron Haines, Dentist, has resumed practice at his office in Gunst Building, S. W. corner Geary and Powell streets.

STATEMENT OF THE CONDITIONS OF THE BANK OF ITALY

SAVINGS COMMERCIAL
Member—Associated Savings Banks of San Francisco
The San Francisco Clearing House Association

DECEMBER 31, 1915

RESOURCES

First Mortgage Loans on Real Estate	$ 7,813,769.79
Other Loans (Collateral and Personal).....	5,156,297.76
Banking Premises, Furniture, Fixtures and Safe Deposit Vaults (Head Office and Branches)	865,357.77
Other Real Estate	182,555.37
Customers' Liability under Letters of Credit.....	178,854.66
Other Resources	71,061.18
United States, State, Municipal and other Bonds	$5,084,362.96
CASH	2,969,591.20
	8,053,954.16

$22,321,860.69

LIABILITIES

Capital Paid Up	$ 1,250,000.00
Surplus	$158,100.00
Undivided Profits	374,243.50
Dividends Unpaid	43,890.00
Letters of Credit	178,854.66
DEPOSITS	20,474,872.53
	$22,321,860.69

STATE OF CALIFORNIA
CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO

A. P. GIANNINI and A. PEDRINI, being each separately duly sworn, each for himself, says that said A. P. Giannini is President and that said A. Pedrini is Cashier of the Bank of Italy, the corporation above mentioned, and that every statement contained therein is true of his own knowledge and belief.

A. P. GIANNINI.
A. PEDRINI.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 31st day of December, 1915.
THOMAS S. BURNES, Notary Public.

The Story of Our Growth

As shown by a Comparative Statement of Our Resources

DECEMBER 31, 1904	$295,436.97
DECEMBER 31, 1905	$1,021,290.80
DECEMBER 31, 1906	$1,899,947.28
DECEMBER 31, 1907	$2,221,347.35
DECEMBER 31, 1908	$2,574,004.90
DECEMBER 31, 1909	$3,817,217.70
DECEMBER 31, 1910	$6,539,861.47
DECEMBER 31, 1911	$8,379,347.02
DECEMBER 31, 1912	$11,228,814.56
DECEMBER 31, 1913	$15,882,911.61
DECEMBER 31, 1914	$18,030,401.59
December 31, 1915	$22,321,860.69

NUMBER OF DEPOSITORS 58,854

Savings Deposits Made on or Before January 10, 1916
Will Earn Interest From January 1, 1916

E. F. HUTTON & CO. BANKERS

Members—New York Stock Exchange; New York Cotton Exchange, New York
Coffee Exchange; New Orleans Cotton Exchange; Liverpool Cotton Association; Chicago Board of Trade.

Private Wire—New York, Chicago to San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Branch Offices—San Francisco, 190 California St., and Hotel St. Francis; Los Angeles, 118 Fourth Street, 1. W. Hellman Building.

PIONEER HOUSE OF THE PACIFIC COAST

Eliminating the Glare

Now that glaring headlights are prohibited in California, it is interesting to learn that they are needless. A comparatively simple adjustment of existing lights may be made which will do away with the glare.

Electrical experts and others, after careful consideration, have become convinced that the principal source of glare in the case of the ordinary automobile headlight is waste light that is projected into the air instead of being concentrated on the road, where it is needed. By eliminating this waste, it is thought that more efficient road lighting can be developed, while the glare nuisance can be reduced to a minimum of absolute safety.

Glareless headlights will be given considerable attention by the Society of Automobile Engineers at its winter meeting in New York City, this month, at which the Electrical Equipment Division of the Society's Standards Committee is expected to make important recommendations bearing on the proper construction and application of headlights from the safety or non-glare standpoint. The engineers, among whom are numbered representatives of all the prominent manufacturers of automobiles and equipment in the United States, naturally regard the subject as one of the greatest importance to the industry, and have had it under deliberation for more than a year. From their investigations it has developed that a reduction of glare and an improvement in effective lighting may result from improved methods of constructing both the bulbs and the reflectors in which they are mounted.

The Electrical Equipment Division of the Standards Committee has devoted much thought to the possible modification of present equipment, with the somewhat startling discovery resulting that with only minor changes in the way of improved adjustment a majority of the present headlights can be made to yield safe and highly satisfactory illumination. The result of this conclusion, as embodied in the recommendations upon which the society will act, is a set of practical directions by use of which any motorist can readily adjust his lamps in such a way as to reduce their glaring tendencies to an almost negligible degree. The two fundamental requirements are that the bulbs be properly focused within the reflectors, and that the reflectors be properly aimed. The first adjustment can be accomplished by means already provided in every lamp, and the second by bending the props on which the lamp is supported in such a way as to direct the light upon the road a stated distance in front of the car.

In St. Louis, recently, these recommendations were put to a practical test, and of 4,500 cars examined by the municipal authorities, 3,000 passed successfully, and were at once sealed by the bureau, thereby not requiring further examination. Gas headlights or poor reflectors of a cheap pattern were responsible for the failure of most of the others.

The Cost of Gasoline

When gasoline was around 10½ and 11 cents, the News Letter advised motorists to lay in a stock, as it was hardly possible for it to go lower, and undoubtedly would rise rapidly in the near future.

Twenty-five cent gasoline—in the opinion of some of those who are closely watching the situation, gasoline is likely to advance to that price a gallon.

The rise in price is attributed to a tremendous increase in demand as against an output unable to keep pace with the enlarged calls for gasoline and petroleum. Both the foreign and domestic demands for gasoline have shown great gains. With the Russian fields out of the market, the European needs have turned strongly to this country for satisfaction.

The growth in the domestic consumption of gasoline is measured by the expansion of the motor vehicle industry in the United States during the past year. There were 198,400 more motor vehicles sold during the past fiscal year than in the preceding one. Gasoline consumed by motor vehicles this fiscal year amounted to 13,000,000 barrels. This was a gain of 3,000,000 barrels over the preceding year.

Oil men are predicting that Pennsylvania crude will go to $2.50 a barrel before many months. This is of interest in connection with the prospect of a higher price of gasoline, as Pennsylvania petroleum is generally credited with carrying the highest content of gasoline.

In Paris recently gasoline sold for 75 cents a gallon. With the Russian supply cut off to the other allies, and with the closing of the Suez Canal to merchant ships, shutting off the supply from Eastern fields, the European bids for gasoline are likely to become stronger during the continuance of the war.

Manufacturers to Help Prosecute Reckless Drivers

While automobile drivers, as a class, are the most careful users of streets, there are a few reckless owners and chauffeurs who discredit the rest. In the East, the manufacturers will lend moral support to severe prosecution of such offenders and against speeding, cut-outs and useless horn blowing, which frighten people.

Contrary to general opinion, speed and recklessness are not principal causes of accidents. Of 3,389 persons struck by vehicles of all kinds in New York City during June, July and August, 737, or more than 20 per cent, were struck by horse-drawn trucks and wagons, whose ordinary speed is only four or five miles an hour, and which never exceeded ten or twelve miles. And of 1,084 persons struck by vehicles in August, only 4 were struck by automobiles as a result of speeding, and but one as a result of recklessness of the driver.

Attempt will be made, however, to have the 96 leading automobile manufacturing companies embraced in the N. A. C. C. membership conduct a campaign of education among purchasers of their cars and trucks. Much more good will result from friendly co-operation between city and State authorities and the automobile interests than by misrepresentation of the facts and attempts to place most of the blame for street accidents upon the motorist, thereby antagonizing all users of motor vehicles.

Opposition to the Federal Auto Taxes

Washington, D. C., January 1.—Why the proposed Federal taxes on automobiles and gasoline may not be enacted into law is explained by citing some passenger car statistics recently compiled by the American Automobile Association.

Particularly in the Middle West, where roads improvement is just getting under way, has the self-propelled vehicle come into its own. Iowa has a passenger automobile for every 15 people. Furthermore, this percentage is higher in the country than in the city districts, according to the figures of the Iowa Highway Commission. In the State there are 140,168 cars, which pay in registration taxes $1,137,500, which money of course goes to the upkeep of roads. Iowa has made a specialty of dirt road dragging, but sentiment is accumulating for improved roads which will withstand the rainy periods.

Kansas is another State wherein the blacksmith shops are being converted into garages. Over 73,000 cars are owned in Kansas, and it is said that very rarely now can a livery stable be found in the small towns. Road conditions are similar to those found in Iowa.

For an Eastern seaboard State, New Jersey undoubtedly provides for more motor vehicle travel per mile than any other commonwealth. Over 90,000 cars, of which 79,300 are passenger vehicles and some 11,000 motor trucks, pay in annual license fees $1,155,000. So great has been the traffic on New Jersey roads that the commercial organizations and the A. A. A. clubs of the State have united in a campaign looking forward to a vastly amplified road expenditure.

"Way Down East," in Maine, 21,574 automobiles were licensed in 1915. Since Maine in great degree is a vacation State there are thousands of visiting cars which use its roads leading to shore and lake and mountain resorts. Maine has in process the working out of a State highway system of some 1,300 miles connecting cities and towns in which are found 73 per cent of the entire population of the State and 73 per cent of the total property valuation. Though Maine is a State with many miles of coast line, there is some difference of opinion on military preparedness.

In California there are over 160,000 automobiles owned in the State, besides many others which are attracted because of the wonderful roads construction now in progress. California believes in war preparation, and its trunk line highways now under construction will make it possible to mobilize thousands of troops in a comparatively brief period, for the main lines are being supplied with feeders which ultimately will connect every county in the State with the big arteries which extend from the Oregon line to the Mexican border.

* * *

Seal for Approved Headlight

Professor David I. Gallup, of the Worcester, Mass., Polytechnic Institute, has made a suggestion to the Worcester Automobile Club officials that they communicate with the highway commission to arrange a seal which may be stamped upon headlights that have been found all right under the new headlight law, and in that way prevent the indiscriminate holding-up of motorists night after night to see if their lights are perfect.

* * *

Kansas Car Bill

Topeka, Kan., Dec. 27—C. W. Myers, head of the State motor car license department, has just compiled a set of figures showing that Kansas owners expend $13,140,000 a year on the maintenance and upkeep of their cars. His figures are based on the license records showing ownership of 73,000 cars, exclusive of those in the hands of the dealers, within the State.

Myers has taken an average of $15 a month as the upkeep cost, and thus worked out his findings. It shows a cost of $180 a year a car, divided equally between gasoline and oil, tires and accessories, and labor and repairing. The value of the Kansas owned cars is given at $75,000,000. "The motor not only has converted blacksmith shops into garages, but also has driven the old-fashioned livery stables out of business."

* * *

New City Scenic Boulevard

"With the letting of the contract for the improvement of the old Corbett Road a new scenic and direct route out of San Francisco will shortly be established," says F. L. BuBroy, the head of the Saxon Sales Company.

"The new road when completed may be said to start from the ferry, going out Market street to Seventeenth. It is at this point that the real short cut begins.

"Out over Seventeenth street, the road runs through a right-of-way over the Twin Peaks Tunnel property which the city secured for the easterly end of the big bore.

"This section of new road will come out at 24th street, where the latter thoroughfare is joined by the Corbett road.

"From this point of juncture the Corbett road will be improved until it merges into the Portola Boulevard, which has now been completed from the Sloat boulevard until it reaches the Corbett road.

"The view from the upper heights of the Corbett road gives one a splendid idea of lower San Francisco; the view includes the full length of Market street with Goat Island, Oakland, Berkeley and Alameda in the distance; while to the right one can get a splendid conception of that section of the city that is termed the Potrero, South San Francisco and Bernal Heights.

"From the records of the Board of Public Works it is seen that the distance by the new road is about the same as that by way of Market, Valencia, Mission street, Daly City. The latter route practically only has the advantage of the distance from the Junipero Serra boulevard to the county road, a distance of about five blocks.

"In the saving of time, however, the odds are in favor of the new highway, as it is practically a motor road, and one escapes the traffic congestion to be found along Valencia and Mission streets westward.

"The motorists have appreciated that the old Mission street road was far shorter than going out Golden Gate Park over 19th avenue, hence as the new road is about equal to the Mission street route, it will have the same advantage over going by way of 19th avenue.

"For those who live in the Western Addition and that section of the city, the new road will be quickly reached by way of the Panhandle, Page street, over Ashbury avenue to the firehouse, where either the new road around Twin Peaks can be taken, dropping down into the Corbett road about five hundred feet before it merges into the Portola Boulevard, or by following the car tracks of the 18th street cars until it reaches the new Corbett road."

* * *

Novelties at the Big Show

New York, January 1.—The big annual show of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce is in full swing at the Grand Central Palace, and all signs indicate that this is a happy New Year for the manufacturers. It is apparent that the idea of opening the show New Year's eve was a smart one, as the usual opening day attendance is undoubtedly greatly augmented through the fact that it is a holiday.

Never was there a more beautiful show, which of course means cars as well as background, and never did there appear to be more interest exhibited by the public.

The convertible car was probably the most conspicuous and attractive feature, about twenty manufacturers showing types of this economical and useful design. Last year there was but one, "The All-Year Car," a Kissel conception. It created a big stir, not only because of its originality, but because it so obviously brought important economy to the motorist desiring to drive in winter as well as summer, and did so without sacrificing appearance.

So many manufacturers have since last year followed in Kissel's footsteps, the public seemed very much interested in the Kissel booth and the All-Year models.

The plan and workmanship of the Kissel All-Year Car are presented in a very striking manner in a mounted body, half of which is completed and the other half showing the car "in the rough." One side is the finished tonneau, with its brightly enameled body, hood and fenders, upholstery—in fact, the car just as delivered to the purchaser. On the other side, the motor, the chassis under the flooring, the raw material of the top itself, and manner in which it is constructed and attached, is shown.

Among others showing convertible cars are Hudson, Chalmers, Hupmobile, Mitchell, Paige, Saxon, Jeffrey, Jackson, Overland, Cole, Studebaker, Maxwell and numerous others. The Hudson top is stationary, only the sides being removable for fair weather driving. The Maxwell is also of this construction, but the other cars named have removable tops, as well as sides.

* * *

A First-Class Garage

There are many garages in town, and the motorist is often in a quandary as to where to go, especially for permanent service. There are very few who give you the QUALITY of service of Dow & Green, in Taylor street, between O'Farrell and Geary. Here your car will receive something more than the "once over," and the prices are moderate.

* * *

Statistics for 1915

Superintendent H. A. French of the State Motor Vehicle Department, last Saturday issued the following statistics for 1915: Registrations—Automobiles, 163,716; motorcycles, 26,216; chauffeurs, 20,755. Receipts—Automobiles, $1,862,447.50; motorcycles, $51,402.00; chauffeurs, $41,102.00. Total receipts, $1,954,951.50. Receipts for 1916 licenses to date, $654,978. Automobile licenses for 1916, approximately 65,000.

VISIT CAPITOL CITY of your STATE

A Day's Trip—Well Spent

Visit beautiful Capitol Grounds—Capitol Building—Sutter's Fort—Crocker Art Gallery—Riverside Drive, etc.
$3.35 Round Trip Saturdays and Sundays, with return limit Monday.

OAKLAND, ANTIOCH & EASTERN RAILWAY

Specially equipped 3-passenger "The Six of '16" Roadster. Built by Mitchell-Lewis Motor Co., of Racine, Wis., for Winona, Minn., Fire Department.

War Increases Jeffery Sales

Figures from the Department of Commerce at Washington covering exports during the month of October reveal the fact that the business in war munitions which has been so much discussed is actually much less in proportion than has been generally supposed.

The total of exports from this country for the month amounted to $334,638,578, while the total of all war materials shipped from this country during the same period was only $40,661,560.

There has been a heavy foreign business with those nations which remained at peace, particularly in automobiles and motor trucks. Also machinery, beds, dried beans and a thousand and one other items are waiting in our freight yards for steam ships to carry them to South America, Australia, South Africa, New Zealand and other parts of the world which are at peace.

As an example of the effect which the closing of the European factories has brought about, Mr. Charles T. Jeffery, president of the Thomas B. Jeffery Company of Kenosha, Wisconsin, has just made the announcement that the Jeffery Company has completed plans for the erection of two new large buildings in addition to the enormous plant which is now working at high speed in the attempt to fill the tremendous demand for Jeffery pleasure cars and trucks.

"Jeffery shipments have increased more than one hundred per cent over last year," said Mr. Jeffery. "The company is employing double the number of men; and the wheels are whirring twenty-four hours a day in many departments."

New Truck Arrives

Another motor truck has entered the local market. It is the Standard vehicle, manufactured by the Standard Motor Truck Company of Detroit, and will hereafter be handled in Northern California by the Mathewson Motor Company.

A shipment of these trucks has already been received, and are now on exhibition.

"Ever since we announced that we had taken the agency for the Vim light delivery truck, we have had inquiries for vehicles to handle heavier freight," says E. Linn Mathewson.

"This demand was so great that for the last 60 days we have been investigating the different makes of motor trucks not in the local market. After exhaustive tests and demonstrations we have become convinced that the Standard trucks will give the greatest service to the owner. We therefore have closed for the Northern California district.

"The problem of economical transportation is one of the most vital issues of to-day, and is of equal importance to the merchant, farmer and transportation. Solution of the problem is as important as the selection of a truck to do the work, and can best be solved only by specialists in transportation service.

"The twenty years' experience of the Standard factory in the manufacture and distribution of units for heavy duty, serviceable vehicles was a guarantee to us that they thoroughly understood and appreciated what a motor truck should be.

"These trucks are produced in 2, 3 1/2, 4 and 5 ton vehicles, giving a range of models that covers every truck in demand outside of the light delivery service. They have a range in length of frame back of the driver's seat from 108 inches to any special length desired on the 2 ton model, and a range on the others from 121 inches to 169 inches, making them serviceable and equal to every demand of to-day."

Velle Appoints San Jose Agent

Although December is considered one of the months when automobiles of the better grade move more or less slowly, last month was an exception, according to George Cadwalader, of the Logan-Cadwalader Company, the Northern California distributors of Velle pleasure cars and trucks. He made the following announcement recently: "We have had a number of applications for the San Jose territory, and have appointed the Consolidated Garage, First and San Carlos streets, our representative."

MOTOROL

"It suits because it doesn't soot"

If you want to prolong the life of your engine
If you want to eliminate smoke and carbon
If you want to reduce your oil expense

Use MoToRoL

Hughson & Merton, Inc.

530 Golden Gate Avenue
San Francisco, Cal.

AUTOMOBILE STARTING and LIGHTING SYSTEMS

Give Satisfactory Results When Given Proper Attention

We specialize on electrical equipment, storage batteries, etc., and guarantee satisfaction.

GUARANTEE BATTERY COMPANY

BRAND & CUSHMAN

639 Van Ness Ave., S. F.

Phone Franklin 2772

AUTOISTS

SHOULD NEVER BE WITHOUT THEM =

Your Grocer Sells 'Em

HOOVER SPRING COMPANY

Guaranteed Auto Springs

Quick Repair Work

617 Turk St., near Van Ness Ave.

Phone Prospect 460

TIRES

VULCANIZING

TOM H. ELKINGTON

Long Mileage Tires and Second-Hand Tires
Everything Needed for the Bus

1135 VAN NESS AVE.—Near Geary Phone PROSPECT 1566

PANHARD OIL

FREE FROM CARBON

BERNARD I. BILL

543 GOLDEN GATE AVE. SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

SOMETHING NEW

Wickless Garage Lantern

There can be no doubt that there are many times when an ordinary lantern is more useful around the car or garage than the electric trouble light that requires a wire connection trailing after it, or a flashlight, the battery of which may run out when a new one is not easily obtainable. The usual kerosene lantern, however, has a number of faults, among which are the necessity of trimming the wick frequently and the tendency to smoke and soot up the burner and chimney.

An improved form of lantern, known as the Acorn Uni-Lite is offered by the Acorn Brass Mfg. Co., 426 S. Clinton street, Chicago, Ill. The lantern burns either gasoline or kerosene, though gasoline is recommended because it is cleaner. A feature of the lantern is that it has no wick. It gives a light of 300 candlepower, which is about twenty times as much as is given by an ordinary lantern. The lantern lists at $9, and will burn fifteen hours on one filling of the quart fount. An automatic cleaning device makes it possible to clean the orifice in the gas tip should it choke or clog. A mica chimney is provided that cannot be easily broken, and the lantern is made of heavy metal, nickel plated. The light is not affected by wind and will burn upside down.

* * *

For the Garage Door

The great weight of modern garage doors has called for improved hinges, and a ball bearing hinge is now being offered by the Stanley Works, New Britain, Conn. These hinges are made of wrought steel, and ball bearing washers permit the door to swing smoothly and easily. The hinges are so constructed that the case-hardened tool steel bearings are protected from dust and moisture, making oiling unnecessary. Each bearing will support a crushing weight of 2,000 pounds.

The hinges are made in two styles and three sizes. No. 1457 with a one-inch offset is furnished in 10 and 24-inch lengths. No. 1458 is 36 inches long with 1 1-16 inch offset, designed for use on wooden doors. No. 1459 is 36 inches long and has 2 1/4 inch offset for use on brick and concrete garages. They are furnished in plain steel without screws, and brass and antique copper plated.

* * *

Electrically Wound Clocks

Of all clocks, probably the automobile clock is the most likely to be forgotten when it comes to winding and setting, for such clocks are not so constantly under the owner's eyes as the house or office clock. Electricity is used for winding the new Hartford seven-jeweled self-winding clock, placed on the market by the Hartford Clock Co., Hartford, Conn. These clocks are offered after a series of tests, which are said to have covered a period of nearly four years. There is no metallic connection between the clock movement and the case, as an inside case of rubber completely surrounds the movement.

The power is supplied through the medium of a long and very flexible coil spring, which is adjusted to give the balance wheel the proper beat, and being rewound electrically each minute, causes a constant spring tension, thereby effecting an accurate running with minimum wear.

The clock lists at $10, and is furnished in either flush face or extended models. The setting device is reached by removing the bezel, thereby preventing any one from tampering with it. An electric current of anywhere from 2 to 50 volts will run the clock satisfactorily.

LARKINS & COMPANY

CARRIAGE AND AUTOMOBILE BODY BUILDERS

Established in 1865

1610-1612-1614 VAN NESS AVENUE

Between California and Sacramento Sts. Phone Prospect 30
Where their entire attention will be devoted to the prompt delivery of the best work that a modern plant, high-class mechanics and materials can produce.

TELEPHONE FRANKLIN 1836

FOR A

Touring Car, Limousine or Taxicab

The White Star Line

AUTO TOURING COMPANY

RATES: 7 Passenger Touring Cars $2.00 per Hour

7 Passenger Closed Cars $2.50 per Hour

Special Rates by week or month.

TAXICAB RATES FOR SHORT TRIPS

Day and Night Service

Our Taxi Service is Most Reasonable and Unexcelled. We use seven passenger closed cars as above for this service which bear no mark of identification signifying a rent car. The "Zone" rate applies to all Taxi service so when ordering a car ask the tariff first.

We Make a Specialty of Repairing Auto Lamps, Radiators and Fenders at Short Notice
PHONE MARKET 751

Bauer Lamp Reflectors
D & C Electric Sign Co., Inc.
528 GOUGH ST. SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Manufacturers of LAMPS, LANTERNS, REFLECTORS of all Description
METAL SPINNING

Tips to Automobilists

(CUT THIS OUT.)

The News Letter recommends the following garages, hotels and supply houses. Tourists will do well to cut this list out and keep it as a guide:

PALO ALTO.—LARKIN'S CAFE—just opened. The only strictly first-class cafe on the Wishbone Route devoted to the patronage of automobile owners and their families. Corner of University avenue and The Circle.

SAN JOSE.—LAMOLLE GRILL, 36-38 North First street. The best French dinner in California, 75 cents, or a la carte. Automobile parties given particular attention.

PALO ALTO.—PALO ALTO GARAGE, 443 Emmerson St., Tel., P. A. 433. Auto livery at all hours. Tires and sundries in stock. Gasoline, oil, repairing, lathework, vulcanizing. Open day and night.

Mitchell
MOTOR CARS

The Six of Sixteen

Osen McFarland Co.

Golden Gate Avenue

CLASS "A" GARAGE, INC.

Strictly Fire Proof Building

STORAGE SUPPLIES REPAIRS

BEST SERVICE ASSURED

735-751 POST STREET SAN FRANCISCO

TELEPHONE PROSPECT 2280

WHERE SERVICE MEANS SERVICE

M & H GARAGE

819-835 ELLIS ST. Between Polk and Van Ness Avenue

WHERE THE PRIVATE OWNER FEELS AT HOME

The Background of the War Zone

The Germans fear above all things the cool, dogged British perseverance, according to a Scandinavian man of letters, who has just been visiting Germany. Few people outside of Germany probably have doubted that just this perseverance is one of the chief assets of the allies.

Belated word comes from Berlin by way of Switzerland and London that a peace demonstration, in which 10,000 men and women took part occurred on the occasion of the opening of the Reichstag on November 30th. It is said that the demonstration was not organized by socialists and that some soldiers took part in it. The affair may have had something to do in guiding the chancellor's opening speech. Anyway, the development is highly interesting.

According to Baron Ishii, Minister of Foreign Affairs, "Japan has furnished and will furnish an ample supply of arms and munitions to Russia. Two Japanese arsenals are working incessantly, producing immense quantities. Russia has no need of men, since only a third of the men mobilized are under arms. By the end of December, Japan will have done much to arm the other two-thirds. Hitherto we have not considered the eventuality of sending an army to Europe, but, if it appeared desirable, Japan could immediately despatch a very strong force, as she would not run the risk of a defeat."

According to the American Economic Association, which met in connection with the Pan-American Congress, the money cost of the war to July 31st, this year, exclusive of the capitalized value of human life, was estimated at $37,696,774,000. By January 1st the aggregate value would be $55,000,000,000, and should the war continue, at the end of the second year, next August, it would reach $80,000,000,000. Of course, much of this treasure was accumulated in the several war chests of the nations engaged, and most of it has now been returned to the regular channels of trade, a great amount of it coming to America. There is no loss in money; the loss from an economic view is the fact that it was not invested in substantial developments in the several countries engaged. In some instances it has been so invested, but a large part of it has been shot into the air instead of into permanent improvements. The money spent in munitions bought in this country is now being distributed to labor here and in dividends to stockholders.

Congress was asked by Secretary Garrison at Washington Friday to appropriate as soon as possible $42,013, to enlarge the West Point military academy for accommodation of 140 additional cadets, and $15,000 to meet certain special expenses of the army.

Mayerle's New Double Vision Glasses

Combine both reading and distance corrections in one lens—avoiding the annoyance of changing glasses when you wish to see far or near.

Mayerle's glasses relieve eye strain, freshen your memory and strengthen your eyes.

Two gold medals and diploma of honor awarded at California Industrial Exposition. George Mayerle, graduate optometrist and optician, established 20 years, 960 Market street, San Francisco. Mayerle eyewater freshens and strengthens the eyes, at druggists' 50c.; by mail 65c.

STYLE AND FIT

Are a man's first consideration when he is about to buy a suit. Price is the next. We have studied both very closely and we are prepared to make a first-class stylish suit to order at cash prices, on installments, weekly or monthly.

C. H. NEUHAUS, Merchant Tailor
787 MARKET STREET, Upstairs

MISS HARKER'S SCHOOL

PALO ALTO, CALIFORNIA

Boarding and Day School for Girls,
College Preparatory,
Grammar and Primary Departments.
Special Care Given to Younger Children.

Spring Term Opens January 3, 1916

HITCHCOCK MILITARY ACADEMY

THIRTY-EIGHTH YEAR

Located one mile from San Rafael in the healthiest part of beautiful Marin County. School fully accredited. Highest rank accorded by U. S. War Dept. High morals and strict attention demanded. Special attention to Physical Culture and Athletics. Expert and experienced instructors. Separate room for each pupil. Juniors in separate building. Thirty-eighth year begins in August. Write for catalog.

ADDRESS

President Hitchcock Military Academy
SAN RAFAEL, CALIFORNIA

The Beringer Conservatory of Music

926 Pierce Street, near McAllister
PHONE FILLMORE 840 SAN FRANCISCO

Directors: Joseph Beringer (Concert Pianist)
Mme. Jos. Beringer (Concert Contralto)

Thorough education in Pianoforte Playing and Singing. Special departments for beginners, amateurs and professionals. Pupils prepared for the operatic and concert stage. Opportunities given to advanced piano and vocal students to join the well known Beringer Musical Club for public appearances.

ARRILLAGA MUSICAL COLLEGE

SAN FRANCISCO

MUSIC IN ALL ITS BRANCHES

Sight Reading, Ear Training, Theory,

Musical Form, Appreciation

TERMS ON REQUEST—CATALOG

2315 JACKSON STREET PHONE WEST 4737

MISS HAMLIN'S SCHOOL FOR GIRLS

2230 PACIFIC AVENUE
2117 } BROADWAY SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
2123 }

Boarding and Day Pupils. "Accredited" by all accrediting institutions, both in California and in Eastern States.

TELEPHONE WEST 546

California Conservatory of Music

Offers Instructions and Training in All Branches of
MUSIC, ELOCUTION, DRAMATIC ART, DANCING
Private Lessons in All Branches to Suit the Convenience of the Pupil

Studios and Recital Hall

1509 Gough Street, near Sutter San Francisco, Cal.

Oakland Branch—Pacific Building—16th and Jefferson Streets

A. W. BEST

ALICE BEST

BEST'S ART SCHOOL

1625 CALIFORNIA STREET

Life Classes
Day and Night

Illustrating Sketching
Painting

INSURANCE

An award made by the Industrial Accident Commission of California is subject to review and annulment in the Supreme Court, where the finding on any jurisdictional fact is without the support of substantial evidence, and this notwithstanding the provision of the Act that the findings of the Commission on questions of fact shall be conclusive and final. An award cannot stand if a finding of a jurisdictional fact is without any support except that of hearsay testimony. It is held in a proceeding before the Supreme Court instituted to review an award allowing compensation to a wife for the death of her husband, that there was no legal proof that the injury resulting in death was accidental, as the only proof was that found in the hearsay statements and explanations of the deceased to various persons.

* * *

From present indications, the reorganization of the Pacific Automobile Conference will be effected and in practical operation early in January. All the board fire offices writing this class of business and some of the non-board have signified their approval of the new constitution and rules submitted by the committee appointed for that purpose, and the committee has been discharged. Casualty companies issuing auto coverings are now laboring among themselves to bring each other into line, and everything looks promising for a strong and enduring association.

* * *

On January 20th, Warren Hilleary, superintendent at San Francisco of the Royal Indemnity's Pacific department of accident prevention, will go to the New York office as a supervisor of the accident branch of the company's business. He was with the Pacific Coast department of the Frankfort before connecting himself with the Royal Indemnity two years ago.

* * *

The Western States Life wrote $6,336,538 during the first eleven months of the present year, a gain of $1,734,000 over the same period last year.

* * *

President H. R. Hunter, of the Life Underwriters' Association of San Francisco is being urged to be a candidate for reelection at the annual meeting next month.

* * *

W. A. Wood, agency director of the West Coast-San Francisco Life at Los Angeles, resigns on January 1st to go with the Occidental Life in a similar capacity.

* * *

Commissioner Phelps has warned California members of the Knights of Honor of St. Louis not to accept certificates of reinsurance from other assessment concerns claiming to have taken over the business of the Knights of Honor and not licensed by the California Department.

* * *

The Western States Life has engaged R. N. Griswold as actuary to succeed F. S. Withington, whose contract expires on January 1st. Mr. Griswold comes from the staff of Consulting Actuary Haight of Indianapolis, and previously was connected with the actuarial department of the Connecticut Mutual. A successor to Mr. Withington as secretary of the Western States will be elected at the January meeting of the company's directors.

* * *

The F. A. Gesell Company of Los Angeles has been appointed State agent of the Amicable Life of Waco, Texas.

* * *

Secretary Mark T. McKee of the National Council Insurance Federation Executives is billed to visit California on January 20th.

—“Well, Tom, what d'ye think o' this prohibition business?” “We ought to do like France and Russia.” “You're giving it all up, then?” “No; France is giving up absent and Russia's giving up vodka. So I'm not going to touch absent or vodka till peace comes. Give me beer.”—Exchange.

BRUSHES

623 Sacramento Street, between Kearny and Montgomery Streets.
With full line of brushes, Brooms and Feather Dusters, on hand and made to order. Janitor supplies of all kinds. Ladders, Buckets, Chamols. Metal Polish and Cleaning Powders. Hardware, Wood and Willow Ware.

Call, write or telephone Keary 5787

WM. BUCHANAN

Tel. Kearny 1461 Private Exchange Connecting all Warehouses

SAN FRANCISCO WAREHOUSE CO.

Warehousemen Forwarding Agents Distributors Public Welghers
Spur Track Connection with all Railroads

Main Office—625-647 Third St., San Francisco, Cal.

DIVIDEND NOTICE.

The German Savings and Loan Society
(The German Bank)

Member of the Associated Savings Banks of San Francisco
For the half year ending December 31, 1915, a dividend has been declared at the rate of four (4) per cent per annum on all deposits, payable on and after Monday, January 3, 1916. Dividends not called for are added to the deposit account and earn dividends from January 1, 1916.

GEORGE TOURNAY, Manager.

Office—526 California street. Mission Branch—Corner Mission and 21st streets. Richmond District Branch—Corner Clement street and 7th avenue. Haight Street Branch—Corner Haight and Belvedere streets.

DIVIDEND NOTICE.

Humboldt Savings Bank.

Member of the Associated Savings Banks of San Francisco
For the half year ending December 31, 1915, a dividend has been declared at the rate of four (4) per cent per annum on all savings deposits, payable on and after Monday, January 3, 1916. Dividends not called for are added to and bear the same rate of interest as the principal from January 1, 1916.

H. C. KLEVESAILL, Cashier.

Office—783 Market street, near Fourth.

DIVIDEND NOTICE.

Bank of Italy.

Member of the Associated Savings Banks of San Francisco
For the half year ending December 31, 1915, a dividend has been declared at the rate of four (4) per cent per annum on all savings deposits, payable on and after Monday, January 3, 1916. Dividends not called for are added to and bear the same rate of interest as the principal from January 1, 1916. Money deposited on or before January 10, 1916, will earn interest from January 1, 1916.

A. P. GIANNINI, President. A. PEDRINI, Cashier.
Office—Southeast corner Montgomery and Clay Sts. Market St. Branch—Junction Market, Turk and Mason streets.

DIVIDEND NOTICE.

The Hibernia Savings and Loan Society.

Member of the Associated Savings Banks of San Francisco.
For the half year ending December 31, 1915, a dividend has been declared at the rate of four (4) per cent per annum on all deposits, payable on and after Monday, January 3, 1916. Dividends not drawn will be added to depositors' accounts, become a part thereof, and will earn dividend from January 1, 1916. Deposits made on or before January 10, 1916 will draw interest from January 1, 1916.

R. M. TOBIN, Secretary.

Office—Corner Market, McAllister and Jones streets.

The Angel

—departs 4:00 p. m. daily

Safety and Comfort

You get both on this excellent train of the Santa Fe to

Los Angeles and San Diego

The Angel furnishes the only through sleeper service to the San Diego Exposition—makes good connections with trains to Tia Juana Race Track.

Santa Fe City Offices

673 Market Street, San Francisco—Phone Kearny 315
Market Street Ferry—Phone Kearny 4980
1218 Broadway, Oakland—Phone Lakeside 425

SAN FRANCISCO
NEWS LETTER
 California Advertiser

Devoted to the Leading Interests of California and the Pacific Coast.

Vol. XCI

San Francisco, Cal., Saturday, January 15, 1916

No. 3

The SAN FRANCISCO NEWS LETTER AND CALIFORNIA ADVERTISER is printed and published every Saturday by the Proprietor, Frederick Marrott, 21 Sutter street, San Francisco, Cal. Tel. Kearny 3594. Entered at San Francisco, Cal., Post-office as second-class mail matter. Chicago Office—Geo. Hilsche, 1310 Westminster, Westminster Building, Chicago.

London Office—George Street & Co., 30 Cornhill, E. C., England. Matter intended for publication in the current number of the SAN FRANCISCO NEWS LETTER AND CALIFORNIA ADVERTISER should be sent to the office not later than 5 p. m. Wednesday.

Subscription Rates (Including postage)—1 year, $4.00; 6 months, $2.25; Foreign—1 year, $6.00; 6 months, $3.25.

—This session of Congress threatens to make a record for gab.

—The British laborers place their unions above their country.

—We have six new supervisors. New broom sweeps clean. Try it on the streets.

—California has two hundred and thirty-nine millionaires. But what a lot of the rest of us there are!

—Chancellor Day says Roosevelt has made a booby out of Wilson. Nature did the trick for the Chancellor.

—One delegate after another quits the Ford party on the plea of illness. "This makes me sick" seems to be their plaint.

—There is an uncanny regularity and persistency in the way bullet and knife keep striking the enemies of Yuan Shih Kai.

—Within a week after Seattle went dry a water supply pipe burst and caused a temporary water famine. It is hard to be sorry.

—President Wilson's success in settling delicate diplomatic affairs with Germany and Austria takes another prop away from Bryan.

—It is proper to call it the Johnson primary law, considering that it was passed for the sole purpose of aiding Johnson in his senatorial aspirations.

—William Waldorf Astor is now Baron Astor of Hever Castle. Well, if he likes that better than being an American, America is glad to lose him.

—The chicken trust has been declared not bankrupt. But many a man has gone bankrupt by reposing too much faith in the blandishments of a chicken.

—It has been suggested that the navy yard be removed from Mare Island to Goat Island. And Vallejo is shouting: "Quit it—we won't be the goat!"

—"Germans sure they will be victors in the war," "France sure of triumph," are conflicting headlines in a newspaper. The French and Germans will get consolation out of the predictions, and the neutrals, having long ago ceased to speculate on the outcome, will look on them both as boasting that has no foundation.

—The interior States are fighting preparedness as they have fought an adequate merchant marine—with stubbornness, but with neither sense nor logic.

—The steel workers at Youngstown, Ohio, who looted a saloon, got howling drunk, tried to burn up the town and were shot, will be hailed by labor as martyrs.

—Robert Herrick, the novelist, who has won fame by writing novels dealing with marriage and divorce, has been sued for divorce. He who lives by the sword" . . .

—An Eastern sculptor says that Bryan's mouth "is beautiful in repose." Before he can get anybody to believe that he will have to prove that it was ever seen in repose.

—Bargain sales of clothing have been prohibited by the authorities in Berlin, for fear of causing a shortage in textiles. German women are now really awake to the realities of war.

—Fresno man in resisting burglars who were robbing his store was shot through the big toe. He'll toe the mark hereafter when bandits tell him to let them go quietly on with their work.

—The steel trust has raised the wages of its employees ten per cent. But the agitators will continue to complain that the corporation does not turn its whole plant and the profits thereof over to the workers.

—The plasterers on the city library have consented to go back to work. The public has grown so well trained that it does not grumble at union tyranny, but rather gives thanks when the tyranny abates a trifle.

—San Quentin has 2,417 inmates, making it the second largest prison in the country. Which shows how easy it is to attract guests if you give them plenty of amusement and entertainment, supplemented by sumptuous holiday dinners.

—The Board of Health assures the public that the dark-colored water that is coming through the faucets lately is not unhealthful. Well, it may be all right to take a chance up in Oregon or Washington, where there's no substitute—but here there are other moist beverages.

—San Francisco high school boys pushed a fellow student over a twenty-foot embankment in hazing him, and broke both his legs. The school principal referred to the episode as a boyish prank. It would be interesting to hear his opinion as to how far one can go before being guilty of criminal violence.

—Four prominent St. Louis men, believing that they were being let into a plan to make fortunes by cheating at faro, were fleeced out of $175,000. The men who fleeced them have been arrested, and are looked on as crooks. It is an unfortunate thing that the law cannot provide prison punishment for all parties to such a swindle—the looted as well as the looters.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

SORRY FLIGHT OF THE REPUBLICAN PARTY.

The national Republican leaders are reported to be gathering at Washington for the purpose of making a great chivaree this spring—they propose a rampage with the "big noise" all along the line to stiffen up the courage of their followers and show the opposition that Victory with a big V is breaking her bonds to reach them. So far their antics resemble the practice of the ancient Chinese army, when with piercing yells and the violent beating of tom-toms and wind-bladders, they endeavored to frighten off the enemy with sheer noise. Taft, Senator Borah, Roosevelt and Root are regarded at this date as likely to furnish the candidate. Root, however, sticks fast to his declaration that he is not and will not be a candidate.

Fairbanks has been nominated by Indiana as its candidate for the office, but Fairbanks is justly regarded as Indiana's joke, for advertising purposes. Boies Penrose and other senators and congressmen of the same breed, who own pocket boroughs, are active, bestirring the political pots in their bailiwicks to develop more intensive results. Their skins sweat blood with the fear that they may not be able to dig up a candidate strong enough to beat Wilson. Their best man is Root, and he won't run, and the more the leaders rake over the possible candidates the more and more it develops that the Republican party has run to seed. The leading sample candidates suggested so far are "has beens," leaders of the party that have been ingloriously defeated, and for the biting reason "cause." They have never shown even faint signs of a "come back."

Leaders of the party at Washington insist that Root must run. Every effort is being made to tempt the wandering Progressives back to the fold. Hallelujahs and a festive spread and enthusiastic welcome await all these wanderers and prodigals who lit out during passing personal brain storms and Circe calls. Just now Roosevelt seems to be sitting on the velvet as the most likely candidate to head the party, which is a jolly ideal situation for a man of Teddy's temperament, who exudes great gobs of joy when he is the center of the limelight with an interrogation point hanging over his blooming head. He would make a dash like a charging bull if given half a chance at the prize. Nomination or no nomination, it is patent to all his friends that he will work tirelessly and vehemently for the defeat of the Wilson administration.

Meanwhile, the Democrats are straightening out and fortifying their party lines with strong Wilson policies and the best legislation to be had on the vital questions of this extraordinarily critical period, a brand of legislation which will make clear to all thinking voters that this is no time to swap horses while crossing an unusually dangerous stream.

BY WIRELESS FROM THE PEACE-SHIP.

—Bartholomew in the Minneapolis Daily News.

BRIGHTENING BUSINESS PROSPECTS FOR U. S. A.

The prospects of greater business for the first four months of 1916 are much brighter than for the same period of 1915, according to a recent report of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. More optimism is in the air than has prevailed in over a decade, and the general belief and expectation is for such prosperity for 1916 as will recompense the people of this country for all their past misfortunes. There are, of course, localities where caution and conservatism still remain, but they are scattered, and it is foregone that they will improve with the revival of trade that is now sweeping over the country. By and large the business men are taking less interest in the war and centering their activities in promoting their growing business. This is accounted for by the fact that the influence of the war at present is on the whole more favorable to this country than the reverse. Naturally, it is felt that with the close of the war the demand for munitions and general food products will slump sharply, but many commercial experts offset this shift with the promise that Europe will be obliged to substitute new orders on a large scale for machinery, tools, farming implements, structural material and like things to replace those destroyed by the war. Certainly Europe must buy these somewhere in order to catch up quickly in the world's trade. It will also be an occasion for Europe to replace her manufacturing plants with the latest patterns which America has devised. Europe will require every man within her borders for reconstruction purposes and routine work, and it is expected that very little immigration, if any, will come to this country. Meanwhile, the American manufacturers and producers have tackled the problem of manufacturing dyes and drugs and other commodities which this country formerly depended on buying abroad. Many of these former imports are now being handily manufactured in this country, and the American manufacturers are confident that they can hold the trade against the renewal of competition of Germany, England and France. Merchandise stocks in the hands of the retailers of the country are reported to vary from light to normal. Orders for future shipment in the spring are being more generally placed than for some years back, thus showing steadfast confidence in the future. It is this lively business in the East which is promoting demand through which California is selling her many products.

On this point President Sproule of the Southern Pacific Company, who has just returned from a business trip in the East, says that after the war the indications are that we will find ourselves in a strengthened condition commercially and financially with respect to the rest of the world, but optimism along this line must be reasonable.

THE NEW COURSE OF EMPIRE IN THE WORLD. For some years past there have been manifestations that the big nations of the world are seeking wider and closer knit alliances. Germany's diplomatic manœuvres along this line have aimed at territorial extensions, backed by war, if necessary. The United States and Great Britain have acted along more permanent lines of guaranteeing peace and the development of commerce and a broader understanding of the democratic principles of government. Japan, whose ideal of government is Germany and the iron fist, as an ally of Great Britain for the time being, has steered a middle course, and has taken what she could without rousing direct action on the part of the world's powers.

Just now these new governmental activities of the big powers of the world is being best exemplified in the present movements in England, Germany and the United States. By bringing about the present European war, Germany unwittingly is developing that object which she energetically and vehemently sought to destroy, the dismemberment of the British Empire. Evidence is apparent in all Great Britain's colonies and dependencies that the attempt to destroy England's rule of the seas has deeply impressed the peoples of her many possessions, with the conclusion that unless they stand loyally and steadfastly at her side in such attacks, the national life of each and all of them is not worth a picayune, and if the cause of England is lost, their lands will revert to the exploitation of the victor. Great Britain is having practical displays of this feeling in volunteers to the Empire's colors from Canada, Australia, India, South Africa, Egypt and other dependencies and colonies. Parliament has marshalled recruits from such sources before, but in the present crisis, with a new patriotic conception that they are no longer an appendage of the British empire, they are of the new empire, and as citizens of that empire they are on the same footing as the citizens of old London town.

Foreshadowings of this change have been apparent in political quarters for several years past in the demands of Australian, Canadian and other influential colonies to have a representation in the British Parliament on the ground that as they contribute to the maintenance of the powerful fleet of the empire, they should have the privilege of a voice in the way the funds should be distributed. General Botha's recent victories in South Africa in suppressing the rebellion of one wing of the Boers instigated by German influences, and his wise pacification of the old breach between the English and the Boers, have made a deep impression on England and on the other colonies. His masterful and broad-minded political views of a closer knit empire where all are British citizens, no matter on what soil covered by the British flag they hale from, is an expression of the new movement. It has been noticeable of late that Parliament is also looking into the future with a larger conception of a British empire by the appointments of native officials abroad to high office, thereby constructively giving them a voice in the government. Very recently this was illustrated by the appointment of Sir Sankaran Nair to the executive council of the Viceroy of India as the representative of education. This movement of the several nations of the empire for a greater unity means a solidarity on stronger and more permanent lines than those established by Rome, an idea that could find expression only in the modern humanitarian and political conceptions of government, a parliament of nations. England has been a pioneer in opening the way for larger civic liberties, as in the Magna Charta, and most of the modern governments have patterned their procedures along her fundamental lines with more or less modifications.

In the Americas this movement is reflected in the present organization of the Pan-American Congress on commercial and united defense lines. In Germany it has expressed itself in the aspiration of the Kaiser to conquer an empire reaching from the Baltic to the Mediterranean, and thence to the borders of India, a domain greater than that ruled by imperial Rome. If successful, he would become the greatest military power on earth, and the arbiter of Asia and Europe.

BUSINESS TO ASSERT ECONOMIC PRESSURE TO PREVENT WAR. Some time ago forty-four nations of the world endorsed a proposition at the Hague for the establishment of an international court. Congress and the President desired to get at the real judgment of the businessmen of this country regarding that decision, and the Chamber of Commerce of the United States was asked to take a referendum of the opinion prevailing among the business men of the country. Two hundred and eighty-two commercial organizations, chambers of commerce and boards of trade located in this country and its non-contiguous possessions and American chambers of commerce abroad gave a slightly dissenting vote.

There was also a large majority in favor of the special committee's recommendation that, for consideration of questions which arise between nations and which do not depend upon established rules or upon facts which can be determined by an international court, the United States should take the initiative in joining with nations in establishing a council of conciliation. Two propositions were recommended for enforcing peace. The first, that of bringing economic pressure to bear on any nations which resort to military measures without submitting their differences to the international court, was carried by a two-thirds vote which binds the national chamber of commerce. A large dissenting vote marked the recommendation that in the event that concerted economic pressure should not be sufficient to bring the recalcitrant nations to terms, military force should be used. This vote was slightly over the two-thirds margin required to bind the chamber, but the margin was so small that recount may change the result. The treatment of shipping in the course of the present war went, as might have been expected, in favor of stronger and better defined rules for the protection of life and property upon the seas. There was also practical unanimity in favor of this country taking the initiative in establishing the principle of frequent international conferences for the progressive amendment of international law.

PREPAREDNESS COMPULSORY.

The concerted movement being made against preparedness for defending the U. S. A. on the part of the peace propagandists led by Bryan and other dreaming theorists, is hardly making a scratch in the advance so thoroughly begun. From all over the country reports are to the effect that enthusiastic organizations of citizens are coming into life, many of them composed of women, for the sole purpose of stimulating and maintaining the movement. A large body of this character was organized in San Francisco, this week. California and the Pacific States are manifestly and deeply committed to this movement, because of their practically isolated situation with the other sections of the United States. In a measure, these thirteen Western States are almost in the same position as was the original thirteen States of the Union. All military experts agree that, under our present plans of defense and preparedness, the Pacific States offer an easy mark for military rivals on the Pacific to indemnities running into the billions of dollars on threats of a powerful navy to destroy the shore cities. With the present inadequate transcontinental service for moving troops, no assistance of men in proper numbers could be transported here in time to afford relief against the mobile fleet of the enemy.

TOWN CRIER

—The diplomatic complexities of the war in Europe is not a marker to the situation rapidly developing in the municipal family of Mayor Rolph. The advent this week of the six new successors on the board of supervisors, with their individual political aspirations and hopes, furnishes a situation comparable only with the story of what occurred when the golden apple was tossed among the gods feasting on Mt. Olympus. Some rather juicy and profitable apples enter into the present case. On the heels of the advent of these new supervisors blithely came former Mayor Eugene Schmitz, who demanded under the law the privilege of sitting with the board and joining in its councils, but with no vote. Schmitz knows all the devious intricacies of the municipal machinery from A to izzard, and he is understood to be carded to shed light on anything any everything the Mayor may overlook or the supervisors forget. In the political history of the city there has never assembled such a cat, dog and angel child combination to pull a happy-go-lucky, devil take the hindmost community into a sizzling place in the sun or guaranteed hell-fire. The daily papers, if they dare print the real news of developments, sub rosa and altruistic tralala chiroscura, as the case may be, will be rarely interesting reading. There'll be a hot time in the old town from now on.

—San Rafael is evidently the luckiest candlelight of a little burg in Northern California to attract aristocratic European titles to this neck of the woods, and we in San Francisco plume ourselves that we are planted so near the X-ray social effects of these plush-covered worthies. An heir to the Fairfax title in England left his historical name on a strip of land at Fairfax, from which domain Ty Cobb could slug a baseball into the purlius of the blooming, beautiful countryside of San Rafael. Earl Fairfax's life there is semi-historical. So is the jolly roadside inn on the same land. Baron von Schroeder made San Rafael historical, haut du monde, as the winter guests rubber-stamped, who paid half rates at the famous hotel, rubber-stamped the situation. At any rate, this is sufficient to indicate that San Rafael, the blase in this particular line, has bumped the bumps in bona fide aristocratic social display, and is entitled to a bronze plaque in that regard if any are forthcoming from the post-Exposition. Now comes Earl Cowan from Wilshire, England, and contributes his presence to the glowing effulgence of the town. Alas, that San Francisco, Oakland and Richmond cannot snuggle closer to the social glories of debonnaire San Rafael, but the waters of the bay chilly prevent. But if the "movie" barons ship all their paraphernalia and society actresses from Los Angeles to San Francisco and settle down to do business here, we'll show San Rafael a trick or two in this aristocratic social game, and it won't be passed by the censor either.

—Zanis come and zanis go despite the constant and desperate efforts of the Southern Pacific Company to halt them and tassalate their nob. The ordinary statistician is not acquainted with the breed of bovine that tries to break his way into the fatality list, but stand near a railroad crossing any day, and you will catch him in his attempted flight into eternity. According to the records of the Southern Pacific Company, 525 vehicle drivers on the Pacific Coast did their best to break through railroad crossings in the two years ending June 30, 1915. During that same period 525 crossing gates were broken down by drivers who risked their lives in recklessness and over-speeding. Of course, these gates were put down by automatic machines of the company because trains were approaching. Here is a tab made personally on the recklessness of some notable breeds of motormaniacs. Of the 17,021 cars specially observed, 11,836 drivers, 69 $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent, looked neither way in crossing the track; 2 7-10 looked one way only, and but 27.8 per cent looked in both directions. A hardened, careless 3,301, or 19.3 per cent of the total number, shot across the tracks at reckless speed. Out of the 17,021, only 35 drivers stopped their machines to see that no trains were approaching. When some men make their first reckless payment on a machine, they seem to think the limit is thereafter off in the going.

—Leap year, the feminist movement and suffrage started off briskly this week, when Miss Anna Dunly, a wet nurse with dry proclivities regarding bottled liquor, got a strangle hold on Charles J. Surgam, a married man of Oakland, and disappeared in the direction of semi-tropical Florida for the honeymoon. It will be an acutely tropical black molasses moon if the lawyer that Mrs. Surgam has wired to succeeds in netting the elopers into court. How a wet nurse with dry proclivities and alive with suffrage and feminism could do such a thing without asking the advice of Dr. Aked, Mr. Bryan, Harry Ford or other of the prolific peacemakers is too indelicate under the circumstances to inquire. However, this tropical flight indicates the style of elopement likely to prevail during the season of 1916, and furnishes men, single, married and mixed, the dominant mode in strangle hold attachments. Modifications of this style may be expected in Los Angeles where the chemically pure atmosphere promotes more of a consideration over the health of the green-lined pocket book, for the reason that feminism is more rampant there and jiu-jitsu more frequently takes the place of the strangle-hold in such affairs. Under the circumstances the future hope of California must lie in the hysterical hope that if California goes dry at the election this fall these eloping wet nurses, as represented by Miss Anna Dunly, will be merciful—as regards husbands.

—The recall of a judge or two on the local Superior bench would have a compelling effect in short-stopping the straw bond evil—for a time. Unless public vigilance was maintained the evil would insidiously crop up as usual. The straw bond profits are too profitable for its promoters to let lie fallow for any length of time. That has been its history since the early '50's, when the early Sydney coves introduced it from Australia. Of course, politics, as usual, is not at the base of the evil, and mixing with the boys has nothing to do with a "pull." It is an ignorant rogue that cannot grease the way to liberty with iron bolts in a canvas sack if he can dig up enough coin to pay the ready brokers a percentage on the amount of bail fixed by the court. So absurdly flagrant is this practice that a stranger from Mars visiting our police courts would jump to the conclusion that "straw bonds" and the disappearance of culprits was a regular part of our judicial system. Poor old "Taxpayer," he sputters and complains when the "straw bond" evil stinks to high heaven and demands an "investigation," which is perfunctorily made in most cases. And the grafters grin as he doddles back to his work while they start up the game again.

—Malignant Fate, the omnipotent Kaiser and sleeping powers cannot prevent the members of the Ford party in Europe from forcing peace on the neutral nations if they fail to shoot the serum into any of the belligerents. The irony of the situation developed in Germany, where the Kaiser ordered the party transported "in bond" across his territory to Holland, where they voiced their protests and principles with vigor and the usual newspaper publicity. The transportation of such a notorious peace body "in bonds," without giving the members an opportunity to stammer or stutter even the letter P. will likely prove the star jest in the history of the war.

Phineas Taylor Barnum

In connection with certain proceedings relating to the estate of Phineas Taylor Barnum, it has developed within the last few days that $1,000,000 is laid aside by the trustee to meet an annual payment of $40,000 to Baroness Nancy Barnum d'Alexandrey Oregiani, a resident of Paris, France. The baroness was formerly Mrs. P. T. Barnum of Bridgeport, Conn. Her first husband was one of the greatest money-makers and money-losers of two generations ago in the United States, and his record in this respect was maintained, so far as money-making went, up to comparatively recent years. After a great number of drafts have been made upon his fortune, to meet public bequests and private gifts, the residue of the Barnum estate today has a value exceeding $1,222,000. As a young man his career was checkered with ups and downs in the business world. Always restless, he was scarcely out of one thing before he was interested in another, and his tastes were as liberal as his talents were versatile. It was in a measure indicative of his future activities that he should start as a storekeeper, become an editor, be punished for libel and enter the show business before he was 25.

The United States and the world remember him, of course, as a showman, although he was many things besides, and as a showman he will always claim, and be granted, special distinction for having given utterance, boldly and unblushingly, and many are inclined to think bravely, to the conviction, gained from personal experience after long years of observation, that the American people like to be humbugged. This conviction was one on which he evidently acted from the time he purchased Joyce Heth, a slave woman, for $1,000, passing her off as a nurse of George Washington, to the time when he plastered the walls and signboards of the nation with alluring pictures of creatures that never had existence.

Joyce Heth was represented to be 161 years old; it was proved later that she could not be over 70. Of course, there was no deception in the case of Charles S. Stratton, otherwise "General Tom Thumb," or in the case of Minnie Warren, or Commodore Nutt. These were all genuine, and they helped wonderfully toward restoring Barnum to the good graces of those who had heaped favors upon George Washington's nurse. Nor was there any deception in Jenny Lind, "the Swedish Nightingale," nor in the fee of $100,000 he gave her for 100 appearances. Early in the fifties $1,000 a night for a singer, or for a public entertainer of any kind, seemed a preposterous sum; yet the receipts of Jenny Lind's tour are said to have reached $712,000. At this time Barnum's museum in New York was running in full blast, and the nation's leading showman was at the height of his earlier prosperity. But he "went on notes," and, in the panic of 1856-57, lost practically everything. He had become used to failures, however, and before the civil war period had well begun he was again getting rich, a trip to England with Jenny Lind as the attraction, having gone far toward restoring his fortunes.

His most conspicuous achievement in the circus line, after he took up with the arena, was, of course, the discovery and exhibition of "Jumbo." Long after Barnum ceased to be an active factor in circus and menagerie management his name was a certain drawing card for circus companies. He was the inventor of "the greatest show on earth" four-ring school of circus, and the organizer of the first mammoth circus business combination, that of Barnum, Bailey & Hutchinson.

The purchase of Jumbo, by Mr. Barnum, was the cause of at least a week's mild excitement in London. Curious people came under the spell of this sudden spasm of excitement, and Mr. Ruskin, of all people, indited an indignant letter to the Times, thundering against the selling of the biggest elephant in the Zoological Gardens to an American showman. The excitement and indignation was at its height when it was calmed by that inimitable entertainer, Mr. Corney Grain, who, seated by his piano on the platform of St. George's Hall, added nightly to the gaiety of the capital. Mr. Grain explained, to convulsed audiences, how on Sunday night he had gone to bed all unconscious of Jumbo's existence, and how on Monday morning as he read the Times at breakfast, he discovered that it was impossible for him to part with him. He thought at first, he said, of joining the ranks of the elderly ladies who were sending buns and flowers to the departing beast, and he told how at night, as he rocked himself tearfully to sleep, he heard in his dreams the voice of the elephant on the ocean calling plaintively for the steward. After that, London discovered it could part with Jumbo, and did so with dry eyes.

It has just been said that he was many things beside a showman. He was a devoted Universalist. He was a temperance lecturer. He was an uplift politician and served four terms in the Connecticut Legislature. He is said to have been one of the best mayors Bridgeport has ever had. He wrote books, a story called "Lion Jack," an autobiography and "Humbugs of the World." He was generous toward his relatives, friends and employees. He was good to the schools. In the end he gave "Jumbo" to Tufts College. A round-faced, good-natured, jolly, David Harum kind of Yankee, he was always on the best of terms with the world, and everybody—even those who went to his shows on the strength of his lithograph posters—liked him.

PHYSICAL CLAIMS VS. CHRISTIAN SCIENCE.

Editor News Letter.

Dear Sir—A contributor to the San Francisco News Letter recently deplored the tendency to undervalue the physical side of existence. He eulogizes a new book on athletics which teaches how one may, through physical culture, "bring the body to a state of perfection . . . ward off disease," etc. This book, he tells us, shows the "control of the body through the mind," but bears no relation to the "silly claim of Christian Science," etc.

If man were "first and foremost an animal," as the writer contends, then the South Sea Islander would be our highest specimen of physical manhood. Health is not a question of weight. When referring to our great authors or statesmen, one does not ask how much does he weigh, but what has he thought or achieved for the world. One of our writers has said: "The mind is the measure of the man." The text book of Christian Science, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, states on page 258 that "Man is more than a material form with a mind inside, which must escape from its environments in order to be immortal." Christian Science teaches that "Health is not a condition of matter, but of Mind." Page 120.

As to the contributor's unflattering epithet regarding Christian Scientists, probably the gentleman is ignorant of the fact that in our ranks are many men of the highest literary attainments, cultured scholars, authors, historians and other eminent professional men. A religion that has brought healing and comfort to thousands, as Christian Science has done, is entitled to the respectful consideration of all thinking people.

Yours sincerely

THOMAS F. WATSON,
Committee on Publication.

San Francisco, Cal., January 14, 1916.

—In the privacy of his home the village butcher was telling his wife of the arrival of a new summer resident. "She came in to-day," he said, with enthusiasm, "and I can tell you she's a real lady, brought up select and exclusive. She don't know one cut of meat from another, nor veal from mutton."—Christian Register.

R. B. Hayden

STRAIGHT
Bourbon

CHARLES MEINECKE & Co.

AGENTS PACIFIC COAST 314 SACRAMENTO ST., S. F.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES

BY OUTSIDER

"Outsiders see most of the game."—Old Saw

The Polo Prospects

Unless the San Mateo Polo Club takes some active steps to organize a No. 1 team, it looks as if they will pull a flivver this year. With a fair team they might be in a position to have a season later on, and have as opponents the Cooperstown players who are in the south, and possibly also the Coronado team. Tom Driscoll being out of the game for the time, owing to his recent operation, will weaken the side, but one might be made up with Walter Hobart as back, Bill Devereux No. 3, Cheever Cowdin No. 2, and Will Tevis No. 1. This, of course, would be contingent on the same old question of Devereux being able to procure mounts.

Although this would be the strongest available team that the peninsular club could put into the field, yet it would hardly satisfy some of the regulars like Harry Hastings, who would be considered for a place if Devereux were out of the way. These feel, not unnaturally, that although Devereux is admittedly a strong player and is always in condition, yet as he does not keep up any ponies and does not take part in the preliminary games, he should not come in at the last moment, and by borrowing mounts displace men who have worked hard through the practice games.

The point involved is whether the game is played primarily to win and as a spectacular attraction for sight-seers, or for the fun of the thing. Owing to having moved into the country near Los Gatos, Harry Hastings does not find it so convenient this year to take part in the preliminaries, and has shipped his stable to Del Monte.

The rain, of course, has sadly interfered with the play so far, but there have been some new recruits: Joe Eastland is trying to forget his matrimonial troubles by chasing the willow ball; Archibald Johnson, the Governor's son, has ponies up, as also Orrin Wilson. In the practice games may be seen Walter Hobart, Ray Splivalo, Will Tevis, Elliott McAllister, George Cameron and Frank Carolan, in addition to the new comers. Hobart, Devereux, Cowdin and Tevis are, with the exception of Harry Hastings, the only ones who could make a decent showing against the lads from the land of Cafeteria.

George Parsons is working hard putting the Del Monte field into shape, but of course, aside from the army team stationed there, the hotel management would have to rely on our local men for representatives.

* * *

New York, January 9.—Among the polo players who will take part in the Coronado Country Club's tournament, which starts early in February are: C. W. Simons of the St. Louis Country Club, A. M. Heckscher, C. Perry Bealdeston and Malcolm Stevenson.

* * *

Give Battling Levinsky a Chance

My friend Dan Morgan, mentioned in this column two or three weeks ago as having some points about his literary style—directness and punch—that might be well incorporated in President Wilson's form letters concerning the murder of American citizens (including women and babies) on the high seas—has written me another communication, which I subjoin, as much for the information contained as for the style. It would appear that Dan is press agenting for Battling Levinsky, and it will not be Dan's fault if he does not get that eminent literateur and physical culture expert, Jess Willard, into the ring. Personally, I am quite in accord with Dan in thinking that Willard is a "big stiff" and the poorest man to hold the Queensberry title since the days of Joe Goss, who was champion under London prize ring rules only. I will except the short technical supremacy of Marvin Hart, who, however, did not win it but had it wished on him by Jim Jeffries.

I hope Dan will write me some more soon, and if he does I shall surely print it, which is more than most press agents can boast of.

Jess Willard Champion. Sounds Funny

Willard and his managers are asking for 35,000 to box Fulton & Moran, two 100 dollar fighters, while big Jess himself will not draw much more than Moran or Fulton. If he had ever done anything except whip Porpoise Jack Johnson, the public would not laugh at his demands for big money. Willard and Moran refused time and again to box Battling Levinsky, and even before Jess was called champion he could not be coaxed into a ring with Levinsky.

The battler don't think much of Moran or Fulton, he feels that he could stop either one in 10 rounds, but Willard who is a bigger man physically, might be able to last the limit of 10 rounds with Levinsky, who will show big Jess that as a champion, he is a good swimmer.

DAN MORGAN.

* * *

Can McLoughlin Come Back?

The question of who will be our lawn tennis champion this year is now being discussed in Eastern circles, and this summing-up of McLoughlin's chances by Grantland Rice is fair and reasonably sound; although overlooking the point I made some time ago, that Mac depended too much on speed, which he is bound to lose, and also he has become a regular fellow and not a mere machine:

What has 1916 in view for Maurice McLoughlin? Just a year and a half ago this California Brilliant in the Land of Lawn Tennis had reached the highest height ever known by an American player.

Just a year and a half ago he had within less than a week overpowered Norman Brookes and the late Anthony Wilding, two of the supermen of the game.

This was a feat unparagoned in lawn tennis play. That was only a year and a half ago, and yet McLoughlin, still a young man, is rated by most of the leading experts with only an outside chance to bag another championship.

McLoughlin's slump stands as one of the queerest athletic turns on record. Since beating Brookes and Wilding in 1914—where he reached the top—his game has never been the same.

That same season he was beaten by Norris Williams, but to many this defeat was merely "one of those things." It was something more. That defeat was prophetic of the shadow gathering above McLoughlin's game; still a fine game, but not the smashing game of old.

Nineteen hundred and fifteen proved well enough that Mac had lost something from his best days. According to George M. Church, part of this slump was due to McLoughlin's service. "Mac," says Church, "hits the ball on the left corner in place of the right corner. This shift puts an overwhelming strain upon his stomach muscles, as it isn't a normal method. It was the most effective service I have ever seen, when at its best, but it was quite evident that such a service could only last so long. The last blow came when Mac met Brookes and Wilding. The cannonball stuff has never been in evidence since."

There is a general feeling among leading tennis players that McLoughlin will not reach the height again. Perhaps they are right. They all say that young William Johnston is the best lawn tennis player America has ever produced. They figure that he should be the logical favorite for the next title campaign. But there is a general feeling among those not so closely adjacent to the expert dope that McLoughlin isn't yet through. They still believe he can make one more return trip. They believe he will be a good bit better in 1916 than he was last year. Here's hoping they are right. For McLoughlin has done more for lawn tennis in America, in the way of popularizing a great sport, than any other single entry.

* * *

Nick Gianakopoulos won the cross-country race at Van Cortlandt Park, New York, last week, beating Hannes Kolehmainen, who was second, by forty yards. This is Hannes's first defeat this year. But shades of St. Patrick, are there no Irish coppers left in the world that two such names as those mentioned should appear one, two, in any athletic feat.

Phone Kearny 2842

Cosgrove's Hair Store

Established 20 Years

239 Powell Street
San Francisco

PLEASURE'S WAND

"Obey no wand but Pleasure's."—Tom Moore.

Evelyn Nesbit and Jack Clifford in their original songs and dances next week at the Orpheum.

High-Class Acts at Pantages.

About as pretty and clever an act as one cares to see is "Colonial Days," which through sheer merit should have the headline honors this week. There is a charm and daintiness about it which is captivating. Of the ten people in the act, the three vocalists are undoubtedly the cleverest. Their brief operatic trio is pure delight. All have unusually fine voices, and they blend perfectly. If nothing else, this number alone would make a visit to this popular house worth while—but the program, individually and collectively, is high class. Lasky's Hoboes are paying a return visit, and their antics are most amusing. It is an act out of the ordinary, and the people are all capable. S. H. Dudley, the minstrel man, has for his chief support a comical looking mule, who fits in nicely and aids materially in the fun making. Dudley's comedy is refreshing. Richard Bolke again presents his mystery, "Creo," wherein he mysteriously produces a woman from some secret source which baffles everybody. It's a clever stunt, and is diverting and entertaining. Anita Heymans is heard in several songs to advantage. She has a big dramatic soprano. Her opening song, Tosti's "Good-bye," she renders in a highly efficient manner. Her voice possesses fullness and power, and this is combined with a pleasing personality. Les Arados are two acrobats who have a novelty act which is very clever. They do many feats which I have never witnessed before. Pathe's thrilling moving picture serial is in its fourth installment, and has everybody on the qui vive. "The Red Circle" is about the last word in moving picture thrills. Don't miss Pantages this week, as the whole bill is calculated to stimulate interest in your vaudeville and make regular visitors at this theatre.

PAUL GERSON.

Another Big Success for Symphony Orchestra.

Alfred Hertz, the versatile and successful director of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, dissipated all doubts regarding his position in selecting the numbers of a program this week, by giving a liberally variable selection, international in composition and ideals as compared with the pure classicism of his first offering. He showed his catholicity in music and for music with selections from French, German, Australian and Russian masters. From these compositions, Conductor Hertz, as during the first concert, drew a new conception and breadth of interpretation through his extraordinary facility in handling his orchestra. Again he showed that rare gift inherent in truly great orchestra leaders in compellingly drawing by some mysterious power from the men at the instruments the exquisite harmonious tones and expressions he sought in order to portray

This Little HUMAN DOCUMENT tells the story of

Carl Borden
EAGLE BRAND
CONDENSED MILK

Its uniformity enables the mother to determine with accuracy the proper modification desired. Its absolute purity assures her that the baby is getting a thoroughly safe and wholesome food. It keeps well and is easily prepared.

Many mothers cannot nurse their little ones. When this condition arises the problem is to get the substitute that is best suited to the baby's individual requirements.

Eagle Brand has been successfully used as an infant food for half a century, and the thousands of recorded cases of children who have been carried through the critical period on Eagle Brand have established it as the leading product of its kind.

Borden's Condensed Milk Co.
"Leaders of Quality"
Est. 1857
New York

Borden's Condensed Milk Co. 11-1-16
15 Hudson St., New York

Please send me Baby's Welfare as well as Baby's Progress as well as Borden's

Name: _____

Address: _____

the composition according to his own refined conception. That he was successful was shown in the impulsive and heartfelt plaudits that welcomed his program. Durka's "Peri," originally written by a Frenchman for a ballet which starred with a Russian dancer, simply floated in melody, a delicate theme magically handled in its harmonies. "Leonore," Beethoven's third overture, has frequently been heard here, but was revealed this time in new lights and shades distinctly elevating to lovers of pure music. Granger's selections of British folk songs were played at rapid speed, and this idea of Conductor Hertz was repaid with a new and happier idea of the composition interpreted by an orchestra handled as a unit and under the compelling pressure of a leader confident of giving the ideal conception of the theme. The other numbers were interpreted in like masterly style. This second concert has widened and deepened the confidence of the public that San Francisco, under the new leadership of the Symphony Orchestra, is passing into a distinctively new musical era.

* * *

ADVANCE ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Evelyn Thaw at the Orpheum.—Evelyn Nesbit and Jack Clifford will head a great new show at the Orpheum next week. She does not care to take advantage of the incident that made her a witness in the most sensational criminal case in the annals of the American courts, but trusts to her own ability and industry to win deserved recognition from the public. A handsome and graceful woman, with a better voice than is ordinarily found, and great skill as a danseuse, in conjunction with Jack Clifford she will present the singing and dancing novelty which made them immense favorites in the London music halls. Harry Mayo and Harry Tally, formerly of the Empire City Quartette, have combined their efforts and are making a great success with their team work. Mae Francis, a clever singing comedienne with a liberal supply of catchy songs and an abundance of gorgeous gowns, will make a bid for popular approval. She brings with her Clarence Caskill, an excellent accompanist. Burley and Burley, two quaint comedians, impersonate respectively a dude and a Scot. The Yardys present a European novelty, which consists of a unique demonstration of muscular development. The girl of the team is a perfect wonder. Hamilton and Barnes, a man and a girl, contribute a merry act composed of catchy songs and witty sayings, which they call "Just Fun." "Are We Prepared?" the third of the series of motion pictures, will be given. A special feature of this splendid bill will be that popular star comedienne, Eva Taylor, and her company in the one-act sketch entitled "Suspicious of Hubby;" the author is Lawrence Grattan, Miss Taylor's leading man. The hold-overs will be James Dutton and company, society equestrians, and Eva Gauthier, prima donna, and Nila Devi, prima ballerina, in their new art, "Song Motion."

* * *

Lectures on "The Soul of Woman."—Paul Jordan Smith is to give a course of six lectures on "The Soul of Woman in Modern Literature," in the Art Gallery of Paul Elder & Company on consecutive Thursday afternoons at three, commencing January 20th. The new feminism has created a revolution in the ranks of the woman movement. It declares that the primary purpose of woman is spiritual; that suffrage and social reform are good enough in their way, but that woman as woman has a greater value to contribute to life, and that she must do this at all costs. Far from being conservative, however, the feminists have gone far ahead of their sisters in proposing revolutionary social and ethical changes, and are awakening astonished protests everywhere. The first lecture in the series will be "Henrik Ibsen—The Prophet of Spiritual Emancipation," next Thursday, at 3 p. m.

* * *

Tuesday Morning Musicales at St. Francis.—The second of the "Tuesday Morning Musicales," so auspiciously inaugurated this week, will take place in the Colonial ballroom of the St. Francis Hotel on January 18th, at 11 o'clock. Impresario Rudolph Aronson has made a delightful innovation in musical affairs here. The instrumentalists selected for the second concert include two great pianists, Tina Lerner and her husband, Vladimir Shavitch, and Antonio de Grassi, the eminent violinist. The vocalist of the morning will be Laure de Vilmar, the famous American dramatic soprano. It is in no sense exaggeration to class Tina Lerner among the greatest of pianists, while Vladimir Shavitch has created a big sensation whenever he has played in San Francisco. Miss Lerner will play the gavotte of Sgambati, a paraphrase on a Strauss waltz by Tausig, and two Chopin numbers. The concluding number will be a suite for two pianos by Arensky, played by herself and Mr. Shavitch. Signor de Grassi is a great favorite here, and his numbers will include the Faust Fantasia by Wieniawski, the Corelli-Tartini-Kreisler Variations, "Chanson Meditation," by Cottinet, and the Waltz Caprice by Nandor Zsolt. Mme. de Vilmar, who worked the large audience at the last concert in Festival Hall up to a state of intense enthusiasm, will be heard for the first time here in concert recital, her numbers including the Jewel Song from Faust, Salome's aria from Massenet's "Herodiade," and selections by Schubert, Tosti, Gluck and Hildach. The accompanist will be Fred Maurer. Seats may be obtained

Tina Lerner, the brilliant Russian pianiste, who will play at the Tuesday Morning Musicales at the St. Francis Hotel.

A Perfect Complexion

Gives that delicately clear and refined complexion which every woman desires. Keeps away skin troubles.

Gouraud's Oriental Cream

We will send a complexion chamomile and book of Powder leaves for 15c. to cover cost of mailing and wrapping.

At Druggists and Department Stores
FERD. T. HOPKINS & SON
37 Great Jones St., New York City.

at Sherman, Clay & Co.'s, Kohler & Chase's, and at room 315, Hotel St. Francis.

Sensational Flying Gymnasts at Pantages.—The Four Casters, a quartet of death defying aerial athletes, is a sensational headline attraction on the new eight act show which opens at the Pantages at Sunday's matinee. The men have been featured for several years with all of the big "white top" circus shows, and have a routine of tricks while careening through the air which sets an audience gasping with relief when the gymnasts leave the stage. The finish of the performance of the four is unquestionably one of the most daring feats in vaudeville. The special added feature on the new program is Knox Wilson, the former musical comedy star, who was leading man with Anna Held, and was also starred in "Miss Nobody from Starland," and various other Broadway successes. The four Vagabonds are the singing portion of the big hit, "The Totem Pole," which was a box-office winner for two seasons on the Pantages circuit. Jack Henderson, who played the role of the half-breed in the production, is the director of the Four Vagabonds, and the harmony efforts of the quartet are exceptionally fine. Hannah Leach and Jack Holland, international dancers who danced before royalty by command, and were the furore here at one of the leading cafes, will present a new series of the latest approved modern dances, "The Girl of the West," a dramatic episode with Al. Luttringer and company, Jarvis and Harrison in "Flirtology," and Everett and White, acrobats, with the fifth sensational installment of "The Red Circle," will round out the rest of the bill.

Fourth Pair of Symphony Concerts Ready.—The fourth pair of concerts of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, Alfred Hertz, conductor, will be given at the Cort Theatre, Friday, January 28th, at 3 o'clock, and Sunday, January 30th, at 2:30 o'clock, and from all indications the theatre will hardly be able to accommodate the crowds of music lovers who are rallying to the support of the newly organized orchestra. The program will be made up entirely of Wagner numbers, and should be of peculiar interest in view of the fact that Mr. Hertz held, for thirteen years, the post of Chief Wagnerian Conductor at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, and is steeped in the traditions and ideals of the great Bayreuth master. The program includes the prelude from "Parsifal," two numbers from "Tristan and Isolde," namely, the Prelude and Isolde's Love Death, and Anton Seidl's arrangement of Tristan's Vision; the intensely dramatic overture from "The Flying Dutchman;" the "Siegfried Idyll," composed in honor of Wagner's son's christening; and the prelude to "The Mastersingers of Nurnberg." Of these, the "Vision of Tristan," which has never before been performed in San Francisco, contains the most beautiful lyric episode of the entire music drama, and gives great opportunity to Louis Persinger and Horace Britt, violin and cello soloists respectively, of the orchestra, to interpret the vocal parts of Tristan and Kurvenal, which are embodied in this number. The "Prelude to the Mastersingers of Nurnberg" will be played in a vein new to the San Francisco public; inasmuch as Conductor Hertz infuses into the number much of the blithesome spirit in this the greatest of all comic operas. Tickets on sale at Sherman & Clay's, Kohler & Chase's, and the Cort Theatre.

Indoor Yacht Club.—The sailors of the Indoor Yacht Club will give another Kiddies Ball, a Fete in Fairyland, and the affair will be staged at the Exposition auditorium on Saturday evening, February 12th. We well remember the great affair of last year and the spectacular production that was staged. This year the Indoor clubmen promise to surpass their efforts of 1915 by a hundred per cent. The club has always kept its word; in fact, the boys at the Indoor clubhouse have always more than made good.

—Fred had been permitted to visit a boy friend on the condition that he return home not later than five o'clock. He arrived at seven, and insisted that he had not loitered. "Do you mean," demanded the mother, "that it took you two hours to walk a quarter of a mile?" "Yes, mother; Charlie gave me a mud-turtle and I was afraid to carry it, so I led it home."—Christian Register.

NOTABLE EXHIBITION BY ARTIST W. A. COULTER.

W. A. Coulter, who has made a distinct name for himself as the leading painter on the Pacific Coast of marine subjects, will give a special exhibition of his new canvases in the Merchants' Exchange Building, main floor, California street, below Montgomery, beginning Wednesday afternoon, January 12th, and continuing throughout the month. The public generally is invited to examine these excellent pictures, representing the spirit and life of the sea. When the present Merchants' Exchange was finished after the big fire of 1906, Mr. Coulter was selected to paint the heroic panels on the walls of the gathering room on the main floor. These panels are one of the art features of San Francisco, and represent the Golden Gate and other characteristic sea-scapes of this region.

—In a rural court the old squire had made a ruling so unfair that three young lawyers at once protested against such a miscarriage of justice. The squire immediately fined each of the lawyers for contempt of court. There was silence, and then an older lawyer walked slowly to the front of the room and deposited a $10 bill with the clerk. He then addressed the judge as follows: "Your Honor, I wish to state that I have twice as much contempt for this court as any man in the room."—Youth's Companion.

—Fond Mother—Aye, dear lad, there's not a day passes but what I think of you in that awful submarine, with only the periscup to breathe through."—Punch.

—"Timothy came last, looking half scared, half sheepish, and half amused."—Young's Magazine. Timothy must have been a big chap, at least.—New York Tribune.

—The Lady—Don't you think that Muscovite onslaught is awful? The Gent—I've never tried it; can you show me the steps?—Leland Stanford Chaparral.

St. Francis Hotel COLONIAL BALL ROOM

Tuesday, January 18, at 11 A. M.
Second of the

TUESDAY MORNING MUSICALES
(Direction Rudolph Aronson)

Artists: TINA LERNER, Pianist; VLADIMIR SLAVITCHIL, Pianist; ANTONIO DE GRASSI, Violinist; LAURE de VILMAR, Soprano; Fred Maurer, Accompanist.
Seats and boxes on sale at Sherman, Clay & Co.'s, Kohler & Chase's and Room 315, Hotel St. Francis.

Pantages' Theatre Market Street Opposite Mason

Commencing Sunday Afternoon, January 16, 1916

BLUE RIBBON VAUDEVILLE

FOUR CASTERS, "Wizards of the Air," WORLD'S PREMIER AERIAL GYMNASTS: KNOX WILSON, Former musical comedy star with Anna Held, "A Stubborn Cinderella;" "The Honeymoon Trail," "Miss Nobody," etc. HANNAH LEACH AND JACK HOLLAND, International Dancers, who appeared before Royalty by command: JARVIS and HARRISON, "Flirtology," FOUR VAGABONDS, Harmony Singers and Funsters; EVERETT and WHITE, Comedy Acrobats, FIFTH EPISODE OF PATH'S SERIAL "THE RED CIRCLE."

Orpheum

O'Farrell Street Bet. Stockton and Powell
Phone Douglas 70

Week beginning THIS SUNDAY AFTERNOON. MATINEE EVERY DAY.

A GREAT NEW SHOW

EVELYN NESBIT AND JACK CLIFFORD

In Their Original Songs and Dances, MAYO & TALLEY, One Half of the Famous Empire Quartette, Sweet Singers, MAF FRANCIS, Host of Musical Comedy, assisted by Clarence Caskey; BURLEY & BURLEY, The Quaint Comedians; THE YARDY'S, European Novelties, HAMILTON & BARNES, "Just Fun," EVA GAUTHIER, Prima Donna, NILA DEVI, Prima Ballerina and Ballet in "Songmotion," JAMES DUTTON and CO., "ARE WE PREPARED?" Third installment of the Great Motion Picture Serial Exclusively for the Orpheum Circuit; EVA TAYLOR & CO., In Laurette Grattian's Lively Comedy "Suspicious of Hubby"

Evening Prices, 10c, 25c, 50c, 75c. Box seats, $1. Matinee prices (except Sundays and holidays), 10c., 25c., 50c. Phone Douglas 70.

S. F. Symphony Orchestra

ALFRED HERTZ CONDUCTOR
THIRD SUNDAY CONCERT TOMORROW 2:30 O'clock
CORT THEATRE

Soloist LOUIS PERSINGER, Violinist
Program: Symphony, G. Minor Op. 51, Mozart Concerto in Major for Violin, Op. 61, Beethoven: "Don Juan," Tone Poem (after Liszt) Richard Strauss

FOURTH PAIR OF CONCERTS
CORT THEATRE

Friday, January 28th, 3 O'clock Sunday January 30, 2:30 O'clock
WAGNER PROGRAM: 1. Prelude, 2. Parsifal, 3. Tristan and Isolde, 4. Prelude and Isolde's Love Death, 5. Tristan's Vision (Arranged by A. Seidl), 6. Overtures, "Flying Dutchman," "Siegfried Idyll," 7. Prelude to the "Mastersinger of Nurnberg."
Prices—Friday, $3, $2, $1, 50c, 25c, 10c, and 5c. Sunday, $2, $1, 50c, 25c, 10c, and 5c. Box and log seats $10, $5, $3, $2, $1, 50c, 25c, 10c, and 5c. Seats at Sherman, Clay & Co's and Kohler and Chase, and Cort Theatre on days of concerts only.

Society has refused to come to terms with the limitations of life. The calendar of any member of the smart set (plural number, feminine gender) will prove that the number of hours of the day are made of elastic, and may be stretched to meet all demands. Nor will any member of that circle take issue with Edison on the wastefulness of sleep. To be sure, one has to be massaged and marcelled and toned up for this gait, but the marvel of it all is that the women stand up to it all without any very terrible toll on their good looks. The most valiant dreamings of the greatest athlete never went beyond the tasks women set for themselves—and somehow, by the grace of the automobile, the telephone and the rest of the modern first aids, they manage to pull off most of them very successfully.

The war is responsible for the terrific pace at which women are going this year. In addition to the demands of society, local charities, and all the other claims of a complicated social system, comes this heartbreaking demand for succor to the war victims, and the person who has not been called upon for service in their behalf is as rare as the thoroughly consistent human being.

Peel the rind off the most innocent looking conversation, and before you get down many layers you find a demand that you cannot refuse.

Mrs. So-and-So compliments you on the cake you are serving with tea. She wonders whether your cook could give the recipe for it to her cook, and proudly you proclaim that you made it yourself with a few simple turns of the wrist, and modestly you affirm that the baking of an excellent cake is the easiest thing in the world—and so on, until suddenly your subconscious self warns you that you have been using a mixing spoon to dig a ditch for yourself.

It isn't such a chasm after all, and you fall pleasantly enough into it. Of course you cannot refuse to bake a cake, say once or twice a month, for the cake sale which Mrs. Osgood Putnam and a committee of women conduct weekly, the proceeds to go to the Hoover Relief Committee.

However, you decide that you will not display your talents so casually again. You do not want another burden added to the excess impedimenta you are already carrying through life. You meet, let us say, Mrs. Lewis Hobart, and she tells you of the day-by-day struggle, all day and every day, that just a few women are making to meet the new demands for relief. You feel ashamed of your own temperamental, spasmodic efforts, in contrast to the patient, quiet, generosity of these women, and you spill over some of your desire to really be of use. Whereupon Mrs. Hobart gives you a number of reservations for the Cafe Chantant on the 19th, and assures you that it is very necessary to make a big financial success of that affair. It is an easy matter to dispose of those tables, for every one is going and the program is to be the last syllable of cleverness.

Then you decide that you have done your duty and you won't be involved in anything else, but when a friend rings up and invites you to an informal hour or two at bridge, for 25 cents a corner, you decide that even if the invitation is loaded, though the stakes may go to the Belgians or any one else but the rightful winners, you can safely take a chance that you have seen right through the bolt the hostess has fired, and by no chance can there be any reaction that will put you once more on the firing line.

You find that you are not naturally suspicious by nature! There is a come-back! It is an Endless Chain Bridge party! Each one of the players there must in turn give a bridge, and the twenty-five cents collected from each person is given to Mrs. John Lawson, who is the treasurer of this idea, for the benefit of the French war-sufferers.

In the glow of appreciation kindled by the statement that there are already several hundred dollars in this fund, without any special tax on any one, you sit down to the telephone to make up your party, and you find that every one that you want has already been welded as a link into this endless chain.

Finally you get together a group that you don't want—people that you decided long ago could be swept from your horizon to the added beauty and color of your sky line. There is nothing else to do—you have tried to make yourself believe that you are justified in breaking the chain, but the haunting idea that you are thus perhaps personally responsible for the death of some wounded French soldiers who might have been saved in some hospital equipped from funds raised in just this way, prevents you from breaking the chain.

Each week has some new testimony of the ingenuity of the women who have set their hearts and their purses and their wits to the relief of the war victims. The climax of this week was the affair given on Tuesday night at the home of Mrs. E. J. McCutcheon. The guests were invited to a "freak" party, and as men were banished for the evening, there was no limit to freakishness of the costumes.

When the affair was first planned by the hostess and a little group of friends, men were included as "possibilities," but were later rejected by the committee, not because of any unfitness on their part to disclose their natural talent for freakishness, but because it was feared that the women themselves could not stand the test if men were present.

It was feared that the majority of the women would succumb to a natural, biological temptation to look "pretty" if men were present, and thus blunt the point of the party. There are not many women who are willing to lay all their claims to good looks upon the altar of Absurdity, and there are legions who would rather be counted pretty than funny—especially if the other sex is in sight. So to keep the affair at the crescendo of the ridiculous, and to insure that the women would come in just as freakish get-ups as they could conceive, mere husband and brothers and other male kith had to be content with hearing about it afterwards instead of being "among those present."

And there were some features—the side shows, for example—which they were never to hear about. So each one just told one, or two, or three men all about them, and naturally this unheard-of secrecy and restraint has put all clubdom in the know, with the result that the men are having a very good time teasing their women folk about it.

Up at the Pacific Union Club a group of husbands came very near putting "one over" on the women the night of the party. One of them rang up, at about ten o'clock, when the party was in full swing, proclaiming himself as Chief of Police White, and very apologetically announcing that he would have to send a plain-clothes man out to investigate whether some of the reports about violations of ordinances, which had been turned in to him by the League of Pure White Souls were true.

The lady who took the message got very excited, to the amusement of the men on the line, but the next one that she called to the 'phone to plead with the Chief of Police, saw through the hoax, and gave them back as good as they sent.

The Musical Club of the Peninsula gave its annual concert at Hotel Del Monte last Wednesday, and as there are a great many real artists living there and at Carmel and Pacific Grove, the guests were given a rare treat. There were four dances, two special concerts and a bridge each week, so Del Monte guests are well taken care of. That is outside the special events constantly happening. The work in the grill is proceeding nicely, and soon there will be dansants every afternoon at tea-

W. D. Fennimore
J. W. Davis
A. R. Fennimore

181 Post Street }
2508 Mission St. } San Francisco
1221 Broadway, Oakland

A NEW YEARS RESOLUTION EASY TO KEEP

A New Year has dawned upon us and we are all growing older—but why should we call attention to our age, especially if we have reached that point where two pairs of glasses are necessary. Resolve this year that you will improve your personal appearance and efficiency by wearing the new "Caltex One-piece" Bifocals—reading and distance corrections are combined in one lens. The nuisance of changing glasses is entirely eliminated when you wear "Caltex One-piece" Bifocals.

time. The drawing room is very nearly finished, and is to be a dream. Polo starts in earnest February 1st. Harry Hastings arrived this week, and there will be some minor matches with the Presidio boys right along.

The Hotel Oakland's Saturday night dances are meeting with great success. Among those who entertained dinner parties Saturday night were Mrs. A. C. Richards, who entertained for Miss Wetmore; Mr. J. H. Rourk entertaining a party of seven, and Mrs. F. Nusebaumer a party of five.

Tuesday, January 11th, the Ivory Ball Room of the Hotel Oakland, at 11 o'clock, will mark the opening of the series of Musical Mornings that promise to be very successful. The artists engaged for the first concert are Miss Mukle and Mme. Betty Drews. Frederick Maurer, Jr., will be the accompanist. Luncheon reservations continue to come in for parties after the musicale.

Thursday, January 14th, Mrs. W. S. Noyes will be hostess at a reception and dance in the Ivory Ball Room of the Hotel Oakland. Four hundred guests are expected. A buffet supper will be served in the main dining room.

Mrs. Wickham Havens is one of the members of a committee who are arranging for a card party to be given at the Hotel Oakland the early part of February, as a benefit for the Ladies' Relief Society.

The "Revue des Modes," to be given at Scottish Rite Hall on the evenings of Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, March 1st, 2d and 3d, for the benefit of the French wounded, promises to strike a new note in entertainments. The committee in charge of the "revue," consisting of Mesdames Walter S. Martin, Charles Templeton Crocker, George T. Cameron, C. Frederick Kohl and Augustus Taylor, is determined to create a notable Fashion Show, one that will begin a new era in smart philanthropic events. The costumes will be furnished by San Francisco's most exclusive firms, which have hitherto refused to appear in fashion shows. The gowns, hats, furs, jewels and other paraphernalia of milady's wardrobe are being designed in London and Paris, especially for this occasion. The models will be society maids and matrons, with the exception of the matinee intime, when the frills and fancies will be displayed by professional models for the exclusive gaze of milady. The "revue" will be put on in the same manner as in the French revues in Paris. A compere, personified by one of San Francisco's talented bachelors, will introduce each number with quip and jest, the lines of the skit being written by a well known librettist of the Bohemian Club. The costumes will be introduced by living pictures.

The attractive Kathryn A. Swartz, of Warsaw, Indiana, and Nicholas R. West, the well known oilman, formerly test chemist for the Russian government, were married New Year's day to the great surprise of their many friends. Every one had fancied it was merely platonic friendship, and that "Nick," who had never succumbed to loveliness before, would evade the little god in this instance as he had in others.

The management of the Hotel Coronado has sent out beautifully colored embossed invitations, asking guests to a specially attractive Spanish ball to be given in its attractive big ballroom, on the evening of January 29th. Only those in costume will be permitted on the floor till 10:30. Aside from the regular social dancing, there will be a number of brilliant Spanish dances, interpreted by Miss Cornelia Strobhar and A. Courtney Campbell, Jr., in The Bolero de Madrid, La Malajuela y El Torero, The Jales de Jerez and the Soleares. Las Sevillianas will be danced by members of the younger set.

WOMEN'S SECTION, NAVY LEAGUE.

Hundreds of patriotic San Francisco women have already been enrolled in the newly organized local women's section of the Navy League. The section was formed last week at a meeting held at the Fairmont Hotel, attended by a large number of prominent women. Mrs. Alexander Sharp, widow of the late Captain Alexander Sharp, U. S. N., presided and explained to those present that the Navy League is for the purpose of cultivating patriotism and urging Congress to provide the United States with a navy sufficient to protect this country against foreign aggression and keep the horrors of war permanently from American shores. Mrs. F. H. Colburn, 972 Bush street, was appointed regent of the new section; Mrs. Charles A. Gove, vice-regent; Mrs. Bernhard Sinsheimer, secretary; Mrs. Hinckley Taylor, treasurer; Mrs. Arthur H. Dutton, chairman of press committee. Hundreds of women are flooding Mrs. Colburn with letters asking for information about the women's section of the Navy League, and applying for membership in it.

MOVIES AND MORALS IN LOS ANGELES.

Los Angeles, Jan. 14.—The all-consuming desire on the part of many of our well meaning, but ill advised, citizens and citizenesses to reform, to regulate and sterilize this supposedly chemically rotten movie town out of existence, is at last awakening a few of the business men to the fact that one of Los Angeles' most attractive industries is being suffocated by the gas route. Certain skirted males and females of Los Angeles, some time ago, thought they had discovered in the movie villagers certain abodes of crime. Dreadful places where male hands pinched tender ladies where they should not be pinched, and under the cover of darkness bold, bad male voices tried to make dates with maidens in adjoining cafeterias, where milk and honey allured Innocence to the Inferno.

Several women, moral sleuths, wrote to General Harrison Gray Otis of the Times, whose martial soul is ever alert to succor distress, especially when skirted. Then the Board of Censors got busy, and there was the deuce to pay. Now, the owners of the moving picture concerns are not exactly made of the mutton which composes the carcase of the pop-eyed lambs. They fought back, and are still fighting the all-round charges made against the every-day life of the people in their employ. Owing to the equable, warm weather and sunlight so essential to the success of making films, that prevails the year round in Los Angeles, there are more film companies in and about Los Angeles than in any other part of the world. It is claimed that seventy-five per cent of the moving pictures of the country are taken near Los Angeles. Eminent star players are brought to the coast, and these pay liberally for their pleasures and surroundings; they buy homes and automobiles, and help materially to keep Los Angeles alive and in the limelight, something it perennially craves. Many thousands of dollars are spent each day by employees alone. It is not uncommon to send 1,000 persons into the country for a day to take battle pictures; one concern recently required the presence of 1,000 men and women in a small town near Los Angeles to lynch a man from San Francisco—a glowing tribute to San Francisco.

Now the moving picture magnates tell the Los Angeles people that unless the Board of Censors is abolished and they are assured of no further molestation, they will abandon California and go to Florida, where they have been given assurances of just treatment.

Having grown weary of baiting the railroads, steam and electric lines and other public utilities, the reformers "are getting after" the movies.

But the movies have the advantage over railroad, telephone, water, lighting and other companies, for they can say: "We will abandon our studios to the rats and the owls, and go to Florida," and they certainly will go there or to the San Francisco bay region unless the Los Angeles skirted reformers, male and female, stop heckling them over "morals" and other charges. They insist that a chemical test on their villages show a percentage of purity up to the celebrated "chemically pure" test given Los Angeles some years ago, and they are willing to let the case go at that as long as they are held fellows in business with the pure bred Los Angelanos.

—Dr. T. N. Iglehart, one of the best known of San Francisco's prominent dentists since the early '80's, passed away this week, after a slight attack on the heart, at the age of 72 years. The demise of Dr. Iglehart will prove a sad loss to his wide circle of friends and to the profession he adorned.

—A feast at night that the most discriminating epicure might easily describe as best, is served for one dollar at Maison Doree, Ellis above Powell street, with wine. Lunch fifty cents.

—Pat—I hear you and the boys struck for shorter hours. Did you get 'em? Mike—Sure. We're not working at all now. —Columbia Jester.

Here, There and Personally

In reporting the Philippines government bill to the Senate, the Philippines committee was so nearly unanimous that one must inquire into the cause of such unprecedented harmony. It appears that an important concession was made by the Democratic members of the committee in the wording of the preamble declaring the purpose of the United States to grant independence to the Filipino people. The preamble had formerly read that independence would be granted when "the people of the Philippine Islands shall have shown themselves to be fitted therefor." This was changed so that it now reads, when "it will be to the permanent interest of the people of the Philippine Islands." The change is not substantial, perhaps, inasmuch as it would probably prove to be as difficult for all sides to agree, at some future time, concerning the "fitness" of the Filipinos for independence as to agree concerning "the permanent interest" of the same people. This form will not be acceptable to the Filipino leaders, but they must perforce acquiesce; it also skirts the Baltimore platform promise, which favored an immediate declaration of recognizing that independence as a stable government can be established. The present war may have been the cause of this change.

* * *

No Christmas gift so far reported is more to the point than that of Henry C. Frick, who has taken steps to pay the school children depositors of the failed Pittsburg bank the full amount of their deposits, to the probable actual cost to himself of some $83,000. The public spirited philanthropy should help to restore any confidence which may have been lost in the essential soundness of the savings bank habit; though there won't always be a Frick on hand to make good the occasional loss.

* * *

Joan of Arc's place in the hearts of the French people won't be lessened by Pope Benedict's reported decision to withhold her canonization until after the war, in order to avoid any appearance of being unneutral. But the Pope's decision, if as reported, is not surprising. Joan was unquestionably a French warrior and patriot.

* * *

An epidemic of grip is reported throughout the Middle West, the worst outbreak in 25 years. One Chicago concern with 12,000 employees, reports that it had to employ 1,000 substitutes to fill vacancies caused by the disease. Similar reports come from other cities.

* * *

In five business days last week $150,000,000 worth of war materials was shipped to the allies from New York. It is not even a paradox that this record-breaking bit of business may have more to do with bringing about peace than Mr. Ford's shipload of pilgrims and reporters will have.

* * *

General Joffre in command, by the new decree, of all the armies of France, takes rank as the most trusted French commander since Napoleon. That he is also the greatest since Napoleon there is no reason to doubt. Military genius is one of the Republic's assets in preparedness. It was largely the placing of too much dependence upon it that made the Franco-Prussian war what it was. France learned the lesson.

* * *

Nearly a quarter of a billion dollars were spent in highway construction and maintenance in the United States during the year 1914, as shown by statistics just issued by the office of public roads and rural engineering. One-fifth of the work was done under the State aid system, the various State highway departments paying $24,220,000 and the counties and townships $25,193,000. State aid laws are in effect in 44 States, New Jersey having instituted the system in 1891, and Tennessee and Georgia being among the last to adopt it in 1915.

* * *

Mr. Carnegie has doubtless given his personal consent to the sale of some $25,000,000 of United States Steel Corporation first mortgage bonds, held by the several trusts which he endowed in England and Scotland. The sale at present American prices for such securities can be very profitably made, and the proceeds invested in the British war loan will be utilized in the support of the British government's prosecution of the war. It is an odd ending of Mr. Carnegie's years of pacifist campaigning.

WHEN GENIUS BURNS.

At the age of 18 David is said to have written his first psalm, Shelley wrote "Queen Mab," and Mendelssohn composed his music for "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

At 19 Bryant wrote "Thanatopsis."

At 21 Disraeli wrote "Vivian Grey."

At 22 Alexander Dumas wrote plays. Voltaire's first tragedy was brought out, and Keats wrote "Endymion."

At 23 Horace is said to have written his first odes, Heine published his first songs and Schiller's "The Robbers" had made him famous.

At 24 Shakespeare wrote his first play.

At 26 Sheridan wrote "The School for Scandal."

At 28 Racine wrote "Andromache," and Hannah Moore wrote "The Search After Happiness."

At 29 Addison's first essays appeared; Owen Meredith published "Lucille."

At 30 Confucius began his religious works.

At 31 Pliny finished his "German War."

At 34 Luther wrote his ninety-five theses; Baxter wrote "Saints Everlasting Rest," and Thomas a Kempis wrote "Imitation of Christ."

At 35 Mohammed began the Koran and Poe wrote "The Raven."

At 36 Thackeray's "Vanity Fair" had appeared.

At 50 Bunyan finished "A Pilgrim's Progress."

At 51 Dante finished his "Divine Commedia."

—Katherine and Margaret found themselves seated next to each other at a dinner party and immediately became confidential. "Molly told me that you told her that secret I told you not to tell her," whispered Margaret. "Oh, isn't she a mean thing!" gasped Katherine. "Why, I told her not to tell you!" "Well," returned Margaret, "I told her I wouldn't tell you she told me—so don't tell her I did."—Everybody's.

TAKE YOUR CHOICE

EIGHT
TRAINS
EVERY DAY

To---

Los Angeles

YOU CAN LEAVE San Francisco (Ferry Station) at 4:20 P. M. on the "San Joaquin Valley Flyer;" or at 6 P. M. on the "Owl Limited"—

DINNER IS SERVED in Dining Car (also breakfast next morning) and you arrive in Los Angeles before 9 o'clock—

THEN, IF YOU LIKE you can be in San Diego with its Exposition 12:50 same afternoon, and within 25 minutes' ride of Tia Juana Race Track.

☞ ☞ ☞

OR, IF YOU PREFER, you can dine leisurely at home and take the "Lark" at 8 P. M. from (Third Street Station)—

AFTER BREAKFAST in Dining Car next morning, you reach Los Angeles at 9:45, with a full day before you for business or pleasure.

☞ ☞ ☞

IN ADDITION, there are five other daily trains, including the "Shore Line Limited"—"Down the Coast by Daylight."

Monograph on Kipling.

John Palmer, dramatic critic of the Saturday Review, has contributed a monograph on Rudyard Kipling to the "Writers of the Day" series. Mr. Palmer is a clever writer, who does not always seem quite sure of himself or his inspiration. Dash, rather than brilliance, characterizes his work. He has, however, intelligence, wit and common sense, though he is rather fond of clothing his common sense in perverse and paradoxical form. His book on Kipling is bright and readable and outside the beaten track. His theories about Kipling's art are gayly delivered, as though Mr. Palmer did not claim for them final authority. Yet his entertaining observations are often pointed. They will please the casual reader and will not offend Kipling lovers. There is a Gallic lightness to the book, though hardly Gallic form.

Mr. Palmer holds that Kipling is essentially a man of letters. "Mr. Kipling seems sometimes to write as an engineer, sometimes as a soldier. At times he would wager that he had spent all his life as a captain of marines, or as a keeper of woods and forests, or as a horse dealer. He gives his readers the impression that he has lived a hundred lives, mastered many crafts and led the life, not of one, but of a dozen, active and practical men of affairs." Mr. Palmer treats Mr. Kipling as the first-rate writing man who has learned many things, but who, above all, has learned to "handle his style."

Price 50 cents net. Published by Henry Holt & Co.

* * *

"My March to Timbuctoo."

Two years ago General Joffre was practically unknown even in his own country. To-day his name is a household word among millions the world over. Except for newspaper and magazine articles, and these not always satisfactory, we know little or nothing of the man who turned back the German hosts at the battle of the Marne, and whose name will rank among those of the greatest generals of this war. Anything that will throw light upon Joffre's character is naturally seized upon by an eager public.

In 1893-94 General (then Major) Joffre commanded an expedition to Timbuctoo in Central Africa, which had then been visited by only three white men. On his return to France in 1895 he published an account of the march in the Revue du Genie. This has lately been exhumed and printed in book form as "My March to Timbuctoo."

Translated into English by Ernest Dimnet. Published by the Duffield Company. Price 75 cents net.

* * *

The California of Aviators.

Sinclair Lewis's California—as it is pictured in one portion of his new novel, "The Trail of the Hawk"—is very different from the Bohemian literary California of most stories. It is the California of mechanics and of aviators; and it is founded on Mr. Lewis's own year and a half of experience in that State. He lived for a time at Carmel, near Monterey; then at the Benicia Arsenal, the government arsenal for the entire Pacific Coast; then did newspaper work in San Francisco.

Published by Harper & Brothers, New York.

* * *

Another of Theodore Dreiser's plays, "The Rag Pickers," which will appear in his forthcoming "Plays of the Natural and Supernatural," has been accepted for stage production by Wallis Clark. Published by John Lane Co., New York.

* * *

Mr. S. Roland Hall has made careful study of salesmanship, and in his new book, just issued by Funk & Wagnalls Company, he offers to all salespeople suggestions which are practical and at the same time attractive. "Short Talks on Retail Selling" is its title. Every merchant would find it profitable to place a copy of it in the hands of every salesman in his employ.

DEMISE OF HERMAN PERLET, NOTED COMPOSER.

Herman Perlet, composer, director, musician of note, and known in every music center of this country, passed away at his home in Oakland, this week, at the age of 54 years. At 14, he became organist of one of the largest churches in Washington, D. C. A little later he began to compose musical pieces, operas and musical comedies. Most of his life was passed in New York, where he found a field for his unusual talents. He was master of a number of instruments used in an orchestra, and an expert on the piano. Some eight years ago he came to California with his wife and daughter, and chose a residence in Berkeley on account of the facilities it furnished him in keeping in touch with things musical in San Francisco. He quickly became a figure in the best musical circles here. He was the director of the Philharmonic Orchestra last season, and was enthusiastic in developing the best ideas of music in organizations of young folk. As a member of the Bohemian Club, he wrote the music of "The Fall of Ug," one of the annual plays given by that club at its redwood grove on the Russian River. His demise was sudden. During the day he had complained of not feeling well; in the evening he was reading when suddenly stricken. He was a Mason, and the burial ceremonies were conducted by that order.

WOMEN TO MEN.

God bless you, lads!
All women of the race,
As forth you go,
Wish you with steadfast face
The best they know.

God cheer you, lads!
Out in the bitter nights,
Down the drear days,
Through the red reeking fights
And wasted ways.

God bring you, lads,
Back to the motherland,
True laurels gained,
Glory in either hand,
Honor unstained.

Women of Britain's race,
As forth you go,
Wish you with proud, glad face
The best they know:
God bless you, lads!

—Punch.

—A well known banker in a down-town restaurant was eating mush and milk. "What's the matter?" inquired a friend. "Got dyspepsia." "Don't you enjoy your meals?" "Enjoy my meals?" snorted the indignant dyspeptic. "My meals are mercly guide posts to take medicine before or after."—Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

—"Every time the baby looks into my face he smiles," said Mr. Meekins. "Well," answered his wife, "it may not be exactly polite, but it shows he has a sense of humor."—Pacific Unitarian.

MELLOW AS MOONLIGHT

CASCADE

For your HI-BALL today

The finest, purest and mellowest whisky that brains and money can produce, cost to you no more than inferior grades; so why not ask for and insist on getting CASCADE.

Instead of saying whisky, just say CASCADE, you will enjoy it and feel much better.

Special enjoyable drink recipes for the asking by writing
J. H. Norton, care San Francisco News Letter

FADS AND FASHIONS

For those of us who are fortunate enough to be able to step, as it were, from beneath the cloudy, wintry skies of the north into the sunshine and flowers of the south, the shops are fairly overflowing with linens, soft silks, cool looking suitings, the most feminine of hats, parasols and all the other accessories that go to make up the summer costume.

The Popular Bolero Suit.

When the various European countries unconsciously exerted their influence on styles by their entry into the war, or their equally difficult stand of neutrality, the bolero was again introduced into the woman's wardrobe, it being the Spanish note. It is a model that has always been a great favorite. It is generally becoming and may be made at home with results as good as if fashioned by a tailor. Fine blue serge, soutached, or trimmed with a design in gold braid or galoon, is most often seen in the bolero models; often the upper portion of the pleated or gathered skirt is of taffeta in black or the same tone as the serge. Collars and cuffs of taffeta and taffeta covered buttons are also used with good effect.

Stripes and Checks.

In both the suitings and the soft silks being fashioned into frocks and suits for southern wear and early spring, the popularity of stripes and checks is quite as marked as it was last season; the combination of black and white and soft gray is also noticeable. The soft wool suitings in checks ranging from the very tiny pattern to the aggressive checker-board designs are all good, relieved with a touch of vivid green, rose, or orange; black taffeta and moire are also effective for trimming these suits and tailored frocks. The striped silks are usually combined with a plain satin or silk, in a tone that harmonizes with or is an effective contrast to the predominating color in the striped material. Sheer fabrics, crepe Georgettes, chiffon-cloths, silk voiles, and the various other transparent fabrics promise to be as good for sleeves, collars and other trimming purposes as they have been for the past few seasons.

Plain and Striped Taffeta

Net Blouses Practical.

Blouses of chiffon-cloth, chiffon and similar materials, dainty and becoming to a degree, were never very durable. It was really heartbreaking when one had a particularly becoming and rather expensive blouse to have it begin to pull out and wear under the arms and at the elbows after only one or two wearings. This was partially done away with when cotton net was introduced for lining these waists; this season we have the net blouse itself, often lined with net or chiffon-cloth. These waists are delightfully sheer and they have a wonderful wearing quality.

Often the net blouse is trimmed with a linen cluny, or another equally pretty lace in a rather heavy pattern. Then again collar and cuffs are of a picot-edged Georgette in a delicate tone of rose, yellow or pale pink. Novelty buttons in quaint effective colorings are sometimes used at the closing of collar, or down the front, forming unusually attractive trimming details.

Serge Bolero Suit.

The softly colored blouse of crepe Georgette has by no means taken a back seat because of the popularity of the new net favorite; these are being brought out, if anything, in prettier and more charmingly colored designs than ever before. Rose pink is a favorite shade; it combines so well with the dark blues, browns and other tailored suit colors.

Hats and Parasols.

Small and medium sized hats as always are the first outputs of our New York milliners, for the south and early spring. Many of the prettiest of them show a combination of straw and taffeta. One especially attractive medium-sized hat displayed on the Avenue some time ago was of tete de Negre satin, the brim turned up a trifle on the left side and the frame was covered smoothly save for a cord effect around the outer edge of the brim and at the top of the crown. The only trimming was a severely straight upstanding wing made of the satin, edged with a cut ruching of maline in the same shade of brown as the hat. The effect of the hat was smart and tailored. Another pretty small hat was made half of straw braid and half of changeable taffeta, the taffeta being draped over one side of the crown, finishing in a high upstanding loop on the side. Imitation Gaura in a soft shade of gray was effective trimming on another small hat. In parasols there are many novelties as always at the opening of a season. Some Japanese effects are seen, and some hand-embroidered designs; a particularly pretty fancy parasol was of dark taffeta gathered and tasselled at the points.

—Hundreds of ladies and business men have long since learned that Techau Tavern offers the finest special luncheon in the city. The Tavern has always catered to people who are particular what and where they eat, and its reputation for cooking and service places it on a par with the best hotels in the East and in San Francisco. The special luncheon menu is selected with particular care. It varies daily, and each day's menu offers a luncheon which piques the appetite and satisfies the palate of the most critical.

—Member of the Touring Company—My good lady, the last place I stayed at the landlady wept when I left. Landlady—Oh, did she? Well, I ain't going to. I wants my money in advance.—Tit-Bits.

Not Gray Hairs but tired Eyes Make us look older than we are. Old age and Dull Eyes—tell-tale.

Don't Tell Your age

After the Movies go home and Murine your Eyes. wo L. ops will rest, refresh and cleanse. Have it handy.

Murine Eye Remedy Company, Chicago, Sends Book of the Eye upon request.

BLESSED ARE THE PEACE-MAKERS.

Of old with a divided heart
I saw my people's pride expand,
Since a man's soul is torn apart
By mother earth and fatherland.

I knew, through many a tangled tale,
Glory and truth not one but two;
King, Constable and Amirail
Took me like trumpets; but I knew

A blacker thing than blood's own dye
Weighed down great Hawkins on the sea;
And Nelson turned his blindest eye
On Naples and on liberty.

Therefore to you my thanks, O throne,
O thousandfold and frozen folk,
For whose cold frenzies all your own
The Battle of the Rivers broke;

Who have no faith a man could mourn,
Nor freedom any man desires;
But in a new clean light of scorn
Close up my quarrel with my sires;

Who bring my English heart to me,
Who mend me like a broken toy;
Till I can see you fight and flee,
And laugh as if I were a boy.
—Gilbert K. Chesterton.

THE SPIRES OF OXFORD.

(Seen from the Train.)

I saw the spires of Oxford
As I was passing by,
The gray spires of Oxford
Against a pearl-gray sky.
My heart was with the Oxford men
Who went abroad to die.

The years go fast in Oxford,
The golden years and gay,
The hoary Colleges look down
On careless boys at play.
But when the bugles sounded war
They put their games away.

They left the peaceful river,
The cricket field, the quad,
The shaven lawns of Oxford
To seek a bloody sod—
They gave their merry youth away
For country and for God.

God rest you, happy gentlemen,
Who laid your good lives down,
Who took the khaki and the gun
Instead of cap and gown.
God bring you to a fairer place
Than even Oxford town.

—W. M. Letts.

—"Gentlemen," remarked the professor, "the general function of the heads of several learned members of this class is to keep their neckties from slipping off."—Harvard Lampoon.

—The latest American church device for "raising the wind" is what a religious paper describes as "some collection box." The inventor hails from Oklahoma. If a member of the congregation drops in a twenty-five cent piece or a coin of a larger value, there is silence. If it is a ten-cent piece a bell rings, a five-cent piece sounds a whistle, and a cent fires a blank cartridge. If any one pretends to be asleep when the box passes, it awakens him with a watchman's rattle, and a kodak takes his portrait.—London Christian World.

—Success has turned many a man's head—in fact, it's a long head that has no turning.—Boston Transcript.

—Colonel (of a very gallant Colonial regiment)—Now, boys, here's the English General coming to inspect you. Keep steady, no spitting, and for heaven's sake don't call me Alf!—Tatler.

Hotel St. Francis Announces the
Club Room Special
A Busy Man's Luncheon

Beginning January 10, 1916

50 Cents

Service From 11:30 to 2:00

TYPICAL OF CALIFORNIA

PALACE
H O T E L

Since 1875 the Historic Hotel of San Francisco
NEW MANAGEMENT NEW POLICY
European Plan Only. Rates from $2 per day upward.

FAIRMONT HOTEL
The Most Superbly Situated Hotel in the World.
Under Same Management.

HOTEL OAKLAND OAKLAND, CALIFORNIA
Overlooking Lake Merritt and the Mountains

The most picturesque location in America, commanding views of a salt water lake in the heart of the city, the mountains in the background, and the Bay. An ideal home for refined permanent guests.
European Plan: From $1.50 a day up American Plan: From $3.50 a day up
Write for our extraordinarily low permanent rates. Carl Sword, Manager

HOTEL WORTHY

WM. W. BENSON, Manager

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

Two minutes from station, in center of business district
$1.50 UP EUROPEAN PLAN

Louis Gassner Inc.

Manufacturing Furriers

112-114 GEARY STREET

FURS

Annual Clearance

SALE

BIG REDUCTIONS

During this sale there will be no
goods sent on approval,
no returns and no
exchanges.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL ITEMS

WEDDING ANNOUNCEMENTS.

BRUNE-VAN FLEET.—Miss Alice Brune will become the bride of Alan Van Fleet on Monday afternoon, January 31st. Only relatives and intimate friends will witness the ceremony, which will be performed at 4 o'clock in St. John's Episcopal Church in Ross, Reverend William de Witt officiating. After the ceremony a large reception will be held at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Brune, in Ross. The bride will have but one attendant, Miss Flora Miller, and William Van Fleet, a brother of the bridegroom, will be the best man.

WEDDINGS.

HERRSCHER-FRIENDLY.—Miss Emma Herrscher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Herrscher, became the wife of Julius C. Friendly, of Portland, Wednesday night at an elaborate wedding ceremony at the Palace Hotel. The Reverend Dr. Martin A. Meyer read the ritual of the ceremony. After the wedding a dinner was served to 100 guests in the concert room. Later a reception followed in the ballroom, where over two hundred guests were bidden, and a dansant was greatly enjoyed by all. Mr. and Mrs. Friendly will go to Palm Beach, Florida, on their honeymoon, and will make their future home in Portland.

STOVEL-BOYESEN.—Miss Marlon Willis Stovel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Stovel, became the wife of Hjalmar Hjorth Boyesen of New York Wednesday night at a large and fashionable wedding. The ceremony took place at the home of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Jane Martel, in the same room where Mr. and Mrs. Stovel were married about twenty years ago. The Rev. Frederick W. Clappett of Trinity Episcopal Church read the words of the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Boyesen will spend the honeymoon at Coronado, and will return here for a visit of a week or so before continuing on to New York, where they will reside.

LUNCHEONS.

BABCOCK.—Mrs. Albert M. Babcock of San Jose, regent of the New San Jose Chapter of the D. A. R., was hostess at a luncheon Wednesday at the Palace Hotel in honor of Mrs. John F. Swift, national vice-president general, and Mrs. Frederick Braddock, chairman D. A. R., national committee on Southern mountain schools and first vice-chairman of D. A. R. national committee on patriotic education.

BENTLEY.—Mrs. Robert Irving Bentley has issued invitations to a luncheon and bridge party which she will give Friday afternoon, January 21st, at her home on Green street. The affair will be in honor of Miss Katibel MacGregor.

BELL.—Mrs. J. Franklin Bell will be hostess at a bridge luncheon to-day in compliment to Mrs. James A. Erwin, who will leave shortly for Fort Douglas to join her husband, Colonel Erwin of the Seventh Cavalry.

BRYAN.—Miss Linda Bryan will be the complimented guest at a luncheon and bridge party which Miss Louise McNear will give Tuesday afternoon, January 18th, at the Bellevue Hotel.

DEAN.—Miss Helen Dean has issued invitations to a luncheon which she will give Friday, January 21st, at the Fairmont Hotel. The affair will be in honor of Miss Dorothy Baker, one of the popular brides-to-be.

MARTIN.—Mrs. Walter Martin entertained informally at luncheon Monday at the St. Francis Hotel. The table was prettily decorated with red carnations and maidenhair ferns. After luncheon bridge was enjoyed.

OTIS.—Complimenting the Misses Lloyd and Hildredth Melere, the Misses Cora and Fredericka Otis entertained at luncheon Friday afternoon at their home on Broadway.

REQUA.—Mrs. Mark Requa gave a luncheon on this Wednesday in honor of Mrs. Norman Lang, who is visiting her mother, Mrs. S. M. McKee, in Oakland.

ROSSI.—An enjoyable luncheon was given Tuesday afternoon by Miss Marita Rossi at the Town and Country Club.

SHERWOOD.—The Francisca Club was the setting for a luncheon over which Mrs. William Sherwood presided Thursday afternoon. A group of friends of the hostess were invited to meet Mrs. William D. Moore of New York.

THOMAS.—Miss Dorothy Baker, the fiancee of Dr. George Willcutt, and Miss Helen Bertheau, who will become the bride of Hall Roe on the 19th of this month, were incentives for a luncheon at which Miss Gertrude Thomas was hostess Tuesday afternoon at the Francisca Club.

TREAT.—Miss Dorothy Baker, the fiancee of Dr. George Willcutt, will be the inspiration for a luncheon to be given by Miss Myra Treat, Tuesday afternoon, February 1st, at the Town and Country Club.

TUCKER.—Mrs. James Ellis Tucker was hostess at a luncheon in honor of Miss Hannah Hobart, one of this winter's most popular debutantes. The Town and Country Club was the setting of the affair.

WILSON.—An impromptu luncheon was given Wednesday afternoon by Mrs. Russell Wilson at the Burlingame Club.

DINNERS.

BELL.—General and Mrs. J. Franklin Bell entertained Captain and Mrs. E. E. Lynam informally at dinner Sunday evening at their attractive quarters at Fort Mason.

BLISS.—Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bliss will give a dinner in compliment to Miss Dorothy Baker and Dr. George Willcutt at their home on Vallejo street. The exact date for the entertainment has not been decided upon, but it will take place the last week of this month.

DONOHOO.—A coterie of friends will enjoy the hospitality of the Misses Katharine, Christine and Mary Donohoe at a dinner to be given Friday evening, January 28th, at their home on Broadway. Later in the evening the hostesses and their guests will attend the Gayety Club.

FOLGER.—Mr. and Mrs. James Athearn Folger were dinner hosts Thursday evening. The delightful affair was given at their home on Pacific avenue.

HEYNEMANN.—Miss Marlon Stovel and Hjalmar Hjorth Boyesen, whose marriage was solemnized Wednesday evening at the home of the bride on Buchanan street, were complimented by an informal dinner given Sunday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Heynemann.

HUNTINGTON.—Miss Marlon Huntington had some friends in to dine at her home on Saturday night, before the Neighborhood dance, all attending the affair at Century Club afterward.

JENKINS.—Mr. and Mrs. Harry Jenkins were hosts at a dinner party at their home Wednesday night, entertaining eight or ten of their friends.

LICHENSTEIN.—Mr. and Mrs. I. H. Lichenstein were hosts at a handsome dinner party given in honor of Miss Emma Herrscher and Julius C. Friendly of Portland, who were married on Wednesday.

MARTIN.—Baskets of pink roses and lilies of the valley placed on a cloth half covered with violets formed the attractive decoration at the dinner recently given by Mrs. Eleanor Martin at her home on Broadway.

McNEAR.—A dinner will be given by Miss Louise McNear on Friday evening, January 28th, at the Bellevue Hotel. After the dinner the party of young folk will attend the dance that is to be given at the home of Miss Leslie Miller by the Gayety Club.

POPE.—Preceding the leap year dance given Wednesday evening at Mare Island, Lieutenant-Commander and Mrs. Ralph Pope presided at a handsomely appointed dinner.

SMITH.—Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Smith will entertain some of their friends at a dinner party next Wednesday night, all attending the cafe chantant benefit at the Fairmont Hotel afterwards.

TEAS.

BAKER.—Miss Emma Mave Baker has sent out cards for a tea to be given at her home on the 20th of January, as a farewell courtesy to Miss Muriel Boxton, who is leaving soon for New York to study music.

FARNHAM.—Mrs. Sylvanus Farnham and her sister, Miss Elsie Clifford, had a delightful Saturday afternoon tea to have their friends meet Miss Marlon Stovel and Mr. Hjalmar H. Boyesen, for whom a series of affairs are being given this week.

FLAHAVEN.—Miss Anita Flahaven will give a tea at the St. Francis on January 18th, in honor of Miss Muriel Boxton.

PRATT.—A few friends enjoyed the hospitality of Mrs. Orville Pratt, Jr., at a tea given Tuesday afternoon at her home on California street. It was in honor of her cousin, Mrs. William D. Moore, of New York, who is with her husband at the St. Francis Hotel.

SESNON.—Mrs. William Thomas Sesnon will give a tea on Tuesday, the 14th, to meet Mrs. Alfred Hertz.

RECEPTIONS.

GUNN.—Mrs. George Gunn was hostess Wednesday at a reception at her home in Lyon street in honor of her sister, Mrs. J. E. Birmingham, who has just returned from New York, where she has spent the last four years.

CONCERTS.

MESSER.—Mrs. Allen Messer and her sister, Mrs. Reginald Brooke, are planning to give a concert later in the month, for the Belgian fund. The date is as yet uncertain, but it will be within the month.

THEATRE PARTIES.

KINGSTON.—Miss Margaret Kingston was hostess at a theatre party Thursday evening in honor of Miss Katherine MacAdam, whose marriage to Lieutenant Martin Peterson, U. S. N., will be solemnized on January 18th.

McNEAR.—Mr. and Mrs. George W. McNear, Jr., will give a theatre party on next Monday night, in compliment to Miss Helen Bertheau and Hall Roe.

THE HOTEL PLAZA

overlooking the beautiful Plaza of Union Square, the Hotel of refinement and service, is offering special rates to permanent guests.

Hotel Plaza Company

HOUSE WARMING

KUCKEL.—Mr. and Mrs. Charles James Kuckel will entertain at a house-warming at their new home, 755 Warfield avenue, Oakland, on January 22d. Mrs. Kuckel was Miss Linda Russ until her marriage last August. The guests will number about 150, and Mrs. Kuckel will be assisted in receiving by her mother, Mrs. Russ of San Francisco, and her sisters, Mrs. A. Sykes of Berkeley, and Mrs. E. Armstrong of Oakland.

DANCES.

BROOKE.—The date of the benefit entertainment and dance that is being arranged by Mrs. Reginald Brooke, assisted by Mesdames Henry T. Scott and Marion Lord, has been changed from the evening of February 3d to February 4th. It will be held at the St. Francis Hotel. The object of this function is the relief of the men who have been blinded in the European war.

CARR.—Mrs. George Carr entertained informally Saturday evening with a supper dance at the St. Francis Hotel.

HOLBROOK.—A children's dancing club was organized last Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Harry Holbrook on Pacific avenue. About a score of children belong to the club, and at the first meeting a number of the mothers were present.

ROSSI.—Miss Marita Rossi gave an informal supper dance Friday evening at the Palace Hotel.

SEXTON.—Mrs. Ella M. Sexton's subscription club will give a dance at Sequoia Club to-night.

TUESDAY NIGHT ASSEMBLY.—The Tuesday Night Assembly, which has been enjoying a series of delightful dances this winter, will give a special dance on Saturday, the 15th of January, to which they have asked a number of their friends. Mrs. John D. McGilvray, Jr., organized this subscription series.

CARDS.

BAKER.—Mrs. Frank Baker gave a bridge party on Friday afternoon, at the studio of Mrs. A. B. Spreckels. From now on the plan is to have a series of these bridge teas to enable different groups to view the tombola prizes which are to be disposed of the first of March for the Belgian fund.

LEONARD.—Mrs. Lane Leonard was hostess recently at an informal bridge party and tea which she gave at her apartment at the St. Xavier.

OSSEWAARDE.—An informal bridge party was the diversion planned Thursday afternoon by Mrs. James Ossewaarde, who asked a group of friends to her home on Alcatraz on that afternoon. Following the card games, tea was enjoyed.

ARRIVALS.

FEE.—Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Fee and their daughter, Miss Marcia Fee, returned Saturday from San Diego, where they have been visiting for the past two weeks.

KING.—Misses Hazel and Genevieve King, who have been sojourning for the past week at Saratoga, returned Thursday to their home on Broadway.

PARROTT.—Mrs. John Parrott arrived Sunday from New York, where she has been passing the winter. She was called home because of the serious illness of her son, John Parrott, Jr., who is confined to the Red Cross Hospital in San Mateo.

SPROUL.—Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Sproul and the former's mother, Mrs. J. D. Sproul, arrived this morning on the Matson liner Manoa from Honolulu, where they have been enjoying a brief visit.

WILDER.—Mrs. Jane Wilder arrived Thursday morning from Honolulu on the Moana, which has been eight days in making the trip from the Islands, having been delayed by the heavy storms.

DEPARTURES.

COLEMAN.—Robert Coleman, Jr., left Saturday for Yale, after having spent the holidays with his family at Burlington.

DIBBLEE.—Miss Delphina Dibblee, who has been a guest at Mrs. Martin's home for the past week, left Saturday for Santa Barbara, where she has joined her mother and sister, Mrs. Thomas Dibblee and Miss Inez Dibblee.

JACKLING.—Mr. and Mrs. Daniel C. Jackling sailed Wednesday on their yacht, "Cypress," for a three weeks' hunting and fishing trip to Lower California and Mexico. Their first stop will be at Coronado.

MAILLARD.—Mr. and Mrs. John W. Maillard have gone East, to be away about six weeks. Meanwhile their home in Gough street is being occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Ward Maillard.

MENDELLE.—Miss Zeta Mendell left Wednesday for New York, to be away for the greater part of the coming summer.

OVERTON.—Mrs. C. P. Overton has closed her handsome residence on Jackson street and has gone to Honolulu, where she contemplates spending the next three months.

WINSTON. The Misses Winston, who came up from their home in Los Angeles several weeks ago to visit the Misses Katherine and Christine Donohoe, have gone to Mexico, where they contemplate spending the next few months.

INTIMATIONS

BERRY.—Miss Dorothy Berry, who has been visiting friends in Santa Barbara for the past few weeks, has returned to her home on Sacramento street.

CROCKER. Mrs. William H. Crocker and Miss Helen Crocker are leaving in a few days for New York, joining Miss Ethel Crocker there for a visit of several weeks.

DEAN.—Mrs. Walter E. Dean and Miss Helen Dean are planning to leave the latter part of the month for Southern California, where they will enjoy a sojourn of several weeks. They will visit Coronado, Pasadena and Santa Barbara before returning to this city.

DE GORZA.—A winter welcome will be accorded M. and Mme. Enfillo de Gorza, who will arrive in this city the first part of next week. They will be the guests of Mrs. Frederick Sharon at Manila, and will also visit Dr. Harry Tevis at his country seat at Alhambra. M. and Mme. de Gorza are at present in Los Angeles.

MARTIN.—Mr. and Mrs. Walter Martin and Mountford Wilson were unable to sail Wednesday with the Jackling party, but left Thursday for Coronado, where they will join the yacht.

MESSER.—Mrs. Allen Messer has been enjoying the week-end in Berkeley. She has been the house guest of Mrs. Selim Woodworth, who entertained informally in compliment to the visitor.

O'CONNOR.—Miss Lily O'Connor has returned to her apartments at the Fairmont, after a visit of several weeks in Bakersfield.

PRATT.—Letters have been received from Lieutenant and Mrs. Henry Conger Pratt that they are having a delightful time in San Antonio, Texas, where the former is aide to Brigadier-General George Bell.

RODGERS.—Mr. and Mrs. Philip Mowry Rodgers, whose wedding was an event of last Tuesday, are en route to Honolulu on their honeymoon trip. Mrs. Rodgers was Miss Myrtle Smith.

VINCENT.—Miss Elizabeth Vincent, who left Paris when the war broke out, is settled in Santa Barbara, where she will reside indefinitely.

WILSON.—Mrs. Russell Wilson entertained Sunday evening at her home on Pacific avenue, at a dinner in compliment to her nephew and niece, Mr. and Mrs. William Moore, of New York.

WEALTH WON BY POWDER KINGS RECALLS ARABIAN NIGHTS.

In an article on the powder industry in the American Magazine, Merle Crowell says:

"The war price for smokeless powder is around one dollar a pound; the producing price is variously estimated between forty cents and sixty cents a pound.

"So much wealth is rolling in that the five main companies in the American field, the Du Pont, Atlas, Hercules, Aetna and Canadian Explosives, Ltd., after setting aside sufficient funds to retire their bonds and preferred stock by the end of 1916, are still earning upward of one hundred per cent annually on their common stock.

"The Du Pont Company counts it an off day when it fails to earn one per cent of its stock, Wall street says. After paying an eight per cent extra dividend in August the company cut a $58,000,000 'melon' on October 1st in the declaration of a 200 per cent dividend on the common stock, which had risen from $129 a share, the antebellum price, to $750. At the same time, by one of those bits of financial prestidigitation which the man in the street never understands, the company sold itself to itself for $120,000,000, and changed its name from the E. I. Du Pont de Nemours Powder Company to E. I. Du Pont de Nemours & Company.

"This company has a long-established custom of rewarding employees who have been of special service, with stock at the end of each year. The workmen have also been encouraged to invest their savings in the industry. The result of this policy has been that fifteen per cent of the common stock is held by employees, many of whom have become wealthy in the last year."

—"Please stop at Regent Street!" said the passenger inside the 'bus, curtly. "Right, sir!" replied the conductor, obligingly. Presently he rang the bell, and the 'bus stopped in the middle of a wide and very muddy street. "Here you are, sir," said the conductor. "Can't you drive a little closer to the curb?" growled the fussy passenger as he prepared to alight. "Right, sir!" said the conductor again. Then he shouted loudly to the driver: "Pull up closer to the pavement, Bill! The gent cleans his own boots."—Tit-Bits.

—"I had a seventy-mile drive yesterday," she said, enthusiastically. "There ain't no such thing," retorted the golfer, grimly.—Detroit Free Press.

REMOVAL NOTICE
DAN O'CALLAGHAN
REAL ESTATE AND INSURANCE. has removed his office to
No. 107 Montgomery St., at Sutter St.
 in consolidation with
KERNER & EISERT PHONE
 SUTTER 5767

MINING PROSPECTS GROWING BRIGHTER.

The year 1916 is expected to be of the primest importance to the big mining camps of Nevada, especially Goldfield, Tonopah, Rochester and the Comstock. The new Oatman district will also have an opportunity to prove its prospective values, which so far have exceeded all expectations. In the Goldfield belt several mines, Kewanas, Merger Mines, Sandstorm, Kendall, Blue Bull and Silver Pick are now in a stage of development where 1916 is going to tell the story of their hopes. If one or two of them should make good there would follow a slashing and widespread interest in that camp. So far Merger Mines seems to be in the best position, and this fact is reflected in the persistent demand for the shares of that company at 20. A sharp rise in Merger would naturally start the others going. Experiments in the new oil flotation process seems certain to introduce a new method in saving values in low grade ores that will add substantially to the income of mining properties possessing such ores in quantity. If the new process is a success, and those who have tried it out on a small scale at Salt Lake declare that it is, a new period of success awaits Nevada. Should the price of silver advance to 75 cents, Tonopah would enjoy the golden period of its existence. Investors can do no better than taking a chance in some of the smaller priced properties there. The deep work now underway in the north-end mines of the Comstock will demonstrate the success of the present deep mining in that camp. So far the outlook has been most promising, as shown in the sharp rise of the north-end properties. Fortified with this outlook, the middle group of mines, Chollar and Potosi, and others, are going to raise a fund to unwater the levels to the 3200. The indications are that the Comstock has a new future every bit as promising as in the days of the bonanzas, for several of the companies were in excellent paying ore at the time the flood of waters broke into the levels and stopped deep mining till the present day, when giant pumps and cheap electric power were at hand to clear and work those same levels properly.

—The rate of production at present in the United States is about 38,000,000 tons of pig iron and about 41,000,000 tons of steel ingots per annum. This compares with a rate of 19,000,000 tons of pig iron and 16,000,000 tons of steel ingots one year ago, and 33,500,000 tons of pig iron and 35,000,000 tons of steel ingots at high water mark in the year 1913 for pig iron and 1912 for ingots. Furnaces and mills are running at full capacity, and it is impossible to fully supply the demand for prompt delivery. About 75 per cent of the sales are for domestic consumption, a prime factor indicating the present structural building underway in this country and indicative of prosperous times. President Gary, of United Steel, says: "We have the greatest country with the greatest opportunities, and may properly be hopeful and confident."

—During the week ending January 8th, Tonopah-Belmont shipped bullion valued at $115,000, and Belmont a shipment valued at $80,000. The output of the camp for the week's ore shipments was valued at $204,934. Rochester Mines Co., since the beginning of work early in 1913, produced 52,282 tons of ore valued at $1,015,345, to December 31, 1915. This is an average of $19.52 per ton, a strong and promising showing for a new camp.

—The export and import business of the port of San Francisco show a gain of $29,399,62 for the year of 1915, over the year of 1914. This tremendous increase is a record for the port. The total exports from this city for 1915 were $81,974,817. For the year of 1914 the exports were $64,784,092 and the imports $69,995,217. The figures show a gain of $16,319,462 in export business and an increase of $12,979,600 import business for the year.

—The industrial situation has undergone a complete change during the year. The war itself, in the first place, laid paralysis upon industry and credit. Nobody would assume ability to foresee the effects of such an unprecedented convulsion in the business world. But gradually, as it became certain that Europe would buy enormously in this market, and that our bank reserves would be strengthened by heavy importations of gold, confidence was regained. The purchases of foodstuffs and army supplies gave the initial impulse, but as these increased in proportions, and the effect spread to collateral industries, the natural buoyancy and hopeful spirit of the country was revived. In the last quarter of the year all lines of industry have been working practically to capacity.

—The Crocker National Bank shows an unusually strong financial position at the close of the year, December 31, 1915, on the call of the comptroller of the Treasury. Loans and discounts total $15,472,115; cash on hand, $16,404,787; while the deposits amount to $28,252,623. The resources of this solid institution total $35,769,954. The surplus and undivided profits reach $3,281,432.

—The financial report of Wells Fargo-Nevada National Bank at the close of business, December 31, 1915, shows loans and discounts totaling $19,956,344; $11,193,209 in gilt edge bonds, and $21,134,057 cash in bank. The surplus and undivided profits amount to $5,152,054. The total deposits to $37,416,392, showing the bank to be in a very strong financial position.

—The local national banks all "neglected" to follow the notice given out at Washington that at their annual meeting this week they should vote for boards of directors, so that there should be no "interlocking" directorates under the new Federal bank law. The local banks took the position that the legality of this law is still to be determined.

—Dividends amounting to $795,125 were paid during the month of November in the various sugar stocks and industrial and public service corporation stocks that are listed on the Honolulu Stock Exchange. These figures are compiled from local 'change sheets. For the last five months dividends thus paid amount to $5,234,984, as follows: July, $879,725; August, $1,160,265; Sept., $1,119,704; Oct., $1,280,165; and Nov., $795,125.

E. F. HUTTON & CO. BANKERS

Members—New York Stock Exchange; New York Cotton Exchange, New York Coffee Exchange; New Orleans Cotton Exchange; Liverpool Cotton Association; Chicago Board of Trade.

Private Wire—New York, Chicago to San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Branch Offices—San Francisco, 190 California St., and Hotel St. Francis; Los Angeles, 118 Fourth Street, I. W. Hellman Building.

PIONEER HOUSE OF THE PACIFIC COAST

NOTICE OF ASSESSMENT. Natural Soda Products Company.

Location of principal place of business, San Francisco, California. Location of works, Keeler, Inyo County, California.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that at a meeting of the directors, held on the 29th day of December, 1915, an assessment (No. 2) of One Dollar per share was levied upon the capital stock of the corporation, payable immediately to M. Q. WATTERSON, Treasurer, at Inyo County Bank, Bishop, California.

Any stock upon which this assessment shall remain unpaid on Monday, the 14th day of February, 1916, will be delinquent and advertised for sale at public auction, and, unless payment is made before, will be sold on Monday, the 6th day of March, 1916, at 12 o'clock noon, to pay the delinquent assessment, together with costs of advertising and expenses of sale.

NOAH WRINKLE, Secretary.

Office—No. 613 Market street, San Francisco, California.

ANNUAL MEETING. Joshua Hendy Iron Works.

The regular Annual Meeting of the Stockholders of the Joshua Hendy Iron Works will be held at the office of the Corporation, No. 75 Fremont street, San Francisco, California, on Tuesday, the 8th day of February, 1916, at the hour of 10 o'clock a. m., for the purpose of electing a Board of Directors to serve for the ensuing year, and the transaction of such other business as may come before the meeting.

CHAS. C. GARDNER, Secretary.

Office—75 Fremont street, San Francisco, Cal.

Parish Pump Politicians and the Gasoline Tax

The News Letter was the first publication here to call attention to the manifest injustice of the tax which the parish pump politicians at Washington propose to levy on gasoline and autos. As we have had many approving letters endorsing the stand we took and the clarity with which the whole matter was stated, complementary to our editorial of December 18th—The Crime of Motor Owning—we now present the case more particularly from the oil producers' viewpoint as well.

It is of vital interest not only to every motorist but to every one interested in the prosperity of our country more than in peanut politics to use his, or her, influence with senators and congressmen to have this measure rejected.

Of course, we are well aware that in certain circles the old-fashioned game of corporation-baiting is still regarded as the king of outdoor sports; nevertheless, it is not the producing corporation, but the consumer, who will suffer directly. To be sure, through the stifling of an industry by adding an unnecessary burden, the yeggmen and second story workers who have the nerve to produce oil—to make two blades of grass grow where none grew before—and to make money out of the transaction, ultimately will suffer; but, believe us, it is the small producers who will go under first. Therefore, if there is any virtue in not being able to do a thing very well—President Wilson seems to think so, as shown in his tender care of "small business"—this virtue will receive the usual reward, that of being its own and only reward.

Incidentally California, which already pays $2,500,000 in State and personal property taxes on autos, would pay $4,000,000 more into the Federal treasury, divided thus:

Horse-power tax	$2,500,000
Gasoline tax	$1,500,000

and this would be increased from year to year if (a big if) the number and mileage of the motors of all kinds increased.

The administration at Washington proposes a revenue tax on crude oil, kerosene and gasoline, as well as on automobiles.

We contend that since internal combustion engines furnish more horsepower than all other sources of power combined, and since kerosene and gasoline are the source of this industrial horsepower, these products of petroleum should not be taxed.

A tax of one cent a gallon on kerosene and gasoline would amount to approximately $40,000,000, a tax of 10 cents a barrel on crude oil would aggregate at least $26,000,000, and a tax of $5.00 on each automobile would mean $13,750,000, or a total of approximately $80,000,000.

What crime have these users of petroleum and its products committed that they be so discriminated against?

Gasoline has become almost as much of a daily necessity as wheat. It is used for power, for light, for heat, for food, for medicine, in all the arts, in the manufacture of more than a thousand daily necessities. All these articles are furnished the public as cheaply as they can possibly be made. Why should the government impose a tax that would increase the cost of these articles from 10 to 25 per cent? The consumer in the end pays it all. Would the government think of placing such a revenue tax on wheat?

There are approximately 2,750,000 motor cars in the United States. They use about 500 gallons of gasoline a year each. Therefore, auto owners, besides paying a tax on their cars of $13,750,000, would be compelled to pay a gasoline tax of $16,000,000. In addition to this they would have to pay the big end of the $26,000,000 tax on crude.

The automobile horsepower alone amounts to more than all other horsepower in this country. Its fuel is gasoline. To levy a tax on gasoline would be to burden one of the greatest sources of industrial power, Which ought to be free from taxation. If the 2,000,000 automobile owners of the United States would write to the Senate Finance Committee and the House Ways and Means Committee at Washington, they could by their very number make these legislators think twice before imposing such a tax.

If the proposed tax on crude, kerosene and gasoline is imposed, almost every man, woman and child in America will be affected. It must seem strange to the consumer that our legislators at Washington can think they are gouging the Standard Oil Company by taxing an article of such common use as petroleum. It must seem strange to the consumer that an industry so important as petroleum should be singled out and taxed to death.

The market price of crude oil today is so high that it is difficult to conserve working capital. The price of gasoline has soared because of scarcity of crude, until it is making the cost of automobile travel excessively high. To add from one to two cents a gallon arbitrary revenue tax would be to place a serious embargo upon domestic commerce. The farmer will be compelled to revert to the horse plow. The automobile truck will have to give way to former methods of transportation.

There is no more reason why oil should be taxed than there is why other staple articles, such as coal, iron, flour, lumber, meat, etc., should be taxed. Petroleum and its products have ceased to be luxuries. Any action that affects economy in the operation of gasoline propelled vehicles or machinery is a serious blow to commerce and business.

Therefore, the imposition of the proposed tax would mean the singling out of the oil industry among all the legitimate business of the country for a discriminatory and burdensome tax. It would place gasoline in the same category with liquor and tobacco, which are universally looked upon as harmful to mankind, whereas gasoline has become one of the greatest aids to human progress, annihilation of distance and comfort of mankind.

Every user of petroleum, kerosene and gasoline should oppose the tax as being exorbitant and discriminatory, because it imposes a tax upon articles of common necessity and not upon articles of luxury which is contrary to the settled policy of this government, and ought not to be departed from, because the petroleum industry is now in an abnormal condition owing to the fact that the war demands of Europe have depleted our supplies and prices have already advanced as high as the consuming public can afford to pay, because of the startling decrease in the production of crude petroleum in this country, because the Standard Oil Company could absorb the tax where it had competition and pass it on to the consumer where it had no competition, and because the tax applied at the point of manufacture would necessarily be a tax upon exports, which, if so considered, would be forbidden by Article 1, Section 9, Paragraph 5, of the Federal Constitution, which forbids the taxing of any article exported from any State.

All oil fraternities, automobile associations, farmers and other consumers should get in touch with each other and protest by letters and telegrams to the members of Congress, and especially to members of the Senate Finance Committee and House Ways and Means Committee. Sympathetic protests from other associations and interests should also be secured until the whole citizenship becomes a negative expression voiced loudly to Congress as soon as the bill is introduced.

Ne Sutor Ultra Crepidam

The Christmas number of the Ford Times, a monthly publication devoted to the interests of the Ford automobile, has been received. This little pamphlet, like many others sent out by auto manufacturers, is attractively prepared, and the pictures and typographical make-up excels many publications which are obliged to rely on a cold and unsympathetic public for support.

It may be noted, however, that this number of the Ford paper, as in numerous previous issues, devotes a great deal of space to the matter of preparedness for war. What this exactly has to do with the sale of the Ford auto or the auto business generally we are at loss to understand, especially in view of the fact that the Times comes out squarely against preparedness. We are further in the dark just why we should be instructed on this particular matter by an auto manufacturer, no matter how successful, any more than by one of his mechanics or salesmen. And yet, if some jitney driver should send out a pamphlet to the public announcing that in his—the jitney jehu's—opinion, precautions against burglary are wrong, or that a police force encourages crime, we would regard it as a joke or an exhibition of megalomania.

Mr. Ford, we understand, practically had no education and now has no culture; therefore, for his benefit, we will translate the Latin phrase—Ne sutor ultra crepidam. It means that the shoemaker should stick to his last. This is just as simple and direct, although not so coarse and vulgar, as some of the epigrams reported to have been originated by the eminent peace advocate himself, e. g., when the loan to the allies was being negotiated: "They (the British and French commissioners) should be tinned out of the country."

* * *

Street Cars Cause More Accidents than Automobiles

Nearly twice as many persons were killed or injured in street railway accidents in Massachusetts during the year 1914 as in automobile accidents, observes the Massachusetts Highway Commissioner in his report for that year, recently issued.

"Any computation made," he states, "on assuming an ordinary mileage for automobiles, and taking the actual mileage of the street railways, will show that the motor vehicle runs several times as many miles as the street car does before it either kills or injures any one."

Considering only accidents to persons who were not passengers, 10,000 street cars killed or injured 1,491 persons, and about 100,000 automobiles and trucks killed or injured 3,304. Some person was either killed or injured for every 16,000 miles that a street car was operated, and one person for every 110,000 miles a motor vehicle was operated, assuming that the automobile traveled an average of 5,000 miles in the year.

"In accident cases it often happens," the commissioner observes, "that the pedestrian, the bicycle rider or the driver of a carriage, is careless or reckless and to blame, rather than the operator of the motor car. It is certainly deplorable that so many accidents occur, but it must be born in mind that some accidents are unavoidable, no matter how careful the operators of motor cars may be."

The figures given and observations made confirm those of the coroner of Cook County for street accidents in Chicago, those of the New York police department, and the accident reports of the Boston police department, which show that only a small minority of accidents are due to the fault of motor vehicle operators, and that the ratio of accidents per mile traveled is much smaller for automobiles than for street cars and horse-drawn vehicles.

* * *

Auto Licenses Pass Million Mark

Superintendent H. A. French of the State Motor Vehicle Department announces the following figures to last Saturday on motor vehicle registrations for 1916: Receipts, $1,041,768.30. Registrations (approximately) 100,000.

* * *

Ohioans Fear Federal Tax

Ohio will be hit hard if the Congress imposes the proposed Federal tax on cars to be levied at the factory on the basis of horsepower in the machine. Statistics gathered show there are 448 motor vehicle factories scattered throughout the country. In Ohio there are fifty-two factories. Michigan, with eighty-six, and New York, with sixty, lead Ohio.

* * *

Unique Mercer Body Details

On viewing the Mercer exhibit, one is immediately impressed with the many refinements in body details. The center cowl, streamline body styles, which made the Mercer so conspicuous a year ago, are still maintained, but many little improvements are observed.

For instance, the auxiliary seats of the six passenger model when not in use fold into compartments built under a center cowl. These compartments, and the entire back of the front seats, are beautifully finished in black walnut paneling. Doors that roll out of sight just like a roll top desk cover, hide the extra seats from view when they are not in use. Black walnut paneling is also used back of the front seats on the Sporting Model. There are three separate compartments built in under the center cowl of this car. The middle one is large enough to conveniently carry an ordinary size suit case. The others can be used to carry miscellaneous items. Instead of carrying the tools in the conventional type of tool kit stored away somewhere where they are rather hard to get at, the Mercer people have conceived the idea of building a compartment in the right front door, which holds each tool in its proper place. This door does away with the necessity of unrolling a tool kit and scattering tools around as formerly.

* * *

Make Up Your Mind Beforehand

"More good, valuable time is wasted by automobile buyers to-day than in any other business because these purchasers do not have a definite idea of what essentials of designs and construction the car they desire must have," says M. M. Hartmann of the Hartmann Motor Sales Agency, distributors for Paige cars. "If practically every buyer had a definite idea of just what he wanted, what he was going to buy in the way of essentials in design and construction, he would not only save considerable of his own time, but would do away with the annoyance of calls from the motor car salesman who represents makes that in price or design in the end are not desirable to his particular taste.

"Not over twenty-five per cent of the motor car buyers to-day absolutely have a definite idea of the car they are going to purchase. They shop around, listen to this salesman and that salesman, and in many instances in the end buy something that proves to be unsatisfactory and not what they desired in the beginning.

"Not to waste the time of prospective buyers as well as our own, our company has formulated certain questions which we generally put to the buyer before we talk business, outlining a car which we think fills every legitimate demand of the user of to-day. It is outlined on the practical efficiency of our Paige car, and after our customer reads it and cares to have further demonstration or be enlightened upon the particular construction and design, we are always pleased to accommodate, but with this scheme we have a definite point to start from, which usually results favorably for our business."

* * *

Passing of the Spavined Gypsy Nag

Long before the first robin dares to set foot on northern soil, John Floris, a South American gypsy, and band of co-workers, living in a small cottage in West Twenty-fifth street, Indianapolis, will have started for the Pacific Slope over the old National road in a motor propelled palace, that will, in comparison, make the main ticket wagon of a three-ring circus look like a country hotel 'bus.

This resplendent domicile is built on a Buick D-4 one-ton truck chassis, which is equipped with a Buick valve-in-head 37 horsepower motor, and mounted on pneumatic tires. The body was built expressly for Mr. Floris. It is the first of the kind ever turned out in this country, for indeed the genial and progressive Mr. Floris is the first of his kind to discard the horse for the motor car. While this nomadic vehicle is not equipped with quite all of the conveniences of the modern apartment, it has all the latest motor appliances, and will be far ahead of anything in gypsy rolling stock ever seen.

The old, time-honored Romany love for gaudy paint and colored glass finds its fondest hopes more than realized in this newest thing in motor cars, and it will be a dull citizen indeed who will not stand awed and bewildered when this gasoline gypsy wagon of many colors thunders through the towns and villages along the old National trail.

When asked in regard to his plans for the future, the Latin-featured and picturesque Mr. Floris replied in well-broken English: "Humph, we all early start Californy, San Francisco." Whereupon his jewelry bedecked wife added, as she laid aside a big briar pipe, "Etaoin shrdlu cmfwyj okog."

* * *

A First-Class Garage

A self-respecting man respects his car, and he insures the painstaking attention to which every car is entitled by keeping it at Dow & Green's Garage in Taylor street, between O'Farrell and Geary. Service is the slogan of this deservedly popular garage.

New Home of Overland

All contracts and arrangements have been completed for the erection of the new Overland home in San Francisco, on the west side of Van Ness avenue, with a frontage of 120 feet, running from the corner of Bush street southerly to Fern avenue, with a depth of 220 feet. The final details were approved by General Manager A. D. Plughoff of J. W. Leavitt & Company, on his recent visit to the Overland factory at Toledo.

In speaking of the new home Plughoff says: "There seems to be an impression that the Leavitt interests have been merged with that of the Overland Company, from the fact that the Willys-Overland Company has purchased the site of our new home. This, however, is erroneous, as the Willys-Overland Company is merely our new landlord.

"Over a year ago we realized that our present quarters was not adequate to our present volume of business, not considering even the natural increase we feel that we are to enjoy. Hence we had to look around for more commodious quarters.

"Here we found our first stumbling block: there was not a building in existence, in or adjacent to automobile row, that was large enough to accommodate us. We found many property owners who were willing to erect structures for us, but all such offers were accompanied by long leases which, from the standpoint of good business, could not be accepted.

"Our contract with the Willys-Overland Company does not run on indefinitely; therefore, we did not think it advisable to sign any lease that would run beyond the life of our contract with the Overland factory. The officials of the Overland factory also appreciated our situation as well as the growing demand for Overland cars.

"The necessity for larger quarters for us as Coast distributors became so pronounced that the Willys-Overland factory decided to purchase the land for our new building.

"The new building and ground represents an investment of over $400,000, which, by the way, is a compliment to California, as it shows their faith in the future of business here.

"The building will be a six story structure which will give about 185,000 square feet. The full width of the first floor, running back 100 feet, will be devoted to the sales room, with a 22 foot ceiling. At the rear of the salesroom will be a mezzanine floor on which will be located the accounting department."

The Convertible Car

The next big step in the automobile business is the all-absorbing topic among manufacturers, dealers and other visitors at the New York Show. A few years ago it was a question between full-floating and semi-floating axles. Then came the question of fore doors or no fore doors. Starting systems versus the hand crank next agitated the industry. Then followed debates on the streamline body versus the old style. During the past year the multiple cylinder type of motor has commanded wide attention, particularly among the manufacturers themselves. But the most interesting development of this year to many people is the arrival of a high-quality, low cost, enclosed car. Among the cars of this type shown at the Grand Central Palace none has attracted more attention than the Jeffery Sedan. It will be remembered by close followers of the business that the first motor Sedan was shown by Jeffery four years ago—the first closed car without fore doors and providing access to the front compartment between divided front seats.

The new Jeffery Sedan possesses all the beauty of the original car which sold at a high price, yet the 1915 product costs only a little over $1,000, and has a demountable winter top.

New Light Eight on Local Market

Embodying features which stamp it as one of the most interesting automobiles that has ever been introduced to the local motor buying public and sponsored by the Lewis Spring and Axle Company of Chelsea, Michigan—one of the oldest automobile manufacturing concerns in the United States—the Hollier Eight car arrived in this city recently, and is now on display in the salesrooms of the Cole Pacific Motor Company.

Considerable interest centers about this latest addition to San Francisco's automobile row, as it is one of the few light eight cylinder cars on the market. The local Hollier eight arrivals include a three-passenger roadster and a five-passenger touring car. Both are handsomely finished and will undoubtedly enjoy a wide appeal in the local market.

A Stockingful

Motor cars have figured as Christmas gifts in far greater numbers this year than ever before, according to advices that have reached the Studebaker Corporation. Many dealers have reported that purchasers specified Christmas morning deliveries for new cars. In most cases the heads took their families by surprise. Judging from the number of Studebakers presented as Christmas gifts, the motor car is becoming more widely recognized than ever before as an ideal expression of the Christmas spirit. Close to 1,000 Studebaker automobiles were ordered during the month of December, with Christmas morning delivery requested in each case.

Jitney Not a "Tool."

That a jitney 'bus is not a tool within the intent of the law was the decision of Judge Richards of the municipal court at Tomah, Wis., when the driver of a jitney, who was served with an attachment, claimed the car was the only tool wherewith he earned his living. The action followed the seizure of the jitney by the sheriff in payment of a debt.

MoToRoL

"It suits because it doesn't soot"

If you want to prolong the life of your engine
If you want to eliminate smoke and carbon
If you want to reduce your oil expense

Use MoToRoL

Hughson & Merton, Inc.

530 Golden Gate Avenue
San Francisco, Cal.

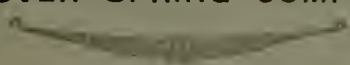

CRINKLET TOWELS
WASHLESS
USE LIKE AN ORDINARY TOWEL

AUTOISTS
SHOULD NEVER BE WITHOUT THEM
=

Your Grocer Sells 'Em

HOOVER SPRING COMPANY

Guaranteed Auto Springs
617 Turk St., near Van Ness Ave.

Quick Repair Work
Phone Prospect 460

TIRES VULCANIZING

TOM H. ELKINGTON

Long Mileage Tires and Second-Hand Tires
Everything Needed for the Bus

1135 VAN NESS AVE.—Near Geary Phone PROSPECT 1566

PANHARD OIL

FREE FROM CARBON

BERNARD I. BILL

543 GOLDEN GATE AVE. SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

LARKINS & COMPANY

CARRIAGE AND AUTOMOBILE BODY BUILDERS
Established in 1867

1610-1612-1614 VAN NESS AVENUE

Between Center and Sacramento Sts. Phone Prospect 188

Where their entire attention will be devoted to the prompt delivery of the best work that a modern plant, high-class mechanics and materials can produce.

SOMETHING NEW

Safety Locks for Fords

A device that locks both the throttle and spark levers of the Ford is offered by the Safety Lock Co., Locke, N. Y., under the name Safety. This is a simple lock, consisting of a bar which holds the two levers—gas and spark—in off position, when the padlock is in place. Price, 50 cents.

* * *

Clear View Rain Guard

The Clear View Rain Guard Co., 205 West Lombard street, Baltimore, Md., has a device for the purpose of keeping out the rain that usually drives through the joint in ventilating windshields. This clamps on to the lower edge of the upper half of the shield and the action of the wind against the front of the glass presses the upper half of the shield against the lower half, thereby shutting out the rain. The more pressure of wind and storm against the glass the tighter it hugs to the lower section. It is transparent, and therefore does not interfere with the vision. Price, $1.00.

* * *

A New Easyon Chain

The Leather Tire Goods Co., Niagara Falls, N. Y., announces that is bringing out a new size of Easyon chain especially for Fords and other small cars. The new size will be 3½ inch and will fit 3 or 3½ inch tires and sell at $2.60 per set of 8. The second size, 4½ inch, will fit 4 or 4½ inch tires and sell at $3.50 per set, and the larger size, 5½, will fit 5 or 5½ inch tires and sell for $4.50 per set. Easyon chains are individual chains which fasten to the spokes with leather covered fasteners having snaps at each end for holding and adjusting the cross chains.

* * *

Hero Safety Fender

The Hero Safety Fender is made by the Hero Manufacturing Company, Finance Building, Philadelphia, Pa. This safety appliance for motor vehicles has a direct connection between the foot brake and the fender, and is at all times under the driver's control. When not in use it is out of the way. It is said to withstand a hard blow, but does not injure the person that it lifts out from under the car. A small push pedal, very much resembling a foot throttle, is placed directly under the brake pedal, and any operation of the brake in times of emergency also operates the fender.

* * *

Rothermich Combination Light

The Rothermich combination tail and signal light and license tag holder, made by the Rothermich Co., 3944 Olive street, St. Louis, Mo., is a device operated from the foot brake; pressure on the pedal sets the signal "Slow" and sounds a loud buzzer, although the buzzer attachment is optional. When driving, the part reading "Slow" points toward the ground.

* * *

Lewis Nojar Clock

The Pennsylvania Rubber Co., Jeanette, Pa., is manufacturing the Lewis Nojar rubber incased cock, the invention of S. G. Lewis, general manager of the company. The clock is incased in pure red rubber, which is said to absorb all road vibrations. As the rubber is non-conducting, the clock is immune from electrical disturbances. The casing fits about the entire clock, leaving only the face exposed. The clock is stem wind and guaranteed for two years. Two models are made, one for the Ford, which is attached to the steering wheel, and the other for dash attachment to all other makes of cars.

Automobile Starting and Lighting Systems

Give Satisfactory Results When Given Proper Attention

We specialize on electrical equipment, storage batteries, etc. and guarantee satisfaction.

GUARANTEE BATTERY COMPANY

639 Van Ness Ave. BRAND & CUSHMAN Phone Franklin 2772

TELEPHONE FRANKLIN 1836

FOR A

Touring Car, Limousine or Taxicab

The White Star Line

AUTO TOURING COMPANY

RATES: 7 Passenger Touring Cars $2.00 per Hour

7 Passenger Closed Cars $2.50 per Hour

Special Rates by week or month.

TAXICAB RATES FOR SHORT TRIPS

Day and Night Service

Our Taxi Service is Most Reasonable and Unexcelled. We use seven passenger closed cars as above for this service which bear no mark of identification signifying a rent car. The "Zone" rate applies to all Taxi service so when ordering a car ask the tariff first.

We Make a Specialty of Repairing Auto Lamps, Radiators and Fenders at Short Notice
PHONE MARKET 751

Power Lamp Reflector
Be Electric Sign Co., Inc.
528 GOUGH ST. SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Manufacturers of LAMPS, LANTERNS, REFLECTORS of all Description
METAL SPINNING

Tips to Automobilists

(CUT THIS OUT.)

The News Letter recommends the following garages, hotels and supply houses. Tourists will do well to cut this list out and keep it as a guide:

PALO ALTO.—LARKIN'S CAFE—just opened. The only strictly first-class cafe on the Wishbone Route devoted to the patronage of automobile owners and their families. Corner of University avenue and The Circle.

SAN JOSE.—LAMOILLE GRILL, 36-38 North First street. The best French dinner in California, 75 cents, or a la carte. Automobile parties given particular attention.

PALO ALTO.—PALO ALTO GARAGE, 443 Emmerson St., Tel., P. A. 333. Auto livery at all hours. Tires and sundries in stock. Gasoline, oil, repairing, lathework, vulcanizing. Open day and night.

The Six of Sixteen

Osen McFarland Co.

Golden Gate Avenue

CLASS "A" GARAGE, INC.

Strictly Fire Proof Building

STORAGE SUPPLIES REPAIRS

BEST SERVICE ASSURED

735-751 POST STREET SAN FRANCISCO

TELEPHONE PROSPECT 2280

WHERE SERVICE MEANS SERVICE

M & H GARAGE

819-835 ELLIS ST. Between Polk and Van Ness Avenue

WHERE THE PRIVATE OWNER FEELS AT HOME

The Background of the War Zone

Americans who have settled in the Canadian Northwest are reported to be returning in large numbers to their former homes in Nebraska, Iowa and elsewhere, through fear of conscription. Canada has patriotically rallied to the defense of the empire, but it is not at all likely that conscription would be resorted to even if enlistment had been less ready. A large element in the strength of the empire is the spontaneous loyalty of its overseas dominions.

The last ditch fight at this session of Congress will not be made by the foes of preparedness, but by the unterrified defenders of the pork barrel. The chairmen of the rivers and harbors and public buildings committees are preparing appropriation bills calculated to eat up revenues to the amount of $50,000,000 to $100,000,000. They are desperate gentlemen who know precisely what they want and for whom they want it, and, besides, they know where the votes come from.

How serious the revolt in China has become is somewhat uncertain, for in so huge and inorganic a country actual conditions are even more difficult to discover than in Mexico, where they have at times been something of a mystery. Moreover, there are interests with considerable machinery for publicity which distort news from the Far East and make some reservation of judgment only discreet. In China, revolution, like everything else, is on a colossal scale; the Tai-ping rebellion in the 19th century lasted for a generation, and by some estimates cost 40,000,000 lives. The world was hardly aware of that terrific struggle in which "Chinese" Gordon won his first laurels; if China is in for another of its periodical convulsions the world is just now in no position to be shocked. But the risings may be greatly exaggerated, and it is possible that Yuan Shih-Kai has correctly read the will of the country. It is for the Chinese to show whether they want progress of reaction.

Prof. Ernst Haeckel, the veteran German biologist and philosopher, expresses the opinion that the war has ended the "illusion" of the existence of a providential God, predestination and the immortality of the soul. It is comparatively easy to find additional proof of what you already believe. The professor was freed from the "illusion" long ago. The war hasn't changed his personal opinion regarding it, and the layman may be permitted to doubt whether it is as effectually "ended" as the professor believes. In fact, there is abundant evidence that the war has had the contrary effect upon many people.

A majority of the 25,000 employees in government navy yards and shops and stations will receive increases in pay. Secretary Daniels made this announcement at Washington recently in making public the results of hearings conducted by the navy department, at which committees from 10 yards made statements.

The torpedoing of the new Japanese line Yasaka Maru in the Eastern Mediterranean by a submarine, German or Austrian, has prompted the Nippon government to despatch three war vessels with orders to protect Japanese vessels. All those on board the vessel were picked up by a French gunboat at midnight, and were landed at Port Said.

The British Parliament has voted to prolong its life eight months longer, and to increase the strength of the army to four million men.

Ten thousand delegates, representing all communities, were present in Bombay Monday at the opening of the annual Indian rational congress, which was notable for the loyal and patriotic utterances of the speakers. "Millions in India are waiting to serve," was the keynote of the opening speeches. In the presidential address Sir Satyendra Sinha said the supreme feeling in India was "admiration for the self-imposed burden England was bearing in the struggle for liberty and freedom, and pride that India had proved herself not a whit behind the rest of the empire in the assistance given the mother country."

Wedding Presents.—The choicest variety to select from at Marsh's, who is now permanently located at Post and Powell streets.

Dr. Byron Haines, Dentist, has resumed practice at his office in Gunst Building, S. W. corner Geary and Powell streets.

The Crocker National Bank OF SAN FRANCISCO

Condition at Close of Business December 31, 1915

RESOURCES

Loans and Discounts	- - -	$15,472,115.84
U. S. Bonds	- - -	2,015,600.00
Other Bonds and Securities	- - -	1,507,452.03
Capital Stock in Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco	- - -	120,000.00
Customers' Liability under Letters of Credit	- - -	249,999.20
Cash and Sight Exchange	- - -	16,404,787.85
		$35,769,954.92

LIABILITIES

Capital	- - -	$2,000,000.00
Surplus and Undivided Profits	- - -	3,281,432.40
Circulation	- - -	1,969,900.00
Letters of Credit	- - -	265,999.20
Deposits	- - -	28,252,623.32
		$35,769,954.92

OFFICERS

Wm. H. Crocker	President	J. B. McCargar	Assistant Cashier
Chas. E. Green	Vice-President	G. W. Ebner	Assistant Cashier
Jas. J. Fagan	Vice-President	B. D. Dean	Assistant Cashier
W. Gregg, Jr.	Cashier	J. M. Masten	Assistant Cashier

John Clausen	Mgr. Foreign Dept.	J. Suckermann,	Asst. Mgr. Foreign Dept.
G. Feris Baldwin			Auditor

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Wm. H. Crocker	Charles T. Crocker	Chas. E. Green
Frank G. Drum	A. F. Morrison	W. Gregg, Jr.
Jas. J. Fagan	George W. Scott	Henry T. Scott

VISIT CAPITOL CITY of your STATE

A Day's Trip—Well Spent

Visit beautiful Capitol Grounds—Capitol Building—Sutter's Fort—Crocker Art Gallery—Riverside Drive, etc.
$3.35 Round Trip Saturdays and Sundays, with return limit Monday.

OAKLAND, ANTIOCH & EASTERN RAILWAY

NEW PARISIAN FRENCH LAUNDRY

Mme. C. La FON

First Class Work at Reasonable Prices
Laces and Lace Curtains a Specialty
Club, Restaurant and Hotel Service

991 OAK STREET Phone Park 4962
SAN FRANCISCO

BRUSHES

623 Sacramento Street, between Kearny and Montgomery Streets.

With full line of brushes, Brooms and Feather Dusters, on hand and made to order. Janitor supplies of all kinds. Ladders, Buckets, Chamois. Metal Polish and Cleaning Powders. Hardware. Wood and Willow Ware.

Call, write or telephone Keary 5787

WM. BUCHANAN

Tel. Kearny 1461 Private Exchange Connecting all Warehouses

SAN FRANCISCO WAREHOUSE CO.

Warehousemen Forwarding Agents Distributors Public Weighers
Spur Track Connection with all Railroads
Main Office—625-647 Third St., San Francisco, Cal.

INSURANCE

The Industrial Accident Commission rules that where a newspaper reporter, whose duties required the gathering of news in the town in which he lived and in the town two miles away where the paper was published, was injured while returning at the close of his day's work to his home on the usual and best bicycle route, on a bicycle furnished by the employer, his leg being crushed by a passing automobile, held that he was not performing a service as reporter at the time of injury, and therefore not entitled to compensation. Applicant was going home, and his risks were those of any other bicycle rider proceeding along that road and did not arise out of his employment. His risks were those of the commonality. The commission holds that it cannot obtain jurisdiction over a controversy where the employer or insurance carrier applies for the adjustment of a controversy unless the injured employee consents thereto, otherwise the employee would be deprived of his right of election to sue for damages in the courts on the ground of personal gross negligence of the employer.

* * *

John T. Fogarty, assistant manager of the Royal and Queen for the Pacific Department, has been re-elected president of the San Francisco Board of Fire Commissioners.

* * *

At the annual meeting of the Casualty Adjusters' Association of California, R. P. Wisecarver, of the London and Lancashire, was elected president; A. W. Sisk, vice-president; and C. S. Pearson, secretary-treasurer. The association is giving close consideration to a plan for reducing the cost of medical attendance.

* * *

Superintendent of Agencies for the Edward Brown & Sons general agency at San Francisco W. H. Gibbons, is making a two months' tour of the Pacific Coast field.

* * *

Insurance Commissioner Phelps, of California, has sent out notice to all casualty companies operating in the State to the effect that all such concerns must compute their compensation loss reserves at 74 per cent of their total earned casualty premiums, instead of the 50 per cent requirement fixed in schedule "P" of the convention blank. This 74 per cent standard will be applied to all such business written by companies reporting to the California department whether the business be written within or without the State. Heretofore, several companies from other States have been permitted to report their other State's business on a 52 per cent basis, but this year the 74 per cent basis will be strictly enforced.

* * *

Insurance Commissioner Phelps has requested a full attendance of casualty men at a meeting called for this week, at which time a final decision will be made as to whether the Casualty Adjustment Inspection Bureau shall make audits on all compensation policies. But for the strenuous opposition of the State fund there would be no doubt that such an agreement would be favored. It is understood that Governor Johnson is back of the State fund in this opposition, while the Commissioner strongly favors the proposition.

* * *

Certified copies of the original articles of incorporation of the Tokyo Marine, written in Japanese, were filed with the Secretary of State recently, and application will be made for a California license—the company proposing to compete with California and foreign concerns in general insurance, the elasticity of its charter permitting it to do so. The company is already doing business in this country and is capitalized at about two million dollars, and claims assets of exceeding seven and a half millions.

George A. Moore, for forty years prominent in accident and life insurance circles, passed away at his home in Alameda, Saturday. He had been actively engaged in business until a week ago. For twenty-five years he was president of the Pacific Mutual Life, and later was chosen as head of the West Coast Life. At the time of his death he was a director of the West Coast-San Francisco Life.

* * *

Charles A. Craft, secretary and underwriting manager of the Pacific States Fire since organization of the company, has resigned, his duties as special agent for the Phoenix of London requiring all his attention.

* * *

Edward Brown & Sons, Coast representatives, have applied for admission of the Hamilton Fire into Oregon.

* * *

Contending that the quarterly insurance license tax is an occupational tax and should be forced against all occupations, the Portland insurance agencies are opposing its collection.

* * *

L. E. Thompson has been named receiver for the Mutual Fire Insurance Company of Portland. Unpaid claims, seven thousand; assets, three hundred.

* * *

Commissioner Wells of Oregon announces his intention to abide by the opinion of the Attorney-General, which is to the effect that under the law of 1889 any one who solicits insurance or receives an application therefor, or who attempts as a broker or middleman to place any fire insurance, is an insurance agent.

* * *

The Capital Fire of Sacramento has been appointed general agent for the Globe Indemnity.

* * *

Three companies and nine firemen were dropped from the Tacoma fire department Saturday in order to reduce city expenditures to conform with the amount allowed in the budget.

* * *

W. J. Seroy has resigned the position of agency organizer for the Columbia Life & Trust of Portland to accept the general agency of the company for Northern California, with headquarters at San Francisco. J. M. Kuhn, until January 1st manager at Portland for the Germania, succeeds Seroy as agency organizer for the Columbia Life & Trust. The Germania has not yet appointed a successor to Kuhn.

* * *

The Tacoma Life Underwriters' Association this week elected Arthur Finley president, Harry Pelletier and William Peterson vice-presidents, Frank Neyhart secretary, and John P. Dole treasurer.

The

ANGEL

—a fast Santa Fe train furnishing the only through sleeper service to

San Diego

—goes via San Joaquin Valley and Los Angeles

—daily from here 4:00 p. m.

When you go to Southern California take this superior train. Makes good connections with trains to Tia Juana Race Track. San Diego Exposition—again during 1916.

Santa Fe City Offices

673 Market Street, San Francisco—Phone Kearny 315

Market Street Ferry—Phone Kearny 4980

1218 Broadway, Oakland—Phone Lakeside 425

SAN FRANCISCO
NEWS LETTER
California Advertiser.

Devoted to the Leading Interests of California and the Pacific Coast.

Vol. XCI

San Francisco, Cal., Saturday, January 22, 1916

No. 4

The SAN FRANCISCO NEWS LETTER AND CALIFORNIA ADVERTISER is printed and published every Saturday by the Proprietor, Frederick Marriott, 21 Suter street, San Francisco, Cal. Tel. Kearny 3534. Entered at San Francisco, Cal., Post-office as second-class mail matter.

Chicago Office—Geo. Hische, 1310 Westminster, Westminster Building Chicago.

London Office—George Street & Co., 30 Cornhill, E. C., England. Matter intended for publication in the current number of the SAN FRANCISCO NEWS LETTER AND CALIFORNIA ADVERTISER should be sent to the office not later than 5 p. m. Wednesday.

Subscription Rates (including postage)—1 year, $4.00; 6 months, $2.25; Foreign—1 year, $6.00; 6 months, $3.25.

—Congress vs. Wilson equals Hysteria vs. Calmness.

—Think of old Senator Works yelping for war! We'll have Bryan wanting to lead a regiment next.

—It seemed sort of fitting that Huerta should die when the situation over Mexico had reached its most turbulent stage.

—Not even the Kaiser could have survived the many operations that the newspaper despatches have inflicted upon him.

—Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown—and Yuan is finding that just as uneasy is the head that is awaiting a crown.

—Army man wants Alcatraz Island fortified. Not necessary. Just turn loose that fog siren, and any hostile fleet would flee.

—Man named Cashmaker has filed a petition in bankruptcy. The old question, "What's in a name?" gets new life from this.

—Europe, with all its fighting, is able to keep the corner of an eye on China, and wonder if there will be any chance to get a slice of it.

—Oakland has barred the jitney 'bus from the business district of the city. Hats off to the first city to show courage and common sense!

—King Peter has the gout; nobody knows what the Kaiser has; Yuan rebellious; Greece's ruler is in a nervous sweat. We'd rather be just plain people.

—Oakland preacher has telegraphed President Wilson that he approves of the latter's course in Mexico. That's about on a par with a little boy writing to Santa Claus.

—The newest trouble in Mexico has put many a Congressman and Senator on the front page of the newspapers who otherwise would not have got beyond the Congressional Record.

—The plan to light Market street brilliantly will probably be given up because of the expense. The so-called cleaning of Market street costs far more than it is worth, because men instead of modern machinery are used. But men can vote. Hence they are kept at work. And it costs money. So we haven't any money for lights. City government is a wonderful thing, isn't it?

—The average congressman who is howling for intervention would howl still more loudly in anguish of spirit if it were suggested that he lead a company of fighting men into Mexico.

—With one or two killings a week in San Francisco—in one case four deaths in a batch—the sob sisters are having a beautiful and hysterical time weeping over the troubles of criminals.

—One of the best preliminaries to preparedness would be to send a lot of patriots to Congress instead of a flock of politicians who care more for their own fences than for their nation's good.

—Gunman who shot woman has surrendered on hearing that she will recover. He knew that if she died he might come before a severe judge and get as much as two or three years. As it is, he will probably merely be told that it isn't polite to shoot ladies.

—The police continue sporadic raids against Chinese gambling houses. "Why you all time laid me—why you no laid white man some times, give me lest?" is the Celestial query. You'll have to pay the policeman some blibe money, John. You sabbee—blibe money?

—We apologize for saying that murderers are not punished here. Man who killed his friend was given the horrible sentence of ten years. That's fearful—but people must be taught that society has some rights, and that now and then it can be frightfully severe.

—While the farmers are buying automobiles, the State is having a conniption fit in trying to extend the credit of the agriculturists and add to their incomes. Blessed be the farmer—the rest of us must merely be contented with paying huge prices for what he produces.

—It is declared in defense of Lowell High School that organized hazing has not existed there. The boy who had both legs broken when he was pushed over an embankment by a gang of bullies is unable to see what difference it makes whether the brutality is organized or disorganized.

—The police report on the Exposition shows that of nearly nineteen million visitors only eighty-three became sufficiently "lit up" to require police attention. With such figures as these, how is San Francisco to live up to the name that a lot of Easterners have given her of being an exceedingly immoral city?

—The police say they can't close the pool rooms because the police judges refuse to convict the offenders; the police judges say they cannot convict them because the police do not secure sufficient evidence. And anybody who knows anything knows that neither the police nor the police judges want to suppress the pool rooms.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

WHY NOT CONSOLIDATE THE CITY'S STREET CAR LINES?

The present holdover resentment on the part of many San Franciscans against the new management of the United Railroads is difficult to understand in the broad light of marked changes for the better on the part of the present Lilienthal administration of the company. Apparently the shadow of the previous management still rises the cholera and ill-will of most of the hard-shell roorback citizens to whom the very idea of the United Railroads has the same effect as a red rag on a raging bull. These citizens insist on seeing the solution of the problem of the city's street car lines only in the success of the present nucleus of the municipal railway system. Indeed, their hope has been more persistently and widely intensified through the success made by the municipal lines during the recent exposition season. The present city administration promoted and brought this system into practical service, the first of its kind in this country, and naturally Mayor Rolph and the board of supervisors seek to amplify their enterprise into a much greater success, and thus demonstrate to the world that municipal ownership of street railroads is a practical financial success. Great credit is due them for what they have accomplished.

Under the present management of the United Railroads a spirit of conciliation and goodwill towards the rival Municipal Railway has been carefully observed, but even strangers within our gates easily recognize that special privileges and special care hedges the municipally owned cars and tracks. Such acts are natural, and will increase with time, as the municipal lines are the proteges, the pet utility of the city fathers, and every loyal taxpayer expects the Mayor and the supervisors to press all precautions and diligence to make them a success as an important daily cash receiver on the investment made by the city.

Naturally, this rivalry in street car competition between the two companies is leading to more and more friction, and any man with ordinary business acumen and experience will safely forecast something more serious than irritated feelings in the near future. Such being the situation, it is evident that some fair and reasonable adjustment of the problem should be made before serious entanglements occur.

Several years ago, a somewhat parallel case occurred between two local public utilities, which was handled expeditiously and satisfactorily to the three parties concerned, the two competing telephone companies and the public. In this case the Pacific Telephone Company bought out the franchise and properties of the Home Telephone Company, and thus with one stroke cut off the extra charge of a second phone to subscribers and eliminated almost all of the regular monthly overhead charges of the Home Telephone Company, aside from furnishing a simpler and far more satisfactory service. A similar elimination of overhead charges and a far more satisfactory service in transfer and other public convenience in street car service would be accomplished were the city to buy the United Railroads.

The time is ripe for such a deal. The Municipal system is a success and solidly on its feet; it is a compact organization, a piece of machinery well tried out in every detail. It is eminently fitted by experience in management and civil service to take over and handle the additional business of the United Railroads. Some time ago there were rumors from an Eastern source that the United Railroads would listen to an offer of purchase. There is just as strong likelihood now that they would put a price on their property if approached, as did the Spring Valley Water Company.

The value of the bonds issued by a city are limited to a certain percentage of the regular gross valuation that is placed on assessed real estate and improvements, and the funds received are disbursed for schools, hospitals, street work and the like. In this restriction on the percentage of the gross on which bonds may be issued there is an exception; it is in the case of bonds issued to purchase any income paying property such as street car lines. This exception is based on the reason that the receipts in car fares will furnish profits to redeem the bonds as they mature, and to pay the interest on the outstanding bonds issued to pay the railroad for its property. Accordingly in such a deal with the United Railroads the city would be in a position to issue the necessary bonds to make the purchase.

In the hands of the Municipal Railway management, with much of the overhead expense eliminated by the consolidation of the two systems, jitney competition relegated to side streets and other costs duly pruned, the regular daily receipts and profits of the unified system should be the largest in local car line history, and grow in proportion with the expansion of the city, which can then develop new suburbs. This is a practical proposition of prime importance to the future of San Francisco, a proposition which ought to appeal strongly to the taxpayers as well as to the purpose and ideas of Mayor Rolph and the board of supervisors to develop both in extent and intensively the business and residence section of the whole peninsula.

The Art of Playing Both Ends Against the Middle.

CALIFORNIA'S BID FOR NEW SETTLERS.

The Tourist Association, which furnished such notable efficiency during the recent exposition, has interested several prominent organizations of local business and professional men in that problem vital to the hour: After the Exposition, what? The subject has been recognized as of such paramount importance to the residents of Central and Northern California that the counties in these regions have enthusiastically joined in the movement, impelled by that old-time truism that "One for All and All for One" is the best and only successful way to attract business and permanent settlers to California. Team work between the city, with its special influence and organizations in communication with all parts of the world, and the counties, now splendidly equipped with their paraphernalia, exhibits, experience and data accumulated at the recent exposition, is bound to get desirable results under the proper executive head. A united and systematic advertising campaign is suggested; it goes without saying that the leaders in this movement recognize the fact that such a campaign will prove abortive unless handled judiciously and systematically. Another point of prime importance is the proper handling of these settlers on their arrival here. There are numbers of "birds of prey" in the real estate game in this State, as the members of the Housing and Immigration Commission will admit, and care should be exercised that the immigrants do not fall into their clutches. California has suffered numbers of times on a wholesale scale in this particular, for the settlers who were swindled naturally made known their wrongs and wrote back to their home people. Those complaints quickly put up the bars in that country against any further immigration here. California is better equipped, better organized than at any previous period in her development for attracting the best class of settlers, and efforts should be adopted to stamp out this rascality and deception of unconscionable farm land agents, who fatten on the ignorance and simplicity of immigrants. The increasing numbers of settlers who have been treated fairly and are successful will become incomparably the best source of advertising to attract more settlers, and at the same time build up a bulwark of confidence in the future of California. Efforts by local organizations along this line have been made many times in the history of the State, but never has there been a period when the movement was more opportune and promises of record success more certain.

GO TO CHURCH.

The above caption is the slogan in Los Angeles to all erring Christians. Indeed, that and selling lots is the war cry of that angelic city. Is it any wonder that the pastors of the different denominations, and the good Lord knows, and he only knows, how many there are in that thinly spread but enterprising town, are worried about non-attendance. The wicked automobile lures the churchman away to the woods and the fields—albeit some of the wood they see is in a road house and the fields the grass growing on beer barrels. But as the automobile is emptying church and club alike, and being now a poor man's joy and not a rich man's luxury, the clergy are putting forth their best endeavors to compel people to attend church—can it be called divine service?

All old San Franciscans know that the News Letter is the staunchest advocate of the church and church people, but, unfortunately, the News Letter, as belonging to an old and a well established enterprise, is inclined in certain respects to be reactionary. The News Letter believes and will continue to believe that the churchman, in order to win respect and support, must be dignified—not only in demeanor but in language. Perhaps the day has passed when a cleric has to preach upon a Greek error in translating the written word because nowadays people do not learn "the classics" as they did forty odd years ago.

Still, the News Letter contends there is a limit, and it believes when it quotes the following advertisements of church services which appeared in a Los Angeles paper of January 15 that "the limit has about been reached."

At the Church of the People a gentleman called Blight will speak on "Why we love England." Then a lady in another church will tell the Los Angelenos about "God's obligation to man." This church, by the way, is "the Church of the New Civilization." Here is a mental pabulum which should satisfy anybody:

"7:30 p. m.—Monthly Question Drawer on 'Cigar Store Gambling; Christian Science and Homicide; Ford's Peace Ship; Should the Moving Picture Censorship be Abolished? Can a Movie Actor be a Good Man? Second Marriages Anent President Wilson; If the Kaiser Should Die; Leap Year and Women Proposing; etc.'"

It is, however, reserved for "a gent" of the name of Dr. J. Whitcomb Brougher, D. D., to preach the sermon of the day. Here is what this "clerical gent" offers:

"11 a. m.—'Love on Trial, or How to Tell the Genuine from the Counterfeit.' Anthems by Quartette and Great Choir. Alice Lohr, noted contralto, sings the 91st Psalm (McDermid.)

"7:30 p. m.—'Leap Year—Should Women Propose?' Great vested choir sings. Ray Hastings, famous organist, gives fine organ program.

"Special—G. Harris White (Doc. White), famous baseball pitcher, sings two solos."

To add to the interest, this D. D. has a baseball pitcher sing as a secondary attraction.

Another gentleman will discourse on "The Snoring Christian." A German pastor demands in his sermon "Show Your Colors," which is not being done to any appreciable extent by the Central Powers when blowing up defenseless ships, so the German evangelist is right, probably, in his sermon. "Mexico To-day" should be a timely topic, and the preacher is probably a rabid Republican and desires intervention. Another gentleman asks: "Why Join the Church?" A parson with the war-like name of Maile, wants to know through his sermon "How shall we pray for the war?" The answer may be somewhat belligerently mixed if a few irascible Germans and a pugnacious Englishman attempt to reply.

This is only a fraction of the interesting discourses one can hear on a Sunday in Los Angeles. It is really true that Los Angeles is the only city in the United States where people are turned away from the churches as well as from the theatres. And is there any cause for wonder, when one can be entertained with such remarkably kaleidoscopic discourses and popular baseball pitcher anthemists?

—This country seems to be very nearly unanimous in the opinion that the present army establishment is inadequate, but there is a strong sentiment against any great increase in the regular forces and a feeling proportionately strong against enforced military service. If this situation persists, following the arguments in Congress, the country will be obliged to rely upon volunteers for defense. The question of their reliability naturally confronts those interested in this important question. Militarists, of course, prefer the trained and reliable service soldier: the citizen, never having faced an armed invading foe of veterans, continues to believe that the volunteer will prove reliable enough to answer the purpose.

TOWN CRIER

—Dr. Aked is really a rarely lovable, capable, enthusiastic and altruistic fellow in allowing some other chaps to pull his half-baked chestnuts out of the fire. He has pricked the staid members of the First Congregational Church of this city into semi-nervous prostration by resigning his pastorate and seizing a prominent part on the salary list of Henry Ford to further a perfervid activity that gives every indication of making more disturbance in Europe than the belligerents. Dr. Aked has acquired the solid reputation of being a wizard in raising an extraordinary funds to build new churches for his flocks and then resigning to accept a call in other quarters, there to repeat his usual feat. He has few peers in attracting and holding an audience. It is difficult to fill his place in the pulpit, and thus it is that the churches from which he resigns are usually left with a huge edifice on their hands, a dwindling congregation in prospect and nervous "movie" dreams. On the present Ford peace crusade, Dr. Aked, like other illuminati of the party, seems to have contracted or developed numerous eccentricities more or less fatal to the Burbank breed of peace propogandists. That picture of Dr. Aked elegantly playing leap frog on the deck of the Ford vessel will never be hung over the pulpit of the First Congregational Church of this city.

—With Bryan, Tammany and the rabid Republicans at his heels, this session, President Wilson has no sinecure in carrying through his policies in Congress, despite the fact that the Democratic party has a small majority. The several big questions regarding preparedness, neutrality, the tariff and the like have made holes in the lines of both parties, and dubious henchmen of each side seem to think that their proper place on certain questions is in the ranks of the other party. Bryan has ordered his trusty followers in Congress to hack viciously at every effort that attempts to subvert ideal Peace, to fight all efforts that may in any way support preparations that will prop war. Tammany has thrown down the gage to Wilson that he must appoint a Tammany nominee to the postmastership of New York, which will become vacant shortly. Wilson may sorely require these Tammany votes in certain pinches. The rabid Republicans are vigilantly on their job to slip the knife between Wilson's ribs at every opportunity, and thereby make political capital for the Republicans. It's a merry life, my masters, to be President of these United States in the present great crisis of the world.

—O Willie brewed a peck o' malt, and all the "drys" tiptoed to see what he would do with the accursed stuff, and Willie declared he would remove the accursed stuff from the earth. So he up an swallowed it at one gulp. Thereupon the "drys" resolved to make the Examiner their organ for proclaiming the "dry" propaganda. And Willie's "dry" now, while in California; so is his paper; so is the crowd. There's an old saying that one can't sell his cake and get by with the dough without some sordid, sentimental, outspoken cuss interfering with his business. Of course, that is not the reason that the angry liquor interests are attacking Willie and withdrawing their advertisements from his paper, cutting off subscription and literally playing hob with his peace preparedness for the forthcoming political campaign. He is on the safe side, of course, because the vineyard interests, hotel interests, club interests and other likely and lively interests in California take no interest in the outcome of the liquor question here this fall. There is only one way for him to balance his business books on the right side, and that is to have the Los Angeles Examiner champion the cause of the "wets."

—The immense success of an exhibition ice skating floor installed by a local popular dining establishment shows signs that a large rink of this kind might shoulder the present popular craze for dancing out of the limelight. From the crowds that daily pack this establishment to witness the almost magical pirouetting and easy grace of the artistic expert imported skaters, it is easy to forecast that San Franciscans would quickly become inoculated with the ice skating craze. Indeed, the delight in this new indoor sport is already riding into lively popularity in the East, and big spectacles are being prepared for the indoor ice floors which several big hotels propose to install in their ballrooms this season. Feet count for something big these days, without the feet being of an extraordinary size either. A great general once said that an army is no better than its feet. Very likely the Kaiser would make the same declaration in these combative war days. Society bells and chiropodists continue to maintain that the "feet's the thing." At any rate, the present craze for the tango, rag, and the rest of the inspired musical Terpsichorean motions, call for cultivated and intelligent feet. In fact, this seems to be the age in the development of this country where the brains of the population lie in the feet. They are safest there, even if the brains are threatened with corns, a failing rather chronic among many of our most carefully bred taxpayers.

—According to the research of a profound doctor of medicine, no less than the Commissioner of Health of New York, the present epidemic of grip, which does not carry the brand of the real vicious, cantankerous grip, is a by-product of several noxious developers such as pneumonia. The social buds and those who incline to robust social delights in the giddy whirl, take too many alcoholic drinks, according to this learned specialist. They get too little rest and sleep in the maddening social pace, and thus their restless systems become hotbeds, as it were, for the nocuous germ. Time was that a draught of the proper kind of liquor was supposed to knock out these ungenerate germs, but since those seven States of the union recently slid into the "dry" column, liquor seems to have lost its strength and hopes of salvation, and the sportive germs now use the old brands of liquors for bath purposes. According to the reasoning of this theory of the sapient physician, the grip germ will increase in hilarity with himself as the number of States fall into the "dry" column. What theories and contentions a half-baked doctor can develop in an agile and athletic germ of ordinary talents and education! Therein is a capital field for exploitation which the movies have not even scratched.

—Fools rush in where even kaiser's fear to venture, but case-hardened newspapermen can always be relied upon to invade Mexico for reprisals on Mexican bandits who have abused American citizens. There is more bilk patriotism shelled across the line into Mexico from this side than jingoism incubated in Congress. The United States has no more right to invade Mexico to punish the men who shot down the fifteen Americans than Italy had, some years ago, to come into this country with soldiers to punish the citizens here who killed several Italians caught in Black Hand practices. Carranza has been recognized by this country as head of the de facto government there, and this country will look to him and hold him accountable for the proper punishment of the assassins. Mexico is fairly well shot to pieces, but she still possesses some rights as an independent government. However, this is an election year, and the opposition to the present administration at Washington is filling the streets with its calamity howlers and the reports of augurs and carefully suborned editors who declare that the very devil will be to pay unless we lose Wilson. He's responsible for keeping up the present rain storm.

The Inside of the Ford Peace Trip

Henry Ford's return to Dearborn has been accomplished after the manner of the Ford who established his popularity in the first place as much by his innate modesty and diffidence as by the philanthropic spirit he has displayed in his extraordinary industrial successes. He shuns publicity to-day as eagerly as he has sought it for his various peculiar ideas in these latter months. Whether this is due to his recent illness and his admitted need of a rest does not yet appear, but thus far it may be taken as a hopeful sign by many thousands of people who have long respected him for his good works, and who cannot understand the blunder of his peace expedition. He himself throws a little more light on the venture in an interview with the New York reporters on his arrival from Bergen. He says he wanted to help the women's international peace congress to be held at The Hague, and declares with special emphasis:

"The idea (of the peace ship) is not mine at all. The fact is that I am merely using my money in a good cause to finance the congress."

How, then, did this strange affair happen, in spite of the refusal of the President of the United States to compromise America's position by approving it, and in spite of the advice of some of Mr. Ford's best friends?

Mme. Schwimmer, the Hungarian lady whose mysterious peace documents seem to have been such an asset to the Ford expedition, first appeared in Detroit several months ago, and was well received by some Detroit women who seem to have lost interest in her later. Her peringrinations called her to other fields where peace work was more promising.

Subsequently arrived Miss Angela Morgan of New York, author of "The Battle Cry of Mothers," a poem which she reads with great effect at receptions and teas, and frequently with an honorarium. Miss Morgan's mother was acquainted with one of Detroit's most prominent and kindly women, and Miss Morgan was given much encouragement. She was not, however, receiving the honorarium as frequently as she might have, and this was of special interest because she was sojourning at a hotel where she had to pay for what she got. Miss Morgan was later joined at the same hotel by a Miss Rebecca Shelley, a Michigan peace worker. Together they secured an interview with Dean Marquis, an intimate friend of Mr. Ford, in the hope that he would induce Mr. Ford to help them spread the propaganda of peace, and bring about a conference of neutrals. Dean Marquis discouraged the proposition on the ground that it would embarrass the government. Miss Morgan soon returned to New York, but Miss Shelley remained in spite of the high cost of living, and sent word to Mme. Schwimmer that there ought to be something doing in Detroit.

In Detroit Mme. Schwimmer met Mrs. F. H. Holt, who in turn presented her to Mrs. Ford, who interested Mr. Ford. Through the good offices of a Detroit editor, President Wilson was induced to grant Mme. Schwimmer an interview at which Mrs. Snowden, an English peace worker, was present. The president declined to endorse a conference of neutrals to end the war. Then came the peace ship and all the cartoons. The ship, according to Jane Addams, was Mme. Schwimmer's idea of press-agenting world peace, and was not sponsored by the women's peace party. And all that Mme. Schwimmer has by way of documents to prove that the warring nations are willing to stop fighting is a series of statements from people who interviewed European diplomats, and these statements are the veriest rot as in any intimating that peace at this time is a possibility.

Mr. Ford avers that his expedition was not a failure since it "started the people talking." "When you do that," he says, "you start them thinking, and when people start thinking they think right, and something good comes of it."

Lord Northcliffe, who owns the London Times, the London Daily News and a score of other influential publications, fully corroborates the argument that peace is impossible at this time when he says of Mr. Ford:

"We regard anybody who wants to make peace now, before the allies are prepared, as a pro-German."

And Mr. Brandes endorses the argument that the Ford method was defeating its very purpose when he thus refers to Mr. Ford's sudden departure from Europe:

"The results would have been the same (if he had stayed).

The situation would not have been affected in any event save to hinder the peace idea, for now people will smile whenever peace is mentioned."

Despatches from Copenhagen tell how Gaston Plaintiff, who is now managing the peace party, refused the request of several lady members to buy gowns for them to wear at the Hague meetings. He also refused to agree that Mr. Ford would pay the return passages of delegates who fail to sail with the main party January 12th.

"A marked change has come over my whole viewpoint since I went away," he said. "Before going to Europe I held the view that the bankers, militarists and munition manufacturers were responsible. I come back with the firm belief that the people most to blame are the ones who are getting slaughtered. They have neglected to select the proper heads for their governments—the men who would prevent such chaotic conditions. In the great majority of cases the people select their rulers and they are afraid of them. They don't write enough letters to them and let them know their views."

Asked if he thought a republic was not a more advisable form of government than a monarchy, the pacifist replied:

"Yes, I think that is so. But France is a republic, and it does not elect the men who would prevent the nation preparing for war. And you see where France is now. The trouble is that citizens don't take enough interest in the government. But so far as neglecting government is concerned, I am one of the worst offenders. I have been a voter for thirty-one years, and during that time I have voted but six times. Then it was because Mrs. Ford drove me to do it.

"Formerly my idea was that in this country also the men behind the campaign for preparedness were the militarists and munition manufacturers. But I find the people who don't elect the right men are the ones to blame; they should express their own minds."

Mr. Ford was asked if he had obtained expressions of sympathy with his peace movement from officials in the countries visited, and whether he had had successful relations with them. He replied that he had "seen others just as good."

Dean Marquis is quoted as saying:

"Mr. Ford dared do a fool thing because he felt he was right. Henry Ford was drawn into the peace proposition because he has the heart of a child. The thought of people suffering was a reality to him. It was not his plan. It was that of the Women's International Peace Society. Miss Jane Addams and others went to him. He merely acted as the financier."

Before the Oscar II sailed for Europe, the following rather remarkable discussion of peace terms took place at the Ford headquarters, according to the daily papers:

"Although Mr. Ford was plied with numerous questions, such answers as he would have made were forestalled by two attaches of his publicity bureau, who took it upon themselves to answer the questions addressed to their employer.

"He was asked, for example, to suppose that his mission would be successful. 'With Germany occupying Belgium,' the question ran, 'would you be willing for the war to cease now and leave Germany in possession?' 'Germany don't want Belgium,' Mr. Delavigne of the press bureau promptly interposed. 'How do you know?' The press agent puzzled over that for a moment, and then found the solution. 'Oh, well,' he said, 'let her keep a chunk of it.'"

Mr. Ford says he is "only the custodian" of his money, that he can't use any more of it than he is using now, and that he wants to devote the rest to the benefit of others. A high ambition, surely, and full of promise for humanity. May he find wisdom to fulfill it!

Henry Ford, the man, as he is known in Detroit, his home city, is sketched as follows by the editor of the Detroit Saturday Night:

"It is, we believe, a fair estimate of the man to say that he is a mechanical genius of a sweet and lovable disposition with almost boundless ignorance on almost every subject of human knowledge outside of his mechanical specialties. He never had the advantage of an adequate education at school or college, and he has succeeded in reaching middle life with far less of the fruits of self-education than many men of the same age with less opportunities. On education, in fact, he is half agnostic. He does not believe in college education at all "except

(Continued to Page 17)

The most interesting news of the week is the announcement that Mrs. Templeton Crocker will be queen of the Mardi Gras ball this year, with Stanford Gwin as the royal consort of La Belle Helene.

Ever since Helene Irwin made her debut, the committee in charge of the Mardi Gras ball has been trying to prevail upon her to be queen of the annual pageant which colors each season with its magnificence.

Miss Irwin was willing, but parental displeasure stood in the way. Her father had a stern notion that undesirable romance and extreme youthfulness were apt enough to come into headlong collision without any undue encouragement, and he considered that a kingly consort chosen for pulchritude and royal bearing had romantic possibilities that might not show fast colors in the matrimonial wash! The committee offered to choose a married man for the part: to let Mr. Irwin choose the king himself; to select a chap in love with some other girl, but all these concessions failed to make a dent in Papa Irwin's notion that it was "dangerous business."

After her marriage there was a trip abroad, and a period of mourning, and one thing and another to interfere. Templeton Crocker had no objection to his wife's ascending the throne without him, and so this year there is nothing to prevent the royal aura from hovering on the beautiful brow of Mrs. Crocker.

The color of the aura has not yet been determined. Mrs. Crocker's resemblance to Madame Racamier has been commented upon by artists all over the world, and here in San Francisco she has posed as Racamier herself, after the famous picture of the reclining lady, at a portrait show for the benefit of the Crocker Armitage. Which would naturally suggest a French court for this queen. But last year the lovely Anna Peters was Marie Antoinette for a night, and those in charge like to create an entirely different background each year. Moreover, Mrs. Crocker herself has a passion for the Oriental, and undoubtedly some period that is a flame of color will prevail. A number of the plates of the great Russian designer, Leon Bakst, have been obtained with the idea that this season the gorgeous designs made by this artist for the Imperial Russian ballet might furnish the motif of this pageant.

Last year the committee in charge played the game of "Now you see him, now you don't," with the king, until the very last moment. Alfred Whittell lightly tossed off an acceptance of the throne, and then along came Father Whittell, and said that a young man trying to learn his adopted parent's business had no time for such royal nonsense, so what could the young man do but kick over a pasteboard throne for good, solid real estate?

Walter Hush captured the appraising eye of the committee, but Walter himself did not put out an eager hand for the scepter. In fact he put both hands behind him and refused to clutch the insignia of royalty—couldn't stand the joshing of his friends, and there were family reasons and so forth and so on, which necessitated the committee as a solid phalanx trampling down his excuses, and reducing him to royal pulp!

This year they were fortunate enough to have Stanford Gwin available. Gwin's training for the concert stage in Paris has included a course in stage deportment, and this sort of thing is right in his line. The royal party thus nobly led by a king and queen to the manner trained, will be supplemented by courtiers and ladies-in-waiting chosen by Queen Helene and King Stanford. There is much speculation about the girls Queen Helene will honor, and a will o' the wisp rumor that she has shown no disposition to accept cocoon on the part of some members of the committee who are pulling wires for favorites of their own.

The stork is hovering over the home of the Harry Scotts, much to the delight of those concerned and the concerned-in-laws. Henry T. Scott is very anxious for a grandson, and although he is devoted to Mrs. Walter Martin's little girls he would be very pleased to see the male line of the family continued.

Walter Martin has recovered from chicken pox, which was epidemic down the peninsula way, and he and Mrs. Martin are now on their way south to join the Jackling party at Coronado, from which joint they will enjoy a leisurely cruise through Southern waters, carefully avoiding landing at Mexican ports where Villa's followers shows a penchant to put to death Americans, and thus show President Wilson what they think of Caranza!

Mrs. Eugene Murphy has not been so fortunate as some of those who got on speaking terms with the germ of chicken pox. Her convalescence has been slower than most, and while she is no longer under quarantine, she is not yet buoyantly well. Although it is generally listed as a childish disease, the children did not succumb in as great numbers as the grown-ups to this last invasion. Which Walter Martin pathologically explains as further proof that "most of us are in second childhood anyway."

Mrs. A. B. Spreckels's tambola drawing will come off March 11th, 12th and 13th. She hesitated to announce the exact dates, as every day unique and beautiful things are added to the collection, and the list of prizes is the most remarkable ever brought to gether in San Francisco. That one woman has been able to accomplish this proves what a person of talent and inspiration can accomplish when she sets herself whole-heartedly to the task.

On Tuesday night, wedding bells rang out their silvery peal in the Fairmont Hotel, where Miss Katharine MacAdam and Lieutenant Martin J. Peterson were married at one of the prettiest of the long list of weddings which have wafted the perfume of orange blossoms over the season.

Learn French for $5

Grant Gordon and Justice B. Detwiler, organizers and managers of the Spanish course for business people, invite you to become a member of their classes in "Conversational and Pictorial" French, under the direction of the noted Professor

Baron Albert Du Vivier

Beginning Monday, January 17, 1916, at Kohler & Chase Hall, 26 O'Farrell Street, San Francisco.

This Gordon-Detwiler "Conversational-Pictorial" Course of French is given in thirty lessons.

Classes meet each Monday and Thursday until the entire thirty-lesson course has been given.

Classes each are one hour in length. One hour of solid pleasure and positive relaxation.

You may attend at 10:20 a. m., 12:15 p. m., 5:15 p. m., or 8:15 p. m., during the same hour each class day or you may interchange to suit your own convenience.

Previous knowledge unnecessary.

French conversation is positively guaranteed.

The "Conversational-Pictorial" method of teaching French is based upon sound pedagogical principles, and therefore the results are NOT a matter of chance.

Five dollars is the cost of the entire course. No other expense.

For Particulars

PHONE KEARNY 5454

or Address

GRANT GORDON, Secretary
SUITE B, KOHLER & CHASE BUILDING
San Francisco

The bride wore one of the loveliest wedding gowns that has been turned out in these seasons of quaint touches, such as short skirts and long trains. While her gown showed the usual departures from the conventional wedding gowns of the yester-years, it lost, somehow, none of the dignity of a wedding gown by so doing—truly a triumph of sartorial art.

And the bridesmaids and the matron of honor's frocks looked as though they had been spun by the fairies who commute from one end of the rainbow to the other. Gowns of pinks and blues and lavenders and yellows, all gossamer over with silver; bouquets of primroses and hyacinths, baby roses and forget-me-nots bobbing on silver staffs for the bridesmaids and for the matrons of honor, set primly in a lace frame. Lieutenant Peterson represented the army, navy and civilian society in his ushers, and all these walks of life were likewise included in the guest list. The wedding party included, besides the bride and groom, Mesdames Thomas Minturn, Jr., Charles C. Soule, the Misses Dorothy Kinkaid and Marguerite Kinston, Mr. Austin Tubbs, and Lieutenant Soule, Thomas Jones and John F. McClain.

Mrs. W. L. Oliver will be hostess at a reception and dance at the Hotel Oakland on Thursday night, February 4th. For those who will not participate in the dancing, card tables will be arranged in the Rose reception room. Very attractive table decorations will be arranged, and the supper will be served in the dining room adjoining the ball room. About 500 guests are expected.

The annual meeting of the San Francisco Fruit and Flower Mission was held on January 12th. Reports were read showing that the work of the mission had materially increased the past year. Keenest appreciation was expressed by the members at the meeting for the generous assistance given them by the contributing friends, through whose co-operation they are enabled to carry on the work and care of the needy sick. The following directors and officers were elected: Officers—Miss Elsie Hess, president; Miss Helen E. Gibbs, vice-president; Mrs. F. Mandebaum, second vice-president; Mrs. L. Strausburger, treasurer; Mrs. J. J. Eppinger, corresponding secretary; Miss Miriam K. Wallis, recording secretary. Directors—Miss Virginia Gibbs, Miss Belle Armer, Miss S. E. Johnson, Miss Sarita Henderson, Miss Hannah L. Leszymsky.

An unusually attractive Fashion Show will be held in the court of the Palace Hotel, Saturday, March 4th, next, for the benefit of the Doctor's Daughters, the San Francisco Maternity, Home of the Incurables and other deserving institutions that have done so much to relieve local distress. The afternoon performance in the court will be followed by a tea dansant, and the evening performance by a supper dance in the ball room of the Palace. The entire entertainment is to be for home charities exclusively. The patronesses are Miss Suzena McEwen, and Mesdames Joseph King, John Metcalf, Carter Pomeroy, William Sherwood, George Somers, Charles Slack, Ernest McCormick, John Polhemus and Leon Roos.

The Saturday night dance here at Hotel Del Monte was of particular interest on account of the numerous dinner parties given before it. Mrs. R. L. Richards had as her guests, Lieutenant and Mrs. Roscoe, and Lieutenant Cobbe. Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Lindsay and Mr. and Mrs. James Dunamier had several of their Victoria friends. Mrs. Cooper had as her guests Mr. and Mrs. Carl Stanley, Miss Gillen of New York, Captain Reynolds, Mr. J. S. Orcutt of Boston, Miss Spence, Mr. John Cooper, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Boyce. There were several other parties of interest, including Mr. and Mrs. R. H. McKaig, Miss McKaig, Mr. McKaig, Jr., and several officers from the Presidio. As the new grill is not quite completed, several machine loads of young people drove to the lodge for refreshments after the dance. As the moon was very bright, the drive through the forest and along the sea was wonderfully beautiful.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Spreckels, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Spreckels, Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Eddy and son have gone south to Palm Beach for a few weeks, where they are to join some Chicago friends. In March they all will return to Del Monte.

The recent remarkable success of Grant Gordon and Justice B. Detwiler in organizing and managing their recent course of Spanish lessons for business people has induced them to widen their field in a new and attractive direction. They are now sending out invitations to assemble members for their new classes in "conversational and pictorial" French under the direction of the noted Professor Baron Alfred du Vivier, to begin next Monday, January 24th, at Kohler & Chase Hall, 26 O'Farrell street. The class will meet Mondays and Thursdays till the whole course of thirty lessons has been given. Students may select any one of the five lessons given on each of those days as will make it most convenient for themselves. The hours are 10:30 a. m., 12:15 p. m., 3:00 p. m., 6:15 p. m., or 8:15 p. m. Students may shift the hours to suit their time program on those days. These classes are unique in many particulars; previous knowledge of French is unnecessary, and the system of teaching is so simple and flexible that French conversation is positively guaranteed, as was done fully and satisfactorily in the recent Spanish course which proved so popular. The charge for the course is $5. Among the number who have already joined the class are Mrs. Remond Payne, Mrs. George Forderer, Mrs. Charles Holbrook, Jr., Mrs. Ettore Avenali, Mrs. Herbert Fleishacker, Mrs. Meyer Ehrman, Mrs. James H. Follis, Mrs. George F. Grant, Miss Sarah Collier, Miss Margaret Abercombe, Mrs. H. P. Umbson, Mrs. Jas. A. Black, Miss Cooper, Miss Harriet Jolliffe, Miss Slack, Mrs. Franklin Schwabacher. Among the patronesses are Mrs. John Drum, Mrs. Wickham Havens, Mrs. Walter S. Martin, Mrs. John Merrill, Mrs. A. W. Scott, Mrs. Andrew Welch, Mrs. Wallace Wheaton Briggs, Mrs. T. C. Coogan, Mrs. Daniel Easterbrook, Mrs. F. G. Sanborn, Mrs. G. W. Percy, Mrs. I. Lowenberg and Mrs. Sewell Dolliver.

THE PASSING OF MRS. LOVELL WHITE.

Mrs. Lovell White, one of the most prominent women here in social, club and civil life, and widely known in the East for her activities, passed away this week after an illness of some three months, due to cerebral hemorrhage. Her son, Ralston White, and her sister, Mrs. Margaret Whitcomb, were with her to the last. Mrs. White's seventy years were distinguished at many points. She was the daughter of Jonathan Lyon, one of Des Moines wealthy and prominent residents, and after her graduation at Oberlin College she seemed to slip naturally into the inception of that career which distinguished her throughout life. Her first work of this character was in leading the contest in Iowa to get Des Moines, her home town, selected the capital of the State. While a belle in society there she met Lovell White. After their marriage the couple came to California, and White became associated with William Ralston in many enterprises, the last being banking, in which he remained during his later life. From the time of her arrival here, Mrs. White entered with her active spirits into plans for developing the social and artistic betterment of San Francisco. She founded the California Club in December, 1907, and was its president for many terms. It was her energy and persuasive powers which induced the Government at Washington to set aside the Calaveras Grove as a national park. For years she was an indefatigable member of the Playground Commission and chairman of the Outdoor Art League in efforts to beautify the city. Her last important position, bestowed for her exceptional qualifications, was vice-president of the Woman's Board of the Exposition. Her charities and the untiring efforts she bestowed in striving to ease the lives of laundresses and the surroundings of women in other occupations are numberless. Her passing is a distinct loss to the community, and will be sincerely felt by thousands of people who have been the recipients of her kindly attentions.

Not Gray Hairs but tired Eyes Make us look older than we are. Old age and Dull Eyes—tell-tale.

Don't Tell Your age

After the Movies go home and Murine your Eyes. Two Drops will rest, refresh and cleanse. Have it handy.

Murine Eye Remedy Company Chicago Sends Book of the Eye upon request

PLEASURE'S WAND

"Obey no wand but Pleasure's."—Tom Moore.

Ralph Dunbar's Singing Bell Ringers, next week at the Orpheum

The Third Pair of Symphony Concerts.

In listening to the three sets of concerts under Conductor Hertz, there has been an all absorbing interest born, not only of the keenest enjoyment, but also intermingled wonder. The perfectness of results in so short a time testifies both to the indefatigable effort of orchestra and leader alike. At the same time it must convince the musical public that our orchestra's work under the old regime has put it into readiness for the hand which now holds the baton. The third program, although not furnishing the variety of the other two, was quite as charming, embracing the works of the classic and modern German. We were led from Mozart's lovely Symphony in G Minor, which finds the composer in his tenderest mood perhaps, through that noble "Concerto" in D Major for violin and orchestra by Beethoven, to the final passionate tone poem of Richard Strauss, "Don Jaun."

The Concerto brought to our attention a new artist in Mr. Louis Persinger. While the exquisite tone of his violin held sway, there were moments when one forgot to breathe. In writing these words, am I not paying the highest tribute to that worthy, modest young musician that can be given, for what is music at any time save what it means to the soul of the listener? His technique is masterful—we expected so much—however the tender grace of his intelligent interpretation could not be entirely anticipated, albeit we felt something of this from his tone, when the "Narrator" spoke, during the playing of Scheherazade in the concert of the week previous.

Perhaps I am a bit of a crank, but might I say, as much exuberance of spirit as we feel because of our recent great acquisition in the coming to San Francisco of Alfred Hertz, why must we interrupt the "Movements," and necessarily the trend of thought, tender at times, at others almost ecstatic, of a symphony by too prolonged applause? Would it not be more to his liking should we curb our outburst until the conclusion of the number.

On the 28th and 30th inst. come the fourth "pair," which, no doubt, will be a revelation, for our leader is reputed to be one of the greatest exponents of the world's acknowledged master of opera, Richard Wagner.

BETTY.

* * *

Captivating Bill at the Orpheum

The Orpheum circuit, sooner or later, "gets" them all. There is no star too great to fit into the Orpheum chain of theatres. The latest is Evelyn Nesbit—at one time probably the most talked of woman in this country. Miss Nesbit has previously been appearing at the head of her own organization—but she, as well as the others, cannot withstand the lure of vaudeville—and here she is. With her partner, Jack Clifford, she appears in songs and dances. Her singing voice is surprisingly good,

FOR QUALITY, THE BEST

In Bulk and Cases

CHARLES MEINECKE & Co.

AGENTS PACIFIC COAST

314 SACRAMENTO ST., S. F.

Eimer Gardin and Adele Rolland in the comedy, "It Pays to Advertise," at the Columbia Theatre, commencing Monday, January 24th.

and with proper training should develop immensely. Her dancing is of the Fox Trot variety, simply another version of it. Miss Nesbit wears gorgeous gowns, and really works conscientiously. She is good to look at, and altogether furnishes a most meritorious act. Her vaudeville success is assured. The program is real creamy vaudeville from beginning to end. The Yardys, a man and woman athlete, start the ball rolling. They do several sensational stunts. Comes now Mae Francis, a petite Miss, with the valuable asset of decided fine appearance and charming personality. She sings several clever songs, and effects changes of costume throughout. An unusual number is the act of Eva Gauthier and Nila Devi. The former is a singer, with a voice of true quality and power, and the latter a dancer of quaint dances. Assisting them is a small ballet of four, embellishing an act beautiful in costumes and scenery.

Burley and Burley, two English comedians, show us how it is done on the other side of the big pond. Eva Taylor, known for several years as a stock company leading woman, returns with her act, "Suspicious of Hubby," which I am under the impression she has done here before. Be that as it may, the act looms up better and funnier than ever. For pure, unadulterated fun, there are few humorous acts to excel it. Hamilton and Barnes are here again with a new budget of funny stories and sayings. This talented couple have an original way, and they could hold their audience indefinitely. Harry Mayo and Harry Tally, formerly of the Empire City Quartette, now have an act of their own. They sing and relate some funny stories, and then allow the audience to hear their voices as produced on the phonograph. They scored an instant hit, and proved one of the big successes as well as the surprise of the bill. James Dutton and company present the most beautiful equestrian act I have ever seen. It is wonderful what these people do with a big circus

Louis Persinger, the distinguished violinist who will be one of the soloists at the Tuesday Morning Musicale at the St. Francis act on the stage of a theatre. Don't miss this week's bill. It is certainly a hummer.

PAUL GERSON.

* * *

Big Star Acts at Pantages.

Pantages has another slashing good bill this week, a bill that keeps the big audiences on edge from the rise of the curtain to the close. The special hair-raisers are the Four Casters, wizards of the flying trapeze, who turn series of almost impossible somersaults in the air while you hold your breath in consternation, wondering what will save them. In these daring aerial flight they are the epitome of ease, grace and clean-cut finish. Their act is easily the greatest of its kind on the stage. Knox Wilson, the musical comedy favorite, needs no introduction. He was the gem funmaker in "The Burgomaster," "Land O' Nod," Anna Held's "Flirting Princess," and other Broadway riotous merry making successes. It is needless to say that he is maintaining his reputation of the Pantages circuit. Where that management captures all these high priced and exclusive acts for their patrons is one of the mysteries of the vaudeville business. Hannah Leach and Holland Jack, who have won an international reputation in the society dancing world, gave a whirlwind exhibition of their most famous dances, and literally "carried the audience off its feet." They are originators as well as adepts in their art, and dance with a grace, abandon, vim and lithe rippling movement that titillates the nerves in the feet of the audience. The Four Vagabonds, as a harmony quartette, are warbling spell binders, and the audience could not get enough of their singing. Jarvis and Harrison are an original couple in "flirtology," and carry off their act with a clean-cut finish that bespeaks their adroitness, cleverness and success. Everett and White are the usual comedy acrobats with several new kinks to their credit. The playlet, "A Girl of the West," has a picturesque setting, and is capably handled by the Al Lutringer Company. The reel continues another thrilling episode in that absorbing mystery story, "The Red Circle."

* * *

ADVANCE ANNOUNCEMENTS

Orpheum.—Evelyn Nesbit and Jack Clifford are scoring a great hit at the Orpheum with their songs and dances. Miss Nesbit's costumes are very beautiful and costly. Next week will be the last of their engagement, when they will introduce new songs and dances. A great new bill is announced to begin Sunday matinee. Ralph Dunbar's Singing Bell Ringers, five men, all of whom are fine instrumental and vocal musicians, will render melodies and songs of yesterday and to-day. The bells used by them range from one to thirty pounds, and are the largest of their kind in existence. With the Bell Ringers is associated Lloyd Garrett, the famous boy soprano. Charles (Chic) Sale, the successful boyish interpreter of bucolic types, will be a special feature. His offering is of a protean nature, and he depicts a country school entertainment, including the school-ma'am, a little girl speaking her piece, a sort of Topsy giggling a song, a saccharine rural professor and a "constabule" who is a member of the school board. The Harmony Trio consists of Billy Golet, Dave Harris and Charles Morey, who are experts on the mandolin, banjo, guitar, violin and Hawaiian ukulele, and the possessors of excellent voices. Dressed as Roman Gladiators, the two Tuscano Brothers give a picturesque and hazardous performance of battle-axe juggling, in which they are unrivaled. Dancing ranging from classic to modern is gracefully and cleverly exemplified by the Ziegler Sisters and Johnny Singer. Eva Taylor and her company, in their laughable success, "Suspicious of Hubby," and Mayo and Tally in new songs, are included in the attractions. The fourth of the series of the Uncle Sam at Work Motion Pictures, entitled "Uncle Sam's Protoges at Work and at Play," will conclude a thoroughly delightful program.

* * *

Fourth Pair of Symphony Concerts.—The fourth pair of concerts of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, Alfred Hertz, conductor, which will be given at the Court Theatre on Friday afternoon, January 28th, at 3 o'clock, and Sunday afternoon, January 30th, at 2:30 o'clock, will be devoted entirely to selections from works of Richard Wagner, whom Richard Strauss declares the "greatest orchestral virtuoso who ever breathed." Wagner, who at no time in his life was able to play his own scores at the piano, never acquired the mastery of any instrument of music, and whose singing was atrocious, composed all his famous operas, and before his death became the most sensational, revolutionary, best advertised and greatest musician of the 19th century.

San Francisco is fortunate in having in Alfred Hertz, the man whom Henry T. Finck, in his great work, "Wagner and His Works," declared "has no superior in Wagnerian conducting." Mr. Hertz has arranged a program fairly filled to the brim and overflowing with the most interesting works of the great master.

Program—Prelude, "Parsifal." "Tristan and Isolde," Prelude and Isolde's Death. Tristan's Vision (arrangement by A. Seidl. Overture, "Flying Dutchman." Siegfried Idyll. Prelude to the "Mastersingers of Nurnberg."

It will be remembered that the first performance of the opera "Parsifal," outside of Bayreuth, was given at the Metropolitan Opera House under the musical direction of Mr. Hertz. The "Vision of Tristan," from "Tristan and Isolde," will be given for the first time here, and great opportunity will be given Louis Persinger, the concertmaster, and Horace Britt, principal of the 'cellos, who play the music of the opera allotted to the characters of Tristan and Kurneval. The wonderful prelude to "Tristan and Isolde" and Isolde's final scene, which Liszt named the "Love Death," will precede Tristan's Vision.

* * *

Second of the St. Francis Monday Concerts.—The second concert of the series of Monday Morning Musicales at the St. Francis Hotel will be distinguished next Monday by the appearance of Katherine Heyman, pianiste; Eugenia Argiewicz-Bem, violinist. Miss Heyman is a California girl, having been born in Sacramento; she went abroad seventeen years ago, and while she has appeared in all the great musical centers of Europe, this is the first time she has returned from abroad. Miss Heyman has played with the Boston Symphony, New York Symphony, Berlin Philharmonic, London Philharmonic, and while with the Panama-Pacific Exposition orchestra she was selected by Saint-Saens to play his concertos under his direction. This is Miss Heyman's first appearance as a soloist in San Francisco.

Miss Eugenia Argiewicz-Bem has had a very brilliant career in Europe ever since, at the age of 7 she made her debut in Petrograd. This talented young Polish artist has played with the leading symphony orchestras both in this country and in Europe. She toured the old world with Teresa Careno.

* * *

Star Farce at the Columbia.—"It Pays to Advertise" will be the attraction at the Columbia Theatre for two weeks, starting Monday night, January 24th, with matinees Wednesdays and Saturdays. The play is about advertising, purely and simply. It teaches that advertising partakes of both science and art. This farce delights in the highest degree, and at the same time teaches the layman more of the inside of the advertiser's art than he ever knew existed. The story deals with a rich soap-maker's son; the father wants his boy to be a business success; the boy doesn't want business, but the father by a deft plot launches him; he advertises without having the right goods, falls into by-ways of peril, and—but how he retrieves proves the right sort of advertising, because the boy is right. The farce runs along calmly, and you think you have the secret of the theme, when biff! in the middle of a healthy laugh you find you were all wrong, and you laugh again. The play comes here

MELLOW AS MOONLIGHT
CASCADE
For your HI-BALL today

The finest, purest and mellowest whisky that brains and money can produce, cost to you no more than inferior grades; so why not ask for and insist on getting CASCADE. Instead of saying whisky, just say CASCADE, you will enjoy it and feel much better.

Special enjoyable drink recipes for the asking by writing
J. H. Norton, care San Francisco News Letter

presented by the George M. Cohan Theatre Company intact, direct from a fifty-two weeks' run at the home theatre.

* * *

More Big Headliners at Pantages.—Maurice Samuels and his players, who achieved one of the biggest successes that the Pantages circuit played two years ago, will return to the popular Market street vaudeville theatre with their touching playlet of emigrant life, entitled "A Day at Ellis Island." Samuels' impersonation of the Italian who has been in America two years and hoodwinks the emigration officials to allow his pretty Sicilian bride to land without the proper papers, is conceded to be one of the best bits of character acting in vaudeville. Little Tony Rizzo, the brilliant young violinist, still remains one of the bright spots of the sketch. The little folks will enjoy the antics of Barnold's dog and monkey actors. The trained animals have a pantomimic comedy with full stage equipment, called "A Hot Time in Dogville." A feature of the performance of the dumb beasts is noticeable that the animals go through their routine without any of the trainers appearing on the stage. A troupe of whirlwind Arabian acrobats, styled the "Ten Toozoonis," garbed in fantastic attire, will present an exhibition of gun spinning and fast tumbling. The Hazel Kirke trio will offer a revue of popular song and modern dance numbers. Miss Kirke was the original Nell Brinkley model for the "Betty and Billy" series of drawings, and the gowns which she displays are distinctly of the Brinkley type. Seymour Freith, another member of the three, is the composer of "No Wedding Bells for Me," "They Say He Went to College" and other song hits. Princeton and Yale have a slang classic which is one of the fun hits of the show. Helen Lowe, former prima donna of "The Pink Lady," and the sixth episode of the thrilling Pathe serial, "The Red Circle," will round out the show.

* * *

Tuesday Morning Musicales.—Another well satisfied audience of musical and society folk attended the second of the "Tuesday Morning Musicales" given by Rudolph Aronson in the Colonial Ballroom of the St. Francis Hotel the early part of the week, and the novelty of the idea and the excellence of the program served to make the institution a permanent and emphatic success. The morning was rainy, but the attendance was much larger than at the first concert, and for the musicale of next Tuesday at eleven o'clock another goodly gathering is assured. The soloists will be Mme. Bernice Pasquali, the well-known prima donna soprano from the Metropolitan Opera House, and who has been singing with the La Scala Opera Company in Los Angeles; Jack Hillman, the popular baritone; and Louis Persinger, the distinguished violinist and concertmaster of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra. Mme. Pasquali will sing the aria from Bizet's "I Pescatori di Perle," and selections by Moskes, Debussy, Vanzo, Horsman and Catalani, and Mr. Persinger will play "La Folia," by Corelli, the Kreisler Rondino of a theme by Beethoven, the Spanish Serenade by Chaminade-Kreisler, and Wieniawski's Mazurka. Jack Hillman, who is just completing a very successful concert tour, will have a wide range of songs, including compositions by Strauss, Franz, Paladilhe, Massenet, Rummel, Grant-Schaefer, Beach and Huhn. The accompanist will be Uda Waldrop, which assures the artists the very best of support.

* * *

Painters, Pictures and the Public.—Eugen Neuhaus, assistant Professor of Decorative Design at the University of California, is to give a course of six lectures under the title "Painters, Pictures, and the Public," in the art gallery of Paul Elder & Company, 239 Grant avenue, on consecutive Tuesday afternoons, at 3 o'clock, commencing January 25th. The first lecture is on the subject of "The Significance of Art." Subsequent lectures in the series will be "The Artist's Point of View vs The Public's," "The Laws of Pictorial Composition," "Harmony, and How it is Achieved," "Rhythm as Found in Nature and in Pictures," and "What Color Means to an Artist."

* * *

Events in the Paul Elder Gallery.—The third reading of "Great Modern Plays," by Leo Cooper, will be the American play, "Children of Earth," by Alice Brown, the ten thousand dollar prize play as produced at Little Theatre in New York City. This will be on Wednesday, January 26th, at 10:45 a. m. The second lecture in the course of "The Soul of Woman in Modern Literature," by Paul Jordan Smith, will be given on Thursday afternoon, January 27th, at 3 o'clock, in the Art Gallery of Paul Elder & Company, 239 Grant avenue, San Francisco. Subject will be "August Strindberg—the Man Who Worshipped and Hated."

* * *

Big "Kiddies" Fete Being Prepared.—At an enthusiastic meeting of over three thousand members of the Indoor Yacht Club, definite plans for the Fete in Fairyland and Kiddie's dansant, which will be held at the Civic Auditorium Saturday evening February 12th, were shaped and a number of committees appointed. The affair will be the biggest and most lavish of any given by the Indoor sailors. Those who witnessed the Kiddies' ball of 1915 will remember the spectacular affair which was staged, when over 1,500 persons participated as talent alone. This year all records will be broken, and not alone will be the evening given over to a fancy dress ball, but there will be produced a series of vaudeville and carnival stunts that have never before been seen in the West. A committee has been appointed to select the prettiest girl in San Francisco for Cinderella. All those who desire to enter the contest are requested to send their photographs and name and address to the Cinderella committee at the clubhouse, No. 4 Eddy street. The selection will be made by photograph.

—"So this is your studio?" "As you see." "But it is very cold here." "Yes; just now I am painting a frieze."—Grand Rapids Press.

Columbia Theatre

Corner Mason and Geary Streets
Phone Franklin 150
The Leading Playhouse

Two Weeks Starting Monday, January 24
Cohan and Harris Know

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

The George M. Cohan Theatre, New York, company and production intact of the farcical classic of the age. Direct from 32 Howling Weeks in Gay Manhattan.
Evenings, 50c to $2. Saturday Matinees 25c to $1.50; Wednesday Matinee 25c to $1.

S. F. Symphony Orchestra

ALFRED HERTZ CONDUCTOR

CORT THEATRE

FOURTH PAIR OF CONCERTS

FRIDAY JANUARY 28, 3 P. M., Sunday, January 30, 2:30 P. M.

Selections from Compositions of RICHARD WAGNER

"Parsifal," Prelude, "Tristan and Isolde," Prelude and Isolde's Love Death and Tristan's Vision (arranged by Anton Seidl), first time here; "Flying Dutchman," Overture; "Siegfried Idyll;" "Mastersingers of Nurnberg." Prices—Friday, $2.00, $1.50, $1.00, 75c; box and loge seats, $3.00. Sunday, $1 of 75c, 50c; box and loge seats, $1.50. Seats at Sherman Clay & Co's and Kohler and Chase, and Cort Theatre on days of concerts only.

Orpheum

O'Farrell Street Bet. Stockton and Powell
Phone Douglas 70

Week beginning THIS SUNDAY AFTERNOON. MATINEE EVERY DAY.
LAST WEEK

EVELYN NESBIT AND JACK CLIFFORD

New Songs and Dances In Conjunction With

A WONDERFUL NEW SHOW

RALPH DENBAR'S SINGING BELL RINGERS, featuring Lloyd Garrett, famous Boy Soprano; HARMONY TRIO Singers and Instrumentalists; TUCANO BROTHERS Battle Axe Jugglers; ZIEGLER SISTERS and JOHNNY SINGER Classic and Specialty Dances; EVA TAYLOR & CO. in "Suspicious of Hubby;" MAYO and TALLY Sweet Singers; UNCLE SAM'S PROTEGES AT WORK AND AT PLAY; CHARLES (CHIC) SALE Impersonator of Ill-famous Rural Characters.

Evening Prices, 10c., 25c., 50c., 75c. Box seats, $1. Matinee prices (except Sundays and holidays), 10c., 25c., 50c. Phone Douglas 70.

Pantages' Theatre

Market Street Opposite Mason

Commencing Sunday Afternoon, January 23, 1916

THREE BIG HEADLINERS !!!

MAURICE SAMUELS & CO., The sterling Character Actor in the touching episode of emigrant life, "A DAY AT ELLIS ISLAND," BARNOLD'S DOG AND MONKEY ACTORS in a one act pantomime entitled "A HOT TIME IN DOGVILLE," Introducing "Dan," the original drunken dog, TEN TOOZONIS, Arabian Whirlwind Acrobats, SIXTH EPISODE OF "THE RED CIRCLE."

EIGHT ALL STAR PANTAGES ACTS

St. Francis Hotel

COLONIAL BALL ROOM

TUESDAY, JANUARY 24, at 11 A. M.
THIRD OF THE

TUESDAY MORNING MUSICALES

(Directed By Rudolph Aronson)

Artists, Mme. BERNICE PASQUALI, Prima Donna Soprano; JACK HILLMAN, Baritone; LOUIS PERSINGER, Violinist; Uda Waldrop, at the Piano.

Seats and boxes on sale at Sherman Clay & Co's, Kohler & Chase and Room 113, Hotel St. Francis.

Gouraud's Oriental Cream

Gives that delicately clear and refined complexion which every woman desires. Keeps away skin troubles.

AT DRUGGISTS AND DEPARTMENT STORES

SPORTS AND PASTIMES

BY OUTSIDER

"Outsiders see most of the game."—Old Saw.The Western Golf Association Championship

That Del Monte has been awarded the Western golf meet for 1916 is, of course, a great source of satisfaction to our golfers here; though why the directors of the association should be worrying about the special car arrangement proposed is beyond me. Accepting the view of some of the purists that traveling by a train provided by the California Golf Association would disqualify golfers as amateurs, would logically result in any private man being debarred from accepting transportation on a 'bus from the station on his way to play a week-end round of golf with a friend. Similarly in the case of an inter-club match where it is the custom for the hosts to provide at least this much for their guests. The special train is merely an extended jitney service.

The U. S. G. A. stands a dark, forbidding shadow in the background, and threatens to disqualify all participants in the train courtesies. Well, supposing that it does take this action, the Western golfers should worry. In the first place the United States tournament would look pretty sick without the competition of the men from the Western clubs, and besides what could be easier than the Western Association granting a restoration of privileges to all participants in the Californian tourney. This would be quite in line with the church dispensations, granted before the event, during the middle ages, and which were freely purchased by wealthy gentlemen when they had some pet sin in prospect.

* * *

Amateur Rules

The new rules adopted by the United States Golf Association, and which are in line with those of the Amateur Athletic Union and the National Lawn Tennis Association, have just been announced. By these, amateurs "are prohibited from accepting or holding any position as agent or employee that includes as part of its duties the handling of golf supplies, or engage in any business wherein one's usefulness or profits arise because of skill or prominence in the game of golf."

These are very good so far as a declaration of spirit is concerned, but I am afraid that they are not specific enough and will lead to endless disputes and bickering, the very thing that rules are made to avoid. Were it otherwise, there would be no necessity for rules at all, but all matters could be referred to governors for settlement, according to their best judgment.

On top of this ruling comes Ouimet, who announces that he intends to open up a golf and sporting goods house in Boston, and that he is not relying on his fame as a golfer to sell goods. McLoughlin, the tennis player, does exactly the same thing in Los Angeles, with tennis as a leader, and makes precisely the same statement. Of course, no one for a moment believes either of these two men when they say that they are not capitalizing their proficiency in sport.

The sale of sporting goods is a very unusual and very restricted business, on all fours, for instance, with the manufacture and sale of optical goods, and no man would deliberately enter such a trade unless he had much more commercial experience and skill than either of the two young men mentioned, or was not relying on a factitious reputation to create an artificial demand. Mike Donlin, the ex-New York baseball star, and Evelyn Thaw are cases in point of people breaking into a game, where all they carried to market was fame in another direction. However, it is certainly laboring a point to dwell on what must be obvious to even an athletic mind.

But while the getting is good why do not the authorities get after the newspaper athletes. Certainly no class of men use their athletic ability as an asset more than the authors of the signed articles in golf who have leaped into the newspaper column from a championship at a wage far ahead of regular newspapermen that have been years on the job.

* * *

Stanford and California Make Up

Without the intervention of Henry Ford and his galaxy of puling propagandists on the Oscar II, our rival colleges have concluded a pact, and will hereafter meet in baseball, boating, track and field, and lawn tennis contests. So far as the public is concerned, it is like handing a man a toothpick when he is tamished for a dinner. It is football that is of interest in these intercollegiate events. Baseball is well enough, but as an exhibition, there is nothing that the colleges can give us that can compare to professional ball—and as for the others, except to participants and their friends, track and field athletics are about as interesting as watching a man blow his nose.

Of what earthly use is all the money that the public spends on the up-keep of the State University if we are not to have some fun out of it. No, indeed, the college lads who govern athletic sports will have to go further in the peace line if they expect to convince us that their heads have any other use than as a knob to hold down a collar.

* * *

National Golfing Fixtures

The following events were announced by the U. S. G. A. at their meeting in Chicago last week:

The amateur championship has been awarded to the Marion Cricket Club, Philadelphia, September 2 to 9; the national women's championship to the Belmont Springs Country Club, Boston, September 11 to 14, and the national open championship to the Minikahda Golf Club, Minneapolis, June 27 to 30.

* * *

Golf at the Presidio

At the "get-together" tournament held by the Presidio Golf Club last Saturday, J. T. Waddell won the premier honors with a score of 3 up, on par. J. W. Leavitt, the popular automobile man, was second, 1 up. Both had four holes allowance. These were very creditable scores, as any one who knows the difficulties of the Presidio course will admit.

—An Eastern visitor, after being served with lunch at 50 cents and a seven course dinner for $1, by courteous waiters at Maison Doree, Ellis above Powell, wonders how they do it.

TAKE YOUR CHOICEEIGHT
TRAINS
EVERY DAY

To---

Los Angeles

YOU CAN LEAVE San Francisco (Ferry Station) at 4:20 P. M. on the "San Joaquin Valley Flyer;" or at 6 P. M. on the "Owl Limited"—

DINNER IS SERVED in Dining Car (also breakfast next morning) and you arrive in Los Angeles before 9 o'clock—

THEN, IF YOU LIKE you can be in San Diego with its Exposition 12:50 same afternoon, and within 25 minutes' ride of Tia Juana Race Track.

* * *

OR, IF YOU PREFER, you can dine leisurely at home and take the "Lark" at 8 P. M. from (Third Street Station)—

AFTER BREAKFAST in Dining Car next morning, you reach Los Angeles at 9:45, with a full day before you for business or pleasure.

* * *

IN ADDITION, there are five other daily trains, including the "Shore Line Limited"—"Down the Coast by Daylight."

Here, There and Personally

In making a hyphenated baron out of Mr. Astor, the king took his chances on what the new baron would do in case of that impossible war between Great Britain and the United States. The hyphenated German-born baronets had to leave the kingdom a year ago. No Englishman need fear that Baron Astor would ever need to be exiled from his adopted country because of a sneaking fondness for his fatherland, where the rents come from.

* * *

Mr. Fletcher, the American ambassador to Chili, whom the president has nominated to be ambassador to Mexico, is a Republican in politics, and he has an excellent record in the diplomatic service. His confirmation will be fought in the Senate, however, in order that an assault may be made on the administration's Mexican policy. Presumably, Mr. Fletcher's nomination will be confirmed when the speech-making ends.

* * *

It is said that Ernest Thompson Seton, celebrated nature writer, is seeking to establish his claim to a British earldom. Mr. Thompson bases his right on the secret marriage of the fifth and last earl of Winton, contracted in 1716, after the nobleman had escaped from the prison in which loyalty to the Stuart dynasty had lodged him. Here's hoping he gets it.

* * *

The announcement that the "movies" have moved up to the fifth place among American industries, ranking next to steel, suggests that we have an enormous economic reserve that would go a long way in case of need. A few years ago there were no movies, and "the world went very well then." It would not be brought quite to a standstill if the movies should cease to move.

* * *

Andrew Carnegie's present fortune is estimated to be $60,000,000. He has given away $350,000,000. He is eighty years of age.

* * *

Everybody knows Ingoldsby's ingenious rhyme to Mephistopheles, as well as the way in which the authors of "Rejected Addresses" found a word to rhyme with chimney. But perhaps the most remarkable of all is a certain venture to find a rhyme to porringer:

"The Duke of York a daughter had,
He gave the Prince of Orange her,
And now I think I've won the prize
For finding rhyme to porringer."

* * *

Many people in other lands find it difficult to understand quite what is meant in the United States when the term "pork" is applied to a certain kind of legislation. A member of the present House of Representatives at Washington introduced, before the holiday recess, a bill appropriating $75,000 for a postoffice building in Ladysmith, Wis. Ladysmith has a population of 3,000. Supposing that representatives of other districts and States should have measures of a similar nature to further, and supposing they should ask the first representative for his aid, and the first representative should promise his aid on condition that the others gave their aid to Ladysmith, and supposing that as a result of this bargaining Ladysmith, a town of 3,000 inhabitants, should get a $75,000 postoffice building—that would be "pork."

* * *

The capital prize of 6,000,000 peseta ($1,200,000) in the Christmas drawing of the Spanish government lottery was won by the crew of the cruiser Alfonso VIII. The prize will be divided among 719 men who subscribed to the ticket, the price of which was 1,000 pesetas.

THE MORALS OF THREE REPORTERS.

An interesting newspaper story, the moral of which somehow seems to have gone astray, was told by George Ade at the dinner recently given to Brand Whitlock in Chicago. It was of a serious-minded young reporter who was given his first employment on the Chicago Tribune. He was assigned to the hotel run, which he covered conscientiously and thoroughly. But, the best he could do, he was constantly being scooped on good stories from visitors at the hotels, which appeared in the columns of two other Chicago newspapers, the Herald and the Times.

Finally the city editor, to stop the scoops, assigned one of the older reporters to the hotel run and shifted the cub to the financial page. He promptly made good there, got a strong standing among the patrons of the newspaper, and in course of time became president of the biggest bank in the United States, the National City of New York. The cub reporter was Frank Vanderlip, one-time comptroller of the currency.

It developed later that all of the good stories on which he was scooped were deliberate fakes, perpetrated with the connivance of the hotel clerks, who registered fictitious names for the benefit of the imaginative young men employed on the two other newspapers and to the discomfiture of Vanderlip.

The later history of the two wicked reporters who perpetrated these deliberate fakes upon their newspapers and the public is instructive. One of them was Charles B. Dillingham, now manager of the New York Hippodrome, the biggest amusement concern in the country. The other was Peter Dunne, creator of Mr. Dooley. Retributive justice?

EXHIBIT OF W. A. COULTER'S MARINES.

A notable selection of canvases of W. A. Coultter are on exhibition in the large room north of the entrance of the Merchants' Exchange building on California street. Mr. Coultter's forte is marines, and his characteristic paintings are attracting a great deal of attention from the ship owners and skippers that frequent the Exchange. As past masters and students of the sea in all its moods and expressions, they view Mr. Coultter's pictures with satisfaction. The gem of the forty-three canvases is the "Burning of the Blue Light," a large canvas done in black and grays with strong and admirable effect. The lonely hulk of the vessel is stripped of all her masts and rigging as she rolls in the sea, and abaft the blue light burns, her signal of sore distress. Far above, the moon shoots rays through the storm wrack which illuminates a strip of the rolling waves. Gloom and depression loom in the background. The idea is handled with an original imaginative conception and expressed in quiet and forceful restraint. It is an unusually appealing picture. Its price is $50,000. The other pictures are all in Mr. Coultter's best style, expressing a fine sympathy with the sea and its many moods.

Pears'

The public's choice since 1789.

"Your checks are peaches," he cried.

"No, they are Pears'," she replied.

Pears' Soap brings the color of health to the skin.

It is the finest toilet soap in all the world.

Phone Kearny 2842

Cosgrove's Hair Store

Established 20 Years

239 Powell Street
San Francisco

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL ITEMS

WEDDINGS.

AMOSS-McLAREN.—Only immediate relatives witnessed the marriage of Miss Marguerite Amoss and Loyall McLaren, which was solemnized at high noon Saturday at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Amoss, in Napa. The rooms were transformed into a hower of spring bloom for the ceremony, and the informal wedding breakfast that followed it, roses predominating in the decorative scheme. Mr. and Mrs. McLaren will enjoy a honeymoon of several weeks before establishing themselves at their home in Berkeley.

BAKER-MARTIN.—Miss Mildred Baker and Richard Martin were married in Chicago Wednesday night. Miss Baker, who is a daughter of John Baker, visited here recently. The wedding was graced by scores of the friends of the two families, and a reception and supper followed the ceremony, which took place at one of the fashionable hotels. The young couple will reside in Chicago.

BERTHEAU-ROE.—Miss Helen Bertheau, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Caesar Bertheau, became the wife of Hall Roe, son of Mrs. Wm. B. Storey, Wednesday night at a fashionable wedding, which took place at the home of the bride's godparents, Mr. and Mrs. George F. Volkmann, in Broadway. The Rev. Caleb S. S. Dutton of the First Unitarian Church, solemnized the ritual. Supper was served to about 150 guests, seated at tables done in all kinds of spring flowers, daffodils, primroses, violets and freesia, artistically blended.

MacADAM-PETERSON.—Army, navy and civilian society graced the wedding of Miss Katherine MacAdam and Lieutenant Martin J. Peterson, U. S. N., Tuesday night at the Fairmont Hotel. The Rev. Frederick W. Clappett read the ceremony before a beautiful floral altar in the gray room. Supper and dancing in the red room concluded the evening. Lieutenant and Mrs. Peterson left for St. Louis, where the former is doing recruiting service. They will reside there for a year or so.

LUNCHEONS.

BERRY.—Miss Alice Brune, who is to become the wife of Alan Van Fleet Monday, January 31st, was the guest of honor at a luncheon given Friday by Miss Dorothy Berry at her home in Sacramento street.

CHAMBERLIN.—Mr. and Mrs. Willard Chamberlin have asked a score or so of their friends to be their guests at a luncheon at the Burlingame Country Club on Sunday, in honor of Miss Gertrude Thomas and Roger Bocqueraz.

CROCKER.—Miss Margaret Nichols was the inspiration for the enjoyable luncheon at which Miss Helen Crocker was hostess Wednesday afternoon. It was given at the Town and Country Club.

MEAN.—Misses Gertrude Thomas and Dorothy Baker, both of whom will be brides of next month, shared the honors of a luncheon at which Miss Helen Dean entertained on Friday. The Francisca Club was the scene of this affair.

FRANKLIN.—Mrs. Walter Scott Franklin has issued cards for a luncheon on February 2d.

GOLDARCENA.—Miss Olympia Goldarcena gave a luncheon on Saturday in compliment to Miss Kate Isobel McGregor and her bridal party.

HATHAWAY.—Miss Marie Hathaway has issued invitations for a luncheon for Wednesday, January 26th, in honor of the Misses Lucille Johns, Therese Harrison and Linda Bryan. It will be at the Hathaway home.

HEWITT.—Mrs. Dixwell Hewitt was the charming hostess at an informal luncheon Monday afternoon. Half a dozen guests accepted her hospitality in her attractive home in Broadway.

JENNINGS.—The Misses Marita Rossi, Jean Wheeler, Ruth Welsh and Julia Van Fleet shared the hospitality of Miss Isabel Jennings Tuesday afternoon at luncheon at the Town and Country Club.

LANGSTROTH.—Miss Emily Timlow was the complimented guest at a luncheon at which Mrs. Lovell Langstroth was hostess Tuesday afternoon at her home on California street.

McGREGOR.—Miss Isobel McGregor entertained on Monday her bridal party and some other friends at a luncheon at the Francisca Club.

ROSENFELD.—Mrs. Henry Rosenfeld was hostess at a luncheon given Tuesday. About twenty guests were present, and the hostess was assisted by her daughter, Mrs. J. R. K. Nuttall.

SPRINGER.—Mrs. George Springer was hostess at a luncheon for twenty of her friends Tuesday, with bridge afterwards. Her sister, Miss Dora Netterville, assisted in greeting the guests.

WELSH.—Misses Elena Eyre, Julian Van Fleet and Marita Rossi were among the guests at the impromptu luncheon at which Miss Ruth Welsh entertained Wednesday. The pleasurable affair took place at the hostess' home on Sacramento street.

WELCH.—Mrs. Andrew Welch gave a luncheon Thursday afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. Welch are established for the winter at the St. Francis Hotel.

WRIGHT.—Mrs. Irving Wright entertained at luncheon Wednesday, her guests assembling for this affair at the Francisca Club.

DINNERS.

BERNSTROM.—Mr. and Mrs. Richard Bernstrom entertained a dozen friends Tuesday evening at a dinner dance at the Fairmont Hotel.

BLISS.—Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bliss will give a dinner Monday evening at their home on Vallejo street. Miss Dorothy Baker and Dr. George Willcutt will be the inspiration for the affair.

KARMANY.—Colonel Lincoln Karmany, U. S. N., and Mrs. Karmany gave a dinner recently at their home at Mare Island in honor of Captain T. C. Barker, U. S. N., and Mrs. Barker.

KING.—Mr. and Mrs. Norris King entertained informally at dinner Thursday evening at their attractive home in San Mateo.

MILLER.—Miss Helen Bertheau and Hall Roe, whose marriage is to be one of the important events of the week, were the guests of honor at a dinner given Sunday evening by Mr. and Mrs. C. O. G. Miller and Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Ford, at the Miller home on Pacific avenue.

TAYLOR.—Mr. and Mrs. William Taylor, Jr., entertained with a dozen covers at dinner Wednesday evening at their residence on Scott street. Afterward, with their guests, they attended the Cafe Chantant, given at the Fairmont for the Belgian relief fund.

THORNE.—A coterie of friends enjoyed the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Julian Thorne at dinner Friday evening. It was given at their residence on Broadway. After dinner the party attended the Subscription Dance at the St. Francis Hotel.

TEAS.

BLISS.—Mrs. George Ludley Bliss gave a farewell bridge tea Wednesday for Miss Muriel Boyton, who is leaving for New York Saturday.

DUNNE.—A magnificent centerpiece of daffodils and violets that later proved to have been composed of corsage bouquets for the guests, was the striking decoration at a tea given Saturday afternoon by Mrs. James Francis Dunne. It took place in the Palm Court at the Palace, and was given in honor of Mrs. Peter F. Dunne and Mrs. Joseph Rucker.

HILL.—Alexander Hill was host at a tea at his apartments on Saturday afternoon, having some fifty or sixty friends in for the afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. John Hoyt assisted Mr. Hill.

WALKER.—Mrs. Cyrus Walker has asked a dozen friends to share her hospitality at tea on the afternoon of February 26th, when, with her guests, she will take part in the dansant that is being given by the Assembly for the relief of the Polish war sufferers.

DANCES.

ALLEN.—Mr. and Mrs. Wyatt Allen were hosts at the dinner dance given at the Fairmont Tuesday evening.

DE PUE.—Miss Elva De Pue had a dancing party on Saturday night at her home, as a courtesy to Miss Dorothy Baker and Dr. George Willcutt, for whom a number of pleasant affairs are being arranged this month.

McGREGOR.—Mr. and Mrs. J. A. McGregor and Miss Kate Isobel McGregor gave a dinner dance party at the Palace Hotel on Friday night.

SATURDAY EVENING ASSEMBLY.—The Saturday Evening Assembly will give a dance this week at the California Club.

WILCUTT.—A supper dance was given by Mr. and Mrs. George B. Willcutt Friday evening at the St. Francis Hotel. The pleasurable affair was in honor of their son, Dr. George Willcutt, and his dance, Miss Dorothy Baker.

MUSICALES.

HOTEL OAKLAND.—The second of the Tuesday Morning Musicales will be held in the Ivory Ball Room, Hotel Oakland, January 25th. For this program, Mr. McFadyen will present Miss Heyman, a California girl, who left here 17 years ago for Europe. She has won distinction by playing with the leading symphony orchestras in the East and in Europe. She introduced in Russia, England and Germany the works of American composers; has written many interesting songs, played under Saint-Saens' direction his concerto with the Exposition Orchestra. This will be her first appearance as a soloist in Oakland. Also Miss Eugenia Argiewicz-Bem, a Polish woman who showed marked ability at an early age, making her debut in Petrograd at the age of ten years, at which time Caesar Cul, the noted critic-composer, said: "I shall make a memorandum of the name Eugenia Argiewicz, as she will be one of the world's greatest violinists."

THEATRE PARTIES.

BLACK.—Charles N. Black chaperoned a party of young folks recently when his daughter, Miss Mary Louise Black, gave a theatre party, followed by a supper dance at the St. Francis Hotel. The affair was planned in compliment to Miss Eleanor McCarter, who has been the house guest of Miss Black for ten days. Miss McCarter left Sunday for her home in Newark, N. J.

THE HOTEL PLAZA

overlooking the beautiful Plaza of Union Square, the Hotel of refinement and service, is offering special rates to permanent guests.

Hotel Plaza Company

MCNEAR.—Mr and Mrs. George W. McNear entertained some of their friends at a theatre party Monday night as a compliment to Miss Helen Beathan and Hall Roe, whose marriage took place Wednesday evening.

SEYMOUR.—The Misses Agnes and Polly Seymour gave a theatre and supper party for ten of their friends Monday night in honor of Miss Muriel Boxton, who is leaving on Saturday for New York. Mr. and Mrs. Tony Peterson chaperoned the party, which was concluded with dancing at the St. Francis.

CARDS.

BLISS.—Mrs. George Tudley Bliss entertained some of her friends Wednesday in compliment to Miss Muriel Boxton. It was a bridge and tea.

MEE.—A bridge party, followed by supper and dancing, was the pleasurable affair provided Saturday evening by Miss Margaret Mee for a large number of her friends. Her attractive home in San Rafael was the setting for this function.

LANGSTROTH.—Misses Cora Smith, Harriet Pomeroy and Fredericka Otis enjoyed the hospitality of Mrs. Lovell Langstroth at bridge Wednesday afternoon at her California street home.

SPEYER.—Miss Speyer and Miss Ethel Speyer had a bridge tea at their home Wednesday, and, after cards, others came in to visit over the repast.

WELSH.—Mrs. Bertha Welsh was hostess Wednesday afternoon at a bridge party which she gave at her home in Devisadero street.

RECEPTIONS.

CAEDMON ASSEMBLY.—The home of Mrs. Eleanor Martin on Broadway was thrown open Tuesday evening for an elaborate reception at which the Caedmon Assembly entertained in honor of Archbishop Edward J. Hanna. Several hundred were asked to meet the Archbishop, and a most enjoyable evening was passed.

ARRIVALS.

FREEMAN.—Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Freeman have returned from Victoria, B. C., where they have been guests of Mrs. Francis D. Little for the past six weeks. They are established at the Clift Hotel.

GIFFORD.—Harold Gifford arrived Tuesday from Honolulu, and will spend several weeks here visiting his sister, Mrs. Arthur Wilder, at her apartment in Taylor street.

LOWE.—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lowe have arrived from New York on their honeymoon, and will sail February 2d on the Great Northern for Honolulu. Their marriage, which occurred last week, was a prominent social event in the Eastern metropolis. Mrs. Lowe was formerly Miss Madeleine Mayer of New York.

LUCKENBACH.—John Lewis Luckenbach, whose marriage to Miss Katie-hel McGregor will take place next Wednesday, arrived this week from New York and is at the St. Francis Hotel. He was accompanied by his mother, Mrs. Edward Luckenbach; his sister, Miss Dorothy Luckenbach; Lewis Luckenbach, a cousin, and Howell E. Sayre, the last of whom will be the best man.

DEPARTURES.

BROCKWAY.—Mrs. Clark Brockway left last week for Honolulu, where she will visit several army friends. Prior to her departure for the Islands she was the house guest of Mrs. John Dickenson at San Benito Vineyard.

JACOBSON.—Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Jacobson, who have been visiting here for several weeks, have returned to Portland. They plan to be here again in April, en route to New York.

POETT.—Mr. and Mrs. Harry Poett have gone to New York, where they will visit their relatives for the next two weeks.

INTIMATIONS

ANCERIM.—Captain Louis Ancerim, U. S. N., and Mrs. Ancerim are guests of Major and Mrs. Frederick Bradman at their home in Vallejo. Captain and Mrs. Ancerim are en route from Annapolis to San Diego, where they will be stationed for an indefinite period.

BARRON.—Miss Evelyn Barron has been spending several days in Burlingame, where she has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Tevis.

BLACK.—Miss Marie Louise Black leaves for New York on about the first of February to visit her uncle, Dr. Black, who is a well known neurologist of New York.

SHERWOOD.—Mr. and Mrs. John Dickinson Sherwood of Spokane, who passed the autumn in San Francisco, where they were guests at the Palace Hotel, are now in Honolulu.

FORMAN.—Mrs. Sands Forman of Coronado is the guest of Mrs. Edgar F. Preston at her apartment on Powell street.

HOLMAN.—Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Holman will spend the winter here as the guests of Mr. Spencer Bucklee at his home on Clay street.

HOPKINS.—Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Hopkins have been enjoying the week-end at the Menlo Country Club, where they have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Gallos.

KEENEY.—Mrs. Charles Keeney, who is visiting her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Tomlinson, at their home in New York, is contemplating returning shortly to California.

LAW.—Herbert Law gave a week-end house party at his place near Los Allos in honor of Miss Margaret Dillington and some Eastern friends.

LILLEY.—Alexander Lilley, who left recently for the East, is enjoying a pleasant visit with relatives and friends in Columbus, Ohio.

NICKEL.—Mr. and Mrs. George Nickel are in town for the winter, and have an attractive new home in Third avenue.

NIBLACK.—Captain and Mrs. Albert Niblack are established at Newport, where they have taken the Simpson cottage, which is one of the loveliest homes there.

SELLERS.—Mrs. David Sellers, who has been in Boston since leaving San Francisco last spring, has come to Chattanooga, Tennessee, where she will visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Clay Evans.

SHARON.—Mrs. Frederick Sharon entertained a few friends informally over the week-end at her home in Menlo Park.

SPOCKELS.—Mrs. Claus Spockels is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Spockels, having come up from San Diego a few days ago on the Spockels yacht, the Veneta.

LE TOUR.—George de la Tour is leaving shortly for New York, to be away several weeks.

UPHAM.—Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Upham have closed their house in Mill Valley and will spend the next three months in town as the guests of Mrs. Upham's parents, Dr. and Mrs. Alexander Warner, at their home on Franklin street.

WALKER.—Mrs. John Walker of Honolulu is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Matson at their home in Jackson street. Mrs. Walker contemplates spending several weeks here visiting friends.

WHITNEY.—Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Whitney are leaving for New York in a few days, to be away several weeks.

STATE INLAND WATERWAYS ASSOCIATION TO MEET

The third annual meeting of the Inland Waterways Association of California and a special Congress under its auspices, will be held in the Palace Hotel, San Francisco, Monday and Tuesday, February 21-22, 1916. All sessions of the Congress, which will be open at 10 a. m., February 21st, will be public, and a cordial invitation to attend and participate in its discussions is extended to all who believe in a comprehensive plan for dealing with the waters of the State.

THE FIRST MOTOR TRUCK SHOW.

The first show for motor trucks only will be held in the Palace Hotel, January 25th to 27th, from ten a. m. to eleven p. m. of each day. This unique exhibit will attract thousands interested in the most modern development of gasoline propelled vehicles. It is true that in grabbing for the passenger car trade the manufacturers were inclined to slur the lowly commercial vehicle, and until recently it has not kept pace with the pleasure car. But the war opened the eyes of public and maker to its possibilities, and the truck of to-day is as far ahead of the same make of a year ago as the passenger car is ahead of its antitype of 1910.

SAFETY FIRST IN THE POWDER MILL.

In describing the du Pont industries in The American Magazine Merle Crowell says: "The larger buildings at Carney's Point, such as the dry houses, have galvanized iron chutes running from the upper floors to the ground. If fire starts, the workmen tumble into these chutes and slide to safety in a pile of sand a rod away from the base of the building. They may land on one another's necks, and even break a few bones, but it is a dirt-cheap price to pay for the escape."

—E. H. Prentice, president of the Phoenix Desk Company, has practically recovered from the illness with which he was recently stricken on a recent visit in Monrovia, Southern California. For the last six weeks he has been recuperating at the St. Francis Hospital in this city, where his many friends have made a point to ease his confinement with calls and messages.

—It's easier to convince a woman than it is to keep her convinced.

W. D. Fennimore J. W. Davis A. R. Fennimore

California Optical Co.

Makers of Good Glasses

181 Post Street } San Francisco
2508 Mission St. }
1221 Broadway, Oakland

Never Tell Your Age To Anyone

Some people still persist in calling attention to their age by wearing two pairs of glasses, one for reading and one for distance when with the newly patented "Caltex One-piece" Bifocals only one pair are necessary. Both corrections are ground in a single lens, thereby eliminating the annoyance of constant changing glasses. The "Caltex One-piece" Bifocals have the appearance of regular glasses and do not call attention to the fact that you have reached that age where two pairs of glasses are necessary. Remember the name—"Caltex."

Novelties for "Welcoming" and "Bon Voyage" Packages Flowers Delivered to Any Part of the World

SEND YOUR HOSTESS A DISTINCTIVE BOX OF FLOWERS

FROM JOSEPH'S FLORISTS

GRANT AVENUE, NEAR SUTTER STREET

GENERAL PROSPERITY
THROUGHOUT AMERICA.

The whole country is doing a good business, an increasing portion of which is not related to "war orders."

The shipyards are tied up with more business than they can turn out during the next year or two; the lumber industry is active again, and building operations in many sections show a notable increase; the steel plants are pushing work on new additions so as to benefit from the huge volume of business that is coming to American manufacturers from all quarters of the world; the country merchant is replenishing his stock, and the demand for steel products is in excess of the present record production. American manufacturers are now in position greatly to increase their foreign sales if they can manage to care for such orders without detriment to their expanding business at home. In order to secure the full benefits of this situation, however, it will be necessary to keep prices very near the level that obtains in other parts of the world. The railroads continue to make an extraordinary showing, and were it not for the freight congestion and the lack of proper equipment, their earnings would be much greater than they are. Net earnings for the twelve months of 1915 broke all records. It is evident that the railroads will have to do an immense amount of new construction work during the coming year. Retrenchment during the last several years has been carried to such lengths as to make it imperative for the great systems in the future to add to their equipment and undertake improvement work on a large scale. The investment markets will apparently be prepared to take the securities which the railroads must sell if the foreign situation clears up. There has been of late a broadening of the market for all good railroad issues. Very few people think that the presidential election this year will incline to unsettle business, as all industries are too active.

—Standard Oil of California will cut a big "melon," by a presentation of nearly $25,000,000 par value of stock to its lucky stockholders, numbering some 6,000 individuals. The average distribution will be some $16,000 each in addition to a regular quarterly dividend of $21.50 per share to be paid April 15th. The shares in New York sold as high as $384 during the week, but have since recovered themselves around $370, on the demand becoming more steady. On this market value of the stock above par, the size of the "melon" reaches the big sum of $92,000,000, one of the biggest dividends of its kind in the history of the several Standard Oil properties. This is the third stock dividend of Standard Oil of California since the fire, and the management is now entering on the most promising era in the eventful history of petroleum development.

—The Belmont Company's engineers are now surveying the well known Bull Moose property located on Bare Mountain, with a view to purchase of the property. This move is part of the policy of the company to provide new mining property for development, so that the prospects of the stockholders will be maintained in values. In other words, while the old levels of their properties are being worked out, new ones are added in live and promising camps, so that the income and profits of the corporation are carefully maintained.

—The recent advance of the common stock of the Pacific Gas and Electric Company from 56 or thereabouts to 64½ is to be attributed solely to the general expectation among investors that this security will be restored to a cash dividend basis sometime this week, at the next meeting of the board of directors.

—For the week ending Jan. 15th, Tonopah Mining Company shipped bullion estimated in values at $66,225. For the same week Tonopah shipped ore valued at $186,006.

—According to the Standard Oil Bulletin, the production of California petroleum fell off 14,100,000 bbls. in 1915, as compared with 1914. The bulk of the loss, 10,700,000 bbls., was in the Sunset-Midway field. The average daily production last year was 245,388 bbls. The total for the year 89,566,779 bbls.

—Tonopah Ex. has made a sustained gain in the value of its shares, the rise being based on the rising price of bar silver.

—It is estimated that the international trade of the United States approximates around $500,000,000.

—Quietness continues in local securities. Local wheat has been showing strength of late.

LOCAL BUSINESS MEN TAKING LESSONS ON WAR.

Major-General J. Franklin Bell, commanding the Western Department, made a happy hit at the Palace Hotel before a large gathering of local business men with his first military lecture on preparedness. General Bell explained that the art of war had made such progress since the days of Napoleon that it had come to embrace the application of nearly every practical science known to civilization; that it was so widely comprehensive in its scope that no one could hope to master the art in every one of its branches in an ordinary lifetime; that therefore all officers and men in the army were more or less specialists, but that Generals were expected to have a general knowledge of all branches of the art in order that they might be competent to properly supervise work of their subordinates. He said that inasmuch as a series of lectures had been arranged by specialists, he would not occupy their time in discussing any technical details of the military profession, but preferred to give business men some reasons why their taking special interest in the matter of military training was a wise and patriotic step. During the course of his remarks he had something to say about our foreign commerce and the necessity of fostering and protecting it if the prosperity and welfare of our people were to be promoted and maintained at their present high standard. He closed with explaining why the army was not only willing but glad to co-operate with them in their efforts to acquire a knowledge of military training.

If all goes well with these lectures and sufficient interest is developed, there will be a camp opened at Monterey this coming summer for practical experience of the business men in military service and camp life. Many army men are foregathering in this city in expectation that they may be mustered into the service of drilling these new recruits from among the general citizens. The proposed new law provides for an increase of 140,000 men recruits. Most of these officers will have to take examinations to qualify for their positions as tactics and other practices in the service have changed in many important particulars since they retired.

—The ladies have become accustomed to receiving costly and refined souvenirs at Techau Tavern, and were, therefore, not surprised, although unquestionably pleased, to be presented with dainty little souvenir bottles of La Boheme perfume, last Saturday. La Boheme is a perfume de luxe, appealing to the most refined and cultivated people, and will, without doubt, rival in popularity the famous Parfum Mary Garden. La Boheme will be the ladies' pet souvenir at the Tavern for many a long day, and the management will have to look far for a souvenir to match it in the esteem of the fair sex.

—Clergyman (to tattered hobo)—Instead of spending your life wandering about the countryside and sleeping under hedges, why cannot you act like a man, and go out into the world and fight for your hearth and your home? Hobo—'Cause I'm not a Hearth-tender.—Punch.

E. F. HUTTON & CO. BANKERS

Members—New York Stock Exchange; New York Cotton Exchange; New York Coffee Exchange; New Orleans Cotton Exchange; Liverpool Cotton Association; Chicago Board of Trade.

Private Wire—New York, Chicago to San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Branch Offices—San Francisco, 190 California St., and Hotel St. Francis; Los Angeles, 114 Fourth Street, I. W. Hellman Building.

PIONEER HOUSE OF THE PACIFIC COAST

The Inside of the Ford Peace Fact

(Continued from Page 5)

for a doctor or lawyer or something like that." He has read less than the average schoolboy. He would never win a prize in spelling, and what he says so frequently and so verbosely in the newspapers of late months is what others say for him, and write for him, and in large measure think for him. Asked at the beginning of the war what effect the devastation of Belgium would have on the purchasing power of Europe he replied, quite seriously: 'What difference would it make if all Belgium fell into the sea to-morrow? Who would notice it in business?'

"Perhaps it is unnecessary, yet it is illuminating, to add that with this sort of comprehension of the movement of economic forces Mr. Ford combines an approximately complete lack of information on human history, ancient or modern. Anybody endowed with sufficient patience to attempt to analyze and digest any of his numerous utterances on the defense of his own country, on the present war, or on his method of stopping it will of course have suspected as much. It is a revelation to him that people do not love war and that the men in the trenches do not yearn to be killed. Therefore the stopping of the war should be all very simple, he thinks.

"With many thousands of the women of Canada, understanding that the existence of their country and their empire is at stake, protest through the officers of the Daughters of the Empire, against his peace plan, he inadvertently insults them with the reply that they represent "a military group," and tries to make them believe that the men who 'are piling up wealth out of range of shot and shell' are the men 'who caused the war.' The most modest possible measures proposed for the defense of his own country against attack he describes through his rhetorical scribes as 'the reptile' that is creeping through the country carrying the deceptive and dangerous word 'preparedness' written upon its back;' and hires a congressional lobby for $20,000 to prevent any enlargement of the military and naval establishment of the United States.

"We do not believe that Henry Ford is thinking of the money he will make through using his peace expedition to advertise the name of the automobile he makes. Nor are we at all sure that he is not thinking a great deal of personal aggrandizement in his curious venture. There are men for whom publicity is the crown of life. It is their substitute for enduring fame, pleasing as a glass diamond to the man who cannot get the real thing.

"Chauncey Depew avers that Brother Ford is engaged in 'a struggle for the front page.' Quite possibly. And yet a year ago we would not have said that. His generosity with his employees, his hospital and charity donations, his interest in his city, all stamped him as a man of philanthropic motives. For all we know, his motives in this peace expedition may be entirely philanthropic.

"But there has been an extraordinary change in Henry Ford in the past year—from the time, he it noted, that President Wilson sent for him to interpret the state of the country. Mr. Ford, we understand, neither added to nor subtracted from the sum of the President's knowledge, but he came home a changed man. Before that fateful day he was always modest in expressing an opinion about things he did not know or understand, thus conserving a large portion of his leisure hours for other things; but since then he seems to have been talking with increasing velocity and variety, barring neither the cigarette nor the national guard in the whirlwind of his denunciations, nor neglecting the humble convict in his reform of penology. To-day he predicts the end of the war, much as Dowie predicted the end of the world. How much he means of it we do not know, though we recall that Dowie's end came first.

"If so be that Mr. Ford's megalomania requires a sensation of some proportions he is to be congratulated on the result. No private citizen within the recollection of this generation has pulled off any stunt that compares with his peace expedition in newspaper publicity. But if we are to ascribe to Henry Ford complete indifference to his own fame and name, and full sincerity in this enterprise, we pay a very poor compliment to his intelligence. Don Quixote was sincere, too, but he got into the funny papers in his day, just as Brother Henry is getting into them now, and was thus explained by Cervantes, his creator:

"His judgment being completely obscured, he was seized with one of the strangest fancies that ever entered the head of any madman: this was a belief that it behooved him, as well for the advancement of his glory as the service of his country, to become a knight-errant, and traverse the world, armed and mounted, in quest of adventures, and to practice all that had been performed by knights-errant of whom he had read; redressing every species of grievance, and exposing himself to dangers which, being surmounted, might secure to him eternal glory and renown. . . . And thus wrapped in these agreeable delusions, and borne away by the extraordinary pleasure he found in them, he hastened to put his designs into execution.'

"Yet in nothing that Mr. Ford's writers have said for him does it appear that he knows anything about the cause of the war, or cares anything about it. And that explains why he is willing to reckon all the lives that have been spent by the heroes of this war for the principles of their respective governments as sheer waste, and for the sake of ending this conflict would unwittingly be a party to the incubation of another. Mr. Ford's entire stock in trade is a parcel of documents shown him by Mrs. Rosika Schwimmer of Hungary, and purporting to be signed statements from all the belligerent governments showing that they are disposed to discuss peace. To estimate the value of these documents we need not question their validity. They have been laid before the president of the United States, and the president of the United States has refused to act on them, and yet the president of the United States is known at home and abroad as a man of peace. Few Americans, understanding the president's sources of exclusive information and his desire for peace, and the delicacy with which the foreign policy of the United States must be handled in this crisis have been willing to butt in and embarrass their government, as the roll call of Mr. Ford's small but select party of free excursionists booked for the Oscar II will show. The world, praise be, will take note of that, and so far as 'Saturday Night' may speak for the people of Detroit we want the world to understand also that this city is not a breeding ground for busybodies, that it respects Henry Ford as a successful manufacturer and admires him as a philanthropist, but that it would regard his peace expedition as a joke were it not such a humiliation to his city and his country."

TRAVEL EAST IN LUXURY.

Sunset Limited to New Orleans through balmy skies. Thence through historic scenes of days of war, now alive with southern life and industry. The Sunset Limited and its connection at New Orleans with the New York and New Orleans Limited makes an ideal winter trip East. Service the best. Stop-over at points of much interest. For booklets and information apply Washington Sunset Route, 874 Market St., San Francisco, Cal.

This Little HUMAN DOCUMENT tells the story of

Gail Borden
EAGLE
BRAND
CONDENSED
MILK

Its uniformity enables the mother to determine with accuracy the proper modification desired. Its absolute purity assures her that the baby is getting a thoroughly safe and wholesome food. It keeps well and is easily prepared.

Many mothers cannot nurse their little ones. When this contingency arises the problem is to get the substitute that is best suited to the baby's individual requirements.

Eagle Brand™ has been successfully used as an infant food for half a century and the thousands of recorded cases of children who have been carried through the critical period on 'Eagle Brand' have established it as the leading product of its kind.

Borden's Condensed Milk Co.
125 Hudson St., New York

Please name the Baby's Welfare and Baby's Graphic as well as Borden's Register.

Name _____
Address _____

Pat. 1887
New York

Splendid Drill Work of San Francisco Cavalry Troop

The largely attended meeting of representative business men, held last Friday, at which a lecture was given by General Bell, for the purpose of arousing interest in and inducing citizens to train themselves for preparedness, calls particular attention to the fact that a well organized cavalry troop has sprung into being in this city with a celerity and efficiency perhaps unequaled except in time of war—"The San Francisco Cavalry Troop," organized about four months ago. It is a credit to San Francisco that this could be done, and disproves that there is any lack of patriotism or disinclination on the part of citizens to respond to the country's needs—at least here in San Francisco. The city may well be proud of the prompt response made by these citizens, the splendid ability and work in organization that has been done, and the unparalleled promptness and remarkable completeness of the organization, the men of which are now drilling, attending lectures and studying military affairs with the regularity, smoothness and discipline of a well established troop.

Thornwell Mullally, who started the Troop, organized it, and who has made arrangements for it, gives much of the credit to the War Department and to General Bell and General Murray, the present and past commanders, respectively, of the Western Department, and to other regular army officers. Through the interest and kindness of the Department and these regular army officers, Mr. Mullally was able to arrange, through the initial period of the organization work and training, for the use of cavalry horses and equipment. Without their essential aid, he has stated, the splendid results would not have been possible, and to them the Troop cannot but feel deeply grateful.

Mr. Mullally further says that the men composing the Troop are actuated by the highest motive, namely, the service of their country. To this, together with the aid above mentioned, he ascribes the phenomenal success of the Troop. He said nothing, however, of the ability which he has shown as an organizer and, we might say, as a leader in getting the men together, handling them, providing them with facilities, making it possible for them to get regular army instructors in drills and lectures, quarters, equipments and horses. He does not, however, need to say anything of this, as we have come to know of his ability in this direction from his work as the acting head of the United Railroads during and after the fire, and in connection with the Exposition and other matters of a public nature that he has managed.

The high motive, however, spoken of by Mr. Mullally is evidenced in the seriousness with which the men do their work. And it is work—hard work. Every Wednesday the men assemble for a lecture given by Lieutenant Charles Burnett, of the First Cavalry, U. S. A. Lieutenant Burnett is peculiarly well qualified for this work both by experience and ability. After the lecture questions are asked. A copy of the lecture is sent to each man for his further study and examination. These lectures cover a wide scope in military knowledge and training, and go into the various subjects thoroughly. They are intensely practical, so as to school officers thoroughly in handling men in the field and in actual war. Other prominent military authorities will be asked to give talks in military matters to the men from time to time. A carefully prepared list of military books of a practical nature is furnished each man as a military library for further studies.

After the lecture the men proceed to their quarters and the stables at the Riding Academy, don their uniform, which is a service uniform—made for work—saddle their horses, march to the Presidio drill grounds, where the further instruction of Lieutenant Burnett and Lieutenant Kenyon A. Joyce, Sixth Cavalry, U. S. A., who is also well qualified by experience and ability, the men are put through a rigorous mounted and dismounted drill lasting two hours. This drill is hard, serious work from start to finish, just as much as that of the cavalry men of the regular army, for the work is exactly the same. In fact, some of the troopers drilled with the regular cavalry when they were stationed at this post. It is a tribute to the physical condition of the San Francisco men that they have been able to do this work so well from the start.

The rapid progress of the men in this work has elicited the enthusiastic praise of the regular army officers, who say the result has been ascribed to the intelligence of the men, to the mental training which they have received in colleges or in their professions or business, and, above all, to the concentration and serious purpose of the men due to the fact that they are engaged in preparing themselves to serve their country in the way of their country's greatest need, for it is recognized that our country has not a sufficient number of trained men to protect it from attack. There is not to-day in our country a sufficient number of men trained even to act as privates in case of war. If war were made upon us it would require some months to fit an adequate number of even enlisted men. There is, of course, an absolute dearth of men trained as officers, and a serious, dangerous menace to the very existence of our country is that men cannot act efficiently as officers without training.

A striking editorial in a local paper brings this out as follows:

"Two prime causes of the British defeat at the Dardanelles stand out in high relief against that tragic background of wasted valor and dreadful suffering and bloodshed. They are: First, the incompetence of the commander-in-chief and of many of his subordinate officers. Second, the interference and the inefficiency of civilians in authority, planning and directing military and naval operations. And these two features we Americans should take seriously to heart. For these two fatal and inherent faults of the British military system are faithfully reproduced in our own system, and if we come to grips with any first class military power, we shall inevitably have to face the same bitter experience of slaughter, failure, defeat and retreat which has been the record of every major British military operation during the year 1915."

The hard work which the men of the San Francisco Troop are doing on the drill ground and in lectures and studies is exactly the training suited to fit them as officers. The quality of the men, the seriousness of their purpose and their experienced instructors, enable the men to cover the ground rapidly and efficiently. Thirty day encampments are good, but the work of the San Francisco Cavalry Troop goes further. It is done regularly throughout the year, learning the new and going over the old. They propose also to have several yearly encampments lasting for several days each. It is proposed to ride to the encampment—a day's march or so—some thirty miles, camp out, and from sunrise to sunset engage for several days in the hard training and duties of the regular army men, and march back to their city quarters. Particular attention is to be paid to proficiency in shooting. The Troop has a sub-calibre shooting range installed, where they have the opportunity to show that practice makes perfect. With the consent of the commanding officer of the Western Department they hope to get further practice in shooting on one of the Government rifle ranges and to qualify as marksmen and experts. Many of the men are good horsemen, either from playing polo or riding generally.

Too much credit cannot be accorded to the men who are giving their time to this work; and the speedy, thorough, efficient and practical manner in which the organization has been perfected and arrangements made for it, which has already put the Troop on a permanent basis, where it is doing such splendid work, shows that the man who did it has the proper qualifications for making an officer. The manner in which he endured a serious injury, while engaged in the drill, which has confined him to the St. Francis Hospital for now over two months, shows that he has the requisite strength and nerve.

The men who compose the Troop are professional and business men and representative of the best and most sterling of our citizens. They are business men, lawyers, doctors, newspaper men and capitalists. The roster of the S. F. Cavalry Troop is as follows:

First Sergeant—Thornwell Mullally. Sergeants—Thomas A. Driscoll, Vincent Whitney, George Armsby. Quartermaster—Sergeant Stanley W. Morshead. Corporals—Elliott McAllister, Lawrence I. Scott, J. P. Neville, S. P. B. Morse, Samuel Knight, Edward J. Tobin, Francis Carolan. Privates—William M. Abbott, Raymond Armsby, John C. Angsbury, Charles A. Baldwin, Harold B. Barton, George Boyd, Horace B. Clifton, Robert Lewis Coleman, Albert J. Dibblee, Harrison Dibblee, Henry Foster Dutton, Joseph L. Eastland, Thomas B. Eastland, Dr. James Eaves, E. Courtney Ford, George S. Garritt, Stuart Haldorn, Harold Havens, Robert G. Hooker, Samuel Hopkins, George H. Howard, Jr., Alfred Humphreys, Archibald Johnson, Edward Clinton LaMontagne, Harold Ward Law, Dr. Hubert E. Law, Eugene Lent, A. S. Lilley, Knox Maddox, Fred W. McNear, Kenneth Moore, John Parrott, Jr., William Gregory Parrott, Leroy T. Ryone, William B. Sanborn, Harry R. Simpkins, Ray B. Spivale, George Stummel, A. B. Swinnerton, William S. Tavis, Jr., Wharton Thurston, Philip Westcott, Alfred Whittell and Wilberforce Williams.

Superintendent H. A. French sends the following figures for the State Motor Vehicle Department business to last Saturday for 1916: Registrations—Automobiles, 129,582; motorcycles, 10,314; chauffeurs, 1,941; auto dealers, 950. Receipts—Automobiles, $1,317,702.40; motorcycles, $20,628; chauffeurs, $3,882; auto dealers, $23,282; motorcycle dealers, $410. Total receipts, $1,365,404.40.

* * *

The Story of the Automobile Trade Told in Facts and Figures

The romance of the motor car industry which, within the century, has developed from practically nothing to the third in size in the United States, being only exceeded by woodworking and steel products, is comprehensively told in the figures sent to the News Letter by Alfred Reeves, General Manager of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce at Washington, D. C.

While New York State leads in total registrations, California, with 163,716 cars (excluding motorcycles) and a population estimated by the State school board at 2,800,000, has the greatest per capita ownership, or one car to every 17 persons. California also pays the greatest amount of taxation for licenses and drivers' fees, $1,954,951 in 1915.

The motor car production for 1916 will exceed 1,200,000.

On the basis that any person with an income of $1,200 can own a car, there is market for automobiles to the number of 5,000,000.

Motor vehicles sold during 1915, 892,618.

Retail value of cars and trucks sold in 1915, $691,778,950.

Passenger cars sold in 1915 842,249.

Retail value of passenger cars sold in 1915, $565,856,450.

Motor trucks sold in 1915, 50,369. Retail value of motor trucks sold in 1915, $125,922,500. Motor car sales almost doubled from 1907 to 1908, from 44,000 to 85,000.

Number of carriages sold annually from 1908 to 1912, 1,000,000.

Miles of public road in the United States, 2,273,000.

Money spent in this country on highway construction last year, which made for tremendous increase in real estate values, almost $250,000,000.

Automobile exports to 80 different countries in 1915 increased 250 per cent and will exceed $100,000,000.

In 1914 it was $28,507,464.

England is our best buyer of automobiles, taking for the year ending June 30: trucks, 5,306; pleasure cars, 8,321, valued at $21,000,000.

Estimated value exports of commercial vehicles only, 1915 (increase 60 per cent), $63,000,000. Estimated value exports passenger cars during 1915 (increase 90 per cent), $37,000,000.

Freight carloads of automobiles shipped during 1915 exceeded 200,000.

Miles traveled annually by motor vehicles (average of 5,000 miles per car), 12,000,000,000.

Gasoline consumed annually by motor vehicles (average of 400 gallons per car) 980,000,000 gallons.

Lubricating oil consumed (average of 12 gallons per car), 28,800,000 gallons.

Tires used annually on motor cars, 12,000,000.

Number of brands of tires used on motor cars, almost 125.

Number of types and sizes of tires, 140.

Motor vehicles registered in the United States from State reports, July 1, 1915, 2,070,000. Total registrations for 1915, 2,400,000.

Total manufacturers of passenger and commercial cars, 448. Commercial vehicle manufacturers, 257.

Dealers, garages, repair shops and supply stores, 27,700. States in which automobile factories are located, 34. Proportion of motor vehicles to population of United States, 1 to 48.

Proportion of motor vehicles to miles of road, 1 to 1.

Proportion of automobiles to area of United States, 1 to 1 1-3 square miles.

Scientific engineering, standardization of main parts, skilled manufacturing, big production and efficient selling brought the passenger car to an average price in 1915 of $672.

The automobile and improved roads in some localities have increased land values 100 to 400 per cent.

Automobilists pay registration fees in all States and personal property tax, in addition, in all but four States. Many States also require and charge for a driver's license, while others have a wheel tax. There was paid more than $7 per car in motor vehicle fees for registration in 1915, exceeding $14,000,000.

Keen competition in the automobile industry brought failures in the past five years of 400.

Exports of cars and trucks per month are at the rate of $8,500,000.

In 1903 the production was 11,000.

Value of production in 1903, $12,650,000.

Big production came with the standardization of the most important parts of the cars in 1910, when the number of cars made reached 187,000.

* * *

Famous French Drivers in the War

Records of the French War Department are of interest to American followers of automobile racing in showing the present activities of the famous French automobile racing car drivers who have participated in American speed contests.

George Sizaire, who competed in the United States, is attached to President Poincaire's reserve staff as an emergency driver, and has taken the President on two trips to the front. Albert Guyot has joined the aviation corps and was one of the first men to fly in Russia. He is at present attached to the headquarters staff of one of the armies operating in the Argonne, and has only been away from the front six days in fifteen months.

Arthur Duray, runner-up in the 1914 Indianapolis race, is attached to the General Automobile Reserve and is driving a De Launay-Bellville car, and is undertaking special missions from Paris to the front. Jules Boillot is a sub-lieutenant, and is taking instructions as an aeroplane pilot. Jules Goux, winner of the Indianapolis Speedway race in 1913, is attached to the staff of the military governor of Belfort. Jean Chassagne, Sunbeam pilot, formerly the member of an artillery corps, is now attached to an important aerodrome in the suburbs of Paris. Victor Rigal, who has been both a Sunbeam and Peugeot driver and has performed in America, is now a sub-lieutenant in charge of an automobile convoy. Among the old-time automobile drivers, Victor Hemery is a driving instructor; Louis Wagner, of Vanderbilt fame, is serving in the artillery; Rougier is an aviator; Henry Fournier has charge of a shell making factory; Morris Sizaire is in command of an automobile repair shop at the front; Caillois is doing similar work at Challons; Charles Feroux, automobile editor, is attached to the government aeroplane motor laboratory, and tests all new motors before they are accepted by the army, and Rene Thomas is making aeroplane motor parts in his own shop near Paris.

FIRE PROOF BUILDING Phones—Park 8386, Park 5138

20---MARSHALL SQUARE---20

GARAGE

EXPERT AUTOMOBILE REPAIRING and MACHINE WORK

AUTO SUPPLIES

NO. 20 MARSHALL SQUARE

Opp. 8th and Market Sts. San Francisco

London and Lancashire Fire Insurance Company

Orient Insurance Company

332 PINE STREET SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
 Sam B. Stoy, Mgr. G.O. Smith, Agency Supt. W. B. Hopkins, Local Sec.

Automobile Department W. M. KLINGER, General Agent

Indianapolis Plans Great Speedway Race

New York City, January 21.—Perhaps no subject was of greater universal interest among the thousands of automobile owners gathered here during the automobile show than the coming season's speedway races.

During the automobile show, the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, the first built in the United States, issued its entry blanks for its sixth annual International Sweepstakes Race to be held in Indianapolis Tuesday, May 30, 1916.

The distance for this year's race is 300 miles. The opportunity to get rich quick is more potent for 1916 than ever before for the driver who is able to capture first place at Indianapolis, New York, Chicago and other speedway races.

There is just one little thing not to be overlooked, according to racing fans, and that is the word "quick." From the way the cars went faster and faster in 1915, the winning drivers have a most strenuous racing season ahead of them for this year. Veterans of the game believe that after the Indianapolis race it will be practically possible to tell who will bank America's racing fortunes when the season is over. Thus, aside from being the initial race sport of the year, the Indianapolis race will have even greater significance.

It is interesting to note that every car must show a speed of at least eighty miles per hour in the official speed trials of one lap of the track in order to be eligible to start in the race. These speed trials are to be held on May 26th and 27th. A ruling of the Contest Board of the American Automobile Association, which will be enforced, declares that not more than three cars of any one make may start in any one speed event as a factory or team entry. Two additional cars of the same make may start provided they are entered by individuals having no connection with the factory team, but are bona fide entries. In event of more than five cars of one make being entered, the fastest five in the official speed trials shall be eligible.

* * *

The Semi-Trailer in Trucking

That the era of the trailer and the semi-trailer for motor trucks is upon us even the most skeptical cannot doubt, if he reads the trade papers which keep abreast of the development along these lines. A few years ago, users of trailers and semi-trailers were comparatively scarce. While the economy and the efficiency of this method have been recognized, the rather odd appearance of trailers and semi-trailers has prevented their general use; but as many of the more progressive business-houses have begun to use them in spite of this seeming objection, people are becoming accustomed to them and ceasing to regard them as odd.

Another objection formerly raised to this method of hauling was that motor trucks would not "stand up" under the increased load. Nevertheless, actual practical tests have proved that a truck can safely haul more than twice as much as it can carry, if no more than the normal load for which it was built is put on the driving wheels.

It was also feared at first that the ordinary wagon would not stand the strain of being used as a trailer on account of the speed at which it would be drawn; but the wagon, too, has held up under practical tests.

It has been found advisable for trailers to be built on general wagon plans, since the wagon is the result of many centuries of development, and it would be hard to improve upon it. Trailers for Fords and other light roadsters should have roller or ball bearing axle and rubber tires on account of the speed; but for heavy hauling steel tires and a plain bearing axle are just as good, provided means are employed for keeping the latter lubricated.

There are at present two methods of utilizing the trailer principle—the semi-trailer and the full trailer. The former is undoubtedly the best. It enables the driver to manipulate in narrow streets, driveways, lumber yards, coal yards, and other places too narrow to allow the use of a four-wheel trailer.

In many cities, trucks with four-wheel trailers are prohibited, but the tractor semi-trailer unit is allowed on all streets. With the tractor and semi-trailer, the driver can back the vehicle in exactly the same way in which a teamster backs a wagon with a team of horses. Backing is out of the question with the four-wheel trailers, except with a few built for the purpose, and even with these it is necessary to have an extra man and special appliance, which causes much delay.

The most important advantage of the semi-trailer method is that a part of the weight may be used for traction. If there is not enough weight on the driving wheels they will slip on muddy roads, on wet asphaltum, or on snow and ice. With the tractor semi-trailer enough weight is concentrated on the driving wheels to allow them to draw the entire load with no chance of slipping.

* * *

Hollier Eight Makers Bid for Popular Favor

Predictions that the Hollier Eight car which arrived in this city last week and was placed on display in the salesrooms of the Cole Pacific Motor Company, would prove one of the biggest drawing cards in local motordom, gives every evidence of being fulfilled to the letter, according to W. B. Cochran, vice-president and general manager of the company. Cochran states that, despite the fact that the weather during the past week was conducive of almost anything except interest in motor cars, scores of prospective buyers took demonstrations in the new arrival, in consequence of which many orders were booked for early deliveries.

Tests of all descriptions were made of the car, says Cochran, including speed, hill climbing stunts, high gear work, resiliency and flexibility of the motor, the car's roadability over all kinds of roads and grades. Its economy on fuel and lubricants, and its ease of operation.

In all of the tests—and Cochran claims the car was put up against them many times each day—the Hollier demonstrated its suitability under all conditions for general all-round usage. When unusual demands were made of it, such as negotiating particularly steep inclines where traction was poor at best, the car is said to have shown considerable reserve power, an important factor with owners, as most of the latter frequently demand much more of a car than the builder originally intended it should meet.

* * *

In 1915, more than $15,000,000 was expended in factory additions and equipment by the auto trade. Large increases in capitalization of many large companies and refinancing them on a scale hitherto undreamed of were so common that a new $6,000,000 or $10,000,000 corporation was not deemed unusual. Enormous profits directly influenced by the war brought about these conditions.

* * *

Farmers Using Motor Trucks

It is estimated that more than 4,000 American farmers are now using motor trucks. This is about four per cent of the total number of trucks sold in the United States. These vehicles have nearly all been bought within the last two or three years, indicating a swiftly proved economic success, a supposition greatly strengthened by a recent careful canvas of the Kissel Motor Car Company. Of the numerous Kissel-Kar trucks in agricultural service, there was not an owner found who had any regrets at having purchased the truck, while not a few reported that they could trace as great an actual saving to it as any piece of machinery on the farm.

* * *

* * *

A First-Class Garage

A self-respecting man respects his car, and he insures the painstaking attention to which every car is entitled by keeping it at Dow & Green's Garage in Taylor street, between O'Farrell and Geary. Service is the slogan of this deservedly popular garage.

A Motor Truck Show

Will be Held in the Ball Room and Parlors of the Palace Hotel

January Twenty-Fifth, Twenty-Sixth and Twenty-Seventh

Nineteen Hundred and Sixteen

From Ten A. M. to Eleven P. M.

You are Most Cordially Invited to Attend

Entertainment
Afternoon and Evening

Admission Free

High Speed Motor Engines Popular

"We are selling the Marion car because we honestly think that it is by far the best car on the market for the price to-day," says E. E. Wickstrom, of the American Auto Company, distributors for the Marion car.

"At the time that we closed for the Marion agency we had under consideration, and in fact had almost closed for one of five well known makes. But the announcement of the re-arrangement and readjustment of J. I. Hanley's interests under the new name of the Mutual Motors Company of Jackson, Michigan, changed our plans.

"We at once sought the Marion agency, not only from the fact that we knew the car was right, that it had a host of satisfied owners on the coast, but we had absolute faith in Hanley, who in the past had proved that he could produce a standard-made motor car at the right price, followed up by a consistent service system that meant repeat orders.

"That we were right in our judgment is shown when one investigates the latest Marion models. When one stops and considers the new French type, high speed, six cylinder motor that is installed in it, they will realize how well abreast of the times this factory is to-day.

"This motor has cylinders with three-inch bore and five inch stroke, and develops a rating of 21.6 horsepower under the A. L. A. M. rule.

"To the ordinary automobile owner the statement that a six cylinder motor under any rule has only twenty-two horsepower would strike him as being under powered, especially for the steep hills and grades encountered on the Pacific Coast.

"This, however, is misleading, for the twenty-two horsepower is developed at only 1,000 revolutions per minute. As this motor at its highest efficiency works best at 3,000 revolutions per minute, one can see that this greater speed must develop increased power.

"By actual test it has been found that the Marion motor at 1,500 revolutions per minute develops 31.5 horsepower; at 2,000 revolutions per minute develops 40 horsepower, and 3,000 revolutions per minute develops 56 horsepower.

"While under the old rule which is still in existence the motor is designated as a 22 horsepower motor, yet it has the possibility of employing 56 horsepower when needed."

* * *

Jitney Runs 11,000 Miles in Year

Thirteen thousand miles of the hardest kind of service a motor can be put to without one cent of cost for repairs is the record just made by a six-cylinder Saxon car.

Some months ago William Coy of this city purchased a six-cylinder 1915 Saxon, and placed it in the jitney service. This was at the beginning of the big rush of visitors to San Francisco to visit the Exposition, and before it closed Coy had driven his Saxon 11,000 miles over the streets of San Francisco. Finishing up on the jitney work, Coy decided to take a vacation, and spent several weeks touring the State.

From San Francisco he drove to Los Angeles, and thence to San Diego. After driving around the Coronado district he went across the Mexican line to Tia Juana. Returning to Los Angeles, he started north by way of the Mojave desert over El Camino Sierra to Lone Pine.

From Lone Pine he drove on to Independence and Big Pine, thence over four ranges of mountains to Goldfield. Any one who has ever traveled over this section knows what these four ranges are and the condition of the roads, and fully appreciates how good a car must be to fully negotiate them.

From Goldfield he drove on to Tonopah, thence up through the sage brush country to Reno. All along the route he made side trips to interesting points. At Reno he was figuring on crossing the Summit to San Francisco, but investigation showed that this would be an impossibility on account of the deep snow.

* * *

Latham Auto Supply Co to deal with the Trade Exclusively

The popular house of the Latham Auto Supply Co., 1455 Van Ness avenue, announces that they will sell to dealers only in the future, and by so doing expect to give better service and prices. While they will be missed by the private owner, yet ultimately he will get the benefit of their system as the goods percolate through the regular trade channels. The firm is a very extensive dealer in all kinds of accessories, and for a long time has occupied a leading position here.

New Tire Factory Branch

An announcement of interest to automobile owners of this State has just been made to the effect that the Perfection Tire and Rubber Company, one of the most important tire manufacturers in this country, has established a factory branch in San Francisco. The Western headquarters of this country will be located in the Hearst Building and are in charge of Charles W. Harris.

The entry of the Perfection Tire and Rubber Company into this field means another strong competitor for the rapidly growing tire business of the Pacific Coast, and the establishment of Western headquarters in San Francisco is another proof of the importance of this city as an automobile and tire center.

The Perfection Tire and Rubber Company operates factories at Fort Madison, Iowa, and at Wabash, Ind. Each factory has a capacity of 1,000 tires per day.

Both plants are being enlarged, and Harris says the company plans an extensive campaign for advancing the sale of its goods throughout the United States during the coming season.

MoToRoL

"It suits because it doesn't soot"

If you want to prolong the life of your engine
If you want to eliminate smoke and carbon
If you want to reduce your oil expense

Use MoToRoL

Hughson & Merton, Inc.

530 Golden Gate Avenue
San Francisco, Cal.

CRINKLET
- WASHLESS -
TOWELS

USE LIKE AN ORDINARY TOWEL

AUTOISTS
SHOULD NEVER BE WITHOUT THEM
=
Your Grocer Sells 'Em

TIRES

VULCANIZING

TOM H. ELKINGTON

Long Mileage Tires and Second-Hand Tires
Everything Needed for the Bus

1135 VAN NESS AVE.—Near Geary Phone PROSPECT 1566

PANHARD OIL

FREE FROM CARBON

BERNARD I. BILL

543 GOLDEN GATE AVE. SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

LARKINS & COMPANY

CARRIAGE AND AUTOMOBILE BODY BUILDERS
Established in 1865
1610-1612-1614 VAN NESS AVENUE

Between California and Sacramento Sts. Phone Prospect 30
Where their entire attention will be devoted to the prompt delivery of the best work that a modern plant, high-class mechanics and materials can produce.

Automobile Starting and Lighting Systems

Give Satisfactory Results When Given Proper Attention
We specialize on electrical equipment, storage batteries, etc.
and guarantee satisfaction

GUARANTEE BATTERY COMPANY

639 Van Ness Ave. BRAND & CUSHMAN Phone Franklin 2772

SOMETHING NEW

Warner Auto Covers

The Warner Auto Top Co., 1646 to 1650 Central avenue, Cincinnati, O., is manufacturing a large line of automobile upholstery covers. These covers are patterned and tailored by tailors experienced in custom work, and are designed to give a touch of individuality to the car. The arm pieces, where the most wear occurs, are reinforced with muleskin and all seams are bound with Boston leather to prevent wear at these points.

Seven or eight different grades and styles of material are offered, giving the purchaser a large selection, both as regards price, color and quality. "Jeans" is a low priced double texture cloth with a coating of rubber between the two layers. "Clean-easy" is another style, this being a single texture cloth without any rubber incorporated in it. For those who want a higher grade of cloth, duck in light gray, medium gray and brown, is being offered.

* * *

Automobile Clock Encased in Rubber

Automobile clocks are subject to many unusual conditions that an ordinary clock is not required to withstand, among these being vibrations from road shocks, electrical effects from electrical equipment on the car, and dirt. The Pennsylvania Rubber Company, Jeannette, Pa., has invented the Lewis Nojar rubber incased automobile clock.

The clock is entirely incased in red rubber, which not only absorbs road shocks, but also makes the clock immune from electrical disturbances, since rubber is a non-conductor of electricity. The rubber casing fits firmly around the clock, leaving only the face exposed, and thus effectively preventing dust and dirt from getting into the interior and clogging the works. The life of the clock should therefore be increased, because when dirt enters a clock it has a tendency to grind out the bearings. The clock is stem-wind and is made in several styles suitable for different makes of cars.

* * *

Universal Foot Control

A foot control that leaves the driver's hands free to operate steering wheel, brakes, horn, etc., is a new device being offered to motor car owners by the Universal Device Company, Three Rivers, Michigan. According to the makers, the Universal Foot Control gives the driver absolute control of his car at all times, saves an unlimited amount of gasoline by not speeding the motor when turning corners or slowing down, and makes the car run smoother and steadier. It is priced at $1.80 delivered, and is sold under a guarantee of satisfaction.

* * *

Egyptian Fuel Mixer

A simple device to reduce cylinder friction in motors and produce more power per gallon of gasoline has been invented by R. D. Loose, recently of Springfield, Ill., and now arranging to locate in Detroit. It is called the Egyptian Mixer, and is claimed to make a gasoline saving of 10 per cent.

The device changes the mixture in the carbureter by drawing all condensation from the walls of the intake manifold and sending the gasoline through the carbureter and on through the cylinders with a whirling motion of such force that the whirl continues until stopped by the compression stroke. The mixer is a sort of slotted cylinder, made of brass, with flange on one end, and is fitted into the manifold so that the connection is air tight. The inventor claims that this method of causing the mixture to enter the cylinder in a whirl instead of in straight lines or stratas prevents the uneven collection of gasoline on the cylinder walls.

Mechanics who have tested this mixing device state that it produces very good results when used on a Ford or any other car having a short manifold, while one wellknown motor expert of the Curtiss aviation staff is quoted as recommending the mixer for all high-speed aero or motor car motors. The device weighs less than one ounce, and sells for $3.

TELEPHONE FRANKLIN 1836
FOR A
Touring Car, Limousine or Taxicab
The White Star Line
AUTO TOURING COMPANY

RATES: 7 Passenger Touring Cars $2.00 per Hour
7 Passenger Closed Cars $2.50 per Hour
Special Rates by week or month.

TAXICAB RATES FOR SHORT TRIPS

Day and Night Service

Our Taxi Service is Most Reasonable and Unexcelled. We use seven passenger closed cars as above for this service which bear no mark of identification signifying a rent car. The "Zone" rate applies to all Taxi service so when ordering a car ask the tariff first.

We Make a Specialty of Repairing Auto Lamps, Radiators and Fenders at Short Notice
PHONE MARKET 751

Bauer Lamp Reflectors
Be Electric Sign Co., Inc.
528 GUGH ST. SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Manufacturers of LAMPS, LANTERNS, REFLECTORS of all Description
METAL SPINNING

Tips to Automobilists

(CUT THIS OUT.)

The News Letter recommends the following garages, hotels and supply houses. Tourists will do well to cut this flat out and keep it as a guide:

PALO ALTO.—LARKIN'S CAFE—Just opened. The only strictly first-class cafe on the Wishbone Route devoted to the patronage of automobile owners and their families. Corner of University avenue and The Circle.

SAN JOSE.—LAMOULE GRILL. 35-38 North First street. The best French dinner in California, 75 cents, or a la carte. Automobile parties given particular attention.

PALO ALTO.—PALO ALTO GARAGE, 443 Emmerson St., Tel. P. A. 333. Auto livery at all hours. Tires and sundries in stock. Gasoline, oil, repairing, lathework, vulcanizing. Open day and night.

The Six of Sixteen

Osen McFarland Co.
Golden Gate Avenue

CLASS "A" GARAGE, INC.
Strictly Fire Proof Building

STORAGE SUPPLIES REPAIRS
BEST SERVICE ASSURED

735-751 POST STREET SAN FRANCISCO
TELEPHONE PROSPECT 2280

WHERE SERVICE MEANS SERVICE

M & H GARAGE

819-835 ELLIS ST. Between Polk and Van Ness Avenue

WHERE THE PRIVATE OWNER FEELS AT HOME

The Background of the War Zone

"A wonderful story of a French engineer's deed of sacrifice comes from Salonika," says the Telegraph's Paris correspondent. "The French submarine Turquoise was recently disabled in the Sea of Marmora, and captured by the Turks, the officers and crew being taken prisoners. The submarine was towed in triumph to Constantinople, and exhibited as a trophy. Turkish officers visited the submarine and took the French engineer on board to show them the working of the machinery. The engineer had a heroic idea, which he explained in notes he left behind with a friend. He went on board with six Turkish officers, took the submarine out to sea, then sank her, with himself and the six Turkish officers, and she has not been seen again."

* * *

"The extent to which the peerage has voluntarily surrendered the lives of its sons to the service of the Empire is strikingly illustrated in the pages of the new 'Debrett,'" says the Pall Mall. "The roll of honor of more than 800 names of those who have been killed or have died of wounds fills twelve pages, and an analysis of the list shows that it contains: 1 member of the Royal family, 6 peers, 16 baronets, 6 knights, 7 M. P.'s, 164 companions, 95 sons of peers, 82 sons of baronets, 84 sons of knights. The cruel way in which fate has hit some families is shown by the list. Changes in the succession to more than 100 titles have been caused by the deaths in the war. In quite a number of instances the peerage is threatened with extinction owing to the death of all possible heirs. Half a dozen baronets are also left without heirs, and several titles are in doubt owing to the heirs being reported 'missing.'"

* * *

Mr. Ben Tillett, in the presence of Lord Derby, told this tale: A young British officer—"a youngster," Mr. Tillett called him—caused his military superiors not a little anxiety by reason of the personal risks he ran from time to time, quite unnecessarily. When these superior officers were questioned as to the reason for their solicitude concerning the personal safety of this young officer, the reply was: "It's all very well for him; but if anything happens to him, we shall be blamed. And that youngster's mother," said Mr. Tillett, as he closed the story, "happens to be the Queen of England." Loud cheers greeted these final words, because not till he uttered them had Mr. Tillett given the slightest clue to the identity of the officer of whom he was speaking.

* * *

The latest German statistics show that in twenty-four leading German cities the birth rate decreased during April, May, June and July, 1915, by twenty per cent, as compared with the corresponding months in 1914, which is equivalent to a loss of four hundred thousand births annually throughout the German Empire.

* * *

Brown and Jones were single men;
Each had the pluck of an average ten;
Jones enlisted; so did Brown,
In the same old reg. of the same old town.
Jones enlisted for you and me;
Brown to be Sergeant Brown, V. C.
Jones's deed made the country ring;
Brown did the same, identical thing.
General Robinson saw them done;
Jones got a V. C.; Brown got none!

—Sacerdos, in the Doncaster Gazette.

* * *

"Libre Belgique," the daringly published Brussels newspaper, the home of which the Germans' despite their most strenuous efforts, have failed to unearth, has now reached its fifty-third number, says the Central News Rotterdam correspondent. Domiciliary searches for its editors and staff take place every day, but no single capture has been made.

* * *

When the war opened, the entente had a population of 230,000,000 as against 116,000,000 for the central powers. The Berlin Tageblatt estimates that conquest has reduced the entente to 214,000,000, and increased Germany and its allies to 150,000,000, reducing the disparity from 114,000,000 to but 46,000,000, which in a war of such a scale is almost negligible. Moreover, new territory has been added at the rate of about 386 square miles a day, making a total gain of 310,500 square miles. It must be said, however, that just as the numerical superiority of the allies did not show a corresponding superiority in strength, so the power of the central states is not increased in proportion to the territory occupied and the population held in subjection. Indeed, the further the front is advanced the longer become the lines and the greater the drain on military reserves. The chief gain, perhaps, lies in the iron and coal of France and Belgium, and in the grain supplies drawn from the countries to the east and south.

* * *

It's a long way to gay Paris and its 70,000 street lamps of before the war, but the increase of the number of lights from 23,000 to 24,000 is a significant step on the way. It looks at least as if Paris would never have to be any darker, electrically speaking, as a result of the present conflict.

THE CAMPAIGN OF CLEAN ADVERTISING.

Frederick S. Nelson has been elected president of the Advertising Association of San Francisco. He has announced that he will endeavor to carry the association to success on two planks of a constructive platform: An absolute cleaning up of untruthful advertising for the sole purpose of eliminating waste and making advertising more productive; and, second, constructive upbuilding of advertising among manufacturers and wholesale interests of this city to create greater activity in and consumption of home products. Nelson was instrumental recently in stopping some very misleading advertising in local papers, which was greatly injuring legitimate trade in the same line. So far he has proved a strong practical worker in stamping out untruthful advertising. May his worthy and aggressive work continue.

Wedding Presents.—The choicest variety to select from at Marsh's, who is now permanently located at Post and Powell streets.

Dr. Byron Haines, Dentist, has resumed practice at his office in Gunst Building, S. W. corner Geary and Powell streets.

VISIT CAPITOL CITY of your STATE

A Day's Trip—Well Spent

Visit beautiful Capitol Grounds—Capitol Building—Sutter's Fort—Crocker Art Gallery—Riverside Drive, etc.

$3.35 Round Trip Saturdays and Sundays, with return limit Monday.

OAKLAND, ANTIOCH & EASTERN RAILWAY

NEW PARISIAN FRENCH LAUNDRY

Mme. C. La FON

First Class Work at Reasonable Prices

Laces and Lace Curtains a Specialty

Club, Restaurant and Hotel Service

991 OAK STREET Phone Park 4962

SAN FRANCISCO

BRUSHES 623 Sacramento Street, between Kearny and Montgomery Streets.

With full line of brushes, Brooms and Feather Dusters, on hand and made to order. Janitor supplies of all kinds. Ladders, Buckets, Chamols. Metal Polish and Cleaning Powders. Hardware. Wood and Willow Ware.

Call, write or telephone Kearny 5787

WM. BUCHANAN

Tel. Kearny 1461 Private Exchange Connecting all Warehouses

SAN FRANCISCO WAREHOUSE CO.

Warehousemen Forwarding Agents Distributors Public Weighers

Spur Track Connection with all Railroads

Main Office—625-647 Third St., San Francisco, Cal.

INSURANCE

Thirty-three of the thirty-five fire insurance companies writing automobile insurance, members of the Pacific Board, have signed the new constitution and general rules of the reorganized Pacific Coast Automobile Conference. The American of Newark and the Rochester German, of the George O. Hoadley agency, are the companies on the outside. The rule that business on the books written below standard rates should be cancelled within thirty days, and that in extraordinary instances the executive committee might apply to the executive committee for relief, failed to meet with the approval of the Hoadley companies. The Hoadley agency demanded that cancellations should in all such cases be made immediately. The officers of the reconstructed organization are: F. B. Kellam, branch secretary Royal, president; J. H. Anderson, assistant manager L. & L. & G., vice-president. Executive committee: J. B. Levison, Fireman's Fund; G. E. Townsend, Aetna; B. Goodwin, of Christensen & Goodwin; Arthur Brown, of Edward Brown & Sons; George H. Tyson, German American; Sam B. Stoy, London & Lancashire; Washington, of the Phoenix.

Although insurance carried by the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, including private, State and government exhibitions. State buildings and property in the Zone, probably exceeded $7,000,000, and some of the rates ran as high as 10 per cent, the total losses were less than $300, as against $478,000 at the Chicago exposition, and $100,000 at the St. Louis fair. The exposition proper carried but $1,500,000, covering on 14 of the main buildings, and this ran for a period of nearly one year. The insurance was placed by the San Francisco Brokers' Exchange through a committee consisting of Albert M. Bender, J. B. F. Davis and Johnson & Higgins, and all commissions were relinquished to the Exposition. The fire fighting apparatus, all of the most modern design, was housed in three fire houses within the grounds, the area of which was about 650 acres.

A decision of the Industrial Accident Commission of California is to the effect that an actress, employed at a salary on a vaudeville circuit, is an employee and not an independent contractor, and an accidental injury sustained is compensable. Where the employer has the power of direction and control of the route of the performer, time of performance and manner of putting on the act, such performer is under contract of service. Her vocation is not to be classed with such professional services as are rendered by lawyers and physicians. The furnishing of her own costume and skates does not make her a contractor any more than the furnishing by carpenters and brick masons of their own tools and working apparel.

George O. Hoadley, coast manager of the American of Newark, has been given the coast management of the Aachen & Munich and Caledonian fire insurance companies. Archie Olds, formerly coast manager for these two companies, goes with the Hoadley agency as assistant manager. Tom C. Williams, former assistant manager under Hoadley, retires.

The controversy between the San Francisco Brokers' Exchange and Marsh & McLellan over the writing by the latter of the line covering the California Wine Company, has led the brokerage firm to notify the Pacific Board that unless their application for membership is favorably entertained by the Exchange, they, Marsh & McLellan, will bring two companies to the coast and establish a general agency.

The Century Fire has appointed the brokerage firm of Macondry & Co. general agents for California, with headquarters in San Francisco. The Century was formerly with Harry Rolfe in the San Francisco office of the Home, and was forced out by the taking on of the Franklin.

The United States Surety of San Francisco, having collected together 25 per cent of its $100,000 capital stock, has applied for a license. The company was organized by contractors, who were dissatisfied with their experience with surety companies already doing business. The company has twelve months in which to pay in the balance of the subscribed capital.

Commissioner Wells reports that the business of insurance in Oregon was fairly profitable last year to all kinds except fire. He says that one of the unfortunate circumstances of the year was the number of destructive fires in small towns. Figures show that in twenty-two towns three or more buildings were burned. He finds encouragement in the fire prevention crusade in Portland and elsewhere.

Commissioner Fishback of Washington states that fire losses in his State were abnormally large during 1915, and will average probably sixty per cent of premiums paid. He attributes this condition to a variety of causes, one of the chief being the operation of the arson ring along the entire Pacific Coast. Collections made by the Washington department exceed the 1914 collections by over $17,500. The 1915 collections totaled $391,860, and those for 1914, $374,200. On fire insurance this tax totaled $143,565 this year.

Max Abrams, a San Francisco tailor, was sentenced this week to three and a half years in San Quentin for burning his home for the insurance. His wife, jointly accused, is to be tried on March 2d.

The Washington Advisory committee now consists of Herbert Folger (George H. Tyson agency), W. O. Wayman (Wayman & Henry), R. P. Fahj (L. & L. & G.), W. H. Breeding (Aetna), Walter M. Speyer (New Zealand), all of San Francisco, and Evart Lampong, Seattle, and W. S. Berdan, New York.

The initial report of the receiver for the Columbus Securities Company of Seattle, the holding company for the Empire Life of the same place, indicates a very small balance, probably less than fifteen thousand dollars, in favor of the stockholders and other creditors of that concern.

George Leisander, manager for the Germania, will be the next president of the Life Underwriters' Association of San Francisco; Walter O. O. Orr, vice-president, and Walter C. Palmer, secretary-treasurer.

Rolla E. Fay will, in February, relinquish the management at San Francisco of the Southwestern Surety to accept the office of superintendent of the casualty and liability department of the Aetna in the Pacific district. Mr. Fay is a graduate of the University of California, and began his insurance career with the Pacific Surety six years ago, going with the Southwestern in 1911 and becoming resident manager in 1914.

Fire Chief Murphy of San Francisco recommends in his annual report the installation of at least 50 additional cisterns in sections of the city at present without water mains, and that the excavation at Howard and 10th be converted into a cistern. For safeguarding the districts north and south of the Park he proposes that a 3,000,000 gallon reservoir be put in Lincoln Park, and that a 5,000,000 gallon reservoir be constructed in Sunset district. He also favors an extension of the fire limits.

NOTICE OF ASSESSMENT.

Natural Soda Products Company.

Location of principal place of business, San Francisco, California. Location of works, Keeler, Inyo County, California.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that at a meeting of the directors, held on the 29th day of December, 1915, an assessment (No. 2) of One Dollar per share was levied upon the capital stock of the corporation, payable immediately to M. Q. WATTERSON, Treasurer, at Inyo County Bank, Bishop, California.

Any stock upon which this assessment shall remain unpaid on Monday, the 14th day of February, 1916, will be delinquent and advertised for sale at public auction, and, unless payment is made before, will be sold on Monday, the 6th day of March, 1916, at 12 o'clock noon, to pay the delinquent assessment, together with costs of advertising and expenses of sale.

NOAH WRINKLE, Secretary.

Office—No. 613 Market street, San Francisco, California.

ANNUAL MEETING.

Joshua Hendy Iron Works.

The regular Annual Meeting of the Stockholders of the Joshua Hendy Iron Works will be held at the office of the Corporation, No. 75 Fremont street, San Francisco, California on Tuesday, the 8th day of February, 1916, at the hour of 10 o'clock a. m., for the purpose of electing a Board of Directors to serve for the ensuing year, and the transaction of such other business as may come before the meeting.

CLIAS C. GARDNER, Secretary.

Office—75 Fremont street, San Francisco, Cal.

AJAX TIRES

Guaranteed
in writing

5000
MILES

“While others are Claiming Quality

We are guaranteeing it.”

AJAX  RED TUBES

SUPERB

PACIFIC COAST DISTRIBUTORS
HUGHSON & MERTON Inc.
330 GOLDEN GATE AVE. SAN FRANCISCO.
LOS ANGELES PORTLAND SEATTLE
1229 SO. OLIVE ST. 329 ANKENY ST. 806 EAST PIKE ST.

ANOTHER SERIES

MODEL 83-B

Overland
TRADE MARK REG.

35 horsepower en bloc motor---electrically equipped---high tension magneto---demountable rims---4 inch tires (non-skid on rear)

$795 on the Pacific Coast

(ROADSTER $775)

Outselling any car of its size---virtually two for one

Investigate Our Time Payment Plan

J. W. LEAVITT & CO.

DISTRIBUTORS

GOLDEN GATE AVENUE AT HYDE STREET

Branches at Los Angeles Oakland San Diego Pasadena Fresno
 Sacramento Portland Seattle Sopkane

SAN FRANCISCO
NEWS LETTER
California Advertiser.

Devoted to the Leading Interests of California and the Pacific Coast.

Vol. XCI

San Francisco, Cal., Saturday, January 29, 1916

No. 5

The SAN FRANCISCO NEWS LETTER AND CALIFORNIA ADVERTISER is printed and published every Saturday by the Proprietor, Frederick Marriott, 21 Sutter street, San Francisco, Cal. Tel. Kearny 3594 Entered at San Francisco, Cal., Post-office as second-class mail matter. Chicago Office—Geo. Hische, 1310 Westminster, Westminster Building, Chicago.

London Office—George Street & Co., 30 Cornhill, E. C., England. Matter intended for publication in the current number of the SAN FRANCISCO NEWS LETTER AND CALIFORNIA ADVERTISER should be sent to the office not later than 5 p. m. Wednesday. Subscription Rates (including postage)—1 year, $4.00; 6 months, $2.25; Foreign—1 year, $6.00; 6 months, $3.25.

—The cost of battleships is going up—and battleships are going down.

—Noah would have felt right at home in Southern California last week.

—The yellow peril is again furnishing material in Congress for oratory—and for demagoguery.

—Too many Congressmen are more anxious to defend the pork barrel than to defend their country.

—We might sell pools on whether the opening of the Panama Canal or the end of the war comes first!

—Ford's doves of peace should get into the trenches. They are better qualified for fighting than for pacifying.

—The lumbermen who were not making their board last year are now growing rich from the orders that are being planked down.

—The country is shy of money for defense; but it can put up a postoffice at Rube's Corners, by heck, and make a canal out of Hog Crick.

—When the newspapers' special correspondents in Europe are at loss for real news, they can always fall back safely on peace speculations.

—Former President Taft has told the girls at Vassar how he keeps himself thin. He evidently meant to tell how he keeps himself not so fat.

—Considering what the weather has been doing to Southern California, that section of the State can hardly be blamed for wanting to go dry.

—The natural gas in Los Angeles was cut off by the storm last week. The real estate boomers should have been able to supply the deficiency.

—Shooting and stabbing over trivial causes are growing more frequent, the natural result of trivial sentences, or none at all, for such offenses.

—Every man's house is his castle, except in prohibition communities, where a lot of burly deputies are allowed to rummage bureau drawers and closets to see if a citizen has more liquor than the law thinks is good for his health and morals.

—Private houses in Seattle are being raided, and stocks of liquor seized. Are you going to vote for the same damnable condition in California?

—Will the Bull Moose wed the Elephant, or will the two parties each put up a candidate and give that much more certainty to Democratic success?

—Some of the Ford flock, back from Europe, argue that the peace trip did some good. Sure—it made us all laugh; and that's always good for the public.

—The man who is suing for divorce because he was hypnotized into marrying is giving a valuable hint to a lot of other married men who always wondered just how it happened.

—San Franciscans who complain of the recent rain, and more rain, should be compelled to move to one of the many localities on which cyclones, blizzards and floods have been inflicted.

—The primary law tangle has put the public mind in a like tangle, and registration is slow. With a few years more of progressive government in California we will progress backward into chaos.

—California's public schools cost $56.94 per year per pupil. Which would not be objectionable if the pupils received a real education in the fundamentals instead of a smattering of the non-essentials.

—If the extreme militarists had their way we would all wear uniforms, while under the pacifists' rule skirts would be our garb. The country will be in luck if it can achieve a golden means of preparedness.

—New York brokers, at a luncheon the other day, hooted a picture of President Wilson when it was thrown on a screen. Their boorishness didn't hurt the President, and revealed the brokers as a lot of rough-necks.

—The optimistic Republicans are trying to pick a winner for candidate for president, while those who see the handwriting on the wall are wondering whom they can choose that will be the least ingloriously beaten.

—It is a base slander to say that a ship stranded in San Pedro harbor during the storm because the wind blew all the water in port out to sea. The trouble was that an acre or two of priceless Los Angeles soil fell in and blocked the ding-blasted harbor.

—English newspapers continue to suspend on account of the high price of paper. Meanwhile, our papers continue to give their patrons nine or ten pounds of reading matter on Sundays. We would willingly, and to our mental benefit, let the English have some of it.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

JAPS AS IMMIGRANTS.

Labor's influence with the present administration at Washington is reflected in several bills and laws. Of these the Seamen's law is a striking example in the face of the powerful influences brought by the shipping powers of the country to modify several of its most restrictive clauses in favor of crews. Now comes another bill, which is of manifest benefit to labor through a new immigration act which imposes drastic restrictions on the entrance of Japanese, Chinese and Hindu subjects to this country. The important effect of the passage of this bill, which was reported this week by the Immigration Committee, will, of course, be the prevention of Asiatics coming to this country to compete with American labor, especially in the Pacific States. Of course

Japan will voice a vigorous protest, but it will not make a dent in the policy of the administration, and the insistence of the united labor leaders of the country that the bars against the invasion of Asiatic laborers are absolutely necessary to the preservation of the welfare and future of the American laborer. Canada and Australia have enforced such laws, and Japan, China and the other countries along the Asiatic littoral have expressed disapproval, and in time have dropped the matter, but in the case of the United States, with all the cross-currents of political currents and rampant demagogism, Japan has stoutly opposed this country's rights as a republic, open to settlement, to welcome European immigrants and turn back those haling from Asia. Japan seems to regard this treatment by Uncle Sam as a left-handed insult, derogatory to her standing among the nations of the world. Yet she bows and retires when the colonies of England take the same position as the United States.

This new bill is a revival of the action anti-Japanese which swept over the Pacific Coast some two years ago. Its special point will be based on the agreement made when the Japanese government agreed not to issue passports to Japanese laborers immigrating to the United States. As usual, Chinese and Japanese students, business men, travelers and certain classes will be exempted. It is through misrepresentation of one of these classes that Asiatic immigrants with funds are sometimes able through palm-itching examiners to buy their way into this country, but the number is small unless a "ring" of crooks embarks in the business on a wholesale scale.

The big movement of national preparedness now sweeping over the country will have a strong and direct influence in backing this new immigration bill as the only potential enemies that may attack the Pacific Coast lie along the Asiatic littoral. The precept is likely to be followed that an ounce of prevention in Asiatic immigration to these shores may in time save many hundred millions of dollars in assembling the desired amount of ammunition for defense. And in the interim labor believes it will thrive much better without the competition of the yellow men.

The First Concert.

THE RISING PRICE OF GASOLINE.

What is the matter with the price of gasoline in California that it has the temerity to advance from 10 cents per gallon to 16½ within a few months. In the East it has climbed from 11 to 23 cents per gallon, and gives every evidence of going considerably higher. Forecasts of 35 cent gasoline is common along the Eastern seaboard. The big oil distributors and refining companies declare that the advance is natural, and is based on the old-time law of supply and demand. The enormous demand for gasoline, occasioned by the European war, is urged as the cause of higher prices in this country. Perhaps, but the fact remains that the price of gasoline went down, down, down, during more than the first year of the war; so did the price of crudes and all its refined and manufactured products. Prices at the well fell so low that many producers faced bankruptcy.

The turn in price came almost between two suns, and the vigorous plunges the price is making skyward in the eyes of motor car users of gasoline is impressing many that some big power in gasoline distribution is carefully arranging this spectacular climb in prices. It is notorious among oil operators in California that under the depressing business conditions occasioned by the outbreak of the war in August, 1915, that oil production and trade suffered the most among the affected industries of the country. In that same period several of the biggest oil corporations, both in the East, here in California, and in the mid-continent fields, picked up all the good oil holdings and plants they could gather in at low prices from owners who were forced to sell because they could not raise sufficient funds to bridge the period of depression. The price of gasoline and other products of petroleum were sent tumbling during this same period, and to all appearances the oil game had gone to pot.

From more than one source charges are openly made that some oil trust or combination is behind the present movement, in disregard of the Sherman act and other laws to restrict monopoly. If any of the old time practices of monopoly are being resumed, it is the duty of the proper Federal Government officials, the attorney-general, to take cognizance of what is going on, and, if the inquiry warrants, to set in motion the proper legal machinery to insure justice.

The price of gasoline has gone up more than 60 per cent in California in the past few months, and more than 100 per cent in the East, and there is every evidence that it will go much higher. Gasoline is an absolute necessity, these days, in the life of many of the most important industries of the country, and a rise of 10 cents per gallon means an increase of many millions of dollars to the income of the big oil refining companies of the country. Never in their history was their methods in refining gasoline so efficient and profitable as at present. Even the lowest grade of California petroleum is now forced to yield several hundred per cent more gasoline than formerly, and added fortunes are now being made out of new by-products which have been revealed in tuluol and valuable constituents. The old Standard Oil stock was worth $100,000,000. Before the so-called dissolution it was worth $600,000,000; now it is worth $2,000,000,000, which goes to show that dissolution is a great and profitable industry. Since that sane dissolution the same Standard Oil corporation has distributed some $500,000,000 in cash to stockholders, besides fat stock dividends worth added millions of dollars. The price of the ordinary gasoline used in the every-day automobile enters largely into the accumulation of these great stores of wealth, wherefore comes the popular appeal on the part of the users, farmers, motorists and others, to know whether or not that price is fixed by the order of the oil barons.

"BLOW-OUTS" IN THE WORLD'S TRADE.

Australia, one of our best buyers in the Pacific trade zone, is now shipping far more money in payment of goods to this port than ever before.

The European war has transformed her trade, both domestic and foreign, and the Antipodean continent is evidently entering upon a new industrial and commercial era, the most successful in her history. Like all the other commercial centers of the world, Australia suffered a period of intense business depression immediately following the opening of European hostilities. After going through a period of lassitude she awoke to the fact that numbers of supplies, absolutely needful to her, were unavailable on account of the war, and that the only way to get them was to manufacture them herself. In many of these lines of goods she possessed the raw material herself. It required special effort to construct the necessary machinery and needful plants, and now Australia is turning her large supplies of leather into shoes, her woolen into staple goods, developing her salt resources on export lines, and the like. This means, of course, a more self-contained economic condition, and marks one of the many big readjustments in trade and industries in the world which are being forced by the tremendous transforming influences of the war.

This new position in the trade of the world by countries affected, as in the case of Australia, will have a marked effect on the commerce of the belligerents of Europe when the war is over, and they settle down to the desperate game of trying to retrieve the remnants of their old trade connections with Australia and the other countries that have developed their industrial opportunities in the interim. Australia, for instance, is manufacturing woolen goods to replace those which Germany supplied before the war. Will Germany be able to pay the long freight carriage and still be able to undersell the New Australian woolen manufacturers and undersell the price of the shoes now being made in Australia from the kind of leather formerly exported? These are conundrums that the merchants of every country are eagerly whetting their wit to solve. On this solution are staked great fortunes. It is a complex problem at the best, and over it the most acute and experienced commercial and financial experts are divided.

UNCLE SAM AFTER THE INCOME TAX DODGERS.

The government is showing an increasing success in getting larger returns of revenue from the new personal income tax. Quite naturally, the agents of the government had to develop the system of the new law, and then came the difficult task of collecting the full tax estimated by the U. S. Treasurer. It is due to the acumen, persistence and versatility of these agents that during the last year the collection of this personal income tax mounted from $28,253,534 to $41,046,162, an increase of nearly $13,000,000. This means that they are rapidly acquiring the faculty of ferreting out "buried" sources of income. Indeed, their facilities and contrivances along this line, backed as they are by the power and resources of the administration, are complete for the purpose. It is only a question of time when these revenue agents will become familiarly acquainted with the gamut of these facilities, and the government will then have reached a position where practically all the revenue due it under the personal income tax will be collected.

The reports from the revenue districts into which the country is divided for the collection of this tax offers some rather interesting returns. For instance, New York State towers head and shoulders above all others; indeed, above large sections of States, in the huge total it contributes to the government. Out of the $41,046,162 collected throughout the country by the personal tax revenue agents last year $17,417,537 was contributed by New York State. Of the 174 persons in the country who enjoy an annual income of $500,000, 102 are registered in that State. Wealth has the habit the world around of accumulating in masses at natural financial points for the purpose of being more efficiently handled in immense sums. Great projects seek such money centers to get the requisite capital to materialize big commercial and industrial ideas into working form for the purpose of earning fair dividends on the money invested. New York attracts the capital of this continent, and that is why for generations to come it will head the States of the Union in the payment of personal income tax. If the bankers of New York and the brokers of Wall street have their way, New York will be made a greater magnet than ever to draw capital in its direction.

PEACE POLICY PREVAILS.

A recent canvass of the United States Senate on the question of neutrality showed only six Senators who were opposed to the President's general policy. On this showing, and what is known of the position of the members of the House, there is not the slightest chance, under the conditions that have prevailed since the war opened, of this country being drawn into the present European maelstrom. Republican leaders in Congress occasionally irritate the confidence of the Democratic majority along this line, by making rabid comments for the special purpose of heckling their opponents and disconcerting them, as in the case of Senator Borah. In the many spirited discussions of the questions covering neutrality, nothing stands out so strong as the determination on all sides to maintain a policy of peace. If there is a war body masked anywhere in Congress, it has the wisdom to remain quiet under present conditions, on account of the present temper and determination of the people. In this situation America faces the future with the full power of her resources and assured confidence.

TOWN CRIER

—Truxton Beale has succeeded again through his temperance and temperament in boosting himself into the "fight" limelight by engaging in a common go-as-you-please scrap with George von L. Meyer of Boston, ex-secretary of the navy, just outside the door of the Metropolitan Club, Washington. A fine old rough and tumble fight, a persuasive "movie" rough-house worth extra money to see the show, was underway when Captain T. M. Spotts, a former member of Meyer's staff, shouldered his way between the scrappers and separated them. Both men carried colored "scrap" signs on their faces, and their former faultless attire was beyond the butler's power to correct. Naturally the fracas caused a deal of consternation in the cloistered rooms of the exclusive Metropolitan Club, especially as there was a formal dinner under way to which both the combatants were guests. Meyer coolly sat throughout the dinner, but Beale, for reasons, retired. Both men were silent regarding the cause of the row. The report of the tempestuous gust of passion which swept Beale into the fight indicates the old-time furious bursts of rage which at times marked his actions while he was living here in California, a decade or so ago. Those outbursts got him into the records of the notorious Thaw-White shooting case in New York. Telegrams from the East disclosed that just before the murder in the roof garden Beale had been picturesquely describing in detail to Thaw how he had attacked and shot Frederick Marriott in his home in San Francisco and escaped punishment, and this review of the vengeful personal assault on the part of Beale was instrumental in prompting Thaw to kill Stanford White.

—Hearst continues to be extraordinarily successful in carrying water on both shoulders, according to the veracious and complete accounts of his exploits as published in his several score of widely circularized publications. But his latest feat of walking a hairless line over the chasm which divides the Liquor interests and the Prohibitionists of California has started the perspiration down the backbones of his most temperamental followers, and roused admiration and gratulations over his wonderful nerve. Everybody loves Hearst for his nerve; there is nothing like it in the heavens above nor in all the nervine bottled since the days of the stimulating Babylonians. If you doubt this statement, read the articles in any one of the two score publications signed by himself here and there. With his wonderful energy and desperate enterprise he would have brought peace to Europe long, long before this had not Ford butted in, crossed the wires, and made such a mess of the whole business that not even Bryan can straighten it out. In this new situation it is safe to say that the war in Europe will not end till Hearst gives the word, nor will either the "wets" or the "drys" win this fall till he tips the result he desires. As the world is in such capable hands, the rest of us had best drop off in sleep.

—The nations of the earth are certainly being inoculated by the war bug, willy nilly. Democratic England has at last established conscription for the war, a step which places her close to Germany and France in military preparedness as regards raising forces. The neutral nations are itching uneasily with the same malady; even the placid United States is showing certain qualms, and by the blinkers on the head of Janus, the great war god, something should start here if an errant comet of the air or a stray bomb, wandering in space, should drop with an explosion on United States soil. The devil's awing these days in all sorts of guises, and he may catch us unprepared before we are out of the woods.

—Dr. Frederick Burke, head of the San Francisco Normal School, is out after funds to put the California Building on the Exposition grounds in proper shape for early use. The gods of the machine must look down ironically on all the flubdub processes by which we humans endeavor to hoodwink each other. From its first inception the California Building has been a monetary joke. Goats and dunderheads have been hunting funds for it ever since the inception of the idea. Enough funds have been gathered for that building to make it a new Eternal City. The original money was contributed by the Board of Supervisors of the State, after the funds promised by others failed to materialize. Efforts were made to raise millions to construct that idealized building, and at the call of "time," $500,000 materialized, a showing which caused several of those in charge of the fund to swoon. They swooned off and on over the spending of the money for a long, long time, and the echoes of the squabbling may still be heard any darksome night off the marina. The $500,000 set aside by the State for the purchase of the building and its site is another joke which time will puncture. Dr. Burke will pass many sleepless nights if he fritters his time in trying to straighten out the kinks in the passing of the California building. To select a new site and erect a building constructed on plans that are adaptable to Normal School requirements would be a short cut in saving time and much money. To doddle over the California Building for a Normal School is a waste of time and a huge success in dissipating the public's money.

—Senator Works of Los Angeles occasionally makes a bovine of himself apparently with a natural, an insouciance unaffectedness that hits the spectator like a boomerang. Recently in Congress he upstarted to make a dent in the big questions of the hour. He thunderously resolved all by himself and demanded like a full-fledged bombastic Achilles that armed intervention should be rushed into Mexico. Then turning quickly on his heels and drawing another long breath, he thundered his denunciations against any attempt to strengthen in any way, shape or manner the army and navy of these United States. Can you beat this for consistency? No wonder there are thirty-seven candidates in the Los Angeles district sitting up nights to beat him out in the next election for the senatorship.

—The women of this day and generation have certainly passed that awkward period to all husbands when their most dreadful oration was, "It's midnight by the clock; where have you been so late?" Many millions of men have lied boldly and conscientiously in reply. The slogan for suffrage has produced a new type of the feminist orator, and her type was illustrated in Washington recently when Miss Jane Addams addressed the Senate Committee on military affairs to argue against the national war party. She stood for a large body of new citizens who have found their voices, and though it may be heard occasionally at midnight, it marks a new era just as certain in denunciation as does the phonograph.

—If Carranza kills Villa will he be subjected to the same accusations that were made against Huerta for killing Madero, and what will Uncle Sam do if Villa "comes back," as he has so robustly on several occasions? Figureheads of government are easily set up, but only those who take a crack at them know how easily they are laid low. Felix Diaz is probably in the best position to tell the most plausible lies in this matter.

—American exports reached $3,555,000,000 in 1915, an increase of 70 per cent, breaking all records. No wonder the banks and mints of the country are jammed with money, and that increased space is being demanded by the mints.

Prophecies of the Astrologers for 1916

In America the astrologer is somewhat of a rare bird, but in England—principally in the persons of these four—he flourishes. With January 1st the almanacs appear, and, reading them, as many do, in all good faith, the Englander may cast his future and his country's pretty much as he likes, for all four are different. Old Moore and Raphael are usually pessimistic; the other two invariably optimistic. Contributing a modest sum to the support of a science thought by many to be already long extinct, "you takes your choice." One would think Zadkiel and Orion would be the more popular, but they are not. If anything they run second. Prophecy is a somewhat direful art: the direr it is, seemingly, the better. Old Moore starts out pleasantly by dubbing 1916 "The Year of the Flaming Sword." But he does not prove of much help in solving that question in which we are all most deeply interested—"When will the war end?" He involves Holland in the war this winter, at about the same time that England is suffering from a desperate financial situation and is tried by danger of insurrection in either her land or sea forces. Diplomatic splits are due—notably between France and Russia. Air-raids and other catastrophes of war are presented in such a way that, were any one of them peculiarly disastrous, it would seem to have been foretold here. May 27th is to be England's day of disaster and mourning, and the Black Sea is to be the place where "the worst effects of the planets will be directed," until its name becomes a byword. In his summary Old Moore declares, with no undue lucidity:

The intensified influence of the planet Mars raging in the sign Leo will bring a year of great conflagrations, drought, explosions, lavish expenditure on arms and munitions of war, and a great surge of military enthusiasm will move over France, who will fight for the liberty of its people as well as for the freedom of nations. The Red Lion is rampant; the flaming Comet displays its dread passage in the form of a vast simitar over the skies. The blood of the martyrs comes up from under the altar of self-sacrifice, crying: "How long, O Lord, how long?" But the end is not yet. The fires of human passion will yet burn more fiercely than ever, springing forth into action in a thousand directions, in a thousand forms of destruction. The hour of the builders has not yet arrived. Deadly fevers will claim their hundreds of thousands. There will be burnings upon a vast scale.

Zadkiel, who has been propheting since 1830, is distinctly pro-Ally. It is not to be supposed that prejudice can influence the stars in their courses, however. Astrology is a study for the imaginative mind. It presents you with any quantity of portents, each with its alternative, and trusts you to make the best of them. In this you are often guided by the desire not to wound your client by untactfulness. So it is with Zadkiel. He sees Germany in danger of collapse in January or March, and shifts other forbidding omens across the Atlantic, where "either the President or the Cabinet, or both, will be in trouble; and the Cabinet will be, in all probability, reconstructed, or come to a sudden end." It is rather dull of the stars to say that, isn't it? Is prophecy after all so difficult an art?

Raphael, who is now ninety-six years old, distinguishes himself by apologizing for not predicting the war. All four prophets failed in that respect; which only proves the war's spontaneous nature and shows how natural it was that each nation engaged should be forced into it against its will. He says:

"Although signs were very threatening, I confess I could not believe that such a terrible conflict would occur, or that we should be drawn into it. There are ominous signs that its duration will be a matter of years. I hope I am mistaken."

We are given his prophecy in brief:

"He is almost as pessimistic as Old Moore. The year as he sees it starts off with overcrowded hospitals, serious labor troubles, and violent storms. Italy will be greatly disturbed, and there will be rioting in Rome.

"The heavy death role, especially among royal persons, continues in the spring. Italy sees serious misfortunes, much violation of sacred edifices and great destruction. The President of the United States suffers in health and prestige, and unseemly scenes are witnessed in the Senate.

"In the summer grave troubles fall upon Holland and a 'lady of high title and lineage will pass to the Great Beyond.' There will be a serious crisis in British finance and a sharp dispute with another Power, probably America. The United States fleet will be mobilized, but peace will be preserved."

Orion is too nebulous in his optimism to warrant quoting. Better turn to the prophets in this country, where we find them given front-page prominence in the daily newspapers rather than in almanacs. At least, the Washington Times so honors the word of Gabriel Neith, who is described as "foremost among the astrologers of America." There is a satisfying definiteness about Mr. Neith. As to the war, "the end is far off." Peace will appear probable in March of this year, but war may continue nevertheless until 1918. Mr. Neith explains to those who are interested in knowing how he found this out:

"This is a cyclic war. The subcycle of Mars, the warrior, began with the equinox of 1909, in the cycle of Jupiter, the builder of fame. When the period of Saturn, the subduer, came in 1914, the war cloud burst, and it is probable that the conflict will continue until 1918, when dawns the period of Venus, human love and sympathy. Unfortunately, the subcycle of Mars continues until 1944, and even though there may be a temporary cessation of hostilities in 1916 or 1918, war is likely to break out with renewed vigor later. Unless peace is attained in the spring of 1916, Holland, Norway and Sweden may become involved in the war. There are also certain indications that March and June may be months of peril for the United States through internal troubles as well as external dangers."

Mr. Neith also picks out January and March as bad months for Germany, and mentions the death of a high official. May will be disastrous to either the Kaiser or the Crown Prince. If to the latter, he has died so many times already that once more will hardly be noticed.

OPENING SHELL ON THE SEX QUESTION.

There'll be a great time in this old world from now on if the Birth Control League of Los Angeles, just organized, has anything to say on the birth question. As the new organization is composed of women, it goes without saying that more will be fulminated on the subject of sex relation than has been generously sown in wind screeds and words in the interminable suffrage campaigns. Estelle Lawton Lindsay, the Joan of Arc of the new movement, pithily sets forth the propaganda of the new militant movement on sex relationship as follows: "I believe a woman's body is her own, to do with as she pleases. I do not believe any power on earth, man, government or any other influence, has any right to dictate to a woman what she shall do with her body. Woman has a right to choose the father of her children. She has the right to say when the male shall become the father of her children, and no power less than God Almighty has a right to dictate to her in the matter. Let us have common sense, decency and an absence of prudery in dealing with our sex questions. I am for this movement along such lines."

—Regular patrons are becoming more numerous daily at the wonderful lunch for 50 cents prepared by a real chef at Maison Doree, Ellis above Powell street. Dinner one dollar.

TRADE MARK

BOORD'S
LONDON, ENG., GINS

DRY
OLD TOM TWILIGHT

CHARLES MEINECKE & Co.

AGENTS PACIFIC COAST 314 SACRAMENTO ST., S. F.

PLEASURE'S WAND

"Obey no wand but Pleasure's."—Tom Moore.

"It Pays to Advertise" at the Columbia.

Yes, sir, the real, dyed-in-the-wool "tired business man" was there in force Monday evening. At first he yawned, then he began to take notice, then he smiled, and at last he broke out in loud guffaws—laughs would not exactly describe it. Here was a play to his liking. It had to do with business, and all the staid old conventions of business life were made merry with, and the before mentioned "tired business man" came to the conclusion that business is not always such a serious matter. The authors had a new idea, not exactly original, but it had to do with a phase of business never utilized by playwrights. The value of advertising is here shown in a startling manner, and though the authors perhaps stretch a point here and there to make the thing appear consistent and logical, the fabric of the entire play is woven together for just one purpose, and that is to create laughs.

The characters in the play inform us of the huge sums spent annually in advertising many of the commodities of life. We are told facts about these things we didn't know before. The play is specially adapted for the grim-visaged, conventional business man, the chap who has been grinding all day. It was a treat on the opening night to see these fellows laugh the loudest of all, but they did not have any monopoly. The play is a great success because it is something away from the conventional type of farce, and because it is up to the minute. The supporting company is the New York cast, and is on the whole excellent. Adele Roland, who assumes the leading feminine role, is a decidedly pretty Miss, with a certain charm of manner, and a capital actress withal. A fine performance was that of Elmer Grandin, an actor little known out here, but who has many successes to his credit. Frank Allworth as the advertising man of the firm, who has all the facts and figures at his finger ends, and who can rattle them off with the speed of a machine gun, gave an impersonation full of the spirit of genuine humor and uncton. Elza Frederick was excellent in a difficult part, and the others were uniformly good, working into an ensemble which made the acts pass off rapidly. If you want to laugh long and heartily, if you wish an evening of pure, unadulterated fun, then don't miss "It Pays to Advertise." It's a scream!

* * *

"The Law of the Land" at the Alcazar.

Don't fail to see the Alcazar players in this remarkable play. It is the finest performance this sterling company has presented this season. The play is unusual. Broadhurst has devised some situations which are tense and compelling, and the interest is maintained to a remarkable degree. His first act keeps everybody tense. If the author in like degree had kept up the wonderful pace in the second and third acts, which he set for himself in the first act, he would have brought out a tremendous play. Even as it is, it is a great acting vehicle; and one of the best things in the play is the genuine heart interest which is evolved. Miss Vaughan in this play gives the most notable performance of her long Alcazar career. Mr. Lytell, too, is most excellent in a splendid role. Alexis Luce is simply great as Harding, easily the best work of his Alcazar career.

PAUL GERSON.

* * *

Monday Morning Musicales at the St. Francis.

The second of the MacFayden series took place on the 24th inst., giving an opportunity to again realize what a fine pianist we have in Miss Katherine Heyman and introducing to us a new violinist, Mme. Eugenia Argiewicz-Bem, who made her initial appearance. Miss Heyman played the following numbers as only a great artist could, responding to the most spontaneous and hearty applause: Prelude, DeBussy; Sarabande, Grovley; Finale (Presto) Chopin, in the first group; and later The Magic Fire from Die Walkuere, Wagner-Brassin and Isoldena Liebsted, Wagner-Liszt. At the conclusion of her part of the program she was insistently brought back to play an encore, graciously giving Wehle's Tarrantella, which required no end of technique, with consummate skill.

William Rock and Frances White in a "Dansant Characteristique," next week at the Orpheum.

Between the piano numbers we listened to a violin in the hands of a little woman who wielded her bow with the power of a man, and yet combined with it the tender intuition of a woman's understanding. The "Andante Religiese" from Vieuxtemps' Concerto in D Minor, was a divine message, and the

Not
Gray
Hairs
but tired
Eyes
Make us look older than we are.
Old age
and Dull
Eyes—
tell-tale.

Don't Tell Your age

Alter the Movies
go home
and Murine
your Eyes.
Two
Drops
will rest,
refresh
and cleanse.
Have it
handy.

Murine Eye Remedy Company, Chicago, Sends Book of the Eye upon request.

Madam Melba, who assisted by Ada Sassoli, harpist; B. Emilio Puyans, flutist; and Uda Waldrop, pianist, will give a concert at Scottish Rite Hall, next Thursday evening, February 3d, at 8:30 sharp.

allegro held her audience spell-bound. When she again appeared, it was to confirm our first impression that San Francisco has added another splendid musician to the list, and after playing "Beurree from Suite by Ries, Arioso of Bach-Franke, and a delightful little bit, called La Fileuse, we still clamored for more, and she responded with Canzonetta by D'Ambrioso. Mr. George S. McManus accompanied Mme. Bem and deserves mention for his conscientious work.

There are to be four more of these excellent hours of music which promise every delight. The first was given over to Mme. Betty Drews and Miss Muckle. The next, in February, will feature Mme. Lorna Lachmund, lyric soprano, and Mr. Horace Britt, whose 'cello is already well known.

Steindorff's Auditorium "Pops."

While Conductor Hertz and the Symphony are holding sway in our city, in the Oakland Auditorium across the bay there is being given every Sunday afternoon, beginning at three o'clock, two hours of delightful musical entertainment. Entirely upon his own responsibility and expense, Mr. Steindorff has inaugurated these concerts, devoting the first half to the orchestra alone and the second to the rendition of the principal solos from opera, with the voices added. The first Sunday, "Aida;" the second "Faust;" and on January 23d, "Rigoletto," with Mme. Leroy-Chase, soprano; Miss Van De Mark, contralto; Mr. Ralph Errole, tenor; and Mr. E. Puccini, basso.

The price of these excellent programs is twenty-five cents. Mr. Steindorff is doing this for the sole purpose of educating the masses to good music. In his programme he cleverly wove into the first part of last Sunday's offering the "Andante Con Moto" from Schubert's Unfinished Symphony; also the "Traume" from Tristan and Isolde. He delighted the untrained ear with the familiar Mendelssohn "Wedding March" and Von Weber's fascinating "Invitation to the Dance," the concluding number being the Overture to William Tell. Don't you think we might divide honors a bit and lend encouragement as well as to listen to some of these excellent hours of music?

Next Sunday the programme will include Lucia, and naturally the Sextette, while the following week is to be Wagnerian, at which time the orchestra will play certain movements from Symphonies and Wagnerian numbers not given in San Francisco.

BETTY.

Uncorked Laughter Floods Pantages.

Capital novelty acts come breezing into the Pantages bill from week to week with a regularity that makes the oldest patrons gasp with delight. The Ten Toozoonins, whirlwind Arabian tumblers, are all that Kipling described of the Fuzzy Wuzzies of the Soudan, whirlwinds under the highest power speed, and as reckless of limbs as a 42 centimeter shell. Maurice Samuels and his competent company again capture the delighted house with his inimitable Italian patois and comedy antics in trying to pass his son and bride through the clutches of the immigration officers at Ellis Island. His method is an easy familiarity with the audience, handled with the keen discernment of knowing just how far to carry the comedy effective to sustain the laughter. Bruce and Calvert, the happy Hollanders, provide a new brand of comic patter spiced with personal aspersions. So do Princeton and Yale in forms of new slang which is salted with wit and happy hits that keep the audience keyed up with grins and cackles of enjoyment. They are facile and adroit in working up their clever points. Helen Reed contributes a round of new and entertaining Irish songs carrying melodies that keeps one humming the refrain. Pantages is always springing the latest and best novelties in animals to be found in the vaudeville field. This week there is an extraordinary troupe of trained dogs and monkeys, who go through their complicated acts all by themselves. The setting is a village street, and something new develops every moment. A monkey butcher steals a dog from a carriage, and in a jiffy claps him into a machine; out comes a string of sausages which he sells to a lady dog shopper. There is a reckless booze-fighting dog attired as a man, who goes through the usual bibulous antics in his efforts to walk home. The feature of the act is the arrest of one of his cronies by a monkey policeman, who rings up a patrol wagon, and that madly driven wagon lands the culprit in jail in a whirlwind that would take a medal from the local police.

Events in the Paul Elder Gallery.—Eugen Neuhaus, assistant Professor of Decorative Design of the University of California, will give his second lecture in the course on "Painters, Pictures and the Public," in the Paul Elder Gallery, 239 Grant avenue, San Francisco, Tuesday afternoon, February 1st, at 3 o'clock. The subject will be "The Artist's Point of View vs. the Public's."

The fourth morning in the series of "Interpretive Readings of Great Modern Plays," by Leo Cooper, will be given in the same gallery on Wednesday, February 2d, at 10:45 a. m. Mr. Cooper will read three one-act plays by Giacoso, Tcheckoff and Lady Gregory.

On Thursday afternoon, February 3d, at 3 o'clock, Paul Jordan Smith, of the English Department of the University of California, will speak on Robert Browning, "The Ideal Lover." This will be the third lecture in the series, "The Soul of Woman in Modern Literature."

(Continued to Page 13)

W. D. Fennimore J. W. Davis A. R. Fennimore California Optical Co Makers of Good Glasses	What Double Vision Glasses Mean To Their Wearers. There is nothing that plays a more important part in life than the eyes, yet they are conscientiously neglected. Glasses should be the very best obtainable and properly fitted so that the best results may be obtained. This is particularly true of double vision glasses or bifocals. The newest and best bifocal is the "Caltex One-piece" as it is ground from one piece of perfect ophthalmic glass and combines reading and distance corrections in one lens. Caltex One-piece Bifocals make two pairs of glasses unnecessary—do away with the constant changing of your glasses. Do not call attention to your age for when worn have the appearance of regular glasses.
181 Post Street } 2508 Mission St. } San Francisco 1221 Broadway, Oakland

Friends in Washington write me that our own "Jim" Phelan is being "rushed" by the matchmakers, and the new Senator from California is evidently enjoying his "debutante" season. He has leased one of the handsomest homes in the Capitol, and from the social standpoint finds it no handicap that the home is not hosted by a wife.

All over the world the rules of society are divided into two sets, resilient rules for the male and hard and fast ones for the female. The chief pleasure of the majority of the women on the "inside" lies in keeping their sisters who are trying to break in fuming and fussing and salaaming on the outside just as long as they can. Men are never required to do setting up exercises for any length of time, provided they have the open sesame.

'Tis written in song and story, the tale of the wife of the Senator or Congressman who goes to Washington expecting to bask in social glory, only to find that she is dining and wining nobodies, and that the Somebodies inhabit the frigid zone when the newcomers knock. Those who have "arrived" find it very stimulating to retard the progress of those who are on the way. Transplanted home town glory hardly ever washes, and never boils without fading. The wife of the Senator from Red Gap suddenly finds that she is not "vogue" in her new surroundings.

There was much speculation here about sending a bachelor on to Washington, but that speculation was confined entirely to those who are inexperienced in the social game. The exports knew that a bachelor with social gifts and a bank account is a most welcome addition to society anywhere in the world, for obvious and potential reasons. So the doors of the Phelan home in Washington swing wide welcome to the most exclusive set in Washington.

Here is a lovely story on Hansom Grubb, one of the dashing beaux in the younger set. He is telling it on himself, so what harm in telling it here! For several months Grubb has been reading up on psychic phenomena, and in conversation he has shown a decided bias toward the occult. He has held in firm hand a brief for the queer folk who profess to peer into the future, and his defense of them would run something like this: "Of course I know they do a lot of faking, and they are not the kind that I would choose to hold the gift of divination—but you can't deny that some of them possess it—that here and there one runs into an ignorant, unkempt creature who somehow has this gift in greater or less degree.

"Take, for example, that bunch of fake fortune tellers out at the Exposition. Yet one of those fakirs told me my name—and it's not a name in the common or garden list of the Smiths and Jones—and he told me other things that made me marvel."

There was one young woman in particular who liked to draw him out on this subject and place him on the defensive. Finally she put all her cards down on the table and let him see that it was a marked pack! She herself had told the fortune teller about her friend, Hansom Grubb, and had prompted a friend to suggest to Grubb that he ask for the particular Rajah who was primed with the information. And as Grubb himself says, he "fell for it!"

Mrs. F. W. Wakefield (formerly Mrs. John D. Spreckels, Jr.) has confided to her intimate friends that she intends to put up a fight to regain the custody of her children by her first marriage. She wants the courts to rule on how much time they may spend with her, for otherwise she fears that she will not have them at all, as Jack Spreckels is determined to have entire charge of the children, and they are now with him and his bride in the home that John D. Spreckels built for his son when he married Edith Huntington.

The Wakefields for a time despaired of getting accommodations on the Pacific, and were going to India and coming home across the Atlantic, when sailing arrangements were made for them by friends in Shanghai. They were in Upper Siberia when they got word that they could retrace their steps and come home this way. It is not altogether a happy home coming, for during her absence her father, to whom she was devoted, died in New York. But the honeymooning trip in the Orient was filled with adventures, which will supply an early anecdote for these young people.

The marriage of Miss Kate Isobel McGregor and John Luckenbach on Wednesday night at the J. A. McGregor home in Pacific avenue was characterized by the delightful cordiality which radiates in this hospitable home. All the appointments of the wedding were of the handsomest, but there was nothing stiff and formal or pretentious about the affair, in spite of the beauty of the appointments. The McGregors, in common with other choice spirits, have a natural gift of providing entertainment without stint, and yet subduing the offensive dollar mark.

The bride looked very handsome in her wedding robes, and all the Eastern guests were most enthusiastic in their praise of the wonderful floral possibilities of California, maintaining that in no other city at this time of the year could flowers in such profusion and such coloring be secured for decorative purposes. John Luckenbach, the fortunate young man who won this charming girl, has but one fault that her friends cannot forgive—he lives in the East, and will take his bride there to live, punctuating each year with visits to the coast.

Miss Hannah Hobart continues to be the motif of much of the entertaining that is done for the debutante set. She has inherited much of her mother's charm, a great deal of her father's daring, and many attributes entirely her own conspire to make her a very unusual and attractive young person indeed.

The divorce of the father and mother did not bring about a break in the relationship of the children with their father, and Walter Hobart takes great pride in his debutante daughter. She shares his love for sport of all kind, and as he says "is some little speed maniac, and great fun to take about in a racing car." Family and friends do not find it a very comforting picture to see father and daughter start off in his racing car for a drive beyond the confines of the motorcycle policeman, for it's dangerous business, this racing.

The dinner dances at the hotels continue to be the Mecca of the fashionables who find this one of the happiest diversions with no particular tax on the energies and no social responsibility resting on any particular hostess for the success of the affair as a whole. Her only concern need be that the group at her own table is having a good time, and while there is always much visiting back and forth among the coteries at the different tables, no one takes any responsibility for more than her own party. On Tuesday night at the Fairmont Hotel there was a goodly showing of the smart set, in spite of the number of private affairs during the week that were set to dance music.

The news that there is to be an ice skating pavilion interests those in the smart set who are always looking for novelties and who love to compete in something new. There is no doubt that this set will buckle on ice skates and go to it enthusiastically.

Friends of Mrs. Dennis O'Sullivan have received letters telling them that she has gone to Flanders to do relief work there under the Hoover commission. Mrs. O'Sullivan was Miss Curtis of this city, and is one of the most fascinating and talented women who write California after their names. She is an artist and a poet, many of the words of the songs with which Dennis O'Sullivan sang his way into hearts the wide world over having been written by his wife. She is also a remarkable linguist, and during her years of residence abroad has not only mastered the usual languages, but has picked up the patios of many a sequestered people. She speaks the language of Flanders fluently enough to be of more service there than any American woman the commission could find, and will be of estimable service there.

Since the death of her sister, Mrs. Thomas Magee, Sr., Mrs. O'Sullivan has been loth to visit California, filled as it is with memories of her departed ones. Her home in London, however, always has a special welcome for friends from San Francisco.

Mrs. Lewis Vernon Harcourt, the new vicereine of India, the second American woman to occupy this position, is a descendant of Miles Morgan, whose bronze statue stands on Court Square in this city. Her mother was a sister of the late J.

Pierpont Morgan. The doughty sergeant of the late American colonies was a power in dealing with the Indians. His descendant, who is noted for her good tact, can be depended upon to uphold the family tradition in the East.

Most elaborate and very unusual, brilliant and resplendent will be the decorative scheme of the ballroom of Hotel del Coronado for the Spanish ball on the evening of January 29th. The stage will be done in royal purple, while the drapes will also be in the same color, which will represent a beautiful garden in Granada; at the rear of the garden in the distance are two huge gold pillars surmounted by the crowns of Coronado, which will be illuminated by soft amber lights; on either side of the stage are two banners loaned by Frank A. Miller of the Mission Inn, and which were presented to him by the Spanish Ambassador at Washington; beneath these banners on either side of the stage are two huge torschiere lamps of massive gold and two gold chairs which were once in the Chapultepec Castle in the City of Mexico, and which were sent to America by the former President, Porfirio Diaz. These chairs were originally sent to Mexico by the King of Spain in the early Spanish days, to the Emperor Maximilian, and once graced the throne room in the castle at Madrid.

This notable ball will open with a chorus of forty singing the famous aria from Carmen, followed by the dancing set composed of the members of the younger society set, who will give Las Sevillanas. Signor Aubrey Scotti, the noted baritone, will sing the famous Toreador song from Carmen, while Miss Cornelia Strohhar and Mr. A. Courtney Campbell, Jr., will give El Bolero de Madrid, A. Malaguena Y el Torero and El Jaleo de Jerez. Miss Dorothy Smoller will give Los Soleares, a dance which she learned in Manila, and which has never been seen in this country before. Mrs. L. L. Rowan, the noted musical director who has studied much abroad, will have charge of the music and effects at the ball.

The San Francisco Chapter of the Woman's Section of the Navy League is planning to give a leap year tea dansant at the Fairmont Hotel on February 29th from four to seven. The money raised will help towards raising the funds necessary for permanent headquarters. Meetings are being held every Thursday at 2:30 p. m., in the red room of the Fairmont Hotel. At the meetings, interesting papers are read and talks on preparedness are given by prominent navy men. There are now almost 200 members, and with each day new members are taking the pledge. There is no distinction shown, and all are welcome to attend these meetings. The dansant committee is as follows: Mrs. Wm. T. Sessions, Mrs. Francis M. Wright, Mrs. Squire Vance Moody, Mrs. W. M. Wymore, Mrs. D. C. Heger, Mrs. Kirby Crittendon, Mrs. Ella M. Sessions.

To-day, Saturday, there will be an exhibition "special" golf match on the links at Del Monte between Wilford Reid, at one time international champion; Mr. Fovargue, French champion; and James Donaldson of the Glenview Golf and Country Club, Chicago, Ill., and George Smith of Del Monte. There will be only the one special exhibition match now. The return match will be played at some later date.

The Saturday night dinner parties at the Hotel Oakland are becoming very popular. Quite a number of reservations have been made for Saturday night, the 29th. Among these are Miss F. Merry, to entertain a party of fifteen friends, and Mr. F. St. Suc, who will have twelve guests for the dinner dance.

The Oakland Civic Center will have a lecture in the Ivory ball room at the Hotel Oakland on Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Topics of vital importance will be discussed.

Friday, January 28th, the second of the winter assemblies will be held in the Ivory ball room at the Hotel Oakland.

Local merchants are all enthused over the big 1916 Spring Fashion Show which will be held at the Civic Auditorium on Saturday evening, February 12th, in conjunction with the Fete in Fairyland. Live models will display all the latest spring styles from a revolving platform erected in the center of the huge auditorium under the glare of fifty exposition candelabras. Everything, from shoe to exquisite spring millinery, including fancy ball gowns, hosiery, lingerie, elegant furs, natty tailored suits, bathing suits and gentlemen's attire will be shown in the biggest fashion show that has ever been staged in the West.

"DOLLAR DAY" AND A DANCE FOR CHARITY.

St. Valentine's Day will be "Dollar Day" in San Francisco, which means that every one who can possibly afford the outlay will be solicited to contribute one hundred cents to help the city's poor through the medium of the Associated charities. It is confidently expected that the total receipts will exceed those of "Dollar Day" a year ago. Then the donor of each dollar was given a certificate of membership in the Associated Charities. This year the certificate will enable him to obtain free admission to a St. Valentine dance and vaudeville entertainment in the Civic Auditorium. The dance will be informal, and the best available talent is being secured to appear in the cabaret performance.

Headquarters of the "Dollar Day" campaign have been established at 511 Sutter street, with Harry R. Bogart, secretary of the Associated Charities, directing the work in conjunction with an executive committee consisting of Superior Judge Frank J. Murasky, chairman; Mesdames M. C. Sloss, Philip King Brown, E. F. Conlin, J. J. Gottlob, A. E. Graupner, Sigmund Stern, F. W. Stephenson, S. I. Wormser, Misses Emily Carolan, Marion Delany, E. M. Davenport, Messrs. Jacob Blumlein, Milton Birnbaum, Selah Chamberlain, George Q. Chase, F. W. Carpenter, Richard W. Costello, Eustace Cullinan, O. K. Cushing, Robert M. Eyre, Wellington Gregg, Jr., Lawrence W. Harris, Charles H. Kendrick, William B. Pringle, Fred Suhr, Geo. Uhl, S. I. Wormser and D. A. White. Robert M. Eyre has charge of the dance and vaudeville arrangements, and an energetic committee is assisting him in procuring novelties for the event.

NEW PLANS REGARDING THE TARIFF.

Several weeks ago the News Letter called attention to the widely divergent and bitter differences of opinion regarding tariff legislation in this country, and suggested that practical and more satisfactory results could be accomplished along the lines of a competent independent non-partisan tariff board. Current news from Washington this week is to the effect that President Wilson is favoring this line of attacking the problem, and that he favors the creation of a non-partisan board, with broad powers to investigate tariff duties, the relation between industries at home and abroad, and the entire tariff and commercial machinery of the world. He has already laid his plans before the party leaders in the Senate and House, and has made it plain that he believes the proposed commission shall not be established with the view of upholding or criticising any particular tariff policy, but should be entirely non-partisan and capable of gathering facts without any political bias.

—It's awfully hard to appreciate good advice that doesn't tally with our desires.

An Ideal Complexion

Gives that snowy white complexion which fashion requires the well groomed woman to possess.

We will send a complexion chamois and book of Powder leaves for 15c. to cover cost of mailing and wrapping.

At Druggists and Department Stores

Gouraud's Oriental Cream

FERD T. HOPKINS & SON, Props.
27 Great Jones St., New York City

Novelties for "Welcoming" and "Bon Voyage" Packages
Flowers Delivered to Any Part of the World

SEND YOUR HOSTESS A DISTINCTIVE BOX OF FLOWERS

FROM JOSEPH'S FLORISTS

GRANT AVENUE, NEAR SUTTER STREET

"See-ho! See-ho!"

Hunting the Hare with Beagles and Foot-Harriers

BY HENRY McDONALD SPENCER

There are some who hold that a man who invents a new drink is greater than a poet, and if the quantitative test be applied the bartender will beat out the bard. But every one will agree that one who introduces a new sport to an ennui-ridden community is entitled to a special niche in the Hall of Fame.

All kudos, therefore, to the beautiful and accomplished Mrs. Fred Kohl, who will shortly have a pack, or "cry," of beagles to chase the elusive jack-rabbit through the craggy hills, bosky dells, lush meadows and wooded copses of the peninsula. A club is being formed in Hillsborough for the purpose of following the foot-hounds, and much enthusiasm is being engendered under the lady's gracious leadership. To be sure, there are those who are inclined to indulge in cheap wit at the expense of the future Burlingame Beagles, or Hillsborough Harriers, but then all innovators have had to endure, more or less, the shafts of "small-time" ridicule, if not of more aggressive opposition. Almost any outdoor pastime is commendable, however, that will take people out of the gloomy Anglo-Saxon home where the inmates sit and sulk in separate rooms.

Beagle-hunting is simply a very healthful exercise, involving a tramp at a good rate over the country in every direction, regardless of roads, and with the outcome of the chase as the incentive. At least it is healthful to all concerned, excepting the hare. Without some added interest, walking is very dull and soul-deadening work at best, and requires a Greer Harrison or Eleanor Sears, or some such "nut," to practice it for its own sake. Following the beagles, which is done only on foot, although an old-time sport, has been growing in popularity in England of late, and there are, or were, prior to the war, over one hundred packs kept in the United Kingdom.

The beagle is a sort of jitney hound ranging from 14 to 16 inches in height at the shoulder, has large pendant ears, and is generally of a blue-mottled, hare and badger pied, or black and tan color. When the country is very rough and there are numerous dykes and stone walls, a larger hound known as a foot harrier, is used, but the latter is not to be confounded with harriers followed on horseback and which are still larger. The beagles are necessarily slow, so that the hunt can keep up on foot; in fact, horses are not allowed to take part in the chase, as otherwise the hounds are insensibly pressed forward beyond the control of their huntsman, and also become too fast for pedestrians. The hare, of course, easily out-distances both hounds and humans in a straightaway, but as it is a very silly animal, it will double or quarter on its tracks, and thereby give the keen-scented hounds an opportunity to catch up. Whether the Californian jack will thus accommodate the sport, or go off straight for too great a distance to be followed successfully, remains to be seen.

The hounds draw for the hare, and, spreading in a line behind the master and whippers-in, the field beats the bushes and hedges with sticks to arouse the quarry. "Puss" being started, a loud "See-ho" is given, and the chase is on. When the hare is "beaten," the Master takes the hounds in hand, and urges them on to a kill. Blood is necessary to beagles, as otherwise they become slackers, grow listless, and fall off in their future work. After the death the "Who-whoop" is sounded, and at the "break-up" the hounds are rewarded with the "paunch," the ears are taken off to be nailed to the kennel door as trophies, while the farmer on whose land the quarry was originally found is entitled to the rest of the carcass. I fancy, however, that the typical Californian ranchman would not thank the hunt, for the remains of a jackrabbit, even when it suffered so noble an end; and furthermore he is not so supine and reverential towards his "betters" as the European peasant. There is not much farming land in the foothill country west of Hillsborough and Easton, and if the jack will be so accommodating as to run in that direction, no complications are likely to ensue. The hunt sometimes lasts for several hours, and ten to fifteen miles are covered, but for all concerned, it should not exceed three hours, and even less is better.

In the earlier days of the sport it was customary for the followers to take poles along for the purpose of vaulting ditches and fences, but that is not done now. Imagination fairly reels at the picture of some eupeptic, elderly matron doing a pole vault over a six foot fence or a flying leap across a ten foot ravine.

The officials of the hunt, the M. F. B.—Master of Foot Beagles—whippers-in and huntsmen are dressed in a recognized uniform which is very smart indeed. It consists of a light velvet hunting cap, green coat, white stock, white drill knickers and green stockings. A distinctive collar to the coat, or a waistcoat showing the club colors, is sometimes worn. The ordinary members of the club come in mufti and are identified by a club badge or insignia in the form of a brooch or hat-pin for the ladies, and a button or scarf pin for men.

One of the most interesting features of the hunt is the music of the horn, and Shakespeare employs it in some of his plays with charming effect, notably in "As You Like It." In England what is known as a Kohler reed is sounded at different stages of the chase, and there is a very musical series of notes for each occasion. The principal calls used are: A single note at "throwing-off" the hounds; "Doubling the horn" when the hounds are on scent; the "Veline," a pretty note at "finding;" the "Gone away" is self-explanatory; the "Mort" or "Rattle" is the death note, and is frequently followed by the "Recheat." There are other calls, some of which have fallen into disuse, but which could be revived with great effect. It is to be hoped that Mrs. Kohl, who is very musical and possesses a lovely voice, will insist on a full rendition of this very interesting and colorful feature of the hunt.

PASSING OF A WELL KNOWN RAILROAD AGENT.

Edward Lloyd Lomax, the oldest passenger agent in point of service employed by any railroad in this country, passed away this week from paralysis, after a month's stroke. As a passenger agent he held an enviable record in all the positions he honored. His record covered a half century. He was born in February, 1852, in Fredericksburg, Va., and at an early age turned his attention to engineering, and after graduation from the Coleman University he joined a United States engineering party in 1869 in the Northwest. Soon afterwards he entered the railway service of the Burlington and Missouri River Company. His advance was rapid. In 1874 he joined the freight and passenger department of the St. Louis and Southeastern Railway, and became general passenger agent of the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Railway in 1879. Two years later he was appointed general passenger agent of the Toledo, Cincinnati and St. Louis Railway. Later he became assistant passenger agent of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy system, and three years later served in the same capacity with the Union Pacific. Then he joined the Western Pacific and became recognized as one of the greatest colonizers among Western railroad men. Irrigation, crops and reclamation were his hobbies. He leaves a widow and two children, E. L. Lomax, Jr., and Miss Mildred Lomax. He was a Mason, and belonged to numbers of other organizations and clubs.

—The ladies who have visited Techau Tavern the last two Saturdays have been greatly pleased with the new souvenir with which each has been presented. This is a new perfume of rare delicacy, known as La Boheme, and possessing the refined characteristics of the most famous perfumes, an elusive, subtle odor, yet of lasting quality, appealing to the fastidious. La Boheme is certain to rival in popularity the best known perfumes, such as Parfum Mary Garden and Carolina White perfume. It will be presented to the ladies every Saturday.

MELLOW AS MOONLIGHT CASCADE

For your HI-BALL today

The finest, purest and mellowest whisky that brains and money can produce, cost to you no more than inferior grades; so why not ask for and insist on getting CASCADE.

Instead of saying whisky, just say CASCADE, you will enjoy it and feel much better.

Special enjoyable drink recipes for the asking by writing J. H. Norton, care San Francisco News Letter

ADVANCE ANNOUNCEMENTS.

(Continued from Page 9)

Melba to Sing Here Next Week.—Melba, declared by Pitts Sanborn of the New York Globe, to be still "the greatest living prima donna," by the very exacting Krehbiel "the brown, bright nightingale of all the song birds," will, assisted by Ada Sassoli, harpist; B. Emilia Puyans, flutist, and Uda Waldrop, pianist, be heard in concert at Scottish Rite Hall next Thursday night, February 3d, at 8:30 sharp. Since her last visit to San Francisco, Madame Melba has worked like a Trojan on her voice, and the Eastern critics found "the same golden voice, the same vocal poise, the lovely perfection of tone; in short, the same perfection of singing that we have always heard." The directors of the Chicago Opera Association permitted Melba to dictate her own terms and monopolize whatever roles she wanted for "guest" appearances, and some of the biggest nights of the recent season, at the Auditorium in Chicago, were the Melba nights in "La Boheme" and "Traviata." With the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Philadelphia and Boston, Melba had successes that were nothing short of sensational. She has earned $164,000 for the Red Cross; $28,000 of which was made in Canada, and has been the recipient of great social attention everywhere. Seats for the Melba concert are on sale at the box office of Sherman, Clay & Company.

Big New Novelties at Orpheum.—Frank Fogarty, the celebrated Irish wit, who has been given the sobriquet "The Dublin Minstrel," will reappear after a long absence. His talk scintillates with humor. That delightful comedienne, Mrs. Gene Hughes, will, with the assistance of a company of her own, present Edgar Allen Woolf's novelty comedy playlet "Youth," which furnishes most enjoyable entertainment. William Rock and Frances White are too well and favorably known to require eulogy. They are, in their particular line, the cleverest team in vaudeville, and their act, which is entitled "A Dansant Characteristique," includes a series of character songs and dances which are both novel and fascinating. Marie Bishop, a gifted young violinist who, until last season, has confined her talent to symphony orchestras and concert tours, will be heard in a judiciously selected program. Billy Bouncer, the celebrated English clown, will introduce his famous bouncing and bounding contest, which takes place on what is technically known as a "Trampoline." The contest is open to all athletically inclined young men. When the first contestant starts to bounce the fun commences. A prize is awarded to the winner, who is selected by the applause of the audience. Van and Bell, the Boomerang Throwers, who were featured in the Public Scene with "America" at the New York Hippodrome, will give an exhibition of their marvelous skill. Charles (Chick) Sale, in his clever impersonations of rural types, and Ralph Dunbar's Singing Bell Ringers, are also among the contributors to this great show. "Protecting the Ships at Sea," the fifth installment of the Uncle Sam at Work motion pictures, secured exclusively for the Orpheum Circuit, will close the performance.

The Next Symphony Concerts.—The San Francisco Symphony Orchestra will give its fourth Sunday concert of the current season at the Cort Theatre, to-morrow afternoon. The program, which will commence promptly at 2:30 o'clock, is devoted entirely to selections from the compositions of Richard Wagner. For the fifth pair of concerts, which will be given at the Cort Theatre on the afternoons of Friday, February 4th, at 3 o'clock, and Sunday, February 6th, at 2:30 o'clock, the program will have the assistance of the eminent Russian pianist, Ossip Gabrilowitsch. Born the son of a lawyer, at St. Petersburg, on January 26, 1878, Mr. Gabrilowitsch received, when six years old, his first piano lessons from his brother. Rubenstein advised Gabrilowitsch's parents to allow their son to become a professional pianist, and he was sent to Tolstoff at the St. Petersburg Conservatory. In 1898 he began his career as a virtuoso. Mr. Gabrilowitsch in 1909 married the daughter of Mark Twain, and he is as great a favorite socially as he is musically. Seats are on sale at the box offices of Sherman, Clay & Company, Kohler & Chase, for the Friday as well as Sunday afternoon concerts of the fifth pair, are $2, $1.50, $1 and 75c. Box and loge seats are $3 each. Seats on sale at the Cort Theatre on days of the concerts only.

"Motherhood," Sensational Sex Drama, Coming.—Following "It Pays to Advertise," at the Columbia Theatre, will be offered the sensational sex drama in four acts, "Motherhood." The play is from the pen of Lillian Langdon and Charles Bolles, and it is said that the authors have introduced to the stage a theme which has created no end of discussion; in fact as much as has Brieux's "Damaged Goods." The leading roles in the forthcoming production will be played by Blanche Hall and Jack Bryce. The performance comes here from the Little Theatre, Los Angeles, where it is creating a furore at present. The advance sale of seats begins Thursday.

Big Show at Pantages.—"The Style Show," a musical tabloid with fourteen pretty fashion models, is the big topping feature on one of the best all-around shows that the Pantages has presented in months. There are several good funmakers with the production. The girls have all been chosen for their stunning figures, and the gowns, frocks and hats bear the distinctive brand of "Made in Broadway." "Oklahoma" Bob Albright is making his annual tour of the vaudeville houses, using clever Cliff Carney, the young pianist, to play his song accompaniments. Albright is unquestionably one of the most popular singing entertainer that is appearing in vaudeville to-day. The Potts Brothers will present their rollicking English comedy playlet, "A Doubles Doubles." The Standard Brothers have an acrobatic offering which smacks of genuine class. Bert Wiggins and Company will show a new routine of juggling and comedy in "The Lonesome Soldier," and dainty Billie Seaton has a fetching personality with her rendition of popular ballads. The seventh episode of "The Red Circle" becomes more complex and mysterious as it goes along. It is one of the most interesting "movie" serials that has yet been released by the Pathe Company.

The Evolution of Music.—Albert I. Elkus will give a course of six lectures in the Paul Elder Gallery, 239 Grant avenue, San Francisco, on consecutive Saturday forenoons, commencing February 5th, at 10:45 o'clock. The subject of the course will be "The Evolution of Music to its Present Aims and Structure." The first lecture will be "The Music of the Greeks—and Melody in Music." The subjects of the other lectures in the course will be "Rise of the Theory of Modern Music," "The Classic School and the Growth of Modern Musical Forms," "The Nationalization of Music," "The Development of Opera" and "Contemporary Music and its Tendencies."

Orpheum

O'Farrell Street Bet. Stockton and Powell
Phone Douglas 70

Week beginning THIS SUNDAY AFTERNOON. MATINEE EVERY DAY

A SUPERB NEW BILL

FRANK FOGARTY "The Dublin Minstrel" in Quaint, Humorous and Human Observations; MRS. GENE HUGHES & COMPANY presenting "Youth" A Novelty Comedy Playlet by Edgar Allen Woolf; MARIE RISHOE, Violinist; BILLY BOUNCER and His Famous Bouncing Contest; VAN BELLE Boomerang Throwers; CHARLES (CHICK) SALE; RALPH DUNBAR'S SINGING BELL RINGERS; "PROTECTING THE SHIPS AT SEA;" WILLIAM ROCK & FRANCIS WHITE in "A Dansant Characteristique." Evening Prices, 10c 25c 50c 75c Box seats, $1. Matinee prices (except Sundays and holidays) 10c., 25c., 50c. Phone Douglas 70.

Scottish Rite Hall

SPECIAL I

FRANK W HEALY Presents
MADAME MELBA
(The greatest living prima donna)
IN CONCERT, Thursday, Feb. 4, at 8:00 P. M.
Assisting Artists: ADA SASSOLI, Harpist, B. EMILIO PUYANS, Flutist; UDA WALDROP, Pianist.
Tickets, $2.00, $2.00, $1.50, $1.00. On Sale at Sherman & Clay's, Mason & Hamlin Piano Used.

Columbia Theatre

Corner Mason and Geary Streets
Phone Franklin 130
The Leading Playhouse

EVERY NIGHT UP TO AND INCLUDING, SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 6
Do or Matinee Wednesday; Do or Fifty Matinee Saturday
Cohan and Harris Present The Steam of Steam

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

Here after a Year in New York City.
Monday Feb. 7—The Sensational Drama "MOTHERHOOD"

Pantages' Theatre

Market Street Opposite Mason

Opening Sunday Afternoon, January 31, 1916
A VAUDEVILLE REVELATION I I
THE STYLE SHOW in Singing Fashion Music by a New Group with Mrs. a Mrs. OHLBERG, BOB ALBRIGHT, THE MALE MELBA, POTTS BROTHERS, The Double Decker, and the...
EIGHT ALL STAR VAUDEVILLE ACTS AND 7th EPISODE OF THE RED CIRCLE

Here, There and Personally

The Governor of Arizona has opened negotiations with the Governor of California asking co-operation in an effort to add to the national territory. Access by both States to the Gulf of California is the goal desired. The method of acquisition is to be left to the federal authorities, as they settle with Mexico for indemnities due citizens of the United States. The modest proportions of the plan, as compared with some others previously heralded, may commend it. No bid for the entire peninsula of Lower California is set up. As for the proposed change and what it would mean to the federal government as well as to the two States named, that is best understood by a person conversant with the problems caused by the erratic Colorado river and the needs of the Imperial Valley irrigation system.

In England, in the early centuries, there was at all times a tendency on the part of authority to interfere with dress, and this reached, probably, its high-water mark in the reign of the masterful Elizabeth. When the gallants of the court stuffed their breeches with rags and feathers till they became inordinate in their girth, the Queen ordered these feather bags to be cut. When the depths of ruffs and the length of rapiers grew excessive, she placed "select grave citizens at every gate to cut the ruffles and breake the rapier's points of all passengers, that exceeded a yeard in length of their rapiers, and a nayle of a yeard in depth of their ruffles." It is to be suspected these grave citizens dealt more gently with the Elizabethan gallants than did the Cossacks of the Emperor Paul, in Russia, when ordered to stop every passenger, who wore pantaloons, and slash these from their legs with their hangers.

Who smoked the first pipe in England, and when? The Sebright MS. has this remark concerning William Middleton:

"It is said that he, with Captain Thomas Price of Plasyollin and one Captain Koet, were the first who smoked, or (as they called it) drank tobacco publicly in London; and that the Londoners flocked from all parts to see them."

Mr. Apperson, in his new Social History of Smoking (Secker, 6s.) adds that no date is named and no further particulars are available. He also queries the suggestion that Ralph Lane was the pioneer in 1586. Europe knew the tobacco plant as early as 1560.

Many speakers have been the victims of curious introductions, but probably few have found such utter absence of humor in their chairman as fell to the lot of Mr. Lloyd George, at a Disestablishment meeting in Flintshire. The chairman was a Welsh deacon, whose convictions were far in advance of his power of expression. "I haff to introduce to you to-night," he explained, "the member from Carnavon Boroughs. He haff come here to reply to what the Bishop of St. Asaph said the other night about Welsh Disestablishment. In my opinion, gentlemen, the Bishop of St. Asaph iss one of the biggest liars in creation; but thank goodness, we haff a match for him here to-night."

City Index and Purchasers' Guide

CHIROPODISTS.

Dr. R. T. Leaner, Surgeon Chiroprapist, formerly of 6 Geary street, removes corns entirely whole—painless—without knife. Bunions and ingrowing nails cured by a special and painless treatment. 212-214 West-bank Bldg., 830 Market St. Tel. Kearny 3578.

NOTARY PUBLIC.

Martin Aronsohn, Notary Public and Pension Attorney. All legal papers drawn up accurately. 217 Montgomery St., above Bush, San Francisco, Cal. Phone Douglas 601.

ATTORNEYS-AT-LAW

Samuel M. Shortridge, Attorney-at-Law, Chronicle Building, San Francisco. Tel. Sutter 36.

Marcus Lorne Samuels, Attorney-at-Law, Pacific Building, Market St., at Fourth, San Francisco, Cal. Tel. Douglas 304

PILLSBURY'S PICTURES, INC VIEWS OF CALIFORNIA

KODAK finishing done by EXPERTS. We will send for your films.

219 POWELL STREET Phone Kearny 3841

"Yes, grandma, I am to be married during the bright and gladsome yuletide." "But, my dear," said grandma, earnestly, "you are very young. Do you feel that you are fitted for married life?" "I am being fitted now, grandma," explained the prospective bride, sweetly; "seventeen gowns!"—Louisville Courier Journal.

AUSTRALIA and NEW ZEALAND

BANK OF NEW SOUTH WALES

(ESTABLISHED 1817)

Paid-up Capital	-	$17,500,000.00
Reserve Fund	-	12,750,000.00
Reserve Liability of Proprietors	-	17,500,000.00
Aggregate Assets 31st March 1915	-	$47,750,000.00
		$267,918,826.00

J. RUSSELL FRENCH, General Manager

346 BRANCHES and AGENCIES in the Australian States, New Zealand, Fiji, Papua, (New Guinea), and London. The Bank transacts every description of Australian Banking Business. Wool and other Produce Credits Arranged.

Head Office:
GEORGE STREET, SYDNEY
London Office:
29 THREADNEEDLE STREET, E. C.

The German Savings & Loan Society (THE GERMAN BANK)

Savings Incorporated 1868 Commercial
526 California Street San Francisco, Cal.

(Member of the Associated Savings Banks of San Francisco)

The following Branches for Receipt and Payment of Deposits only:

MISSION BRANCH, S. E. Corner Mission and 21st Streets
RICHMOND DIST. BRANCH, S.W. Cor. Clement and 7th Ave.
HAIGHT ST. BRANCH, S. W. Cor. Haight and Belvedere
DECEMBER 31st, 1915:

Assets	$61,849,662.02
Deposits	58,840,699.38
Capital actually paid up in Cash	1,000,000.00
Reserve and Contingent Funds	2,008,962.64
Employees' Pension Fund	211,238.93
Number of Depositors	67,406
Office Hours: 10 o'clock A. M. to 3 o'clock P. M., except Saturdays to 12 o'clock M. and Saturday evenings from 6 o'clock P. M. to 8 o'clock P. M. for receipt of deposits only.
For the 6 months ending December 31st, 1915, a dividend to depositors of 4 per cent per annum was declared.

The Anglo & London Paris National Bank SAN FRANCISCO

Paid-Up Capital	$4,000,000
Surplus and Undivided Profits	21,800,000
Total Resources	$40,000,000

OFFICERS—

SIG GREENBAUM
Chairman of the Board
HERBERT FLEINHACKER President
WASHINGTON DOOGE Vice-President
J FRIEDLANDER Vice-President
C. F. HUNT Vice-President
C. R. PARKER Cashier
WM. H. HIGH Assistant Cashier
H. CHONSKI Assistant Cashier
G. R. BURDICK Assistant Cashier
J. W. LILIENTHAL, Jr. Assistant Cashier
A. L. LANOERMAN Secretary

THE CANADIAN BANK OF COMMERCE

HEAD OFFICE, TORONTO	ESTABLISHED 1867
SIR EDMUND WALKER O.V.O., LL.D., D.C.L. President	Paid-up Capital	$15,000,000
ALEXANDER LAIRD General Manager	Reserve Fund	13,500,000
JOHN AIRD Assistant General Manager	Aggregate Resource	245,000,000

London Office, 2 Lombard Street, E. C.
New York Office, 16 Exchange Place

Branches in all parts of Canada, including Yukon Territory and at Seattle, Wash., Portland, Ore., and Mexico City

All Kinds of Commercial Banking Transacted
SAN FRANCISCO BRANCH—450 CALIFORNIA STREET
Bruce Heathcote, Manager

The Background of the War Zone

Lloyd George made an earnest appeal to the trade unionists of Glasgow on Christmas morning to relax their rules so as to allow a speedy output of big guns and shells for our armies in the field.

"Upon your acceptance of my proposals depends not merely victory, but also the saving of numberless lives," he said.

"It is essential that we should equip our armies with a large number of heavy guns and shells.

"We need 800,000 skilled men. There is only one way to get them—taking skilled men from work which unskilled men and women can do after a week or a fortnight's training.

"If we fail, at the best you prolong the war with its untold tale of misery and loss; at the worst we lose the war with all that defeat portends for the future of democracy.

"All this chaffering about relaxing a rule here and suspending a custom there is out of place in this war. You cannot haggle with an earthquake."

The war fund being raised in the United States by Chinese whose sympathies are with the revolutionists now opposing Yuan Shi Kai is expected soon to reach the $1,000,000 mark, according to an announcement made in San Francisco recently by members of the Chinese Republic Association. The association says that despatches received by it tell of minor engagements, chiefly in the province of Yunnan, between the provisional troops and the forces of the government. The revolutionists are reported to have seized an arsenal and equipped themselves. In provinces farther south, however, Yuan's soldiers are reported to have offered strong opposition and the military leaders of the revolt are said to be awaiting help from the Chinese in America.

A copy of the proclamation issued by the Kaiser to the Serbian people has just been published:

"To my noble and heroic Serbian people—It has been an unfortunate necessity that has put our two nations in conflict, but the fault has not been yours, O heroic Serbians! but rather that of your government which allowed itself to be deceived by its perfidious allies. Do you wish to continue on this disastrous policy, sacrificing yourselves to the Allies who have been your ruin?

"You have been fighting for three years, and your valor has demonstrated that you are worthy of liberty. For that reason we come, not as enemies, but as your friends, for the purpose of reorganizing your national liberty and guaranteeing your rights. We therefore invite the population which have abandoned their national territory to return to their homes, their customs and their labors, and when they have returned they will find that our promises are not false.—Wilhelm."

The Germans have established a provisional government at Nish.

In the first 200 days of its war, down to December 8th, Italy spent only $800,000,000, or a paltry $4,000,000 a day. It is but the small change of the war.

Reuter's correspondent sends some interesting facts with regard to the tremendous task imposed on the Post Office by the soldiers' Christmas letters in and out.

"This Christmas the staff stands at forty-five officers and 1,500 men, temporarily supplemented by about 750 men from home. The normal average mails to be handled run to 4,000 bags of letters and 2,000 bags of parcels, most of the latter of which are 'returns.' This represents about 1,500,000 letters a day, including, of course, a great mass of official correspondence.

"During Christmas week the heaviest daily mail consisted of 18,500 bags of letters and parcels. By a conservative estimate the army postal authorities reckon this to have represented about 3,000,000 letters and 500,000 parcels."

One of the most interesting tendencies observable in London to-day is the altogether engaging good humor with which it is receiving many changes. London is learning to accept with gratitude the service of the lady ticket collector, of the lady lift attendant, and now, of the lady tram conductor. There seems to be arising in public life a kindlier interest, all in the right direction, in the work of other people. If the trolley pole gets off the wire, for instance, and the lady tram conductor struggles with it in vain, more than one deliverer will appear from inside the car to help her. To be sure, it were better, very often, that the matter were left to the driver, who sooner or later appears on the scene, but what the assembled company loses in time, they certainly gain in amusement. Anyway, every one seems cheerier after the incident.

The Under-Secretary for War announced in the House of Commons this week that the total German casualties as published in the Berlin casualty lists total 2,535,768. Of this number, he said, 588,986 were killed. The War Under-Secretary said the German wounded and missing number 1,566,549, while 356,153 men had been taken prisoners. In addition, 24,080 Germans had died from various causes.

MUSIC.

Sounding brass and tinkling cymbal,
He that made me sealed my ears,
And the pomp of gorgeous noises,
Waves of triumph, waves of tears,

Thundered empty round and past me,
Shattered, lost for evermore,
Ancient gold of pride and passion,
Wrecked like treasure on a shore.

But I saw her cheek and forehead
Change, as at a spoken word,
And I saw her head uplifted
Like a lily to the Lord.

Naught is lost, but all transmuted,
Ears are sealed, yet eyes have seen;
Saw her smiles (O soul, be worthy!)
Saw her tears, (O heart, be clean!)

—Gilbert K. Chesterton.

—“Halloa! Are you Bafy's, the butcher?” “Yes.” “Well, this is Mrs. Brown's residence. Will you please send me a large, thick steak by twelve o'clock?” “Well, you just bet your sweet life I will.” “Do you know, sir, to whom you are speaking?” “Sure I do. You're Jenny, Mrs. Brown's cook.” “You are mistaken, young man. You are speaking with Mrs. Brown herself?” “Is that so? Then in that case, madam, we'll call the bet off.”—Tit-Bits.

This Little HUMAN DOCUMENT tells the story of

Gail Borden
EAGLE BRAND
CONDENSED MILK
THE ORIGINAL

Its uniformity enables the mother to determine with accuracy the proper modification desired. Its absolute purity assures her that the baby is getting a thoroughly safe and wholesome food. It keeps well and is easily prepared.

Many mothers cannot nurse their little ones. When this contingency arises the problem is to get the substitute that is best suited to the baby's individual requirements.

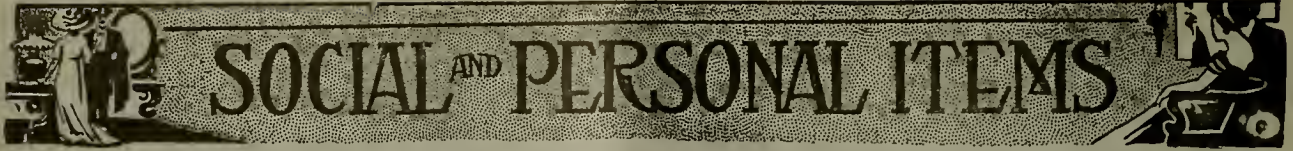

Eagle Brand has been successfully used as an infant food for half a century and the thousands of recorded cases of children who have been carried through the critical period on Eagle Brand have established it as the leading product of its kind.

Borden's Condensed Milk Co. 11-1-16
108 Hudson St., New York

Please send me "Baby's Welfare" also "Baby's Biography" as well as "Borden's Recipes"

Name.....
Address.....

Est. 1857
New York

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL ITEMS

ENGAGEMENTS.

JOHNSON-McCALL.—The engagement of Miss Bernice Elvira Johnston and Richard Percy McCall is announced. Miss Johnston is a daughter of Mrs. C. E. Johnston and the family resides at the Warrin Apartments. Mr. McCall is well known in social and business circles here.

WEDDING ANNOUNCEMENTS.

WILSON-MOORE.—The marriage of Miss Madge Wilson and Dr. Chester Moore will be an event of the last week of March, the exact date not having been determined.

WEDDINGS.

McGREGOR-LUCKENBACH.—The marriage of Miss Kate Isobel McGregor and John Lewis Luckenbach was solemnized at 9 o'clock Wednesday evening at the Pacific avenue home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John A. McGregor, in the presence of about one hundred and fifty friends. Dr. Josiah Sibley, pastor of Calvary Presbyterian Church, officiated. The bride was given in marriage by her father, who returned from a business trip to the East the day before. A supper followed the ceremony. Luckenbach's home is in Brooklyn, where he will take his bride to reside after a honeymoon trip through the South and a stay of several weeks in Florida.

WEDDING ANNIVERSARIES.

DUNCAN.—Mr. and Mrs. William Coppee Duncan celebrated their fourth wedding anniversary with a dinner dance given a week ago Monday evening at their residence at Burlingame.

LUNCHEONS.

BAKER.—Miss Marion Baker's apartment on California street was the setting for a luncheon given Wednesday in honor of Miss Dorothy Baker by her niece, Miss Marion Baker.

BELL.—Mrs. Franklin J. Bell, wife of General Bell, gave a bridge luncheon at her home at Fort Mason on last Saturday.

RENNETT.—Mrs. Frank M. Bennett, wife of Captain Bennett, commandant at Mare Island, was hostess Tuesday at a luncheon, followed by bridge.

BERRY.—Miss Dorothy Berry had some friends in to a little luncheon party at her home Thursday as a bit of gayety for Miss Alice Brune, for whom ever so many affairs are being given just now.

BOARDMAN.—Miss Dorothy Baker will be the complimented guest at a luncheon at which Mrs. Samuel Boardman will be the hostess next Wednesday afternoon.

CAMERON.—A group of friends were guests of Mr. and Mrs. George T. Cameron at luncheon Sunday at Burlingame.

CHAMBERLAIN.—Mr. and Mrs. Willard Chamberlain gave a luncheon at the Burlingame Country Club Sunday in compliment of Miss Gertrude Thomas and Roger Boqueraz, who are to be married on February 23d.

EYRE.—Miss Elena Eyre was hostess at a delightful luncheon party Tuesday, with Miss Alice Brune as the guest of honor.

HATHAWAY.—Three brides-elect, Miss Theresa Harrison, Linda Bryan and Lucille Johns, were the complimented guests at a luncheon over which Miss Marie Hathaway presided Wednesday.

HOTALING.—Mesdames Marion Lord, Max Rothschild, Misses Cornelia O'Connor and Edith Bull, were the guests of Mrs. A. P. Hotaling at a luncheon Tuesday afternoon. The informal gathering took place at the hostess' home on Franklin street, and after luncheon several rubbers of bridge were enjoyed.

LA MONTAGNE.—Mrs. Clinton La Montagne was a luncheon hostess Tuesday afternoon at the Franciscan Club, when Miss Theresa Harrison, the fiancée of Andrew Lawson, was the complimented guest.

LEVENSALER.—Mrs. James Levensaler will give a luncheon party on February 9th, complimentary to Mrs. William Ede, who with Mr. Ede and their children, plan to leave for Honolulu on about the 15th.

McCLERNAND.—Mrs. Edward C. McClernand, wife of General McClernand, U. S. A., was hostess recently at a luncheon given in honor of a number of army matrons.

McGREGOR.—Miss Katie-Bel McGregor was hostess at a luncheon given Monday at the Franciscan Club in compliment to Miss Dorothy Luckenbach, sister of her fiance, John Luckenbach.

MILLER.—Mrs. H. M. A. Miller has issued invitations for a luncheon this afternoon. It will be in compliment to Miss Alice Brune, the fiancée of Alan Van Fleet.

WILLIAMS.—Half a dozen guests enjoyed the hospitality of Mrs. Percy Williams at an informal luncheon Tuesday at her home on Pacific avenue.

DINNERS.

ANDERSON.—Mr. and Mrs. Frank Anderson entertained Wednesday evening at an informal dinner at their apartment on Powell street.

AIKEN.—Dr. and Mrs. George M. Stratton were the honored guests at a dinner which Mrs. Charles Aiken arranged for Tuesday evening at one of the downtown cafes.

BABCOCK.—A group of friends enjoyed the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Babcock at dinner Wednesday evening. Their guests will assemble at the Babcock home on Scott street.

BATES.—Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bates gave a small dinner Monday evening in compliment to Mrs. Lord.

BEALE.—Lieutenant Crafton Beale entertained at a delightful dinner on board the Yorktown recently.

BLISS.—Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bliss gave a dinner party Monday night in honor of Miss Dorothy Baker and Dr. George Willcutt. It was very informal.

BISHOP.—Mr. and Mrs. James Hall Bishop and Miss Marion Lord enjoyed dinner Tuesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles K. Harley on Broadway, the party later viewing the performance at one of the theatres.

COWDIN.—Mr. and Mrs. J. Cheever Cowdin gave a dinner dance on January 27 at the Hotel St. Francis. Mr. and Mrs. Cowdin have been in New York since about Christmas, and they have been heartily welcomed on returning a few days ago.

DOWNNEY.—One of the most enjoyable affairs of last week was the dinner party at which Surgeon J. O. Downey entertained Wednesday evening at Mare Island.

FENNIMORE.—Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Fennimore will be dinner hosts on Monday evening at their residence on Lake street. The pleasurable affair will be in compliment to Miss Dorothy Baker and her fiance, Dr. George Willcutt.

FRIEDLANDER.—Mr. and Mrs. T. Carey Friedlander entertained Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Welch, Miss Augustus Foute and Albert Russell at a dinner party Tuesday night, concluding the evening by informal dancing at the Palace Hotel.

GAYLEY.—Professor and Mrs. Charles Mills Gayley entertained Friday evening at dinner in compliment to their daughter, Miss Mary Gayley, who returned Monday to her home in Berkeley, after an extended trip in the East. Later the party will attend the Berkeley Assembly.

HARLEY.—Mr. and Mrs. Charles K. Harley were hosts at a small dinner party Tuesday night, with a box at one of the theatres afterwards.

HOBART.—Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hobart were hosts Sunday evening at an elaborate dinner which they gave at their home in San Mateo. About a dozen friends enjoyed their hospitality.

KOHL.—Mr. and Mrs. C. Frederick Kohl presided at an informal dinner Sunday evening at "The Oaks," their handsome home at Easton.

LEE.—Mr. and Mrs. Cuyler Lee will be dinner hosts on Friday evening, February 4th.

PILLSBURY.—Mr. and Mrs. Horace Davis Pillsbury, the latter of whom has just returned from the East, will be hosts at dinner on the evening of February 4th.

SHERWOOD.—A coterie of friends have been asked to dine with Mr. and Mrs. William Sherwood on the evening of February 4th, at their residence on Pierce street. After dinner they will attend the benefit for the blind soldiers and sailors of the Allies, that is to be given at the St. Francis Hotel.

WOOD.—Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin Wood gave a dinner Sunday evening at their home in San Mateo.

WELCH.—Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Welch are among those who are planning to entertain at dinner before the Mardi Gras ball on March 7th. They will be hosts to a large party that will later occupy two boxes at the hall.

TEAS.

HULEN.—Mrs. Vard H. Hulen entertained several of her friends at two informal teas last week, one group having assembled Tuesday and the other Thursday afternoon at her home on Broderick street.

RECEPTIONS.

KUCHEL.—Mr. and Mrs. Charles James Kuchel of Oakland entertained at a housewarming reception at their new home at 755 Wardfield avenue, Saturday afternoon. Mrs. Kuchel was formerly Miss Linda Russ of San Francisco.

CARDS.

BROOKS.—Paymaster Jonathan Brooks, U. S. N., and Mrs. Brooks will give a bridge party at their home at Mare Island on the evening of February 2d, in compliment to Mr. E. O. Eyttinge and Mrs. Eyttinge.

CHURCHILL.—Mrs. Wilder Churchill, who is spending the winter in town, was hostess at a card party Monday. The table was done in the new black and white striped style, with freesia flowers.

OTIS.—Miss Frederika Otis gave one of the bridge parties Tuesday in the series that is being given for the Belgian relief fund.

WHEELER.—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stetson Wheeler, Jr., gave an informal bridge party Monday evening at their home.

THE HOTEL PLAZA
overlooking the beautiful Plaza of Union
Square, the Hotel of refinement and service, is offering special rates to permanent guests.
Hotel Plaza Company

PARTIES.

KELLAM. Miss Madge Wilson will be the complimented guest at a supper party at which Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Kellam will preside on the evening of February 6th, at their home on Pacific avenue.

THEATRE PARTIES.

McMULLIN.—Mr. and Mrs. Latham McMullin gave a theatre party Monday night, taking their guests to the Columbia Theatre and supper afterwards, with informal dancing. It was in compliment to Miss Gertrude Thomas and Roger Bocqueraz.

MILLER.—Mr. and Mrs. Cyril Tobin were the inspiration for a theatre and supper party at which Mr. and Mrs. C. O. G. Miller were the hosts Thursday evening.

DANCES.

COWDIN.—Mr. and Mrs. J. Cheever Cowdin asked some fifty or so of their guests Thursday evening at a dinner dance at the Hotel St. Francis.

EYRE.—Robert Eyre invited a coterie of the younger set to a supper dance given Wednesday evening at the Palace Hotel.

HOLMES.—Alfred Holmes will issue invitations shortly for a dinner dance to be given on Monday evening, February 1st. Miss Dorothy Baker and Dr. George Willcutt will be the inspiration for the affair.

JOHNSON.—A coterie of the young friends of Miss Frances Johnson, daughter of Mrs. James Ward, will enjoy her hospitality at a dancing party this evening. It will take place at her home on Buchanan street.

PINCKARD.—Mr. and Mrs. Eyre Monroe Pinckard chaperoned a supper dancing party at the Palace Hotel Wednesday evening, at which Miss Elena Eyre was the hostess.

SAN MATEO POLO CLUB.—Announcement cards were sent out a couple of days ago, stating that there would be a subscription dance at the San Mateo Polo Club to-night.

ARRIVALS.

DE PUE.—Mrs. Edgar J. De Pue, who has spent the past two months visiting friends in the East, returned Sunday to her home in Sacramento street.

HARVEY.—J. Fred Harvey of Boston, partner in the firm of Harvey & Wood, which controls a string of a dozen New England hotels, including Bellevue Hotel, Boston, is registered at the Fairmont with Mrs. Harvey.

EVANS.—Miss Evelyn Evans, who has been visiting relatives in New York for the last three months, returned to San Francisco to-day.

HARRISON.—Mrs. Eugenie Crystal Harrison has returned from Cleveland, where she has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Charles Hickox for the past five months. Mrs. Harrison is settled at the Alta Casa, where she has taken an apartment for the winter.

HILL.—A cordial welcome is being extended to Mrs. Horace L. Hill, who arrived Sunday from New York, and is at the Hotel Oakland.

PILLSBURY.—Mrs. Horace D. Pillsbury, who has been in Boston for several weeks, arrived home Tuesday morning.

POPE.—Mrs. George A. Pope, who has been in New York since the holidays, returned home on Friday.

THOMPSON.—A cordial welcome is being extended to Colonel Robert M. Thompson, who arrived recently from his home in New York. He is at present visiting Mrs. George W. Gibbs at her home on Jackson street.

DEPARTURES.

CANFIELD.—Myron Lehe Canfield has gone to Spokane. He has accepted a position there with a power company and will make the northern city his home.

CHAMBERLIN.—Willard Chamberlin left Tuesday afternoon for the East, where he contemplates spending the next three weeks. He will visit his parents at their home in Boston.

FILER.—Mr. and Mrs. Walter G. Filer have gone East, to be away several weeks.

SMITH.—Mrs. Robert Hayes Smith left for New York Monday, to be away several weeks.

WILLIAMS.—Miss Florence Williams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Abston Williams of Berkeley, left recently for Philadelphia to study art at the Philadelphia Academy.

INTIMATIONS

CARRIGAN.—Mrs. Clarence Carrigan, who left here a few weeks ago to join her husband in London, has arrived safely, according to advices received by her friends here.

DOWNING.—Dr. Samuel P. Downing has been joined by his mother, Mrs. Martha Wallace Downing of Eureka, and together they have taken an apartment at the Chesapeake in Berkeley. They will be established there indefinitely.

DUTTON.—Mrs. Henry Foster Dutton will visit her sister, Mrs. Harry McFarland, in Honolulu, this spring, probably in March.

HAMILTON.—Miss Helen Hamilton has returned to her home in Broadway, after spending the week-end in San Mateo as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Spilvalo.

McLAREN.—Mr. and Mrs. Loyall McLaren, whose marriage was an event of January 15th at Napa, are enjoying their honeymoon at Pel Monte. On their return they will reside in Berkeley.

ROE.—Mr. and Mrs. Hall Roe, whose marriage took place last week, and who spent several days at the Nickel ranch in Southern California, are now en route to Kansas City, where they will make their home for a year or so.

SYPHER.—Mr. and Mrs. Leigh Sypher and Miss Genevieve Bothin will be at San Mateo for the balance of the season, having opened their country place.

TUBBS.—Mr. and Mrs. Chapin Tubbs have come down from their ranch in Napa County, and will spend several days in town as the guests of Mr. Tubbs' mother, Mrs. William B. Tubbs, at her home on Jackson street.

BABY GRAND

The Car of Today

$750 f. o. b. Factory

* Built by W. C. DURANT, the pioneer manufacturer on the accepted advanced design of the Valve-in-the-Head Motor—which he has used for the last ten years.

THE CHEVROLET is a car which cannot be judged by the price you pay for it—gives more for every dollar than any other car built.

It has POWER equal to every demand.

It has COMFORT unequalled by any car selling in the same class.

It has EFFICIENCY that produces low cost of operation expense and upkeep.

OTHER MODELS:

"FOUR-NINETY" TOURING CAR.....	$650
CHEVROLET MONROE ROADSTER	$625
BABY GRAND TOURING CAR	$665
ROYAL MAIL ROADSTER	$865

F. O. B. San Francisco

All equipped with electric lights and starter

We not only announce this model, but we are ready to SHOW IT—DEMONSTRATE IT—DELIVER IT NOW

Coupon service book goes with every Chevrolet car sold by us. Good at all Chevrolet service stations on the Pacific Coast.

Mathewson Motor Company

Local Distributors

SAN FRANCISCO—
1600 Van Ness Avenue
Prospect 720

OAKLAND
2412 Broadway,
Lakeside 157

CHEVROLET MOTOR CO.

OF CALIFORNIA

NORMAN DE VAUX

President and General Manager

PACIFIC COAST DISTRIBUTORS

"Making the Man."

Few men are better qualified than William Greer Harrison to write a book on athletics, and describe through experience and observation the prime healthful results on the human body. All his life of 60 years Mr. Harrison has been imbued with practical views regarding the development and enjoyment of a healthy body for the soul's habitation. His views on this subject he has set forth in a handy, compact little volume, which he aptly styles, "Making the Man: A Manual of Excellence." The exercises laid out by Mr. Harrison are so simple that a hint should set every reader to practicing them. The long experience in this line of physical development by the author has enabled him to cover the field in a way that will be the most natural and helpful to the reader. Every man who wants to be a hale and sane man should read this book and practice the wise lessons set forth. Price, $1.25. Published by H. S. Crocker Co., 565 Market street, San Francisco.

* * *

"Memories of India."

Sir Robert Baden-Powell, hero of Mafeking and founder of the boy scouts, spent many years in India, and he presents a breezy and informal account of soldiering and hunting experiences in that land. Readers of this book will soon learn that Sir Robert is a keen wit. In his youth he was constantly playing pranks on his comrades, but he knew how to take a joke even when it was against himself, and he relates several instances in which he was the victim. Much of the material for the book is taken from letters which the author wrote to his mother with no thought of publication, and while there is no account of the incidents in Sir Robert's career that made him famous, yet he presents a wonderfully graphic picture of army life in India. The author reveals himself as a man with a big heart, a wholesome love of fun and a capacity for hard work. The book is profusely illustrated with sketches made by Sir Robert himself, for he is an artist of no mean ability. Most of them were made right on the spot for the benefit of his mother, whom he seems to have kept particularly well informed about his experiences.

Price, $3.50 net. Published by McKay.

* * *

"The Stranger's Wedding."

In several of his novels, W. L. George, the English novelist, reveals an inclination to dwell on disorganizing elements of contemporary society. The theme in "The Stranger's Wedding" is a highly uncongenial marriage between a man of the upper and a woman of the lower class of English society. If this is accepted merely as a particular case, no charge can properly lie against the course he pursues, because this case is governed solely by an arbitrary set of circumstances. But the thesis cannot be demonstrated by such means, for it is very obvious that Mr. George's aim is to generalize his conclusion.

Mr. George's thesis is specially unconvincing because of the excellent mental and attractive physical characteristics of his principals. Although Sarah Groby is the daughter of a Cockney washerwoman, she is not destitute of a measure of education, is of striking beauty and possesses other fine personal qualities that make her superior to the average of her class. The other participant in the romance is Roger Huncote, an aristocratic young settlement worker in a poor quarter of London. He does not go unwarned that marriage with an "inferior" courts disillusion.

Price, $1.35 net. Published by Little-Brown.

* * *

"Master Skylark."

Appropos of the large number of Shakespeare Tercentenary celebrations already planned for next year, The Century Company announces the early publication of "Master Skylark," a five-act dramatization of John Bennett's novel of the same name. The play, it is said, opens in Stratford-on-Avon, show-

Los Angeles Pasadena Oakland

Fred Hartsook

PHOTOGRAPHS
41 GRANT AVENUE

San Jose Sacramento San Francisco

STYLE AND FIT

Are a man's first consideration when he is about to buy a suit. Price is the next. We have studied both very closely and we are prepared to make a first-class stylish suit to order at cash prices, on installments, weekly or monthly.

C. H. NEUHAUS, Merchant Tailor
787 MARKET STREET, Upstairs

The New Poodle Dog

Hotel and Restaurant

At Corner
Polk and Post
STREETS
San Francisco

Phone:
Franklin 2960

San Francisco's Leading French Restaurant
MUSIC

French Dinner Every Evening, 75 Cents
Sunday, $1.00

NEW DELMONICO'S
362 Geary Street

Above Hotel St. Francis Telephone Sutter 1572

BLANCO'S O'Farrell and Larkin Streets

PHONE FRANKLIN 9

No visitor should leave the city without seeing the finest cafe in America

J. B. Poon J. Berges C. Mailhebau C. Lalanne L. Coutard

BERGEZ-FRANK'S
Old POODLE DOG Co.
HOTEL AND RESTAURANT
MUSIC AND ENTERTAINMENT EVERY EVENING

415-421 Bush St., San Francisco (Above Kearny) Exchange, Douglas 2411

Tel. Kearny 1461 Private Exchange Connecting all Warehouses

SAN FRANCISCO WAREHOUSE CO.

Warehousemen Forwarding Agents Distributors Public Weighers
Spur Track Connection with all Railroads
Main Office—625-647 Third St., San Francisco, Cal.

ing Nick Atwood, a youthful cousin of Shakespeare's, dissatisfied with the monotony of his home life. Then comes a company of strolling players, who kidnap the boy because of his voice. After a number of adventures along the English countryside, Nick reaches London, and becomes a famous choir-singer. While there he meets his kinsman, William Shakespeare, who brings about a reunion of Nick Atwood and his Stratford relatives.

* * *

"Making Money."

Owen Johnson's new novel, "Making Money," is a stirring romance of love and money, with a more universal appeal and wider interest than any of the author's previous work. The background of the story is laid in the glamour of the great city, the smart society of New York and the money-mad rush of Wall street at the time when everything was booming.

Many will feel that "Patsie," the heroine, a wholesome, mischievous, delightful young person, almost puts into the shade the hero and his friends who are making spectacular plays at the Wall street game.

Cloth, 12mo., $1.35 net. Published by Frederick A. Stokes Company, New York.

* * *

New Harper Publications.

Harper & Brothers announce that they will publish within the next few days "Over the Front in an Aeroplane," by Ralph Pulitzer. It is the first book on the war from the Harper press. This is an account of a flight in a French army aeroplane from Paris to the front and back again—Mr. Pulitzer being the only civilian to whom such a privilege has ever been granted. In addition, he recounts his experiences and impressions during other trips by train and motor to the fighting lines in Northern France and Belgium.

SPRING IN THE SEMI-TROPICS.

The tossing tops of the palms are loud with a wind from the Spanish Main
That strums the harp of the sunlit beach to a sounding old refrain:
Oh, clear and blue as a maiden's eyes the clean sea-spaces lie,
Till my heart is off with the wheeling gulls that jest with the lonely sky—
Off to the rim of the ocean-world, to my lost sea-love again,
Whose hair is spun of the windy scud and whose robe is the summer rain.

Over the rim of the world of men I know that my love is true—
Who is naught of flesh, who is naught of blood, but born of the windy blue;
Her name we stammer with halting tongues—we hearts that have heard her call
Through the din of a hundred smoky towns, and found her the best of all!
Oh, we name her Spring, or Dawn-on-the-Sea, or Rapture-that-once-we-knew.
But the gray gull knows that the names are one when it comes to the tribute due.
So it's off, my heart, to the rim of the world, to your lost sea-love again.
Whose hair is spun of the windy scud and whose robe is the summer rain!

—Kenneth Rand.

VISIT CAPITOL CITY of your STATE
A Day's Trip—Well Spent

Visit beautiful Capitol Grounds—Capitol Building—Sutter's Fort—Crocker Art Gallery—Riverside Drive, etc.
$3.35 Round Trip Saturdays and Sundays, with return limit Monday.

OAKLAND, ANTIOCH & EASTERN RAILWAY

To CHICAGO, KANSAS CITY and ST. LOUIS

2 Daily Trains

via

Los Angeles, Tucson and El Paso

"Golden State Limited"

Through Standard and Tourist Pullman cars from San Francisco, Ferry Station, 6:00 p. m. and 10:40 a. m., respectively.

"The Californian"

Standard Pullman and Tourist car connection to Kansas City, from San Francisco, Ferry Station, 9:00 p. m.

BEST DINING CAR IN AMERICA

For Tickets and Berths Ask Agents of

Southern Pacific

Palace Hotel
Flood Building

Third St. Station
Ferry Station

El Paso & Southwestern
Rock Island Lines

691 Market Street

NEW PARISIAN FRENCH LAUNDRY

Mme. C. La FON

First Class Work at Reasonable Prices

Laces and Lace Curtains a Specialty

Club, Restaurant and Hotel Service

991 OAK STREET
SAN FRANCISCO

Phone Park 4962

BRUSHES 623 Sacramento Street, between Kearny and Montgomery Streets.

With full line of brushes, Brooms and Feather Dusters, on hand and made to order. Janitor supplies of all kinds. Ladders, Buckets, Chamols, Metal Polish and Cleaning Powders. Hardware, Wood and Willow Ware.

Call, write or telephone Keary 5787

WM. BUCHANAN

NOTICE OF ASSESSMENT.

Natural Soda Products Company.

Location of principal place of business, San Francisco, California. Location of works, Keeler Inyo County, California.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that at a meeting of the directors, held on the 29th day of December, 1915, an assessment (No. 2) of One Dollar per share was levied upon the capital stock of the corporation, payable immediately to M. Q. WATTERSON, Treasurer, at Inyo County Bank, Bishop, California.

Any stock upon which this assessment shall remain unpaid on Monday, the 14th day of February 1916, will be delinquent and advertised for sale at public auction, and, unless payment is made before, will be sold on Monday, the 6th day of March 1916 at 12 o'clock noon, to pay the delinquent assessment, together with costs of advertising and expenses of sale.

NOAH WRINKLE, Secretary

Office—No. 613 Market street, San Francisco, California.

ANNUAL MEETING.

Joshua Hendy Iron Works.

The regular Annual Meeting of the Stockholders of the Joshua Hendy Iron Works will be held at the office of the Corporation, No. 75 Fremont street, San Francisco, California, on Tuesday, the 6th day of February 1916 at the hour of 10 o'clock a. m. for the purpose of electing a Board of Directors to serve for the ensuing year and the transaction of such other business as may come before the meeting.

CHAS. C. GARDNER, Secretary

Office—75 Fremont street, San Francisco, Cal.

LIBRARY TABLE

"California as a Health Resort."

Many books have been published on California, but none have proved so engrossing as this volume of F. C. S. Sanders, M. D., a graduate of Cambridge University. The explanation of the author's success is probably due to the fact that preliminary to his visit here he lived for several years in Asia, where the climate conditions sap the constitution of the Caucasian. He was quitting the service as an expired surgeon aboard ship and preparing to return to England via the Suez route when, by a happy chance, he was asked to take charge of three invalids bound for England via the Pacific Ocean and the United States in order that his charges might avoid the intense heat of the tropics. That change in the itinerary luckily brought Dr. Sanders to California. One of his patients developed a complication, and on the advice of friends here the doctor took the invalid to a mineral spring well known for certain curative properties. Right here the doctor began to glimpse some of the physical wonders of California. He was specially familiar with the spas and watering places of Europe, and had spent much time and inquiry to discover the virtues of curative springs being developed in other parts of the world. It was this enthusiastic curiosity regarding mineral waters that awoke in him the possibilities of California in this field. The more springs he visited here the more enthusiastic he became. And impelled by this enthusiasm he wrote the present book, "California as a Health Resort," detailing his discoveries and what they meant to him as an expert of mineral spring waters. "An undeveloped asset of California," he pronounces them, "and their prime virtues are not yet adequately recognized." Being a great traveler he was keenly alive to the romantic history of the State, its physical wonders, wide variety of industries and the original methods adopted here to meet typographical requirements.

The result is a volume of 300 pages of painstaking research, admirably text, discriminatingly arranged and beautifully illustrated with the most attractive scenic features of California—encyclopedic in its information. Coming as the author does from the outside world, and being cosmopolitan in a measure, he has handled his subject from a large and independent viewpoint. This is obvious to any ordinary reader. The volume is so arranged that the reader slips from one section of the State to the next till all have been passed, and thus in orderly fashion he gathers complete information on the way. Dr. Sanders' pithy and direct style shows none of the flowing word painting so successfully employed by that great Captain of Romance, Sir Walter Scott, from whom he is descended. Back of the accuracy, comprehensiveness and experience in estimating California as a health resort is the substantial knowledge the author acquired as a graduate in honors at Cambridge University, Oxford, the responsible positions he held in the St. George and Westminster Hospitals, London, and the practical experiments he made of the mineral waters of other lands. All this experience has enabled him to present to the reader, succinctly, clearly and completely, the history, climate, missions, industries, places of interest, educational advantages and mineral springs of the State, a vade mecum of the most interesting features of California.

Price, $2 postpaid. Edition de Luxe, $4. Published by Bolte & Braden Company, San Francisco, Cal.

* * *

The War and the Christian.

A book of religious import which contributes much that is of value on the attitude of the Christian to military preparedness is John Walker Powell's "What Is a Christian?" One of Dr. Powell's chapters deals with the Christian and the war. His discussion of this problem is along three lines: First, "Can a Christian consistently engage in war even in obedience to his country's demand?" Second, "Can war be defended in any respect as a means of settling international disputes without coming into direct conflict with the spirit and teaching of Jesus?" And third, "Can war be abolished?" On each of these subjects Dr. Powell has much to say that is pertinent and of very general interest.

Published by the Macmillan Company, New York.

A Beautiful Gift Book

California as a Health Resort

Its History, Climate, Missions, Industries, Places of Interest, Educational Advantages, and Mineral Springs.

Told In A New Way

300 Pages

80 Full Page Pictures

Publishers: Bolte & Braden Co.

San Francisco

Price Two Dollars

A REMARKABLE PROPHECY.

Many people with a gift for looking ahead foresaw the present European war. It didn't require extraordinary acumen to predict the great crash after the rise of the Triple Entente as a counterweight to the Triple Alliance. But a remarkable capacity for divination must be conceded to the prophet who 'way back in 1882 could set "1910 or thereabouts" as the date for a clash between Great Britain and Germany on the issue of world supremacy.

It was an extraordinary man who made this extraordinary prediction—Charles George Gordon ("Chinese Gordon"), an undoubted genius and one of the most picturesque and heroic figures in British military history. A letter by Gordon to Mr. James R. Purdy, dated 1882, has recently been published in the Morning Post of London, from which the following is an extract:

"Every Briton should think of the future of his country and cause each one to insist on the government passing a measure of compulsory universal military training. So far as England is concerned, she need not, for the next quarter of a century, be under any apprehension of serious difficulties arising with any of her European neighbors, but in 1910 or thereabouts there will have arisen a naval power which may prove mightier than she, and should she (Germany) gain the supremacy, England will become extinct both as a sea and a land power, and all her dependencies, including India, will fall into Germany's clutches. You may live to see this. I shall not, but when that time comes remember my words."

In 1882 Germany was not a sea power, had no colonies, and had not been bitten by imperialistic ambitions. Bismarck was encouraging France to occupy more African territory and to dispute priority in that region with Great Britain. But Gordon looked far beyond the superficial friction of the hour between Great Britain and France, and had a true vision of Germany's role as the ultimate challenger of Britain's sea power and over-sea pretensions. Gordon was part soldier, part statesman, part mystic. It has been granted to few humans to have his immense range of experience or to read the future as clearly as he did.

—The Southern Club have given up their headquarters on California street hill, and have moved to the Plaza Hotel, where twelve large and commodious rooms on the second floor facing Stockton street have been arranged for them. The move is a happy one, for the Plaza Hotel is most conveniently situated in the shopping and business district. One advantage the club will have is that the members, when they desire to entertain guests for luncheon and dinner, can do so, getting the best that is to be had in the city for half what it would cost to support their own cuisine.

—James Woods, manager of the St. Francis Hotel, and John Tait left for the East last Monday. The ice skating fad has become so popular at many of the hotels in Eastern cities that their trip is to find where it could be made available for themselves.

—Cecil J. Travers, for three years chief clerk at the Bellevue Hotel, was promoted this week to the position of assistant manager at that hotel. He entered on his new duties Wednesday, when W. H. Wills, manager of the Bellevue, left for a visit to Southern California. Travers was formerly connected with the Westminster Hotel of Spokane.

INSURANCE

Following are the Home Fire Insurance Company's 1915 figures for the Pacific States, including Colorado:

	Premiums	Losses Incurred	Losses Paid
Alaska	$ 9,646.13	7,202.27	3,802.27
Arizona	47,067.26	58,136.99	60,443.17
British Columbia.....	82,168.54	18,926.68	33,295.82
California	985,218.47	426,059.38	426,481.43
Colorado	174,144.05	140,676.85	134,156.28
Idaho	84,787.04	37,664.37	36,822.68
Hawaii	18,871.98
Montana	183,980.85	82,225.98	78,684.83
Nevada	18,895.29	11,348.62	7,937.33
New Mexico	24,469.93	10,997.60	13,089.48
Oregon	131,406.60	73,157.97	73,185.58
Utah	57,721.34	17,694.85	36,068.28
Washington	209,465.31	108,576.92	104,021.32
Wyoming	22,769.10	20,999.76	20,245.11
	$2,040,411.80	$1,013,668.24	$1,028,233.58

Edmond F. Green and Marshall A. Frank, formerly president and vice-president of the Pacific Coast Casualty Co., have been made defendants in a suit filed in the Superior Court, January 18th, to recover $105,000 which they are alleged to have secured from a sale of the company's stock to George W. Turner, Cutler Paige, Thomas L. Miller and Kirkham Wright. The complaint alleges that on January 20, 1913, Frank and Green induced the plaintiffs to purchase 15,000 shares of Pacific Coast Casualty stock at $150 a share. In order to do this, it is alleged, they produced a false statement of the company's condition. They now allege the stock was not worth more than $80 a share, and sue for the difference between its real and purported value.

United States District Judge Dooley has directed the trustees of the bankrupt Grand Lodge of California, Ancient Order United Workmen, to appear in court Saturday and show cause why the decree adjudging the order bankrupt should not be set aside. That Messrs. Gregory and Braden and President A. McGill of the American Life and Accident Co. of Portland, and Secretary Madge of that corporation, were in a conspiracy in juggling eighty thousand of the assets of the company, is alleged in the complaint of several persons who are suing for the return of this amount of securities to the receiver of the defunct concern. Details of a transaction by which a certificate representing stock traded for eighty thousand dollars of assets came back into the hands of the sellers of the stock for a consideration supposedly less than ten thousand dollars in the final taking of depositions in the suit of stockholders against the Union Pacific Life this week.

At the annual meeting of the Pacific Coast Casualty Co. stockholders, a resolution was adopted reducing the number of directors from 11 to 7. The directors for the ensuing year are: Frank P. Deering, W. P. Johnson, Allen I. Kittle, Thos. L. Miller, Geo. W. Turner and Kirkham Wright. At the directors' meeting, Thomas L. Miller was elected president; Kirkham Wright, vice-president; Allen I. Kittle, secretary; W. R. Rice, and Charles T. Culling, assistant secretaries.

A museum, said to be the largest of its character this side of New York, designed to show the most modern ways of preventing accidents, has been installed in show rooms on the ground floor of the Royal Insurance Building, San Francisco, by the State Industrial Accident Bureau, and will be opened at all times for public inspection.

Major-General Franklin Bell, in command of the Western Division, has approved of a system of fire protection, outlined by Fire Chief Murphy, of the San Francisco department, for the Presidio Military Reservation, and recommendations have been forwarded to the War Department at Washington. The plans embrace a modern equipment of fire fighting apparatus, including the installation of cisterns and fire alarm boxes.

William J. Wynn has been nominated as a member of the executive committee of the San Francisco Brokers' Exchange, to succeed E. M. Jones, whose term expires on March 2d, and E. M. Jones has been selected as a member of the arbitration committee to succeed B. L. Davis, whose term expires on the same date.

Efforts are being made by the Fire Commissioners to have the San Francisco fire limits extended to take in a considerable part of the section lying between Front and Folsom streets and the bay.

After a city-wide survey of the fire hazard in the San Francisco public schools the battalion chiefs of the fire department recommend the immediate expenditure of at least fifty thousand dollars in making safety improvements embracing such features as fire escapes, fire alarms, additional stairways and walls.

Manager Leisander has returned from Oregon, without having named a successor to J. M. Kuhn, who recently resigned the Portland office of the company to go with the Columbia Life and Trust.

Guy C. Macdonald, who was connected with the Daily Field staff, has been appointed assistant secretary and treasurer of the Insurance Federation of California.

Marsh & McLellan have formally applied for membership in the San Francisco Insurance Brokers' Exchange, and the opinion of leading members is that the firm will be admitted at the expiration of the usual thirty days' period.

J. H. Clinkscales, an old time independent adjuster and special agent on the Coast, died at his home in San Diego this week.

A. Hall McAllister has resigned his connection with the California Inspection Rating Bureau to go with the insurance department of the Hawaiian Trust Company of Honolulu.

SECURITY AND SERVICE

That's What You Get When You

Bond Your Employees

With

Pacific Coast Casualty Company

Of San Francisco, Cal.

A California Insurance Company

$250,000.00 on Deposit with State Treasurer as a Guarantee to Policy Holders
Agents in Every California City

1863

1915

FIFTY-SECOND ANNIVERSARY

Fireman's Fund Insurance Co.

Capital $1,500,000

Assets, $10,000,000

FIRE

MARINE

AUTOMOBILE

California and Sansome Streets, San Francisco, California.

The Connecticut Fire Ins. Co.

OF HARTFORD

CHARTERED 1850

PACIFIC DEPARTMENT

The Insurance Exchange, San Francisco

Benjamin J. Smith, Manager

The Home Insurance Company

Organized 1853

Cash Capital $6,000,000

Insurance on personal effects of tourists and temporary sojourners anywhere in United States, Canada and Mexico. Insurance against loss by fire. Automobile insurance. Liability for loss from fire. The H. L. ROFF, General Agent. J. J. SHEAHAN, Assistant General Agent

333 California Street

MISS HARKER'S SCHOOL
 PALO ALTO, CALIFORNIA
*Boarding and Day School for Girls,
 College Preparatory,
 Grammar and Primary Departments.
 Special Care Given to Younger Children.*
Spring Term Opens January 3, 1916

HITCHCOCK MILITARY ACADEMY
 THIRTY-EIGHTH YEAR
 Located one mile from San Rafael in the healthiest part of beautiful Marin County. School fully accredited. Highest rank accorded by U. S. War Dept. High morals and strict attention demanded. Special attention to Physical Culture and Athletics. Expert and experienced instructors. Separate room for each pupil. Juniors in separate building. Thirty-eighth year begins in August. Write for catalog.
 ADDRESS
President Hitchcock Military Academy
 SAN RAFAEL, CALIFORNIA

The Beringer Conservatory of Music
 926 Pierce Street, near McAllister
 PHONE FILLMORE 840 SAN FRANCISCO
 Directors: Joseph Beringer (Concert Pianist)
 Mme. Jos. Beringer (Concert Contralto)
 Thorough education in Pianoforte Playing and Singing. Special departments for beginners, amateurs and professionals. Pupils prepared for the operatic and concert stage. Opportunities given to advanced piano and vocal students to join the well known Beringer Musical Club for public appearances.

ARRILLAGA MUSICAL COLLEGE
 SAN FRANCISCO
 MUSIC IN ALL ITS BRANCHES
 Sight Reading, Ear Training, Theory,
 Musical Form, Appreciation
 TERMS ON REQUEST-CATALOG
 2315 JACKSON STREET PHONE WEST 4737

MISS HAMLIN'S SCHOOL FOR GIRLS
 2230 PACIFIC AVENUE
 2117 } BROADWAY SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
 2123 }
 Boarding and Day Pupils. "Accredited" by all accrediting institutions, both in California and in Eastern States.
 TELEPHONE WEST 546

California Conservatory of Music
 Offers Instructions and Training in All Branches of MUSIC, ELOCUTION, DRAMATIC ART, DANCING
 Private Lessons in All Branches to Suit the Convenience of the Pupil
Studios and Recital Hall
 1509 Gough Street, near Sutter San Francisco, Cal.
 Oakland Branch---Pacific Building---16th and Jefferson Streets

A. W. BEST ALICE BEST
BEST'S ART SCHOOL
 1625 CALIFORNIA STREET
 Life Classes Day and Night
 Illustrating Sketching Painting

FASHION'S FADS AND FRILLS

Comfort and convenience—these are the two qualifications attributed to sport clothes since the first woman dared don a skirt short enough to uncover the tip of her boot. Would these same sport clothes be quite so generally favored, think you, if these were the only words with which to commend them? If there were not something particularly youthful and becoming in the chic severity of these same sport togs, their sale would be quite limited, I am sure.

Wool Jersey for Suits and Frocks.

One of the most attractive of the new materials for suits and dresses is the latest phase of Jersey cloth. It is being used for the dressier frocks and the semi-tailleurs, for afternoon wear, indoor skating, tea, dancing, calling and like purposes, as well as for the regulation sport suit. It comes in all the new shades, blue, green, brown and the various other tones now modish. Often on the more trimmed of these Jersey costumes there is a touch of taffeta or a bit of braid. These suits are fashioned after the belted Russian models, the smart flared coats and skirt, and for the strictly correct sport suit along the Norfolk lines combined with an equally severe skirt.

The New Cape Appears.

Among the new features which, of course, are but a revival of the old, is the cape. This appears upon all types of frocks and suits in the form of the shoulder cape, sleeve cape, and cape collar. The full-skirted, simple-bodied frock of taffeta, worn at an afternoon tea, the skating rink, or the concert, displays its cape collar, or series of collars, when it is not featuring a Puritan-like shoulder drapery, crossing surplice-fashion in front, and held in place in back by a girdle, from below which tiny coat tails or tabs appear. There is some indication, too, of the cape returning as a separate wrap; in fact, pelerines of quaintly quilled taffeta are being shown to wear over light summer frocks and are now being worn in the south. Many of these display the unfitted, rather bunched-looking collar which accentuates the slope of the shoulders, thereby living up to one of the chief requirements of the present modes. Many circular and Directoire capes matching the hat are among the season's attractive fancies.

Alarming Width of Skirts.

Paris is reported as practically losing her head over the width of the skirt. She gave out the pleasing dictum of—"a trifle more length," just a while ago, and proceeded straightway to offset it by adding to their breadth. Many of the new skirts on Paris models, it is said, are gathering material in about the waist with no regard whatever to the figure beneath, in fact a woman wearing such a skirt or frock has much the appearance of an animated barrel or something equally ungraceful. The medium skirts with just a bit of fullness about the waist, combined with the simple, quaint bodices now smart, are dainty and becoming,

The Cape Dress

—“Oh, no,” soliloquized Johnny bitterly; “there ain’t any favorites in this family! Oh, no! If I bite my finger nails I get a rap over the knuckles, but if the baby eats his whole foot they think it’s cute.”—Ladies’ Home Journal.

suggestive of the grace of the figure beneath, as they are. The new models so reminiscent of the days of 1830 and 1850, are full of charm if extremes are not indulged in.

Batiste Collars on Tailored Suits.

Collar and cuff sets of organdy, batiste, linen and other like fabrics, are to be worn for spring with dark tailored suits and dresses. They serve to brighten the costume, and add a fresh touch which is dainty and grateful to the wearer. Colored sets, in Russian embroidery, are particularly pretty. Neckwear in general is simple and plain.

Combination of Sheer and Heavy Fabrics.

The popularity of using a sheer fabric and one somewhat heavier in the same frock or blouse, is a notion that is attractive and economical. Crepe Georgette combines well with crepe de Chine, taffeta, or faille in blouse and frock. Serge and satin or taffeta, broadcloth and satin or taffeta, are favored combina-

Zouave Faille Suit

© McCall

tions for the street dress, the touch of silk or satin in the same, or a contrasting shade, adding much to the beauty and the becomingness of the model. A simple serge frock gains much by the addition of a tiny turnover cuff, or a small collar of satin. Often the entire upper section of the skirt or bodice in the more dressy gown is entirely of taffeta or satin, while the lower section is of serge, broadcloth or gabardine. Among the new materials for these simple dresses and suits, even for the more dressy models, one sees wool poplin and similar lightweight weaves.

—“Evidently that young man I met at your party does not know who I am,” remarked Mr. Cumrox to his wife. “What makes you think so?” “If he appreciated the extent of my financial influence he would have laughed at my jokes instead of my grammar.”—Washington Star.

TRAVEL EAST IN LUXURY.

Sunset Limited to New Orleans through balmy skies. Thence through historic scenes of days of war, now alive with southern life and industry. The Sunset Limited and its connection at New Orleans with the New York and New Orleans Limited makes an ideal winter trip East. Service the best. Stop-over at points of much interest. For booklets and information apply Washington Sunset Route, 874 Market St., San Francisco, Cal.

Wedding Presents.—The choicest variety to select from at Marsh’s, who is now permanently located at Post and Powell streets.

Dr. Byron Haines, Dentist, has resumed practice at his office in Gunst Building, S. W. corner Geary and Powell streets.

Phone Kearny 2842
Cosgrove’s Hair Store
 Established 20 Years
 239 Powell Street
 San Francisco

Hotel del Coronado

Coronado Beach, California
 American Plan

Polo January 1 to March 20
 Annual Polo Tournament March 1 to 20
 Bay and Surf Bathing
 Boating Deep Sea Fishing Tennis
 Motoring
 18 Hole Golf Course

Write for Booklet

John J. Hernan :- Manager

TYPICAL OF CALIFORNIA

PALACE HOTEL

Since 1875 the Historic Hotel of San Francisco
 NEW MANAGEMENT NEW POLICY
 European Plan Only. Rates from $2 per day upward.
FAIRMONT HOTEL
 The Most Superbly Situated Hotel in the World.
 Under Same Management.

Hotel St. Francis Announces the
Club Room Special
A Busy Man’s Luncheon

Beginning January 10, 1916
 50 Cents
 Service From 11:30 to 2:00

HOTEL OAKLAND

OAKLAND, CALIFORNIA
 Overlooking Lake Merritt and the Mountains
 Ministering generously to the epicure, the artist, and the lover of a beautiful natural environment.
 European Plan From $1.00 a day up American Plan From $1.50 a day up
 Extraordinarily low rates to permanent guests
 CARL SWORD, Manager

BIG IMPROVEMENT IN LOCAL INDUSTRIES.

That San Francisco is on the verge of a big business boom is indicated by two unusually important announcements this week: President McGregor of the Union Iron Works, speaking for President Schwab of the Bethlehem Steel Company, says that the Union Iron Works will be largely expanded immediately in order to handle the great press of new orders which the company is now facing. The Pacific Coast Steel Company has issued notice that its pioneer structural plant in South San Francisco is to be greatly enlarged to smelt Chinese pigiron by the use of California petroleum. The Union Iron Works already has contracts covering $20,000,000 for new work, and more contracts are in sight. Even if the war stops sooner than is expected, there is a wide field for the company in building new vessels which are in crying demand just now. All the shipping yards of the country are working to capacity.

GENERAL CONDITIONS.

Business is still showing remarkable expansion in the United States, Canada, Argentina, Chile and Japan. Improvement of less degree is experienced by China, Australia, Mexico and some of the neutral countries of Europe. Probably more improvement has taken place in England than in any of the other belligerent countries, but money rates are high and stock market prices for the most part are low. There is little betterment in France, but the success of the recent French loan has had a good effect on sentiment. Monetary conditions in Russia, Germany, Italy and Austria-Hungary are reported to be very much strained and business depressed.

Industrial activity throughout the United States is increasing rapidly. Steel mill capacity is being expanded to take care of the enormous amount of new business that is offered. The United States Steel Corporation this week reported unfilled orders on its books amounting to 7,806,220 tons, an increase of 616,733 tons over the last previous monthly report. A glance at the clearing house figures shows how general is the improvement throughout the entire United States. Whereas a few months ago the railroads were complaining of a lack of business, they are now confronted with the most serious problem as to relieving freight congestion on the sidings and at the terminals. Gross earnings of the roads are mounting high, and if traffic could be handled more efficiently net returns would increase proportionately. As it is, both net and gross earnings, in many instances, are making new high records. Notwithstanding the great activity in commercial and industrial lines, money continues increasingly abundant. This is due to the heavy volume of exports as compared with imports, and also to the fact that the new federal banking law released many millions that formerly were held by banks in reserve.

—From New York advices it seems to be generally recognized that the January interest and dividend disbursements have had less effect upon the stock and investment markets this year than for many years. Whether this may be attributed to the rising cost of living or to a lack of interest in the financial markets is a matter on which there is difference of opinion; but it is safe to say that both influences have been present to a more or less extent. Whatever may be the cause, the customary "January rise" has not yet materialized, and the average price of the "statistical" stocks has declined since the middle of December.

—Goldfield Con. confirms the report that the new oil flotation plant will have a capacity of 50 tons per day instead of 30. Work on the plant will soon begin. Improvements in ore bodies are reported from Atlanta, Jumbo Ex., and Goldfield Con. Kewanas is actively exploring and work is being pressed in Black Butte, Spearhead, Great Bend and Florence.

—Big stimulus was given to the optimism in business this week by U. S. Steel declaring the resumption of a 5 per cent dividend on the half billion dollar common stock. A bonus of $6,353,781 was distributed. The earnings of the company for the last quarter of the year were reported to be the largest during the past fifteen years of the company, $51,232,788. The highest previous quarter was the second quarter of 1907, when the earnings were $45,503,705.

WHY ADVERTISING PAYS.

"What kind of eggs do you eat?"

"Hens' eggs, of course."

"Why?"

"Well, simply because——"

"What do you know against the duck? Nothing. Still, you don't eat duck eggs. Why? The duck lays an egg and says nothing about it. The hen lays an egg and makes a racket that disturbs the whole barnyard. It's advertising, and it pays. Let the people know what you have. Advertising puts cities on the map. It puts bread in your stomach and garters on your legs."

And so on ad infinitum. This is a free advertisement of the newest and best farce of the season, "It Pays to Advertise," now running at the Columbia Theatre, to give the weight of added testimony to its philosophy. Roi Cooper Megrue and Walter Hackett's comedy of business, with long runs in New York and Chicago to its credit, and solid fun capacities still more to its credit, is having its first showing here, and every one who sees it is still chuckling over its merriment.

E. F. HUTTON & CO. BANKERS

Members—New York Stock Exchange; New York Cotton Exchange, New York Coffee Exchange; New Orleans Cotton Exchange; Liverpool Cotton Association; Chicago Board of Trade.

Private Wire—New York, Chicago to San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Branch Offices—San Francisco, 120 California St., and Hotel St. Francis; Los Angeles, 118 Fourth Street, I. W. Hellman Building.

PIONEER HOUSE OF THE PACIFIC COAST

SHELL COMPANY

OF CALIFORNIA, INC.

Marketers

SHELL GASOLINE

SHELL LUBRICANTS

SHELL DISTILLATES

SHELL KEROSENES

SHELL PARAFFIN WAX

San Francisco

Oakland

343 Sansome Street

61st and 4th Avenue

Telephone Sutter 5100

Telephone Piedmont 956

THE CARS OF 1916

Echoes from the New York Show

This Year's Prices Range from the Simplex-Crane Landaulette at $7,800 to the Woods Mobilette for $380

What the effect of peace on American industries will be, no man can tell, just as no one foresaw on August 1, 1914, what would be the outcome of war so far as trade conditions and prices were concerned. Especially is this true of the automobile industry, and it is now an open secret that a number of motor factories were at their last gasp July 31, 1914, but are now going well and strong.

There can be little doubt, however, that at this moment a dollar will go further in auto value than at any time in the near future. This being another way of saying that now is the best time to buy a car. Rubber, steel and aluminum all have an upward tendency, and combinations ultimately will be effected.

Glancing at the exhibits in the New York show, which has recently closed, and which is practically an annual announcement of the manufacturers, it would appear that there is quite a reduction in the number of models and manufacturers. This is due to the fact that there is a tendency to standardize both body and chassis, and to form combinations which make for economy in production.

The 1916 Cars

The 1916 cars, as displayed at the New York show, according to the Motor Age, offer a better study of purely American design and manufacturing methods than it has been possible to obtain in previous years. The influence of the European war has been felt most forcefully in the industry, and is shown as well in the trend of motor car engineering. The industry for the past 18 months has been practically shut off from the influence of European design, and the products this year may be considered purely American.

True enough, the European war was in progress at this time last year, but the effect of European design on the 1915 products was in evidence, because, to a large extent, the mechanical features and general layout of the cars of a succeeding season are solidified before the middle of the summer.

One of the most truly American of the 1916 features, and the one which stands out head and shoulders above the majority of those elements of the new cars which may be considered special trends for the year, is the twelve-cylinder engine. This is true undoubtedly so far as actual production as a component of a motor car is concerned.

Twelve-cylinder engines had been built before Packard and National made their announcements last May, but those sporadic instances were interesting only as inventions, and not as elements of production program.

Although the eight-cylinder engine is a year older than the twelve, it is almost as truly an American idea. It was an American idea as applied to cars manufactured in quantities.

Development of the eights and twelves has meant a renewed interest in the V-type of motor; that is, motors whose cylinders are at an angle with each other. They have brought with them new problems to be solved in engine balance, in cooling and lubrication, and be it sad to the credit of American designers and manufacturers, these problems have been solved.

Hand in hand with this development has come the equally important growth of light weight reciprocating parts. The increase in the number of cylinders with its multiplication of pistons, connecting rods and valve mechanisms, has made necessary an equal, or greater development in light alloys, and in the production of designs and shapes with which a smaller weight of metal can be made

CARS OF MORE THAN SIX CYLINDERS

TWELVE CYLINDERS

Name and Model	Bore & Stroke
Enger, Twin-Six	2.62x3.50
Haynes
H. A. L.
National, Highway Twelve	2.75x4.75
Packard, Twin Six	3.00x5.00
Pathfinder, the Great	2.87x5.00

EIGHT CYLINDERS

Car and Model	Bore & Stroke
Abbott, 8-44	3.25x5.00
Apperson, 8-16	3.12x5.00
Briscoe, 8	3.00x3.50
Cadillac, 53	3.12x5.12
Cole, 8-50	3.50x4.50
Daniels, A.	3.25x5.00
Jackson, 68	3.50x4.50
Jackson, 3-48	2.87x4.75
King, 8-D	2.85x5.00
King, 8-E	3.00x5.00
Mitchell	3.00x5.12
Oakland, 50	3.50x4.50
Oldsmobile, 44	2.85x4.75
Partin-Palmer, 8-45	3.12x4.00
Peerless, 56	3.25x5.00
Regal, F.	3.00x4.50
Ross, 8-C	3.25x5.00
Ross, 8-A	3.00x4.50
Scripps-Booth, D.	2.62x3.75
Standard, 8	3.00x5.00
Sterns-Knight, 8	3.25x5.00

THE CARS AT $1,000 AND UNDER SIXES

Dispatch, G.	$1,000
Cameron	1,000
Studebaker, 6-50	1,000
Paterson, 6-42	985
Bulck, D-44-45-D-54	985
Monitor, N	895
Elgin, 6	845
Oakland, 32	795
Grant, 6	795
Saxon	785

FOURS

Jeffery	$1,000
Regal, D	985
Jackson, 34	985
Detroitler, F.	985
Auburn, 4-38	985
Dodge	950
Dispatch, D.	935
Empire, 45	935
Hierff-Brooks, 4-35	885
Richmond	885
Wayne	885
Reo, R.	875
Farmack	855
Inter-State	850
Studebaker, 4-40	850
Monitor	795
Allen	795
Dodge	785
Elcar	775
Bell	775
Scripps-Booth, C.	775
Harvard	750
Overland, 23	750
Chevrolet	750
Briscoe, 4-38	750
Cosy, Flyer	740
Pullman	740
Crow-Elkhart	725
Mecca, 30	695
Arbenz, 25	675
Part n-Palmer, 32	675
Moore	660
New Era	660
Maxwell	655
Dort	650
Regal, E.	650
Overland, 75	615
Metz, 25	600
Sterling	595
Briscoe, 4-24	585
Argo	495
Monroe	495
Chevrolet, 4-90	490
Ford, T.	410
Saxon	395
Trumbull	395
Vixen, 3-P.	395
Woods-Mobilette	380

to do the work that before had required heavier pieces. To a certain extent it is this development of light alloys that has made possible the motors whose cylinders number more than six.

It is not alone to the V-type engine that credit must be given for lightening of engine parts. The six and fours were instrumental to as great an extent.

The battle of the cylinders, which until last year were confined to the fours and sixes, and then was complicated by the entrance of the eight, has been increased in its complexity by another factor, the twelves. It now has developed into a four-cornered fight in which the sixes are more than holding their own against the fours, but are finding it necessary to guard their flanks from the onslaughts of the eight, while the latter is caught between the two fires of the sixes and twelves.

This battle, which has resolved itself into the conflict of engineering discussions on one side and price considerations on the other, has been merrily in progress for the better part of the past year. It is not too much to anticipate that there is a probability of the entrance of an exponent of even a greater number of cylinders than the twelve before the new year is out.

So far as the number of chassis models are concerned, the six-cylinder cars are quite appreciably in the lead, but from the standpoint of the actual number of cars marketed during the year, or scheduled for next year, the four has the better of it. This is on account of the almost universal rule that lower priced products can be marketed in greater number than those which are more expensive, assuming, of course, that the value per dollar is the same.

However, whether it be eights, twelves, fours or sixes, the fact remains that the prices are lower for the 1916 cars than they were for the year previous. In fact, the average price of the cars as a whole shows a very considerable reduction for the new season. The figure last year was very close to $2,000—$2,005 to be exact—while for 1916 the average of cars announced is $1,600, a drop of an even 20 per cent.

Fours can be obtained under $400, sixes at less than $800, eights under $900, and twelves at about $1,000.

Not only are the cars to be bought for less money, but they are more reliable, better equipped and better performers than their forerunners of a year or two ago which cost 20 per cent more on the average.

There is one thing which will make it harder to choose a car this season than it has been before, because the field has settled down pretty thoroughly to a condition in which the purchaser gets just about the car value he pays for. On the other hand, the purchaser or prospective purchaser of a 1916 car, will find his choice somewhat limited as compared with that in previous years.

Heretofore, the possible buyer who studied the season's offering with a view to the purchase of a car was confronted with such an embarrassment of riches in designs and models that a choice was anything but easy. In 1911 he had 400 different models to choose from, presented by 270 manufacturers; for 1916 there are less than half as many different models to choose from, and less than half as many manufacturers to consider.

Even as compared with last year, the field has narrowed considerably. The number of makes dropped from 119 to 108, and the number of chassis models offered is reduced from 200 in 1915 to 176 this year. Even this offers a rather bewildering array, and when it is considered that one of these is the fact that manufacturers are not making quite so many different chassis models as they did. The Buick, for instance, confines its production to six cylinders; Stutz confines its program to fours, building sizes only on order. Other concerns have consolidated their facilities so that the entire factory effort and entire sales effort is confined to a single chassis and in some instances to a single body type.

The reduction in the number of chassis models produced by a manufacturer is one of the great factors in cutting costs, which means, of course, cutting the list price. Where the entire factory can be concentrated upon a single model, the multiplication of tools, dies and assembling facilities can be materially reduced, or, what is the most frequent case, the same factory equipment and labor can turn out a greater number of cars per day and can turn them out at a considerably lower expense per car.

A more potent reason for the lower number of models built this year is the fact that there are fewer car makers in the field. There has been a concentration of the industry going on for the past two years. This concentration, on the one hand, has taken the form of combinations of plants, whereby the manufacturing facilities of several manufacturers have been welded to turn out a single model or a single make of car. On the other hand, there have been a number of concerns which in previous years have had passenger cars on the market that now either are confining their production to commercial vehicles, or have turned their facilities to some other channel.

Interesting Comparisons

Dividing the various makes of cars and segregating them as to price offers some interesting comparisons. For example, of those selling below $1,250, there are twenty six-cylinder cars, five eights, forty-two fours and one twelve. The average price of cars in this class is $892, the average N. A. C. C. horsepower 23.07, and the average wheelbase 111.42 inches. The lowest price six is the Saxon, at $785, and the lowest price eight, $950. Only one twelve-cylinder, the Enger, at $1,095, comes in this class.

Passing into the class ranging from $1,250 to $1,999, there are fifty different makes with an average price of $1,556, an average horsepower of 28.68, and an average wheelbase of 143.43 inches. In this class the sixes predominate, there being thirty-three of that type. The eights rank next with eleven to their credit, and there are five fours and one twelve.

Of thirty cars in the next class, that is in the price range from $2,000 to $2,999, the average price is nearer the high mark of the class than is true of the other two classes mentioned. The average price of these thirty cars is $2,431, the horsepower 35.73, and the wheelbase 128.5 in. As in the two preceding classes the sixes lead, with eighteen; the fours are second with six, while the eights number four, and the twelves, two.

Sixes Make Good Showing

In thirty-seven cars in the group selling from $3,000 up, the sixes again predominate, the number being twenty-five, their ratio being a little more than 2 to 1, as between them and the total fours and twelves. There are nine fours, and three twelves and no eights selling above $3,000. In this group of thirty cars the average price is $4,045, the horsepower 42.14, and the wheelbase 136.7 inches.

In the four groups mentioned the figures are based on the touring car models, which are taken to be fairly indicative of the relative number of the different types.

Thumbing the pages of motor car history, we find that the production of fours is decreasing from year to year, while the production of sixes steps up in practically the same degree that the four steps down. Of the 1915 models, 51.4 per cent were in the four-cylinder class, while from the figures given in the early part of this comparison the percentage of fours is slightly under 33, but this decrease is more marked in a comparison between 1915 and 1916 than is true of any two years of the last six, the decline for each year from 1910 to 1915 being 2, 2, 16, 8, and 2.6 per cent respectively. The climb of the sixes, beginning with 1910, when 10 per cent of the American cars were in that class, has been rapid. Sixes represented 17 per cent of the total American cars in 1911, 19 in 1912, 36 in 1913, 45 in 1914, 47.5 in 1915, while 1916 shows 50.9 per cent as computed from figures in the preceding paragraphs. Little brother Eight has developed into a healthy child with the coming of 1916. The eight, which made its debut a year ago, with a standing of 1 per cent of the total number of makes for 1915, enters the 1916 season with a credit of 10.9 per cent.

Twelve-cylinder cars perhaps have paid less homage to the modern low price trend than the others, and for the time being will be produced for the more fastidious, whose fingers are not calloused from holding their purse too tight. At that there is a wide range in price, considering the fact that there are not more than a half-dozen different kinds in this class being made at present.

New Makes This Year

Bell, Biddle, Bimel, Daniels, Drummond, Elgin, Farmack, Fostoria, Jones, Hillier, H. A. L., Madison, Mecca, Moore, New Era, Sterling, Stewart, Sun.

The most marked type of body design this year is the convertible sedan or other type of demountable car, where the driver is also enclosed, and which is intended primarily for owner drivers. These cars are of comparatively low cost.

CONVERTIBLE SEDANS
White, Semi-Touring	$5,300
Cole, 8-50, Dem. Sedan	2,285
Kissel, 42-6, All-Year	1,950
Hudson, Super Six, Sedan	1,900
Chandler, 6	1,795
Kissel, 32-4, All-Year	1,450
Mitchell, 6 of 16	1,450
Mitchell, 6 of 16	1,415
Glide, Six-40	1,295
Jackson, 8, 3-48	1,190
Hupmobile	1,185
Jeffery, 4, Sedan	1,150
Inter-State, Sedan	1,050
Overland, 83	950
Dodge, Winter touring	950
Sixon, 6	935
Pullman	875
Regal, Light Four	800

o o o

—New York has adopted the hyphen. The 1916 license plates will carry hyphens separating the numerals designating thousands from the numerals designating hundreds. For example, 19,830 will appear on New York highways as 19-830. Experiment has shown that numbers so spaced are easier to grasp.

Trend of the Motor Truck

That the motor truck until recently has not kept pace in improvement with the pleasure vehicle has been due largely to the fact that the market for the latter has been so far from exhausted that the required capital has not been available for the commercial car. In other words, the manufacturers were too busy grabbing for the trade of the passenger cars that they did not have either the time or the money to look out for the other. Now it is different, and the recent New York show has demonstrated that there has been more improvement in the last year in the trucks than the pleasure cars have shown in three, for the simple reason that the latter developed so much earlier.

The motor truck industry in America has had a year unprecedented in its history. From the standpoint of production and sales as well as from the standpoint of vehicles more adapted to the use of the truck owner, the past season has been one of greater activity than could have been expected. To a great extent this activity in the commercial vehicle industry has been due to the conditions brought about by the European war. War orders have been a source of profit mechanically as well as financially to builders of trucks and indirectly have been a source of profit to the American truck buyer.

This rather anomalous situation is due to the fact that makers of business vehicles in America, whether they have actually had their product in service on the European battlefields or whether they have confined their selling activities to America, have taken advantage of the lessons learned on the battlefield and on the rutted roads behind the lines to make the vehicles better able to withstand the abuses and extraordinary conditions of which European service is the supreme test of their ability to withstand such use.

The necessity for a quantity production of trucks to meet the needs of the warring nations in Europe has developed better manufacturing processes in American factories which make for a better truck without increasing price and has developed conditions by which the vehicles may be produced at a lower cost to the consumer. To such an extent is this true that even in spite of the rather severe increase in the price of materials which has been a concomitant of the European conflict there has been a distinct drop in the price of trucks for 1916. The average price of commercial vehicles listed on the American market for the new year is nearly $100 less than that of a year ago, dropping from $2,500 as an average list of the 1915 models to $2,413 as the price of the 1916 car. Some of the one-ton vehicles now list under $1,000, but the greatest reduction has been in the light delivery class and trucks with a capacity of 1,500 pounds.

Had it not been for a rather definite improvement in the new models as compared with those of the past season, it is to be expected that there would have been an even greater reduction in first cost. As an instance of this improvement in design might be mentioned the general dropping of the chain drive in favor of shaft drive and also a similar increase in the proportion of worm-driven vehicles and also a considerable increase in the double reduction types.

The showing that trucks have made in the European war has been such that it has increased the respect of the American business man for the commercial vehicle. It has given him newer insight into the reliability and adaptability of the motor driven business wagon. With the coming of the prosperous season which is looked for, it is to be expected there will be a very great increase in demand for commercial vehicles in all sections of this country.

So far as the number of truck manufacturers is concerned there has been a very general expansion, the total amounting to 248 manufacturers, forty-six of which are new, although eleven have dropped out. This makes a net increase of thirty-five in the number of truck builders. A production of 75,000 motor trucks is expected for 1916. During 1916, fifty thousand were built for domestic use and about half as many were exported.

o o o

COLLEGE ADDS TO COURSE

Highland Park College, Des Moines, Ia., has broadened the scope of its motor car engineering school by adding work on cranking and lighting systems. All of the principal cranking and lighting systems have been installed in the school shops. W. W. Lemmax is in charge of the new work.

o o o

—A magnificent scenic road of 240 miles long, around the island of Hawaii has been completed. The entire circuit can be made in two days, and it is becoming increasingly popular with motorists. It is also rapidly increasing the demand for cars in that part of the world.

Nonsense Rhymes

MATCHING RHYMES

Honk! Honk!

Railroad crossing,
Speeding car,
Fragments tossing,
Gates ajar!

—The Ohio Motorist.

Small boy wonder,
Papa's car,
Blood and thunder
Tales go far.

—The Hoosier Motorist.

More Trouble Coming

Wifey picks up
Titian hair
From the mix-up
—Hers is fair.

ಠ ಠ ಠ

ROAD LICE IN THE HAIR

A fellow lost a Ford one day,
He hunted everywhere,
Until he found it, so they say,
Next time he combed his hair.
—Southern Automobile and Garage.

Still nastier:

Si lost a Ford at lunch one day,
Upon a misty heath,
He found it hiding, so they say,
When next he picked his teeth.

ಠ ಠ ಠ

A QUARTETTE OF DIMETERS

You Know 'Em

The citizen
I most abhor
Is he who fights
Old Europe's war.

—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The one whose goat
We'd like to get
Is he who asks:

"You fell off yet?"

—Macon Telegraph.

The one that makes Me really bored,
Talks of his car,
But means his Ford.

—By George Douglas in the S. F. Chronicle.

The man who makes Me feel most tired
Is the rhymester
Who is hired.

—By another kept poet.

POOR OLD BILL

Some of the soldiers in Flanders scratched the following epitaph on the rough wooden cross which marks the grave of a comrade. The second stanza to "Poor Old Bill" is dedicated to some of our comrades—the speed maniacs.

"Poor old Bill, he left this place
With smoking gun and smiling face;
But Bill won't care, if some good chap
Will follow up and fill the gap."

"Poor old Bill, his speeding car
Hurled him through the gates ajar;
But Bill won't care if some good chap
With lots of speed will fill the gap."

—Hoosier Motorist.

ಠ ಠ ಠ

STATE STATISTICS

AUTOMOBILES IN N. Y. STATE

Up to January 1st, of 1916, exactly 233,325 automobiles had been registered in New York State, which is an increase of 61,160 over the registration for 1914. Of the cars, 231,126 were privately owned and 2,199 were dealers' cars. The State registration year begins on February 1st. The income for 1915 totaled $1,905,153, of which $921,817 was paid by the 101,074 owners, 724 dealers and 55,222 chauffeurs in the New York City district, the leading one of the State. The Buffalo district paid $548,565.50 for 72,815 owners, 750 dealers and 13,086 chauffeurs, and the Albany district, $434,770.50 for 57,237 owners, 725 dealers and 12,958 chauffeurs. The man with the largest pleasure car license fee bill in the State is probably C. K. G. Billings, of New York City, who has 17 licenses, from 792 to 808.

ಠ ಠ ಠ

KANSAS CAR TO FAMILY RATIO 1 TO 4

Final figures for the motor registration in the State of Kansas for 1915 show a total of 74,123 vehicles, of which about 4,000 are trucks and 8,260 motorcycles. This means there is a motor car for practically every fourth family in the State, a record Kansas believes is only surpassed in California. The licenses for these cars turned $331,812.75 into the road maintenance funds of the various counties during the year just ended. Sedgwick County leads in the number of cars with 4,029 registered.

ಠ ಠ ಠ

IOWA EXPECTS 175,000 CARS IN 1916

W. S. Allen, secretary of State and head of the Iowa State Vehicle Department, predicts a registration of 175,000 cars in Iowa in 1916. The total registered in 1915 was 145,034, as compared with 106,087 in 1914, the gain being 38,-

937. The total of fees for 1915 registrations collected by the department was $1,393,306.67 in 1915. A total of 7,049 motorcycles were registered during the year. Fees for 1916 registrations are now being received at the rate of $12,000 a day. Total collections of the department for 1915 was approximately $1,500,000 as compared with $1,040,135.54 in 1914. Cars to the number of 25,000 already have been registered for 1916, and that number is 15,000 ahead of the total at the same time last year.

ಠ ಠ ಠ

MANY CARS IN WASHINGTON

The registration of motor vehicles in the State of Washington is at present 45,711. The population of the State is approximately 1,150,000, which means that one individual in every twenty-five in the State of Washington is the possessor of a motor vehicle. Of course, this includes commercial vehicles and motorcycles. It is legitimate to include these, however, since the figures are being used to show the widespread adoption of motor-propelled vehicles.

ಠ ಠ ಠ

OHIO INCREASE 47 PER CENT

The report of W. H. Walker, Ohio registrar of motor cars for 1915, shows an increase of approximately 47 per cent in the number of motor cars registered as compared with 1914. In other words, 181,310 cars were registered by the department in 1915, as compared with 122,504 cars in 1914. This shows an increase in number of 58,806. The records of the department show that 32,941 cars were registered in 1910; 45,788 cars in 1911; 63,118 in 1912; 86,156 in 1913; 122,504 in 1914, and 181,310 in 1915. This shows an increase of approximately 37 per cent in 1911; 36 per cent in 1912; 41 per cent in 1913; 61 per cent in 1914; and 47 per cent in 1915. The general average of percentage of increase in the department since 1910 is 45.

ಠ ಠ ಠ

According to Homer L. Cook, Secretary of State, one automobile is driven in Indiana for every thirty inhabitants. Taking an average of five persons to a family, every sixth family in Indiana owned an automobile last year.

The total number of automobile licenses issued during the year 1915 was 96,915, or 30,365 more than 1914. The motorcycle licenses issued in 1915 numbered 11,225 and the licensed chauffeurs in the State numbered 3,099. Licensed auto dealers numbered 728. The licenses for 1916, already issued, now number in the thousands. The aggregate receipts of the auto department for the year 1915 were $592,775.

A NEW and GREATER

$1295

f. o. b. factory

CHANDLER SIX

NOW ON DISPLAY

Longer Wheelbase---Handsome and Roomier Body
The Same Marvelous Motor --- Greater and Unusual Power

POWER Ample to take this car, loaded, anywhere that any automobile can go.

SPEED More than 999
out of every thousand car owners
would ever want or dare to use.

MOTOR The Marvelous Chandler Motor—built in the Chandler factory for three years past and famous the world over.

FREE FROM ANY HINT OF EXPERIMENTATION.

Most Beautiful of All New Motor Car Bodies; Before the Season's Over Any Other Type Will Be Out of Date

Interesting Chandler Features

BODY FINISH Chandler blue, high finish. Fenders, wheels and motor hood black. Deep cushioned upholstery covered with long-grain, semi-glazed leather.

EQUIPMENT Highest grade equipment is a feature of the Chandler now as always, including Bosch High-Tension Magneto, Gray & Davis separate unit Electric Starting and Lighting System, Chandler aluminum crank case, Chandler full-floating silent spiral-bevel-gear rear axle, silent chain drive for motor shafts, annular ball bearings, Stewart-Warner Magnetic Speedometer, Stewart Vacuum Gasoline Feed, Non-skid Tires in the rear, and all the usual incidental items.

We Want Everyone to Come and See the Big New Chandler Touring Car and the New Chandler Four-Passenger Roadster

PEACOCK MOTOR SALES COMPANY

1350 Van Ness Ave., San Francisco

Phone Prospect 431

E. L. PEACOCK AUTO CO., 3020 Broadway, Oakland. Phone Lakeside 5100

CHANDLER MOTOR CAR CO., CLEVELAND, OHIO

redwood park in time for dinner.

Hitherto the trip has not been very popular with our motorists, on account of the narrow and steep mountain roads which not only took time to negotiate, but demanded too much attention on the part of the driver as a matter of sheer safety. The new highway does away with fear, for it is a wide, well balanced and attractive road that is much shorter and infinitely safer than any of the previously used mountain roads.

The San Francisco motorist desiring to make the run over the new route should follow the State Highway down the peninsula to the junction of the road leading to Saratoga and Los Gatos, near Mountain View. At the latter point take the Saratoga road to Los Gatos, thence to Idylwild, at which point the old familiar Soquel road is left. Up to that point, however, many of the old dangerous turns have been either widened or completely eliminated. To Idylwild the distance is approximately 3.7 miles from Los Gatos. Then follows 4.5 miles, of

The City of the Holy Cross

To Santa Cruz by the Recently Completed State Highway

San Francisco's climate is so salubrious that we are not driven to the ocean beaches to escape the sweltering heat as are the unfortunate residents in the East and even in Southern California. There is no doubt that San Franciscans miss a good deal by not making a closer acquaintance with the sea, but to do this has required, in the past, not a little sacrifice of time at least. With the completion, however, of the State highway to Santa Cruz last month, we are able to motor down to the city of the Holy Cross in about three hours. This means that you can leave the city in the morning, without getting up in the middle of the night, arrive in Santa Cruz in ample time to bathe in the sea, or if the salmon are running, perhaps land a fifteen pounder, enjoy a leisurely luncheon, and return to the city by way of the State which two miles is new location. From the Santa Clara-Santa Cruz County line there are six miles of new location to Glenwood. From there on the road makes use of the old Scotts Valley road to six miles south of McKiernans. From this point there is new location for about 1.7 miles on 2 per cent grade. The rest of the road to Santa Cruz is over the old Scotts Valley road, entering the seaside town via Plymouth Ocean and Water streets, terminating at Pacific and Front streets.

Scenes along the new part of the State Highway in Santa Cruz County

Every one who has traveled over the old Soquel Canyon road knows that immediately after leaving Los Gatos an exceedingly beautiful scenic region is entered. Over the newly opened mountain highway the scenic features are considerably accentuated, comprising inspiring views from even higher elevations, but which are much more gradually attained; vistas of distant mountain ranges spanning mysterious canyons and tufted, precipitous slopes in the immediate foreground, timbered sections of various densities and woods and constantly winding, rising and dropping road scenes, which are guaranteed to bring out a rataplán of bromidic "How wonderfuls" from the impressionable tourist.

While the new highway to Santa Cruz is considerably shorter and can be maintained much more economically than the old, it has been laid out so that the scenic features in that region are more accessible than they were before its construction. The largest tree in Santa Cruz County, known as the Queen Tree, is only 150 feet from the road, and is reached by a good trail. It is located about three-quarters of a mile north of Glenwood, is more than twenty feet in diameter, and rises 310 feet above the ground. At that height it has been broken off. Originally the tree stood 350 feet in height. All along the road after leaving the summit there are beautiful groves of redwood and madrone, and just south of Glenwood, within the right of way, there are ninety-one distinct trees, redwoods, pines, laurels, firs and madrones, none of which measure under two feet in diameter. Just south of the summit stands another redwood which has a girth of nearly fifty feet.

From Los Gatos to the summit the road overlooks the canyon of Los Gatos Creek. Beyond that point there is a practically level stretch of two and a half miles, which crosses the saddle of the ridge. Thence for a distance of one and a half miles the road overlooks the canyon of Bean Creek. Two miles south of Glenwood the road crosses the saddle of Bean and Branciforte Creeks, after which it

Upper—the Queen Tree, the largest in Santa Cruz County, is only 150 feet from the new road. Middle and Lower—Showing the wide turns and easy grades practically parallels the latter to Santa Cruz for seven and one-quarter miles.

In Santa Clara County the average width of the road is twenty feet, with an average grade of 3 per cent. The maximum grade to the summit, eight miles from Los Gatos, is 6 per cent, in which distance there is a total of only 10,500 feet of 6 per cent grade, the longest continuous piece of which is 4,000 feet. North of Glenwood there is a total of one mile of 6 per cent grade, the longest continuous piece of which is 900 feet, between Glenwood and Santa Cruz out of a total of 4,700 feet of 6 per cent grade there is one piece of 2,200 feet, running 6 per cent. For ten miles beyond the summit the road runs eighteen feet in width. Through the timbered sections the right of way for the road runs from 70 to 100 feet in width. The sharpest curves on the road—of which there are only three such—have a radius of 70 feet, and are all open to view. On the blind curves around projecting points the sharpest curve has a radius of 80 feet.

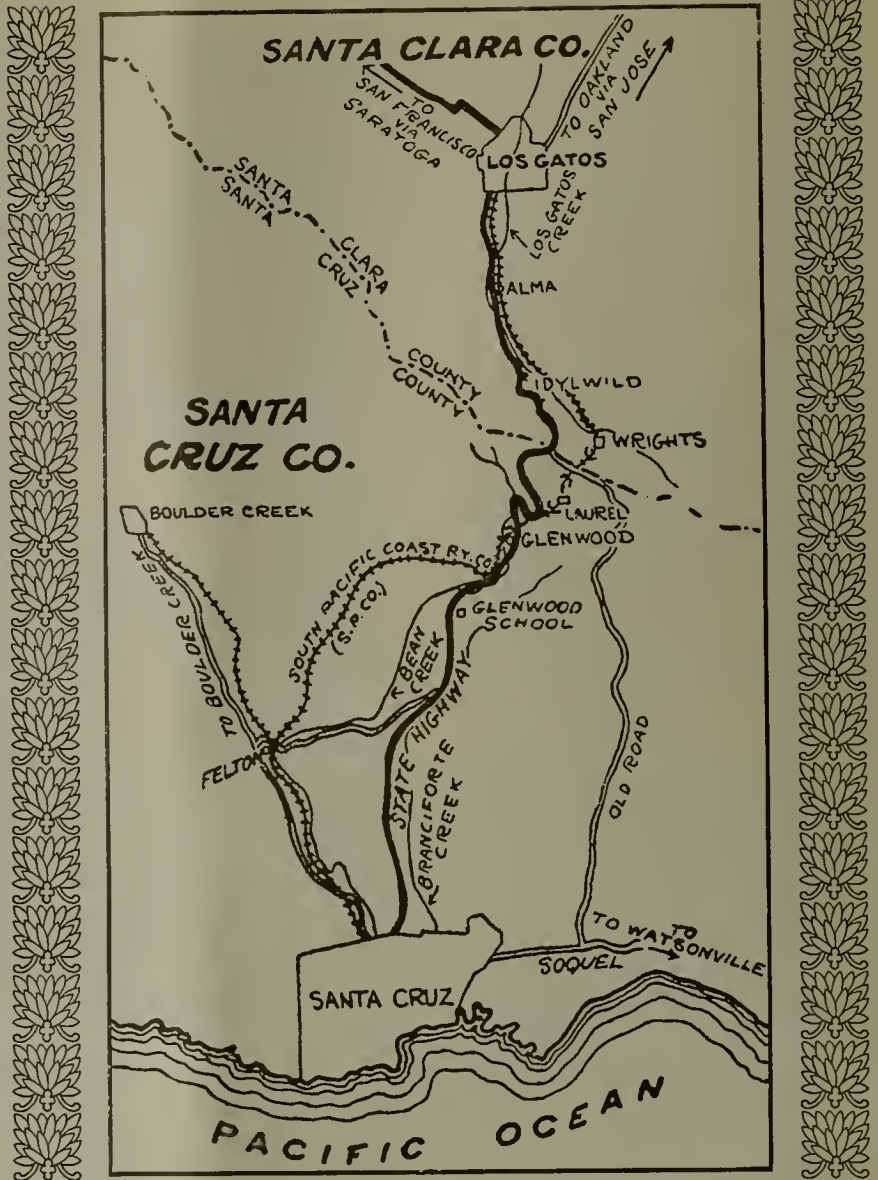

Any well balanced and moderately powered automobile should, without the slightest difficulty, make the entire run from San Francisco to Santa Cruz over the new road on the high gear. This was accomplished during the past month by Chester N. Weaver, local Studebaker distributor, in a Studebaker Six Sedan. No effort was made to make time to Santa Cruz, as the trip was made for the purpose of making a series of photographs of scenes along the new road. Later in the day, however, Weaver drove this same car to the California State Redwood Park (Big Basin), thence over the Saratoga Summit road, which was exceedingly rough and muddy, to San Francisco. Despite the bad road conditions, the trip was made in less than three and one-half hours, and all on the high gear.

Incidentally, this type of car is bound to prove more and more popular on the coast as motoring for comfort succeeds mere speed mania or sportiness. The Studebaker Sedan not only gives you all the speed you can safely use, but protects you from winter cold and rain as well as from summer sun and dust.

While the road to Santa Cruz via Glenwood is open to the public, it is not as yet completed. During the winter months the Highway Commission will keep the highway well drained and graveled, and in the spring will lay on additional gravel and rock, surfacing which, with watering next summer, will adequately handle the heavy travel until all fills have thoroughly settled, so that the final paved surface can be constructed. It is bound to become one of the most popular routes of travel out of San Francisco.

☪ ☪ ☪

—Since August when Yellowstone Park was opened to automobile tourists, 958 cars, carrying 3,513 people, made the trip through the park.

The recently completed State Highway to Santa Cruz—Showing new road from Los Gatos

STUTZ RACING TEAM WINS BIG IN 1915 RACING SEASON

The year 1915, aside from the honor that it brought to the Stutz Motor Car Co., Indianapolis, Ind., was a prosperous twelve months for the Stutz driving squad.

On good authority it is stated that the aggregate winnings of the team during the season was $117,000. This money was distributed among the drivers themselves.

The Stutz cash prize distribution is handled somewhat in the following way: Each driver takes half of his own cash winnings, the other half going into the mutual pool, which is divided equally among the drivers. Each driver in turn gives his mechanic 25 per cent of his individual share of the winnings.

DETROIT MAIL MOTORS SAVE MUCH MONEY

Through the use of Government-owned automobiles in mail hauling in Detroit, the Post Office Department is saving $47,276.76 a year. This is reported by Second Assistant Postmaster General Otto Prager, who states that Detroit has made a flattering showing among the cities that were chosen for first test of automobiles in mail service. The old service in Detroit, with horse-drawn screen wagons, was $147,600.40 yearly. The present motor service costs $100,323.64 yearly, and gives more rapid, and frequent collections and deliveries.

☪ ☪ ☪

—As a means of securing good roads in Virginia, Fairfax County is installing the old toll gate system.

NEW 17 SERIES

COMFORT
WITH ELEGANCE

3 passenger
50 horse power
SIX
Landau Roadster
$1500

Coupling the conveniences of the open car with the elegance and the midwinter comforts of the closed car, this Studebaker SIX Landau Roadster at $1500 is indeed the ideal car for town use.

It has all the power and the wonderful flexibility of the famous Studebaker FIFTY Horse Power 6-cylinder motor that has been the sensation of the season. It carries THREE full-grown people in COMFORT. The interior is luxuriously arranged, upholstered with the finest hand-buffed leather, deep and restful. The driver sits a little ahead of the other passengers—can't be interfered with. And the car, in lines, in elegance of finish and fittings, represents the highest achievements of the body-builders' art.

But you must see this Landau—s't in it—drive it and KNOW the unequalled POWER and flexibility of that mighty motor. And see, too, the other Studebaker Closed Cars. These include a FORTY Horse Power 4-cylinder Landau Roadster at $1295; a FIFTY Horse Power, 1-passenger, 6-cylinder Coupe at $1750, and a FIFTY Horse Power, 7-passenger, 6-cylinder Limousine at $2650—prices delivered in San Francisco. We will welcome a visit.

CHESTER N. WEAVER COMPANY

DISTRIBUTORS OF

Studebaker Automobiles

1216 Van Ness Avenue, San Francisco

20th and Broadway, Oakland

TRUCKS UNDER THE TRICOLOR French Soldiers Find Rest and Safety In Motor Trucks

Paris, Dec. 16.—When the period of duty in the trenches has come to an end, the French soldiers are marched a few hundred yards to the rear, where on a sheltered road they find a number of motor trucks waiting for them. The trucks may be American machines—Whites, Packards, Pierce, Kelly or Jeffery—or as in the case illustrated, they may be French camions which changed a year and a half ago from civil service to war and have been at war ever since. The men form in groups of half sections at the rear of each truck and wait the order to get aboard. Sufficient space is left at the rear of the trucks for the men to form.

On a signal given by whistle, thirty-five mud stained troopers scramble into each truck, place themselves on the temporary transverse seats, and a few seconds later, as the result of another call by whistle, the convoy moves off. This procession of trucks, which only an hour before had brought up a supply of fresh men, travels about 10 miles to the rear, where in comfortably installed quarters, each man can get rid of the dirt he has gathered during his period of service in the trenches and pass a quiet week or so in preparation for more active duty.

The trucks are an interesting study. They have rear wheels with steel tires, an equipment which was abolished two or three years ago. They have been taken direct from private service, and have not been back to the repair shop for any lengthy stay, for they still carry the name of the original owner, and it is the rule to paint out such names when a truck is overhauled. The individual drivers have built up the sides of the cab to give more protection against the weather and have added a swinging windscreen and leather apron from the extension top to the dashboard.

Many of the trucks look as if a theatrical scenery artist had been working on them in his spare time, for they have been given a ground color of gray and then daubed with every color of the rainbow, so that at a distance they give the impression of a group of rocks or a mass of vegetation. Broken colors are much more difficult to pick out of the surrounding landscape, when viewed from a distance, than a uniform mass.

It will be found that most of the trucks carry a couple of hammocks stuffed with hay, attached to the top of the canvas hood. The driver and his mate have found by experience that whenever a new town is struck, the few beds have been secured in advance, and that the best corners in the barns are somebody's reservations. Under such circumstances it is convenient to be able to pull down the hammocks, carefully attach the canvas top of the car, and sleep aboard. The outside "walls" are apt to let in a certain amount of cold, but with plenty of wraps, sleep is not likely to be curtailed on this account.

8 8 8

—A leather washer underneath the metal washer will often remedy a tendency to rattle, and will give an elastic compression that will avoid stripped threads where the bolt is rather small for its work.

In the Furthest North, where autos are used the Jeffery Quad hauls mail, passengers and freight. The superiority of this type over the rear-driven trucks is here strikingly shown

EXTINGUISHING BURNING LIQUIDS

There are two principal methods of extinguishing burning liquids, as follows:

1. To form a blanket of gas or solid material over the burning liquid and cut off the air (oxygen) supply.
2. To dilute the burning liquid with a non-inflammable extinguishing agent that will mix with it.

Water may be used for extinguishing burning liquids, such as denatured alcohol, wood alcohol, and acetone, that are miscible with it. If such a liquid as gasoline, which is not miscible with water, catches fire, the application of water produces little or no effect except to spread the burning liquid, and thus scatter the fire over a larger area. However, the application of a large quantity of water to a small quantity of burning oil, by its cooling effect may aid in extinguishing the fire.

Of materials used to form a blanket of gas or solid material over burning liquid, thus cutting off the oxygen supply, several are in common use. These include sawdust, sand, carbon tetrachloride, and the so-called foam or frothy mixtures.

The efficiency of sawdust is due to its floating for a time on the liquid and excluding the oxygen of the air. Sawdust itself is not easily ignitable, and when it does ignite burns without flame. The character of the sawdust and its moisture content is of little or no importance. It may be well handled for extinguishing small fires, when just started, by means of long-handled wooden shovels.

Sand probably serves about as well as sawdust for extinguishing fires on the ground, but is heavier and more awkward to handle. When thrown on a burning tank it sinks, whereas sawdust floats.

Carbon tetrachloride, the basis of various chemical fire extinguishers, if thrown on a fire forms a heavy non-inflammable vapor over the liquid, and mixes readily with oils, waxes, japan, etc. The vapor is about five times as heavy as air. Much of the carbon tetrachloride contains impurities that give it a bad odor, but when pure its specific gravity is 1.632 at 32 deg. F. When thrown on a fire, it produces black smoke, the hue of which is caused by unconsumed particles of carbon. Pungent gases are also produced, probably hydrochloric acid gas and small volumes of chlorine gas. Although the fumes are pungent, brief exposure to them does not cause permanent injury.

The efficacy of carbon tetrachloride depends largely on the skill of the user. If liquid in a tank is on fire, the height of the liquid is important. When the liquid is low, the sides of the tank form a wall which retains the vapor, but when a tank is nearly full of a highly volatile liquid, like gasoline, only the most skilled operator can extinguish the fire.

8 8 8

THE MOTORIST'S LIBRARY

Another one of the instructive books of Victor Oage, the wellknown mining engineer and authority on general motor topics, is just off the press. (Norman W. Henley Publishing Co., 132 Nassau St., New York.)

This work outlines every process incidental to motor car restoration. Gives plans for workshop construction, suggestions for equipment, power needed, machinery and tools necessary to carry on business successfully. Tells how to overhaul and repair all parts of all automobiles. The information given is founded on practical experience, everything is explained so simply that motorists and students can acquire a full working knowledge of automobile repairing.

It is almost indispensable to every motorists as well as dealer, chauffeur and garageman, and should save the private owner many dollars and much trouble as well as being an invaluable aid to the practical mechanic. It is written in Mr. Page's simple and easy style, and is intended both for the amateur and the expert. Price, $3.00 net.

Buick

VALVE-IN-HEAD

CABROLET

For Men and Women Means Independence

WHEN the rain is falling and all outdoors is wrapped in bleak January's sombre mantle of gloom, your Buick Coupe—warm and cozy—takes you to the theatre, the dinner-party or the evening reception in the same comfort you have just left in your own living room. It gives you the luxury and style of an electric with all the dependability of the Buick Valve-in-Head motor.

Snug in this fine new enclosed car—richly upholstered and beautifully finished—you are independent of weather, of street conditions, of chauffeur or escort. By day or night, alone or accompanied, you go and come safely, surely, silently. In warm weather, with top folded back, the coupe becomes an open roadster.

With an unfailing electric starter, a control of surprising simplicity, a motor of matchless power, this new Buick Coupe offers to women the utmost ease of driving combined with unlimited range in speed and mileage.

Men, too, like the convenience of these coupes—and the demand for them, as for Buick touring cars, is unprecedented. For folks have learned that—regardless of the price you pay or the car you buy—nowhere can you get greater value than in a Buick.

BUICKS FOR 1916

Roadsters and Touring Cars	- - -	$1100 to $1635
3-Passenger Cabrolet	- - -	$1500

HOWARD AUTOMOBILE CO.

Van Ness at California
San Francisco

3300 Broadway
Oakland

EXPORT TRADE CONTINUES TO GAIN

While the figures of the automobile exports for the month of last October are not quite as large as those for September, still they show about the same degree of increases in the foreign trade that have been so marked. During October, 1915, there were sent abroad 1,596 commercial cars, valued at $4,307,190, as compared with 672 trucks, valued at $2,286,964, or over 100 per cent increase in number and almost an equal increase in value. Pleasure cars during September made an even more remarkable showing, jumping from 732 cars, value $678,387, in October, 1914, to 3,479 cars, value $2,749,255 in last October. This is an increase of, roughly, 500 per cent in number and 400 per cent in value.

The United Kingdom continues to take a greater portion of the exports than any other one division, with "Other Europe" a poor second. British Oceania comes next, and then South America. Takings of 2,021 automobiles, valued at $2,730,468, are credited to the United Kingdom, by far the highest figures in the list. France, which is popularly supposed to take whole shiploads of American automobiles for war purposes, got directly only 298 cars, valued at $912,139, during last October.

Parts and tires likewise show large increases. During October, $1,819,950 worth of parts were sent abroad, as compared with $404,360 worth in October, 1914. Tires in the same two contrasted months jumped from $247,559 to $1,546,942. Motors likewise were in much larger demand, 1,661 motors, value $172,533, being sent abroad, as contrasted with 102, value $36,544. In these motor figures it will be noted that the average value of the automobile motor exported in October of 1914 was $360, while the average last October was only $100, a startlingly low figure and possibly indicating that motors for low priced cars now are being sent abroad separately for assembly on the other side.

The total figures for the ten months ending with October continue to show the broad sweep of the rising exports, which war conditions have brought to such a point that truck exports are half the pleasure car exports in number, and of twice the pleasure car value. In the ten months up to October last, 18,865 trucks had been exported, value $52,076,406, while the pleasure cars numbered 34,515, value $92,543,227. During the same period of the year before, the truck exports numbered 1,309, value $3,353,509, and pleasure cars numbered 20,262, value $17,888,351. The total exports of cars for the ten months of 1915 ending with October are of 53,380 machines, valued at $81,619,633.

Imports of automobiles into this country are still continuing, 14 cars, valued at $12,540, having been received here during last October. Four came from France, one each from Italy and the United Kingdom, and eight from "Other Countries."

Rubber imports were valued at $9,127,017 during the month, as compared with $6,134,582 in October of 1914. The total imports for the ten months is $92,540,165, which may be compared with the total for automobile exports of $94,434,442, as showing that between rubber imports and automobile exports the trade balance of the United States will be kept fairly steady.

Export Statistics in Condensed Form

Tabulation of Exports for month of October shows large increases in foreign trade still manifest—Trucks exported numbered 1,596, value $4,307,190—Pleasure cars numbered 3,479, value $2,749,255—United Kingdom far in lead in takings of American automobiles, both in volume and value—Imports of automobile consist of 14 cars, value $12,540—Rubber imports show 50 per cent increase.

⊘ ⊘ ⊘

DON'T TRY THIS EXPERIMENT

If one takes the cover off a full pail of tightly inclosed gasoline and applies a match to the surface, the gasoline will flare up and burn as long as the gasoline lasts. On the other hand, if one puts a few drops of gasoline in a small tightly inclosed pail, waits a few minutes, and then introduces a flame or a electrical spark, a violent explosion will most likely result. In the first case the vapor burns as fast as it comes from the gasoline, and mixes with the oxygen of the air. In the second case the oil vaporizes in the pail and mixes uniformly with the air therein to form an explosive mixture, and upon ignition explodes. Consequently, when one hears of a disastrous gasoline explosion one may be sure that the explosion resulted from the mixing of the vapor from the gasoline with air in the proportions necessary to form an explosive mixture.

One gallon of gasoline when entirely vaporized produces about 32 cubic feet of vapor. If a lighted match could be applied to pure gasoline vapor in the absence of air no fire or explosion would result. Gasoline liquid or vapor, like any other combustible material, needs the oxygen of the air in order to burn.

MANAGER KLINGER RETURNS FROM VISIT TO N. Y. SHOW

Just returned from his annual visit to the Eastern automobile shows, William M. (Bill) Klinger, the genial and popular manager of the automobile department of the London and Lancashire Fire Insurance Co., is enthusiastic over the new designs and contrivances displayed in New York. It is Mr. Klinger's custom to visit the East at the beginning of each year and study the improvements both as shown at the exhibitions and in the factories, for the purpose of giving more intelligent attention to the branch of insurance under his control. So that, in addition to being an insurance expert, Klinger might well qualify as a motor authority.

Incidentally he is the dean of auto insurance managers on the coast, and may well claim to have "seen it first." While traveling as the special agent of the fire branch of an underwriting concern, Klinger conceived the idea that an auto would be of great service to him in his business, as he was obliged to wait at times for a whole day in a town to make the next stop, perhaps only twenty miles distant. As the business of a traveling inspector frequently could be dispatched in an hour the loss of time was obvious. He did not rest until he had converted his employers to his idea, and thereby became the first in his trade to use the auto. From this it was an easy step to forming a department for the handling of auto insurance itself, and who but Klinger could qualify for the job?

Mr. Klinger heartily confirms the News Letter in its opinion that now is the accepted time to buy a car, and that perhaps never again will such a good opportunity present itself.

⊘ ⊘ ⊘

—Crossing the Great American Desert by the Lincoln Highway route, the tourist is compelled to halt at Orr's Ranch. This is the only place for miles around where water and supplies can be secured. Hence it has been an easy matter to keep accurate count of Lincoln Highway tourists who pass through this point. Fifty-six passed through in August, 1914. There were 314 during the same month of last year, an increase of 560 per cent.

⊘ ⊘ ⊘

—America has been inoculated by the speed bacillus. It is said that racing will be introduced in several prominent South American cities within a year. Turns are already laid for a two and one-half mile speedway. The purse for the first race will be $100,000, and the race will be driven over a 500 mile course.

Marion SIX

MODEL "K"

SEDAN $1190.

The Acme of Winter Comfort at Minimum Cost

THIS Marion Six equipped with a detachable "Sedan" top is the last word in comfort and efficiency—an all year round car for only $100 over the cost of the open touring model.

And it's not a makeshift—it bears all the ear marks of the "complete" job—snug and warm in the bitterest weather; handsome, stylish, with all the "snap" so essentially a Marion characteristic.

Why not enjoy your new car NOW.

ROADSTERS AND TOURING CARS FOR IMMEDIATE DELIVERY

AMERICAN AUTOMOBILE CO.

Northern California and Nevada Distributors

476-482 GOLDEN GATE AVENUE, SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

W. L. KING MOTOR CAR COMPANY, 1728 Broadway, Oakland, Cal.

BUILT AND BACKED BY

THE MUTUAL MOTORS CO., JACKSON, MICH.

J. I. HANDLEY, PRESIDENT

BROWNE-BRANFORD CARBURETER

Among the recent developments in the field of carburetion is the Browne-Branford carbureter made especially for Fords and other light cars and distributed by the Holt-Wellies Co., Inc., 1790 Broadway, New York.

This carbureter is simple in construction yet is said to come very close to the constant air-gas ratio. It is of the concentric type, and its operation is on the constant vacuum principle. The vacuum within the carbureter is always maintained at a pressure equal to the weight of the valve which forms a true venturi section with its seat and lowers the resistance within the carbureter. The air enters the mixing chamber at this point, where its velocity is greatest, and picks up the gasoline from a series of holes at the periphery of the air valve. This makes for a better atomized condition of the fuel and air.

The amount of fuel is controlled by the velocity of the air passing the fuel nozzles, and it is said to be possible to maintain a practically uniform mixture throughout the entire speed range of the motor.

Another interesting feature is the hot air bowl surrounding the fuel chamber. The hot air is drawn from the exhaust manifold through a flexible tube. This hot air circulating around the fuel chamber increases the volatility of the fuel and supplies the latent heat of vaporization.

The only moving part of this carbureter is the valve. There is only one adjustment to make, that for idling, and when this has been made, by turning the thumb-screw, the carbureter is guaranteed to give a practically constant mixture under all speeds and under all conditions. This carbureter is sold on a 30 day trial basis, with the owner as the final judge as to whether or not it gives satisfaction. In addition a rebate of $2 from the regular price of $10 is given if the person turns in his old carbureter.

ø ø ø

KIMBALL BLOWOUT ARMOR

The Kimball Tire Case Co., 2801 Broadway, Council Bluffs, Ia., is making a blowout clasp which offers protection to tires that have been worn or cut, and since it clasps directly to the rim along with the tire, is easily held in position. Several of them may be applied side by side if the blowout requires it.

ø ø ø

JONES PNEUMATIC SPRING

How to secure pneumatic tire action with solid tires is a question which has been the subject of a number of inventions during the last few years. A very ingenious method of solving the question is suggested by the Jones Pneumatic Tire Spring Co., New York, which, as the name implies, incorporates the pneumatic action with the spring, although the car itself is equipped with solid rubber tires.

In other words, the Jones pneumatic tire spring utilizes the principle of the pneumatic tire as a cushion, but takes it away from the road, thus eliminating wear on the pneumatic unit from riding friction, blowouts, rim cuts, punctures and other familiar tire troubles. The device can be attached to any car without mechanical changes, simply by removing the spring clips and installing the Jones axle clips.

The pneumatic cushion is slung beneath the axle in such a way that the upward or downward thrusts on the spring are communicated to it by the pneumatic medium, while the car itself is equipped with solid tires. The pneumatic units are not subjected to any wear except that due to cushioning shocks and they can be kept to any desired pressure by inflating through the valves with which they are equipped.

ø ø ø

From the New York Auto Show

STANDARD SPEEDOMETER

The Standard Thermometer Co., Boston, Mass., shows some new features in the product, the most important of which is a centrifugal type speedometer for flush cowl mounting yet without the angle joint. The driving cable goes directly into the back at right angles to it. The new swivel joint is a double bevel gear arrangement in which the adjustment of the gears may be brought to .002 inch of the best adjustment. This detail is provided for by having a fine-threaded adjusting nut for each bevel set, and a means for locking at several positions per revolution.

EVER READY STARTER FOR FORDS

The American Ever Ready Works, New York, has a single-unit starting and lighting system developed for Fords. It is mounted at the front, taking the place of the crank, and is a neat cylindrical shape. As a generator, it is driven directly through the crankshaft gears and supplies the battery with a 6-volt current. When operating as a starting motor it works through a gear reduction and draws a 12-volt current. The battery is a flat, thin type which is placed against the front seat, and at the left side within easy reach of the driver is the light controlling switch. The starting switch is mounted on the spark lever bracket, and is so connected that when the lever is retarded the maximum the circuit is closed and cranking begins.

ø ø ø

CAMPBELL LATIGO FAN BELT

The reinforced Latigo fan belt, made by the Perkins-Campbell Co., Cincinnati, O., is an endless combination construction brought out as a running mate to the Latigo belt. It is made by taking high-grade webbing, putting it under strain for 24 hours to remove the stretch, and then this is cemented to Latigo leather which also has had the stretch removed. The purpose of this process is to provide a belt that will be impervious to heat, oil and water and will not slip. It is made in sizes to fit any car, and may also be had in 10, 25 and 50-foot lengths. Price 30 cents.

ø ø ø

COPPER-TREATED PLUG SHELL

The Kopper King spark plug is a product of the Sharp Spark Plug Co., Cleveland, and while its design is more or less conventional, it is unusual in that the shell is of copper-treated steel. The metals are brought together at a high temperature and the combination produced a shell that will not rust or stick, that has the strength of steel—and that is decidedly attractive in appearance. The hole of the central rod and both of the small electrodes are of Monel metal. All threads and sizes are made, including the various extension types, and all sell for $1.

ø ø ø

LONG HORN NEW TYPE

One new model of Long hand horn was shown for the first time at the booth of the Edward A. Cassidy Co., New York. Like the other two models carried over from last year, without change, the new model is also hand-driven, but by a cable instead of a ratchet-plunger. The new model is designed especially for use under the hood of a car. It is operated by means of a two-part cable, that is, one within the other, one end of which is attached to the regular ratchet of the device and the other to a lever in a small box to be placed convenient to the driver's hand. When the lever is pushed in one direction it shortens the distance between the points of attachment of the inner cable, thus causing the ratchet to move and set the motor in motion as in the regular manner. In this operation, the length of the outside cable, which is connected to the horn proper by a universal, remains constant and simply serves as a container for the inner one. In other respects the horn is identical in design with the other two Long models.

8 8 8

ZEPHYR PISTONS INCREASE ENGINE EFFICIENCY

Among the claims put forth by the Wridgway Company of Scranton, Pa., manufacturers of the Zephyr piston, are:

"A saving of 25 per cent on fuel consumption alone through equipping with our type of Piston, and further we do away with vibration and increase both speed and horsepower. Most of the aeroplanes as used by the Allies on the front are using the Zephyr type of Piston—for it is found to be the lightest, strongest, most mechanically accurate Piston in the world, and as the demand now is for a light-weight car, and more particularly light-weight reciprocating parts, our type of Piston is exceedingly desirable."

Numerous testimonials appear in support of the manufacturers' statements, and there is no doubt of the advantages of a light-weight non-vibrating piston which reduces fuel consumption and friction, and increases speed.

The local distributor is A. H. Coates, 444 Market street, from whom all sizes may be obtained.

Prices: Cast-iron Zephyr Pistons for any make of Standard engine having a bore not to exceed 4½ inches, $6.25 each piston; complete with pins and rings.

Aluminum Alloy Pistons (Zephyr) for the same sizes, $7.50 each piston; complete.

Other sizes will be quoted for on application.

8 8 8

DIRECTION OF BATTERY CURRENT

If by any reason the wire terminals of the generator get shifted it will be very important to know the positive from the negative in order to connect properly to the storage battery. By attaching a slender piece of lead to each wire and immersing them in a small portion of battery fluid in a tumbler, the positive terminal will add metal to its surface and the negative will erode.

TELEPHONE FRANKLIN 1836
FOR A
Touring Car, Limousine or Taxi-Car

The White Star Line

AUTO TOURING COMPANY

TARIFF: 7 Passenger Touring Cars
$2.00 per hour
7 Passenger Closed Cars
$2.50 per hour

Special Rates by week or month.

TAXI-CAR RATES FOR SHORT TRIPS
Day and Night Service

Our Taxi-Car Service is most reasonable and unexcelled. We use seven passenger closed cars for this service which bear no mark of identification signifying a rent car. The "Zone" rate applies to all Taxi-Car service. When ordering a car for this service please state that you desire the Taxi-Car Tariff.

THE WHITE STAR LINE
Auto Touring Co.
Telephone Franklin 1836

FIRE PROOF BUILDING Phones—Park 8386, Park 5138

20---MARSHALL SQUARE---20

GARAGE

EXPERT AUTOMOBILE REPAIRING and MACHINE WORK
AUTO SUPPLIES

NO. 20 MARSHALL SQUARE
Opp. 8th and Market Sts. San Francisco

CRINKLET
- WASHLESS -
TOWELS

USE LIKE AN ORDINARY TOWEL

AUTOISTS
SHOULD NEVER BE WITHOUT THEM

—
Your Grocer Sells 'Em

London and Lancashire Fire Insurance Company
Orient Insurance Company

332 PINE STREET SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
Sam B. Stoy, Mgr. G.O. Smith, Agency Supt. W. B. Hopkins, Local Sec.

Automobile Department W. M. KLINGER, General Agent

TIRES VULCANIZING

TOM H. ELKINGTON

Long Mileage Tires and Second-Hand Tires
Everything Needed for the Bus

1135 VAN NESS AVE.—Near Geary Phone PROSPECT 1566

WHERE SERVICE MEANS SERVICE

M & H GARAGE

819-835 ELLIS ST. Between Polk and
Van Ness Avenue

WHERE THE PRIVATE OWNER FEELS AT HOME

Tips to Automobilists
(CUT THIS OUT.)

The News Letter recommends the following garages, hotels and supply houses. Tourists will do well to cut this list out and keep it as a guide:

PALO ALTO.—LARKIN'S CAFE—just opened. The only strictly first-class cafe on the Wishbone Route devoted to the patronage of automobile owners and their families. Corner of University avenue and The Circle.

SAN JOSE.—LAMOLLE GRILL, 36-38 North First street. The best French dinner in California. 75 cents, or a la carte. Automobile parties given particular attention.

PALO ALTO.—PALO ALTO GARAGE, 443 Emerson St., Tel., P. A. 333. Auto livery at all hours. Tires and sundries in stock. Gasoline, oil, repairing, lathework, vulcanizing. Open day and night.

The Six of Sixteen

Osen McFarland Co.

Golden Gate Avenue

LARKINS & COMPANY
CARRIAGE AND AUTOMOBILE BODY BUILDERS
Established 1887

1610-1612-1614 VAN NESS AVENUE

New York, Chicago and Sacramento Sts. Phone Prospect 30

Where the entire attention will be devoted to the prompt delivery of the best work that a modern plant, high-class mechanics and materials can produce.

A FIRST-CLASS GARAGE

There are many garages in town, and the motorist is often in a quandary as to where to go, especially for permanent service. There are very few who give you the QUALITY of service of Dow & Green, in Taylor street, between O'Farrell and Geary. Here your car will receive something more than the "once over," and the prices are moderate.

Automobile Starting and Lighting Systems

Give Satisfactory Results
when given Proper Attention

We specialize on electrical equipment, storage batteries, etc., and guarantee satisfaction.

Guarantee Battery Co.

Brand & Cushman
Phone Prospect 741

639 Van Ness Ave., San Francisco

ENGINE DRIVEN

KELLOGG

TIRE PUMP

Complete with attachments, rubber tubing and gauge. All metal construction. No oil spray in the air.

$15.00

Easily installed on all cars.

Inquire of your dealer.

Kellogg Electric Motor Driven Garage Pumps

(Many Styles and Sizes)

Hand Pumps, Gauges, Grease Guns and other accessories. The very best made. Insist upon the Kellogg Line.

A. H. COATES

444 MARKET ST.

Direct Factory Representative for Denver, Colo. and West United States

KELLOGG MANUFACTURING COMPANY

ROCHESTER, NEW YORK

San Francisco Chicago Boston New York Detroit

CLASS "A" GARAGE

INCORPORATED

Strictly Fireproof Building

STORAGE SUPPLIES REPAIRS

Best Service Assured

735-751 Post St., San Francisco

Telephone Prospect 2280

FOR THE AUTO

To eliminate the glare of electric headlights, frosting of the bulbs is most effective. This can be accomplished by enameling the usual transparent bulb or purchasing frosted bulbs. While the glare is eliminated, there is practically no reduction in illumination.

An oil indicator automatically stops the motor just before the supply of oil gives out, thus not only indicating the shortage, but at the same time preventing injury to the engine, which is sure to follow the lack of lubrication.

A wireless auto lamp, electrically illuminating, carries a dry battery in the lamp itself. It can be utilized as side or tail lamp.

A car heater utilizes a portion of the exhaust gases as a heating agent. It consists of a register for the floor of the car, flexible tube connection to exhaust pipe, and a control for connecting or disconnecting the exhaust to the register. A small lever regulates the degree of heat.

An electric lantern has its bulb so arranged that no downward shadow is cast, the advantage being that the light can be thrown with full brilliancy upon any part of the car without shining upon the face of the person who is carrying the lantern.

An auxiliary step, which attaches to the underside of the running board and folds out of sight under it when not in use, is manipulated by the driver by means of a lever. It cuts down the long step from ground to running board just one-half.

An Optical Shock Absorber consists of a pair of goggles, each lens of which is two-colored, all of one piece of glass. A dark colored portion offsets the glare of on-coming lights, a clearly transparent portion is for ordinary use.

☪ ☪ ☪

THE SPARE TIRE

For common travel near home the spare tire should not be carried on the car, where it will deteriorate almost as fast as if in actual use. Before taking the car out of the garage inspect the tires carefully, and if tread cuts need repairs, put on the spare tire in place of the injured one while repairs are being made.

☪ ☪ ☪

DIRTY DRIP PANS

The oil drop and the dirt and dust drawn in through the radiator by the suction of the fan, combine to make a dangerous accumulation of material in the dust pan. A little gasoline and a chance ignition will complete a very successful combination against the insurance company.

One-in-One Piston Ring Co.

(PATENT PENDING)

"ONE-IN-ONE"

Compression Proof Piston Packing Ring

A TWO piece concentric ring made of a gray cast iron, COMPATIBLE WITH CYLINDER.

Reduces carbonization! Increases compression and power!

GUARANTEED

All sizes standard, to 6 x 1/2 in. $1.50.
Pacific Coast Agent—Milton Pray, 550
Monadnock Building, San Francisco.

Sold by

WATERHOUSE & LESTER CO.,
San Francisco Los Angeles Oakland
JAS. S. REMICK CO., Sacramento

Manufactured by

"One-In-One" Piston Ring Co.

DEPT. S. F.

996 N. 7th Street

Philadelphia, Pa.

G & J TIRES

—Lathan—
Auto Supply Co.

Distributors

1455 VAN NESS AVENUE
San Francisco

T. H. ELKINGTON

VULCANIZING

1135 VAN NESS AVENUE
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Phone Market 6370

SAN FRANCISCO
NEWS LETTER
 California Advertiser.

Devoted to the Leading Interests of California and the Pacific Coast.

Vol. XCI

San Francisco, Cal., Saturday, February 5, 1916

No. 6

The SAN FRANCISCO NEWS LETTER AND CALIFORNIA ADVERTISER is printed and published every Saturday by the Proprietor, Frederick Marriott, 21 Sutter street, San Francisco, Cal. Tel. Kearny 3594. Entered at San Francisco, Cal., Post-office as second-class mail matter. Chicago Office—Geo. Hische, 1310 Westminster, Westminster Building, Chicago.

London Office—George Street & Co., 30 Cornhill, E. C., England. Matter intended for publication in the current number of the SAN FRANCISCO NEWS LETTER AND CALIFORNIA ADVERTISER should be sent to the office not later than 5 p. m. Wednesday.

Subscription Rates (including postage)—1 year, $4.00; 6 months, $2.25; Foreign—1 year, $6.00; 6 months, $3.25.

—The Kaiser was fifty-seven years old last week. It's a safe bet that he feels a lot older.

—Europe is wallowing in blood and the United States is wallowing in prosperity. Cause and effect.

—How does the southern part of the State explain the weather conditions to the skeptical tourist?

—Will next February still see the world awaiting the "spring drive" that is to bring the war to a climax?

—It has been definitely proved that rain sometimes stops falling, and that there is really such a thing as sunshine.

—New York is having an orgy of extravagance and squandering. Better start a little preparedness for a rainy day.

—"Armies Mass for Dash" is one of the most frequent headlines in the newspapers. But the dash is a long time coming.

—Horse thief has been indicted by the Santa Clara Grand Jury. Different from the old days, when they indicted them with a rope.

—What has Congress done during the present session? It has talked. How are the prospects for it doing anything else? Very slim.

—Los Angeles is busy distributing literature declaring that people live longer down there. But who wants to live long in Los Angeles?

—Queen Wilhelmina has been suffering from an attack of mumps. Well, who has a better right than a ruler to be all swelled up?

—About six weeks of sunshine Mr. Weather Man, will be very satisfactory, and will cause the community to forgive your past offenses.

—Now come the prohibitionists with the announcement that whisky causes pneumonia. Lots of children die of it—poor little drunkards.

—Several rich Seattle men whose houses were raided and stocks of choice liquor confiscated, are to move to San Francisco. They are welcome—but with cranks and Puritans busy as they are in California we cannot guarantee immunity from the sort of interference that is driving them from Seattle.

—Cheap statesmen get a lot of publicity harranguing against the president; but the president ignores them and gets his own way, which is the more important.

—Financiers say that the tidal wave of prosperity that has swamped the Eastern States with money is on the way West. It will find us not only receptive but eager.

—San Francisco's response to the appeal for funds for war stricken Jews was one of the largest in the country—which is merely following San Francisco's reputation for generosity.

—Roosevelt insists that he does not want war. Maybe; but there is a general feeling that the United States would have been in the mess up to its neck by now under Roosevelt rule.

—Some of the Republicans think that a dark horse will get the presidential nomination. That would be in keeping with the party's dark prospects.

—St. Louis woman "laid" for and shot a burglar, only to find that the victim was a neighbor woman. It was hardly a neighborly act on the part of either of them.

—San Quentin is so overcrowded that some of the prisoners have to be shipped to government prisons. There would not be such a jam if gallows were used as often as they should be.

—Gulls, driven inland by the storm, have been robbing the chickens of their food down the Peninsula. Along our Rialto the chickens are very successful in getting the gulls to provide the food.

—"Republicans will sweep country," declares George Reynolds, Chicago financier and politician. He doesn't believe it, of course—but as long as he enjoys saying it, let him go his happy way.

—Enemies of preparedness declare that there is no danger of war if we do not get ready for it. That is a process of backward reasoning that should form an interesting study for alienist experts.

—Girl who was sued by a physician for $25,000 for breach of promise has promised to marry him, and the suit has been dropped. Anyway he should be entitled to alimony in case there is a divorce.

—Roosevelt barks so constantly and so loudly that no one any longer pays attention to him. When Wilson comes out of his usual calm and says something emphatic, the public sits up and takes respectful notice.

—That Mrs. Woodrow Wilson ate a thirty cent luncheon while out shopping is considered worthy of record in the newspapers. The newspapers are such educators, such moulders of public thought and opinion!

EDITORIAL COMMENT

NEW DOMESTIC "TRADE PIRATES."

Something is rotten here in the growing practice of dealers in certain lines of commodities who are suddenly boosting prices skyward. The quotations of all grades of printing paper have been increased from 20 to 200 per cent. When an order is invoiced it is often accompanied with a warning that "an advance of 20 per cent will be made within 24 hours." Two excuses are offered: the first is that, owing to the short supply of printing paper among the warring nations, large orders for that commodity have been placed with the American paper mills. The Europeans are reported to be willing to pay higher prices for the paper, so the publishers of this country are expected to pay the piper and submit quietly to the extortion.

The second excuse for the raise is based on the first: "The price of chloride of lime used in bleaching paper has increased in price." A percentage of these claims may be true, but a glaring fact stands out like a sore thumb that some sort of a combination or understanding of a Masonic kind exists among paper dealers for the purpose of skyrocketing prices on the excuses given above. The old competitive methods in seeking business and shaving prices to book domestic orders are now apparently shelved, and the quotations on grades of paper and notices of rises in prices apparently emanates from a clearing house of unanimous understanding.

There are certain justified and inherent rights belonging to the public which morally restrict individuals banded in monopoly to extort extravagant prices. Governments, since the time that Greece was forced to protect her citizens from the rapacity of the merchant pirates who controlled the imports of Egyptian grain into Athens, have insistently and persistently throttled knavish practices. Germany, England, France and Russia are doing it to-day against the food combines, as well as against combines in ordinary commodities of daily requirement. Under war conditions and extraordinary catastrophes which smite a city, the government quickly intervenes in such cases on the ground of equity, which the law of God and reason gives it the right to do.

The paper mills and other corporations now resorting to these nefarious practices are protected by State and Federal laws. In case of strikes and riots, the police and militia, without extra cost to these business organizations, duly protect their properties at the hazard of their lives. Domestic buyers of their goods should likewise be protected in their turn from their rapacity in unduly raising domestic prices, on the same grounds that England, Germany and the other belligerent and neutral nations of Europe are protecting their citizens. Give these

FALLING IN LINE!

—Cassel in N. Y. Evening World paper mills and others in the same practice a fair return on their investments, say from 10 to 20 per cent. Play the game square all round. The present predatory method of gouging enormous profits out of helpless business men engaged in building up the trade of the state and nation is certain to materialize a vigorous protest to Congress to restrict such practices by law and force these war price barons to accept profits based on a percentage of their investments. Certain unconscionable public utilities in several States have already been relegated to such restrictions by the State Railroad Commissions having jurisdictions over them. Rapacity of this character, in the new commercial light dawning on this country, is sure to have its claws trimmed in this respect.

Already there is talk of a movement to have these pirate practices inquired into for the purpose of restrictive legislation. The people of this country have not yet forgotten that former unfair condition prevailing in trade when sewing machines, farming implements, typewriters and numbers of like exported goods were sold in foreign lands for one-half the price charged here.

BIG CHANGES IN NEW SHIPPING BILL.

San Francisco merchants will be greatly interested in the new ideas written into the Seamen's Shipping Bill which will come up for consideration by the present Congress. Certain clauses have been changed to meet the protesting views of Democrats, Republicans and the practical judgment of expert shipowners of the country. The field of endeavor of the bill is considered to be as broad and sound in principle as divers conflicting judgments can be made to concede. Striking modifications have been made in the old bill. Perhaps the most important of these are the government's operation in sea-going traffic and the broadening powers of a proposed new Shipping Board. Only in the event that private capital does not produce an adequate fleet of trans-ocean freighters to handle the domestic commerce of this country will the government enter the carrying trade with its vessels. Naturally, there arose great opposition to government competition in this line, but it was shown that one of the failures of passage of the former bill was due to the absence of such a clause.

The new Shipping Bill holds the keys to the provisions. It will be composed of the Secretary of the Navy, the Secretary of Commerce, both ex-officio, and three men of large practical experience in foreign commerce. Among its powers are the rights to regulate all interstate and foreign commerce, as the Interstate Commerce Commission regulates interstate commerce. In the latter's department the two commissions act in concert. The provision regarding the entrance of the government into the business of providing deep sea carriers is rather elastic and will not be attempted if it is found that the ship-owners in the trans-ocean traffic of this country will provide sufficient vessels for that purpose. To meet the present situation the bill provides that the Shipping Commission shall organize a corporation of $50,000,000 capital, and if the shipping men of the country subscribe this amount of stock they will be placed in the saddle to handle the sea carriage foreign trade of the country to that extent. Failing to sell this stock, as provided in the bill, the Shipping Board would buy the necessary vessels with the $50,000,000 funds on hand, and go into the shipping business itself with the Shipping Board in full charge.

Vessels controlled by this board and those in private hands by lease or charter, would always be subject to the country for use in case of war. Crew and officers may volunteer at any time for service in the naval auxiliary and receive from $5 to $15 per month from the time of enlistment. Domestic shippers are to be given liberal regulations. A line of rules will be promulgated to the effect that enrolled or registered vessels of this country must not be sold to foreigners without permission of the new board. If this is attempted, clearance papers will be refused. Vessels may be sold or leased to citizens of this country only, and with the board's approval. After January 1, 1917, all American vessels in foreign and domestic service must obtain revocable licenses from the board. As will be gleaned from this outline, every effort is being made on the part of the government to induce the shipping men of the country to get behind this new shipping board corporation. If they fail to do so, the government will step into the breach, a step that may be far reaching in its consequences. For if the government proves successful in handling the deep sea freightage of the country, why may it not handle railroads, telephones, telegraphs and the like?

JAPAN'S PAW IN CHINA. The passing weeks are disclosing plainly that Japan is determined to take advantage of the present European war to press as far as possible all present opportunity to make a larger place for herself in the sun by acquiring a broader and firmer grip on the mainland of Asia. To her, Germany's possessions there, which she seized early in the European conflict, mean no more than a landing stage. This territory she has promised to return to China. What Japan covets is an extent of territory that will provide homes and industries for the excess of her teeming island population. Korea was her first successful step in that direction. The province of Manchuria, belonging to China, seems to be the next stake she will seize on some excuse, if her present movements are correctly interpreted. Sun Yat Sun, who worked so zealously to stir up the rebellion against the Hanchu dynasty, has turned against the party in power in China, headed by the new emperor, Yuan Shih-Kai, and is now in Tokio under the protection of the Japanese government, which is using him to stir up the present rebellion in the southern provinces of China. When this blaze of conflict has reached an effective point, disinterested Japan will professionally intervene by sending an army to the mainland for the ostensible purpose of restoring and preserving peace in Asia, a duty to which she seems to have acquired through Divine Providence backed by her own initiative. The rich province of Manchuria, to the west of Korea, captured despite the protest of Russia, is the prize she seeks, one of the greatest prizes along the Chinese litoral and particularly advantageous to Japan on account of its abundant farm lands and natural resources, and strategic position in case of war.

Japan is pressed harder than any of the over-populated nations of Europe to find territory that will accommodate the overflow of her teeming population. Nowhere in the world can she find it except on the ice-beaten lands of the two poles. Every scrap of wild land on the earth now carries the martial flag of one of the colonizing nations of the world.

Japan's last hope of aggrandisement, along this line, lies in what she can tear from the Chinese empire. She realizes the madness of attacking this Pacific Coast or the territorial possessions of any of the big European powers. If the proper sedition can be stirred up in China, Japan will solve her colonization problem by seizing convenient land near her own doorstep, and as convenient of access as her colony in Korea. With the European powers intense on their struggles, she counts on no interference from that quarter. A protest from the United States she would likely with diplomatic dignity take under "consideration." Accordingly, in the finals, as the nations are now employed, Japan will have to reckon somewhat with China, a behemoth that Japan, as cocky as she aspires to be in warfare, cannot pick up and walk away with. She knows it and so does Yuan Shih-Kai, the new emperor of China. And the fencing of these two for an opening just now is one of the most interesting divertissements now transpiring on the sidelines of the great European conflict.

PREDICAMENT OF ART IN THE PRESENT WAR.

Of all the departments of exhibits at the recent Panama-Pacific Exposition, the Department of Art unquestionably attracted the greatest number of enthusiastic visitors. Many visitors who came to satisfy an idle curiosity remained to become rapt students of the development of art as portrayed by the great masters of the many schools. The enthusiasm that was engendered early in last year's exhibition still survives, and is now expressing itself through visits to the reorganized exhibit now being given by the management of the post-Exposition. Naturally, this fervent admiration of the exhibit is particularly attracted occasionally by a little patriotic rosette on the frame of a painting, testifying that the painter has been killed in the European war.

These little monitors call attention to the great blow contemporary art is suffering through the present deadly conflict. How great and how wide the loss will be no judge may determine. All grants by governments in Europe for the development of art have been withdrawn. All the best works of art outside the unapproachable and the impregnable cities are carefully hidden in cellars. Some have been contained in waterproof receptacles and buried in river waters. Studios on the continent are closed, except in the cases of those artists unable to act in any military or other government capacity. Europe in the last five centuries has never gone through such a dark and non-productive period in art. Of the arts, architecture seems the only one that is receiving any attention. England, still free from any enemies' foothold on her soil, is planning, through the new Civic Arts Association of London, large improvements of "Order and Beauty" to adorn her larger cities.

In America, of course, the art impulses continue in full swing, stimulated if anything by the present great catastrophe in Europe. Simplicity and sincerity are the dominating qualities. Many critics predict, through the new movements, new ideals, and the tribulations of the "Pentecost of Calamity" another renaissance in art.

—Bryan is burnishing up his snickersnee in readiness to take the big swing around the circle in pursuit of Wilson for the purpose of nicking the latter's plans of Preparedness.

TOWN CRIER

—Mme. Schwimmer, who is generally regarded as the genius who incubated the idea of the "Peace Ship," is fated to be the goat of that extraordinary adventure. She can afford to smile pleasantly while the disgruntled special correspondents, the specially invited guests and the delegates are heaping censure on her indifferent head, for it was her consummate nerve and Napoleonic dictatorship that carried into the international limelight of the world one of the greatest canards of history, an argosy wreathed in spiritual endeavor, poesy, the ultimate aspiration, some $500,000 in cash, all to produce a "movie" covering a thoroughly impractical notion. A few well frayed ideas on peace were passed around among the delegates, but not even a small group could agree on any plan or hocus pocus to make them practical. Accordingly, Mme. Schwimmer has inherited the whole Ford show, and if she develops the necessary ingenuity to inject the flotsam into a theatrical circuit, her fortune is likely to rival that of Henry Ford. All that Ford saved out of the wreckage of this chimera was a headache. The moment he cut loose from the wreckage, the others followed helter-skelter. All of them, except Mme. Schwimmer, have tales to tell; she "knows what she knows," and rich would be the narration. In the secluded haunts of wrapt visionaries this synopated adventure in chasing world's peace to its lair will hardly be classed with the quest of Parsifal, but rather with that of the nery Argonauts in search of the Golden Fleece. (With apologies to Brother Ford.) Those hard-headed people of the world who recognize the colossal struggle for individual liberty now underway in the present European contest voice the judgment that this dreaming bunch of zanis should be spanked and indefinitely interned in an asylum.

—The Republicans are chortling over the fact that they have successfully fired a 42 centimeter shell behind the political trenches of President Wilson by the weird stories connected with the recent killing of the eighteen Americans in Mexico. The Republican newspapers carefully described each and every wound in detail, and dabbed on bluggy details to rouse national feeling against the President's consistent policy. The leaders of the party are in ecstasies over what they suppose are the real results, the turn of the popular tide against Wilson. A careful examination of hundreds of leading papers of this country, made by an expert detailed for that special purpose, shows a majority opinion that this nation should not resort to a step that means war unless the Carranza government proves unable to punish the murderers and provide real guarantees of safety to Americans in the future. "Those papers that do advocate intervention do not agree on the form it should take." Nowhere is there a line to the effect of an open demand for a war of conquest and annexation. Evidently Hearst is sleeping at the switch. The above careful survey of the field indicates that the newspaper field at least continues in the views now entertained and practiced by Wilson. These malefactors in the Republican ranks might find better employment in manicuring their contemptible aspersions on an executive endeavoring to be just and helpful to a stricken nation. The policy of 1848 in Mexico would not be tolerated in 1916 by the citizens of these United States. Try some other brand of shell on Wilson. And for heaven's sake, don't try gas!

—A sensation has been caused in Fresno by the charge that the police are grafting from the Chinese gamblers. One could stir up a sensation here by declaring that the San Francisco police were not grafting.

—Two significant peals of liberty have gone up recently in California which seem to indicate that the ancient prophet was right who declared that the Golden State raised as many radicals as turnips and cabbages combined. From Los Angeles comes the trumpet challenge of Estelle Lindsay, an up-to-date Joan of Arc, who tosses her velvet sailor into the ring with the militant defi: "I believe a woman's body is her own, to do with as she pleases. I do not believe any power on earth, man, government or any other influence, has any right to dictate to a woman what she shall do with her body." Curtains, etc., etc., etc. From Berkeley comes the clarion appeal of Clotilde Grunski of the University, alumnus of '14, declaring that "the day will come when the college will make compulsory some course in parenthood and household management. We must grant that too many college graduates remain unmarried, and those who do marry do not do their fullest duty in providing the future population." In some parts of Europe polygamy is being seriously discussed as the proper solution of the repopulation of Europe after the war. What's the matter with the air of California, or the men, that these young women are so valiantly and vigorously demanding "new eras?"

—The late Harry Morse, of sheriff and detective fame, used to tell tales regarding the boldness of certain roundsmen in Oakland who made no bones of robbing the stores they were detailed to police. Several of them were caught flagrantly with their spoils while still in uniform. They brazenly laughed at their captors and snapped their fingers in the latters' faces. Ultimately, and by dragging their cases through the courts for a long period while they were out on light bail, they were acquitted. The explanation? Political Pull. That same kind of easy and safe looting of stores by employees and policemen is said to be going on in this city, and behind it, shrugging its shoulders in easy confidence, stands Political Pull. The irony of the situation is the fact that Political Pull is apparently hedged within an inner circle that the police, the board of police commissioners, and other administrative executives cannot break through, a ring within a series of rings which only the voting proletariat may break. At the elections the cards are so stacked with candidates that a goodly percentage of the tools of the ring win office through adroit manipulation. The price of liberty is said to be eternal vigilance; so is the price of bunk.

—With all this cockey preparedness for Peace, the real blown in the bottle brand of Peace, we are certainly warranted to take another step in advance, and that is to pick out a real up-to-date heavy weight fighting, thoroughly prepared nation somewhere on the globe, and give them the blankety-blank beating any ballyhoo nation ever experienced, just to prove that our brand of Preparedness is the genuine thing and warranted to break all records in laying out the dead, a tornado of human destruction. Under present ideas afflicting the fire eaters of war and of negative peace that step seems to be the only way to demonstrate that a nation is on the right side of surviving this epidemic of slaughter.

—Bryan, Hearst, Eddie Wolfe, Mme. Schwimmer, Fairbanks, Senator Works, the genius that started the European war, the man who runs the weather, and a "Peace" ship full of such notables are all in the neurasthenic class, according to the opinion recently rendered by Dr. Lennon, a recognized expert neurologist of this city. This decision is based on the hard pan experiences that any one who achieves "big things" in this world is a neurasthenic from depleted nervous energy. Of course, the accused have the right to take an appeal from this judgment, but how can they escape the stenciled red rubber stamp upon their brows that they are really "great."

Author of the Immortal Marseillaise

Most of us imagine the immortal author of the Marseillaise (Joseph Rouget de Lisle) as the gallant young poet-captain of his youth at Strasburg, beloved and feted, but he died poor and obscure, an aged man, in 1836.

Pierre Giffard knew a venerable dame of Choisy-le-Roi (just outside Paris, on the Fontainebleau road), who was his next-door neighbor during the last five years of the poet's life, and her picture of "the poor old man," as she invariably termed him, owes nothing to romance.

"I saw Rouget de Lisle twice a day, every day, during five years," said Mme. Desperrieres. "He lived immediately on our left, while two doors away, on the right, lived his old friend, M. Voiart, former administrator of the army of the Sambre-et-Meuse. Although his functions had not enriched him—contrary to the case of some others—M. Voiart took on himself the care of the poor old man's last years. They always lunched together, often on a crust and piece of cheese and a salad, and they wrote poetry together—it was the pleasure of their old age.

"At 4 o'clock every afternoon, regularly, Rouget de Lisle brushed up and toddled out to chat and dine with his other old friend, General Blein. His place was always set; the poor old man never lacked his family dinner.

"We used to watch him pass. I see him still, as it were yesterday. Aged, broken, lopsided, hair snow-white, he looked a hundred years. I never knew him to have but one suit. It was a long gray redingote grise, like Napoleon, except that he wore long trousers like everybody nowadays. And on his head a battered Alsatian cap. Leaning on his cane, he went gently, and on his face there was something so unhappy that no one dared to speak to him. He spoke to no one."

Surely, when young Rouget de Lisle wrote words and music, offhand, in an hour of fevered enthusiasm, he little imagined that his "War Hymn" would go round the world, be forbidden by kings, emperors and become the song of the republic. Or that he would become the "poor old man."

Now for the scene. It is Strasburg, in 1792, solid bulwark of the young republic, with the coalized kings at its gates. Strasburg was a boiling center of war, youth, joy, pleasure, where the noise of fighting and fetes mingled incessantly. Strasburg received the volunteers, trained them, and passed them out by the opposite gate, to fight for the soil.

To celebrate such a departure, the Mayor of Strasburg, Dietrich, invited the volunteer officers to fraternize with the officers of the garrison. And the two lovely young daughters of the Mayor asked all of their girl acquaintances, blonde and noble maidens of Alsace, says Alexander Dumas, to grace the banquet. Among them there was fluttering curiosity to meet a young poet become captain, Rouget de Lisle.

Alexander Dumas knew him in his old age; and Rouget de Lisle wrote out for him, in his own hand, the story of the composition of the Marseillaise at that banquet.

They sought something to sing. The old revolutionary "Ca ira" was a song of anger and civil war. What was needed, they said, was a patriotic cry, fraternal, republican, and yet a menace to the invader. Then, all eyes fixed on Rouget de Lisle. The young fellow grew red in the face, gulped a glass of water, and hastily left the room.

In a small library room adjoining was a piano. Between piano and writing table Rouget de Lisle worked half an hour, and all was accomplished, words and music; that is to say, the words of the first two stanzas. Rouget de Lisle, returning to the banquet, came on Mayor Dietrich and a small group of guests who had already quit the table.

"I think I've got it," said Rouget de Lisle. "Listen!" and he began:

Come, sons of native land and liberty!

The day of glory now is nigh.

See, against us how dark tyranny

Its red standard waves on high!

Do you hear in our countrysides

Roar those ferocious hordes?

Come to our very arms

To stab our sons, our wives!

To arms, citizens! Line up your battalions!
March on, march on;
May an impure blood water our furrows!

An electric shiver ran through the assembly. Guests from the banquet crowded into the drawing rooms. Cries of enthusiasm burst out. Dietrich's daughters took the music from the young man's hands, and the elder, at a little harpsichord, accompanied the second stanza:

What! Shall these foreign hordes
Make the law of our hearths?

Never was a song written more rapidly, or received with more immediate enthusiasm. To cries of "No! No!" "Never!" "Yes! "Yes!" the terrific chorus was taken up from room to room:

To arms, citizens! Line up your battalions!
March on, march on;
May an impure blood water our furrows!

Others called out suggestions: "It's too short!" "A verse for children!" "And a verse for mothers!" And others asked: "Is there no pardon for the misled and deceived?" Rouget de Lisle hid his face in his hands. "Wait!" he murmured, "you will see that my heart does not merit that reproach!" Then rising, throwing back his head, the noble youth intoned the holy strophe in which, according to Dumas, is found the entire soul of France:

Frenchmen, as warriors great of heart,
Hold back or strike your blow;
Spare the sad victims for whose part
Falsehood armed to their woe.

"Yes, yes!" came from all sides, "mercy, pardon for misled brothers, for brother slaves pushed against us by bayonets!"

"Now," exclaimed the poet-captain, "to your knees, all of you, no matter who you are."

They knelt.

Rouget de Lisle alone remained upright, rested one foot on the rung of a chair, "as on the first step of the temple of liberty," and, lifting his arms to heaven, sang the last couplet, the invocation:

O! sacred love of home and native land,
Conduct, sustain our venging end;
Liberty, dear liberty,
Fight beside those who defend.

"Thirty-eight years afterward," wrote Alexander Dumas, in recounting to me that great night, "the forehead of Rouget de Lisle shone with the splendid aureole of 1792. The Marseillaise will always be the last cry of dying liberty, the first cry of liberty reborn!"

—French victory in cooking is unquestioned by all epicures. The finest luncheon in the land for 50 cents and dinner for one dollar at the Maison Doree, Ellis, above Powell street.

WHITE HORSE

SCOTCH

From

MACKIE & CO.
ISLAY, SCOTLAND

Never in Bulk

CHARLES MEINECKE & Co.

AGENTS PACIFIC COAST

314 SACRAMENTO ST., S. F.

Some one asked "Ferdie" Theriot whether he thought that his year old baby was really old enough to enjoy his birthday party. "The truth of it is that parents enjoy these things so much it's an irresistible temptation to celebrate them," answered this fond, but truthful parent.

And he might have added that although his year old son showed no more enthusiasm for his bottle of modified milk when refreshments were served than at any other time during the afternoon, some of the other little guests who had a few more birthday notches in their calendars than the small host, vied with their parents in their enjoyment of this unique affair.

The Theriots are living with the de Youngs this winter, and here the little tots with fathers as well as mothers and nurses, assembled to watch the antics of a trained pig! The squeals of delight of the children made the pig feel that the human family, while it is in the youthful state, at any rate, has much in common with a highly aristocratic, intensely specialized trained pig, and he did his very best—which was much better even than the "little pig that went to market," or the one that "stayed home," or the one that cried "Wee! wee! wee! all the way home!"

This has been a wonderful year for the kiddies, for all the children's parties, and there have been innumerable ones, have had some dazzling features. The climax, of course, was this trained pig, which was Mrs. Theriot's inspiration. There is no doubt that "piggy" has been given a great lift socially, for the telephone at the de Young house has been busy, even strangers who have heard about the party ringing up to find out where they can engage this talented member of the Pork family. Mrs. Theriot must feel like a theatrical angel to His Grace of Piglets.

Mrs. de Young, who has been very ill, was able to look in at the party for a little while, and every one was delighted to find her looking so well. The family intends to keep the house in San Rafael open part of the summer, as the climate over there is always very beneficial to Mrs. de Young.

Mrs. A. B. Spreckels has developed a mania, the germ of which ought to be caught by some public spirited scientist and inoculated into other wealthy people who seem immune to the generous impulses which prompt her to so richly endow these cities with works of art. The Putnam bronzes which she presented the other day are valuable testimony of her interest in the art development of this city.

Perhaps one of the surest signs of our youth as a city is the fact that the best art that we have is still in private ownership, whereas in the few American cities that have passed out of the nursing period in art, the biggest things are all in public galleries—if they are not owned by the city, they are at least loaned to the municipality. Every now and then we have a few weeks of loan exhibitions here, when Mrs. Will Crocker, Mrs. Francis Carolan, Dr. Will Tevis and others who own the works of the big people, take them down from their own walls, so that they may be hung where the public may get acquainted with them. There isn't any one here who has a private collection of enough importance to have certain days of the month when the house is open to the public, as do so many of the owners in Paris and London. Those who do own a few good pictures and who appreciate what a stimulating influence it is are among the Faithful whose enthusiasm never sags for the preservation of the Fine Arts Building.

Those who have been wondering whether Mrs. Harry Holbrook and Mrs. Alexander Hamilton would sever their friendship with Mrs. Frank Wakefield, who was formerly their sister-in-law, Mrs. Jack Spreckels, have had a very decisive answer from Mrs. Holbrook, who gave a dinner party the other night for the Wakefields. Mrs. Holbrook and Mrs. Hamilton have sponsored the social beginnings of their brother's wife (Sidi Wirt), so it was taken for granted that they would not complicate their undertakings by renewing their friendship with Mrs.

Wakefield. Both of Jack Spreckels' sisters used every effort to prevent his first marriage from going on the rocks, and it was largely through them that the Jack Spreckels menage did not go on the reefs long before they finally sent out an S. O. S. call to the divorce courts.

The present Mrs. Jack Spreckels has not tried to do any entertaining since her marriage, very wisely waiting until she is fully established. But she did preside over the Xmas party of her husband's children, assisted by Mrs. Holbrook, Mrs. Hamilton and other members of the Spreckels family.

It was then that society decided that the J. D. Spreckels family, one and all, would take sides against Edith Huntington Wakefield, and that little dinner party the other night was the kind of surprise that sets the most cautious tongues a-wagging. Some there are who see in it a declaration that his own family is not in sympathy with his intention to keep the children; others believe that it has no special significance of that sort, but is just a fine modern touch, proving that human relationships are being worked out more sensibly every day.

Miss Dorothy Baker and Dr. George Willcutt are so much in demand by their friends anxious to do them homage that they find their prenuptial days all too short for the many engagements crowding each other for room on the calendar. The bridal party is included in all these festivities, and this group of young people continues to show the super-stamina necessary for very popular wedding parties.

The arrangements for the wedding are now complete, and after a short honeymoon, the destination of which is a profound secret, the young people will make their home in San Francisco.

Rumor insists that Miss Jean Wheeler, who is to be one of Miss Baker's attendants, has a secret of her own which all in due time she will announce to the world and his inquisitive wife. The engagement of this charming girl has been rumored with a persistency only equaled by the non-committal attitude of the young people enveloped in the rumor.

Every effort is being made to induce the Malcolm Whitmans to come out here for the Mardi Gras ball in February. Mrs. Whitman is very anxious to see her sister-in-law, Mrs. Templeton Crocker, enthroned as Queen of the festivities, and it is just possible that she will brave the ardours of the journey. In spite of private cars and all the luxurious trimmings of a most de luxe trip across the continent, it is a difficult undertaking to move the Whitman family. Mrs. Whitman will not stir without her babies, and four children mean a retinue of nurses and servants. However, they are all homesick for California, and with the added incentive of being present at the coronation of a member of the family, they may generate enough enthusiasm to venture forth.

Mrs. Templeton Crocker has finally decided on her costume for queening it at the ball, but with proper appreciation of dramatic effect she is waiting until the last moment to give out any details. The committee has not settled down as yet to the regular business of meetings, for this particular group of young matrons is so skilled and experienced in this sort of thing that it can apparently weave a wishing carpet in a few days that transports the gay revelers to the magic scene.

Miss Hamlin's School, assisted by its patrons, alumni, former pupils and friends, announce a tea dansant in aid of the Belgian war sufferers, in the ball room of the Fairmont Hotel, Saturday, February 12th, Lincoln's Birthday, from four to seven o'clock. Arthur Hickman's band has been engaged, comprising seven instruments, and is one of the best orchestras for dancing

Not
Gray
Hairs
but tired
Eyes
Make us look older than we are.
Old age
and Dull
Eyes—
tell-tale.

Don't Tell
Your age

After the Movies
go home
and Marine
your Eyes.
Two
Drops
will rest,
refresh
and cleanse.
Have it
handy.

Marine Eye Remedy Company, Chicago, Sends Book of the Eye upon request.

in the city, playing regularly at the St. Francis Hotel. The patronesses are selected from those who have sent their children to Miss Hamlin's school for some years past.

Mme. Gombert, the French teacher at the school, has very enthusiastically devoted herself to the success of the tea. The alumni girls of the school are making up tables among their old class mates. The commission for the relief in Belgium, for which Mr. Hoover is chairman and Mrs. W. H. Crocker is the State treasurer, will be given the funds received. Mr. Theo. Huntington of the University of California and other University of California students, will be the floor managers. Tickets, inclusive of the tea, will be $1.50, and can be obtained from Miss Hamlin or any pupil of the school. Tables can be reserved without extra charge. Following are the patronesses:

Mesdames. Robert Irving Bentley, George E. Crothers, Edgar J. De Pue, M. H. de Young, C. M. Goldaracena, Thomas W. Huntington, Homer S. King, Agnes Lane-Leonard, Jesse Lilienthal, George F. McNear, William Matson, Sallie Maynard, W. H. Mills, B. F. Norris, Osgood Putnam, E. B. Rogers, Maurice Rosenthal, William P. Roth, William Thomas, Frederic Tillman, Clement Tobin, Frank I. Turner, Charles Stetson Wheeler, C. A. Vance, J. C. Van Eck, Henry Van Winkle.

☺ ☺ ☺

Society will specially appear in the Sports Pastime at the Big Fashion Show to be given at the Palace Hotel, March 4th, for the benefit of the Home for Incurables, the Doctor's Daughters and the San Francisco Maternity Home. Among those who will appear as models are Misses Jean Wheeler, Ruth Welsh, Gertrude Hopkins, Helen Garritt, Elva de Pue, Dorothea Poore, Dorothy Berry, Harriet Pomeroy, Anne Peters, Helen Jones, Phyllis de Young, Einnim McNear and Mrs. Elbert Rees. The afternoon performance will be combined with a dansant, the evening with a supper dansant. Tickets are obtainable from the patronesses and at I. Magnin's establishment, Geary and Grant avenue.

☺ ☺ ☺

Lucia Dunham and Horace Britt artists known and admired by all music loving San Franciscans, give an intimate and affectionate tinge to society's absorbing interest in their third concert of the Monday Morning Musicales, which will take place next Monday morning at the St. Francis, under the direction of Ralph MacFayden. Miss Dunham, who has endeared herself to local votaries of the muse and has received lavish praise from such critics as Krehbiel, Henderson and Aldrich, will be heard next Monday in modern classics, and an aria from Orfeo by Gluck. Her songs will be chosen from Purcell, Mozart, Strauss and Tschaiakowski. Britt, a 'cello virtuoso, whose command of critical admiration in San Francisco is secure, will offer, among other numbers, Variations Symphonique by Boellman, a Romance by Saint-Saens, and an Intermezzo by Lalo. Prominent society groups will entertain at these concerts.

☺ ☺ ☺

An army of philanthropic men and women is being organized to devote St. Valentine's day, February 14th, to soliciting one dollar subscriptions to the relief fund of the Associated Charities. More than the required number have already volunteered their services, and the accepted ones are being drafted into divisions, each of which will canvass a different district. Every residence, store, office and factory will be visited by one or more of these collectors. In return for each dollar will be given a receipt that will procure its holder free admittance to a "Dollar Day Dance" in the Civic Auditorium. This function promises to yield much more than a dollar's worth of entertainment. The dance will be free from dress restrictions, and for the stage performance the best vocal and terpsichorean talent available is being engaged. Society is mightily represented in the list of patronesses and floor managers. It will be a popular event in all that the adjective implies.

☺ ☺ ☺

Count and Countess Festetics are enjoying Del Monte to the full. They were among the most interested followers of the Special Golf match players to-day. The Count succeeded in taking several good pictures of difficult plays.

☺ ☺ ☺

Polo starts as planned this week, the first game being on Sunday, the 6th, at 2:30, Del Monte Polo Club against the Army team. The field is in excellent condition, and there promises to be a banner crowd. The schedule for the "C" annual tournament of the Del Monte Golf Club has been decided upon, and is very complete. The dates are February 19th to 22d inclusive.

On the last night (Washington's Birthday) there is to be a Leap Year Mask Dance, and great fun is expected. A costumer from San Francisco will be here several days before the party, so that every one may have ample time and a minimum of trouble in their costumes, masks, etc.

☺ ☺ ☺

On Monday, January 31st, the Women's Section of the Navy League met at the Hotel Oakland to form an Alameda County auxiliary. It is the ambition of the Navy League to have a million members by January 1, 1917. The movement is meeting with popular favor here, and no doubt the series of talks on preparedness that are being heard will have an effect to stimulate the membership campaign. Mrs. C. R. Fortin is in charge of the arrangements.

☺ ☺ ☺

The Lincoln Grammar School Association of San Francisco will have its annual banquet at the Palace Hotel, Parlor C, on the evening of Lincoln's Birthday, February 12, 1916, at 7 p. m. The association consists of Lincoln grammar school boys who attended that historic seat of learning prior to 1878. Each year a new class is admitted, so that the boys who attended in 1878 or before are admitted to the Association this year. The ultimate aim of the association is to erect a large local statue to Abraham Lincoln in San Francisco.

☺ ☺ ☺

The third of the Tuesday morning musicales that have been so popular will be given in the Ivory ball room, Hotel Oakland, Tuesday morning, February 8th, at 11 o'clock. Mr. MacFayden has arranged a very interesting program: Lucia Dunham, dramatic soprano; Horace Britt, 'cellist; Frederick Maurer, Jr., at the piano.

Fete in Fairyland.—Nineteen sixteen inspirations in spring styles, showing all the frills and fancies of the latest creations for "my lady's" wardrobe in the Rue des Modes of St. Francis will be shown in an elaborate manner at the Fete in Fairyland at the Civic Auditorium Saturday evening, February 12th. The affair will be given under the auspices of the Indoor Yacht Club and will be staged in conjunction with an elaborate production.

Events in the Paul Elder Gallery.—On Tuesday, February 8, at 3 o'clock, Eugen Neuhaus will give his third lecture in the course on "Painters, Pictures and the Public." The subject will be "The Laws of Pictorial Composition." On Wednesday forenoon, February 9th, at 10:45 o'clock, Leo Cooper will read the new play by Charles Kenyon (the author of "Kindling"), entitled "Husband and Wife."

—"Could you lend me a dollar, old man?" "Certainly. I could do lots of things I have no intention of doing. Nice day, isn't it?"—Judge.

—She—He's a man of a few words. He—Incessantly repeated, however.—Albany Argus.

W. D. Fennimore J. W. Davis A. R. Fennimore

California Optical Co.

Makers of Good Glasses

WE CANNOT GO OURSELVES
SO WILL YOU COME TO US?

We cannot go to each wearer of glasses personally but we would like to have you come to us. We are most anxious to explain to you fully the enumerable advantages of the new and wonderful lenses called "Caltex One-piece" Bifocals. If you use one pair of glasses for reading and one for distance we know you will be greatly interested. The "Caltex One-piece" Bifocals do away with the necessity of two pairs of glasses for the reading and distance are ground in one single lens.

181 Post Street } San Francisco
2508 Mission St. }
1221 Broadway, Oakland

Gouraud's
Oriental
Cream

Gives that snowy white complexion which fashion requires the well groomed woman to possess.

AT DRUGGISTS AND DEPARTMENT STORES

LOST.—Savings Pass Book, No. 21376, with Union Trust Company Finder will please return to the Bank, Market street and Grant avenue.

Frederic Belasco Talks

AN INTERVIEW WITH PAUL GERSON.

"What's the matter with our San Francisco theatre-going public?" Fred Belasco asked me. This blunt remark implied many things, so I encouraged him to tell me his troubles. "It's this way: I'm honestly at a loss what to give our people here. I secure the greatest New York successes, and stage them in a magnificent manner with a splendid acting organization, and the people do not seem to care for them. Our patronage has been fair, but not what it should be. Right now we are giving a genuine bona fide $2 show for less than half the money—a show which, if presented in a $2 house, would have packed it to the doors. The public is hard to understand. I do not believe that it is losing interest, but I will say that I think to some extent it is becoming careless. I don't mean this in the literal sense, but simply that it doesn't show the discrimination and judgment in matters theatrical it formerly did.

"I have often wondered if the theatre loving public of this city realizes what a dyed in the wool San Francisco institution the Alcazar is? I don't exaggerate when I say that through the immediate medium of this theatre and its working force, we spend annually a sum well over the two hundred thousand mark. All these years I have been working and struggling for recognition at the hands of my townspeople. For twenty-two years I have been waging the fight, giving the public the very cream of the best things in the theatrical larder, and still they have me guessing.

"Now, take the play last week, for instance, 'The Law of the Land.' It ran for a solid year in New York, and was voted an enormous success. We bring this play out here, pay an almost prohibitive royalty, and give it a magnificent production, with a cast which I believe is well nigh flawless, a play which combines all the essentials of success, and still the people do not come as they should. Broadhurst, the author, on the opening night, stated that our production in many respects excelled the New York production, and that we had, moreover, a better all-round acting cast. It is really hard to understand what this new generation desires. To some extent they appear to be satiated with the "movies"—they want the living figures—at least, this is what I'm given to understand.

"The Alcazar through all these years has stood for the best there is to be procured. We have our standard—and thousands of people know what the Alcazar standard means—and in this respect we have never faltered. Every play we produce is given a complete and perfect production. It would amaze some of the people who never stop to think of these things what our outlay weekly amounts to. For instance, besides our acting organization we have two complete working forces who toil night and day actively engaged on the scenery and properties for the coming play. Expense is never considered by us. Our sole aim is to give our clientele the very best. As a loyal San Franciscan I am naturally proud of what the Alcazar has accomplished. It is an actual fact that if we have taken one, we have taken more than five hundred young men and women of this city from offices and factories and given them Alcazar training, and these same people are now earning salaries ranging from one to five hundred dollars weekly. Some years ago when I traveled through Europe, I found that the reputation of the Alcazar had extended there. In New York, at least in theatrical circles, the Alcazar is generally recognized as the premier stock organization of this country. From our theatre we have graduated people like Frances Starr, who began with us at $60, and whose salary now is well over the $500 mark. Florence Roberts began with us as leading lady with Lewis Morrison. It was not so many years later when her weekly earnings at the Alcazar ran as high as $950 per week. She was then working on a salary and percentage basis. These are things I am proud of. Besides this, I've done all in my power to make this city a real producing center. I have brought out plays which our public here would simply not recognize, and which later proved great successes in New York. Our people are as intelligent as any in America, but it is evident we have not been able to convince them of the earnestness of our efforts. If grit will do it, I'm going to win them yet. I'm in the fight to stay, and fight I will, to remain at the head of the Alcazar forces and to give San Francisco the best there is in me.

"Did you see the show this week?" I confessed I had—

MELLOW AS MOONLIGHT

CASCADE

For your HI-BALL today

The finest, purest and mellowest whisky that brains and money can produce, cost to you no more than inferior grades; so why not ask for and insist on getting CASCADE.

Instead of saying whisky, just say CASCADE, you will enjoy it and feel much better.

Special enjoyable drink recipes for the asking by writing
J. H. Norton, care San Francisco News Letter

and that it was a wonderful performance. "Well, there you are. Then why don't the people come? We have had fairly good houses—but not, in my unbiased opinion, what the play warrants. The play is great, the company is great, and the production is the very last word in staging. No, it is not conditions, nor yet the weather. Your public will crowd a theatre irrespective of these things if they are really interested. We are always open to suggestions. The sole aim of Mr. Davis and myself is to cater to the best tastes of our local theatre-going public, to give them the maximum of entertainment at the minimum of cost. I have confidence in San Francisco. But we ask for co-operation, and the display of local pride and spirit in the Alcazar which was rampant here before the fire. We wish the public to show some interest in what we are doing, and to give us credit for our accomplishments. I have built two modern theatres here the last few years at a cost of almost a half million dollars, and I would build other theatres if the necessity arose. I am for this city, from first to last. Here is where all my efforts are centered. Personally, I am a great booster for my own town, simply because I firmly believe that it is a great town, and while I live I'll always fight to make the Alcazar just a little better than it has been, to keep it at the top, and to continue to be recognized everywhere as the finest stock organization in this country. This makes it all worth while."

—"I verily believe that inanimate things sometimes enter into the spirit of a festal occasion." "I know it. Last night, when I was going to a blow-out my automobile chimed in with a couple of its own."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Feed Your Baby Regularly

Regularity in feeding, sleeping, bathing and airing are of utmost importance at the beginning of your baby's life. It means so much to you in managing your household duties. It means so much to the little one in health and happiness.

Your baby should sleep well at night. If he does not the trouble is often with his food. If you are nursing the baby and your milk does not agree with him try the time-tried substitute that is made from clean, pure cows' milk—

Gail Borden

EAGLE BRAND

CONDENSED MILK

THE ORIGINAL

Three generations of careful mothers would tell you that they use "Eagle Brand," because it is pure, clean, uniform, easily digested, quickly prepared.

If you have never used "Eagle Brand" in cooking you have a happy surprise in store. It gives a delicious, rich flavor to your most delicate cookery. Use it as you would fresh milk and sugar.

Send coupon today.

Borden's Condensed Milk Co.
"Leaders of Quality"
Est. 1857 New York

N. L. 2-16
Borden's Condensed Milk Co.
108 Hudson St., New York

Please send me "Baby's Welfare."
Also "Baby's Biography" as well as
"Borden's Recipes."

Name _____
Address _____

PLEASURE'S WAND

"Obey no wand but Pleasure's."—Tom Moore.

Big Laugh Bill at the Orpheum.

There is something to please everybody on the bill this week, and of the nine numbers it is difficult to pick out any for special stellar honors. Opening the program there is Billy Bouncer, with his funny bounding spring act, in which he is actively aided by several ambitious young men from the audience, who imagine they can emulate the example of Bouncer. The thing is gotten together to manufacture laughter, and succeeds admirably. Marie Bishop is a violinist of charm and talent. She wins through sheer art and the kind of artistic violin playing which stamps her as a violinist of decided talent. Charles Sale has returned, and gives his ridiculous and excruciatingly funny country school characterizations. Sale deserves credit for work I consider in many respects remarkable, aside from the humorous side of his acting. To see him is to laugh immoderately. Wm. Rock is back on the circuit again, having chosen another partner in the person of dainty Frances White. The work of Rock we are all well acquainted with, and Miss White proves herself to be possessed of unusual dancing ability, and is a comedienne of no mean calibre. Their several dancing novelties score heavily; they prove to be one of the big successes of the whole program. Ralph Dunbar, with his singing bell ringers, has a very beautiful act, gorgeously mounted and dressed. They made a decided hit.

Our old Celtic friend, Frank Fogarty, is here again with a budget of new jokes, the best he has ever told us. Fogarty is in a class by himself. His jokes are clean and have the real Irish flavor. That capable woman, Mrs. Gene Highes, is visiting us again with her funny act entitled "Youth." If you want to see funny situations and enjoy a good hearty laugh, here is your medium. James Tooney and Annette Norman have an act of dancing and patter which is all too short. They are a great big hit. Closing the proceedings, there is Van and Belle, who obtain fame through their expertness in throwing the boomerang.

I reiterate: the show this week will please everybody.

PAUL GERSON.

* * *

The Wagner Symphony Concerts.

Of the two much anticipated symphony concerts, the one on Sunday brought me the most unalloyed enjoyment. The orchestra seemed to feel the import of each number more keenly than at Friday's performance, which might be attributed to the psychic influence of a thoroughly music loving audience.

The opening phrase of the Prelude to "Parsifal," with its breadth of melodic beauty and depth of tone given forth by strings and woodwinds in unison proclaimed an understanding of the world's religious mysticism and planted that thought within the mind of the listener. Then came the Prelude to "Tristan and Isolde," followed by Isolde's "Love Death," which was wonderful in intensity and climax. The perfectness of this number must have proven a source of much satisfaction to Conductor Hertz, for after bowing his appreciation many times to the continued applause, he was seen to voice his pleasure to the men in smiling acknowledgment of their effort. Tristan's

Bessie Clayton, "The Darling of Terpsichore," next week at the Orpheum.

Vision concluded the first half of the program, ethereal in beauty and almost intangible, at times, suggesting the flutter of wings.

Came the overture to the "Fligende Hollander" full of raging storms, suggestions of anathema and glimpses of softer moods. The "Siegfried Idyl" was to me the gem of the afternoon, with its calm restfulness, and although not brilliant like the closing number, "Die Meistersinger" prelude, which seemed to fairly bring the people to their feet in enthusiasm, it was pregnant with innate beauty and impressive meaning.

BETTY.

Roguish Fashion Girls Stolen at Pantages.

Skyrockets of laughs and applause sprayed through the lively prankish permutations of fun and frolic which makes the "Fashion Girls" in the "Fashion Show" of Frank Bohm's stellar production one of the big hits on the Pantages circuit. Harry Watson as a chauffeur transformed into a burglar is a laugh every time he moves. He was aided and abetted by a flock of damsels, stunningly gowned, that were alluring enough to make any man in the audience try to steal them, much less a dancing burglar singing catchy songs of what he is going to do. "Oklahoma" Bob Albright, accompanied by Cliff Carney on the piano, has a strong, vibrant and tuneful voice which caught the fancy through his excellent selections. The audience could not get enough of them, and the imitations he gave of popular singers. They say that if any man walks the street for a day he is bound to find his double. Something like that must have occurred with the Potts twins when they looked at each other as kids, for they are alike as two pins, and that fatal "double" creates side-splitting situations in the farce, "A Double's Double." "Billee Seaton" is captivating in appearance as well as in the original manner in which she puts her entertaining songs over the footlights. Strong armed athletes come and go in vaudeville, but nothing so far starred in this line eclipses the feats performed by the two Standard brothers. The heavy weight of the two literally does turns in lifting his fellow by the arms that seem impossible. The star feature is catching him at arm's length, after a spring-board jump in the air 20 feet away, both men being blindfolded. Bert Wiggin materializes his fun out of mechanical oddities on Jay Street, and he has an assortment of the biggest freak toys ever assembled. Another reel detailing a chapter in that absorbing "Red Circle" film keeps the audience wildly guessing over the climax.

* * *

ADVANCE ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Thrilling Wild Animal Act at Pantages.—Herr Haveman's wild animals, consisting of untamed lions, leopards, tigers and a herd of hyenas, will be one of the strongest features on a bill that is said to surpass any show that has been seen at the Pantages in months. Haveman is a German traveler who has seen service with several of the most intrepid animal hunters in the jungles of Africa, while hunting and capturing wild animals for circus and zoological purposes. This extraordinary collection has been trained by Haveman, who has the most wonderful control of them. As an instance, Haveman places his head between the jaws of a big, tawny maned lion, and the king of the forest holds this posture for a full minute. Bertha Gardener, an operatic singer, who was studying in Paris at the outbreak of the war, is the special feature of the new show. Miss Gardener served in the French trenches for a year as a volunteer nurse. Her home is in Seattle, and she is making a brief tour of the coast cities preparatory to returning to New York to continue her studies. "A Revue of 1915-1916" will be presented by Roberts, Stuart and Roberts, who carry special scenery for their specialties, which consists of character songs and intricate dances. Lewis, Belmont and Lewis have a fetching little playlet with an interlude of popular ballads and fast comedy. The Heuman trio are trick cyclists, who introduce a whirlwind game of basket ball while riding their wheels. "Just an American Girl" is Ray Lawrence, a dashing young chap who impersonates musical comedy stars. The eight episodes of "The Red Circle" shows further entanglements of the mysterious criminal brand.

* * *

Dramatized Sex Question at Columbia.—Are sex-questions fitting subjects to be discussed upon the stage, and should they be permitted? Once again has this vital subject caused considerable comment by the recent production in Los Angeles of a sex-drama entitled "Motherhood," written by Lillian Langdon and Charles Bolles, and sides have been taken by the critics, the clergy and by the public. "Motherhood" deals with the rights of children born out of wedlock, to be fully recognized by the law, and the authors claim that gross injustice is done to these illegitimate children because their parents have not fulfilled the laws of man. They assert that the laws of nature are supreme to the laws of man, and that motherhood is sacred alike to the pure and impure. A storm of criticism met the statement of the noted educator of Los Angeles and member of the city council, Mrs. Estelle Lawton Lindsay, who in addressing a recent meeting of the "Birth Control Congress," said:

"I believe a woman's body is her own, to do with it as she pleases. I do not believe any power on earth, man, government or any other influence has any right to dictate to a woman what she shall do with her body. Woman has the right to choose the father of her children, and no power less than God Almighty has a right to dictate to her in this matter."

There are only five speaking characters in the drama, the principal roles being portrayed by Blanche Hall, formerly one of the stars in "Peg o' My Heart," and by Jack Bryce, both artists earning unstinted praise. The balance of the players was carefully selected for especial fitness, and the entire production was made under the direction of Fred J. Butler, who is well-known as a master of stage-craft to theatre-goers in this city.

"Motherhood" will be presented at the Columbia Theatre for one week commencing next Monday evening, with matinees on Wednesday and Saturday. The popular price of $1 will prevail during the engagement, this being the first time in the history of the Columbia Theatre that a dramatic attraction has been given at this price.

The final performance of "It Pays to Advertise" will be given this Saturday afternoon and night and Sunday night.

* * *

Bessie Clayton, Premier Dancer, at Orpheum.—Bessie Clayton, the American premiere danseuse, and the world's greatest toe dancer, will head a great new show next week at the Orpheum. She will be supported by the accomplished artist Lester Sheehan, and the famous Clayton Sextette in "The Dances of Yesterday, To-Day and To-Morrow." It is the proud boast of Miss Clayton that she is the only American premiere danseuse who has ever been contracted for by the French government. In Paris and New York she created a tremendous furore, and the N. Y. American described her as "The girl who has made New York dancing mad." "The Bachelor Dinner," which will be performed by Jack Henry, Rose Gardner, Joseph B. Roberts and a company of thirteen, is a screaming musical comedy written to comply with the requirements of vaudeville.

John R. Gordon, a sterling actor who has recently been recruited from the legitimate stage, will appear in his own playlet, "Knight and Day," which is entirely novel in its plot and construction. Eddie Cantor and Al. Lee, among the best and most popular entertainers in vaudeville, will furnish a lively and enjoyable act. Mang and Snyder introduce a number of novel and hazardous acrobatic feats. Billy McDermott, who bills himself as "The Only Survivor of Coxey's Army," is a tramp comedian with a most diverting monologue. Major Mack Rhoades, the phenomenal boy violinist, possesses wonderful technique and bowing. He took up the study of music when only four years old. The only holdover in this glorious bill will be Frank Fogarty, "The Dublin Minstrel." As a finale, the sixth installment of the "Uncle Sam at Work" motion picture, secured exclusively for the Orpheum Circuit, entitled "Saving Wealth and Building Health," will be exhibited.

* * *

Fifth Symphony Program Ready.—With Ossip Gabrilowitsch, the great Russian pianist, as soloist, the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, Alfred Hertz, conductor, will give the fifth pair of symphony concerts of the current season at the Cort Theatre, Friday afternoon, February 4th, at 3 o'clock, and Sunday afternoon, February 6th, at 2:30 o'clock. Programmed is the Symphony No. 2, D. Major, Op. 36, of Beethoven; the Concerto in D minor for pianoforte (K. 456) of Mozart; Concert Piece in F minor for pianoforte and orchestra, Op. 79, of Weber, and the Symphonic poem, "Vltava" (The Moldau) of Smetana. For the sixth pair of symphony concerts, the program will have the assistance of Maude Fay, soprano of the Royal Opera House, at Munich. Miss Fay, a California girl, is one of the great dramatic sopranos of the world. Mr. Hertz and Miss Fay are in telegraphic communication, and it is expected that one of Miss Fay's numbers with the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra will be the great scene and aria, "Ocean; Thou Mightiest Monster!" from Weber's opera, "Oberon." Tickets for the fifth and sixth pairs of concerts will be on sale daily at the box offices of Sherman, Clay & Co. and Kohler & Chase, except on days of concerts, when they will be on sale at the box office of the Cort Theatre.

FASHION'S FADS AND FRILLS

It is interesting to follow the trend of fashion each season, to note how surely and completely we come to approve of even the most decided change after it had been presented to us in attractive guise, at different times and on various occasions. It surely does seem, too, upon looking back some few years, that each season's changes are for the better. For instance, the full skirt: how we all poo-pooed it when the whisper first began to circulate that it was to be revived, and that our trim, youthful narrow skirt had had its day. To-day, however, the full skirt is one of the approved features of the modes, and is still growing fuller. We smile upon it approvingly now, and what at first appearance was looked upon as bulk and clumsiness, is now considered quaint and daintily feminine.

Ribbon as Trimming.

Ribbon is being used profusely as trimming on both hats and frocks. It ranges in width from the inch-wide faille or moire banding, girdling the waist of the severe little frock of taffeta or serge, or forming the perky cockade on the chic chapeau, to the wide satin, moire or taffeta ribbon which forms the entire skirt or bodice of the dance frock or dinner dress. In many of the new dinner and evening dresses ribbon bows of all descriptions are used for trimming; there are perky little bows, wide, graceful bows, simple bows with flying ends tacked on to bodice and skirt at various angles. Mme. Jenny is particularly given to ribbon trimmings; some of her dainty dresses have their sheer, full skirts banded around the bottom with wide metal-edged ribbons, giving them a most effective appearance.

Jumpers Still in Vogue.

For late spring and early fall, there is nothing quite as satisfactory as the jumper dress of taffeta, serge, or a soft, lightweight wool. Worn with guimpes, or over the regulation shirt-bouse of crepe de Chine, crepe Georgette, or taffeta it makes an attractive costume for street and general daytime wear, perfectly suitable without coat or other wrap. Such a dress has all the appeal of a one-piece frock, with the added attraction of being easily freshened and changed by the addition of a contrasting guimpe or underblouse. One of the most attractive of these jumper dresses is illustrated here, developed in black taffeta, with accompanying underbodice of white crepe Georgette. The high collar, smart sleeve, and flaring skirt present a pleasing picture. The second frock is also in jumper effect; one of the dainty ribbon girdles, with long, flying ends and small cravat bow is a feature. The skirt is unusual and new, and the jumper particularly simple and smart of cut. This idea is nicely suited to either taffeta or a fine serge. The open throat, which will probably continue in favor during the summer, is an attractive detail of the underblouse of crepe de Chine.

The New Ribbon Girdle

A Word on Collars and Capes.

"Collets," as they call those trim, cape-like collars introduced this season, are features of many of the newest frocks and blouses.

One of the newest blouses shows a series of these little "collets" graduated from a narrow frill about the neck to a deep cape extending quite to the waist. These cape-like collars, resembling the capes on a coachman's coat, are among the latest and most approved of the new dress details; they are especially effective on frocks of taffeta and satin.

Variety in Sleeves.

The drop shoulder and full sleeve is a feature of many of the new frocks; in fact, the sleeve is the point, it would seem, where designers and dressmakers are expending most of their ingenuity. Many original, attractive notions are being carried out in the cuff, in the trimming, and in the shoulder line. Fulness is a decided feature, and many effective methods of trimming are being resorted to; for instance, stiff little ruffles and frills, and old-time quillings appear, lending an air of 1840, which is quite in keeping with the full skirts and other features of this period daily being introduced.

The Youthful Silhouette.

There were many of us who bemoaned the passing of the slender skirt because of its youthful air, but Fashion has taken care of this, too, in her new rulings. The flare of the skirt and coat, the suggestion of a slender waist, the shortness of the skirts, topped effectively by a perky, high hat, very close fitting, and completed with trim, well-fitting footwear, is quite as youthful and trim, and far more comfortable than the pipe-stem skirt in which a natural stride was utterly impossible.

Black Taffeta Jumper Dress

"How do you know that Chaucer dictated to a stenographer?" "Look at the spelling."—Columbia Jester.

Orpheum

O'Farrell Street Bet. Stockton and Powell
Phone Douglas 70

Week beginning THIS SUNDAY AFTERNOON MATINEE EVERY DAY.

A MAGNIFICENT NEW BILL

BESSIE CLAYTON "The Darling of Terpsichore" Supported by Lester Sheehan and the Clayton Sextette in "The Dances of Yesterday, To-Day and To-Morrow;" "THE BACHELOR DINNER" with Jack Henry, Rose Gardner, Jos. B. Roberts and Company of Thirtzen; JOHN R. GORLON & CO. in "Knight and Day;" EDIE CANTOR and AL LEE (Comedians); MANG and SNYDER Master Athletes; BILLY McDERMOTT, "The Only Survivor of Coxe's Army;" MAJOR MACK RHOADES, Phenomenal Boy Violinist; "SAVING WEALTH AND BUILDING HEALTH," Last Week FRANK FOGARTY, "The Dublin Minstrel"

Evening Prices, 10c., 25c., 50c., 75c. Box seats, $1. Matinee prices (except Sundays and holidays), 10c., 25c., 50c. Phone Douglas 70.

Columbia Theatre

Corner Mason and Geary Streets
Phone Franklin 19
The Leading Playhouse

Beginning Monday Night, Feb. 7th. Matinee Wednesday and Saturday
The STARTLING SEX - DRAMA

MOTHERHOOD

by Lillian Langdon and Charles Bolles with Blanche Hall and Jack Bryce and a selected cast.
Not a Motion Picture
Special popular prices: Nights and Matinees, 25c., 50c., 75c., $1.

Pantages' Theatre

Market Street Opposite Mason

Commencing Sunday Afternoon, February 6, 1916

A FINE NEW BILL

HERR HAVEMAN'S WILD ANIMALS, Lions, Tigers, Leopards and Hyenas
The Acme of All Trained Animals Features: BERTHA GARDNER, Grand Opera Vocalist, Miss Gardner served in the French Trenches as a Volunteer Red Cross Nurse; ELIOT ALL STAR PANTAGES ACTS & ELIOT ELLIOTT OF "THE RED CIRCLE."

"Held to Answer."

In his hero, John Hampstead—railroad clerk, actor, book agent and preacher—Peter Clark Macfarlane has depicted a character destined to live in American fiction; in Marien Dounay, the actress, ambitious to become a famous star, yet loving the crude John Hampstead with all the intensity of her passionate nature, Mr. Macfarlane has portrayed a real woman of the stage. Then there is the other girl—dimpled, blue-eyed, trusting Bessie—who has loved John with a child's love undisclosed until he blunders under the spell of the actress. With these materials, Mr. Macfarlane has written a big emotional American drama.

First as a stenographer in a Los Angeles railroad office, then as a stock company actor in San Francisco, and finally as the self-appointed pastor of an abandoned chapel is John Hampstead revealed to us. During this period he develops marvelously. But the return of the actress after he has built up All People's Church is followed by a chain of events which are most dramatic, and the once popular idol of the people becomes involved in such a manner that his congregation is divided, while the sorely-trying man, to protect others, maintains silence during his ordeal.

The reader's feelings are deeply stirred by the dramatic developments that hold him spell-bound, and love scenes that touch the heartstrings. This is above all a clean, wholesome story, written with sincerity of purpose, and cannot fail to make a deep impression on the reading public.

The book is freely illustrated with drawings by W. B. King. Price $1.35 net. Published by Little, Brown & Company, Boston, Mass.

* * *

Great Spiritual Writers of America.

Mr. George Hamlin Fitch has completed and delivered to his publishers, Paul Elder & Company, San Francisco, his manuscript of a volume of essays entitled "Great Spiritual Writers of America." The book is intended to round out and complete the studies in literature already issued in "Comfort Found in Good Old Books" and "Modern English Books of Power." The chapters treat of representative American authors, who, in the writer's judgment, best illustrate the national genius. These include Whitman, Emerson, Irving, Poe, Longfellow, Hawthorne, Cooper, Lowell, Holmes, Whittier, Parkman, Mark Twain, Thoreau, Howells and Edwin Markham.

To be published by Paul Elder & Company.

* * *

Baseball a Test of Americanism?

James Hopper, author of "Coming Back With the Spitball," has been ordered by the French Government to military duty. Although Mr. Hopper grew up in California, where he was educated and married, he is unable to prove his American citizenship. He was born in Paris of a French mother, and all the records which might prove his naturalization are said to have perished in the San Francisco fire. If a knowledge of baseball be a test of Americanism, it might be worth while to send a copy of "Coming Back with the Spitball" to the French War Office to prove Mr. Hopper's claim.

Published by Harper & Brothers, New York.

* * *

"Painless Childbirth."

Some months ago, articles on "Twilight Sleep" written by laymen began to appear in various magazines. Too often their writers left the impression that by the use of some well-known drugs that all the fears and dangers of maternity are easily eliminated. And yet the method described by them (the Freiburg) had been in use for over twelve years, and because of serious limitations had become greatly restricted and largely discarded by the medical profession of America.

This book is important for two reasons: it is the first book by an obstetrician to thoroughly discuss the various methods employed in the attempt to secure painless childbirth; and, secondly, it is the first report of the results of varied experience with the nitrous oxid-oxygen analgesia, which may become the analgesic of choice in obstetrics. Granting that painless obstetrics is desirable, the author pleads for safer and better obstetrics. He claims that with all the modern progress in preventive medicine that there has not been a corresponding increase in the safety of maternity. By quoting liberally from various obstetrical authorities and the mortality records of several countries, Dr. Davis shows that maternity is more dangerous to-day than before the discovery of anesthetics and antiseptics.

Price, $1. Published by Forbes & Co., Chicago.

* * *

"The Soul of Woman."

The world of Feminism will be interested to know that Paul Elder & Company, San Francisco, are getting ready for publication a book entitled "The Soul of Woman," and having the sub-title "An Introduction to the Philosophy of Feminism," by Paul Jordan Smith of the English Department of the University of California. The author contends that the fight for suffrage is nearing a successful close, and that Feminism is more inclusive than any of the earlier phases of the woman movement. These, in fact, existed as mere forerunners of Feminism. The book is a radical statement of the implications of Feminism, with its Nietzschean attitude toward morals, and gives in essence the philosophy of the most advanced leaders of the woman movement the world over.

* * *

"A Painter of Dreams," by A. M. W. Stirling, author of "Coke of Norfolk," etc., has just been published. The "Painter of Dreams" is Roddam Spencer Stanhope, the Idealist. The book teems with incident, humor and hitherto unpublished information respecting many historical personages, among them John Frederick Herring, the Realist, an American by birth, and Charles Carroll of Carrollton, the famous Senator of Maryland, whose name is eternally interwoven with the history of American independence. Published by John Lane Company, New York.

* * *

That Kipling's greatest work is to be found in the "Jungle Books" is the opinion of John Palmer, in his recent study of the English author. Mr. Palmer believes that Kipling's short stories of Indian life, the "Plain Tales" and others, show simply the "efficient literary workman," while the Kipling of the "Jungle Books" is an inspired author. This appears also to be the opinion of the public. Kipling's continued popularity has often been commented upon. How great it is may be gathered from the announcement of The Century Company that in the month of December just past, of the two "Jungle Books" and "Captains Courageous," it sold over three thousand copies. How many books can equal that record for a single month twenty years or so after publication?

—The Sunday Dansant Club at Techau Tavern is achieving great popularity and the membership is constantly increasing. These dances are held in the Colonial ball room on the mezzanine floor, and are open to members only. A most sumptuous dinner is served in the rooms of the club at $1.50 per plate, and have set a standard of excellence never before achieved at the price even in this cafe, which is noted for the lavishness of its catering.

A Beautiful Gift Book

California as a Health Resort

Its History, Climate, Missions, Industries, Places of Interest, Educational Advantages, and Mineral Springs.

Told In A New Way

300 Pages

80 Full Page Pictures

Publishers: Bolte & Braden Co.

San Francisco

Price Two Dollars

GENERAL WOODRUFF ON PREPAREDNESS.

The weekly military talks to business men, and others interested, at the Palace Hotel during the post-luncheon hour, are attracting an increasing number of thinking men. It is only by listening to expert speakers and the ensuing discussions that the man in the street is able to form a conception of the tremendous task that preparedness entails. The days when a man could take his trusty rifle down from its nail on the wall over the chimney place, kiss his wife good-bye and step into the ranks an efficient soldier, have long passed, if, indeed, they ever existed.

Those who had the privilege of hearing Brigadier-General Charles A. Woodruff, U. S. A. (retired) at the Presidio Instruction camp, last summer, will never forget his address on the Psychology of War. While this is too long to be quoted in full (though it should be) the following excerpt is of exceptional interest:

The Psychology of Treason

Apropos to my subject, let me give you an illustration of the psychology of treason, for it is the most unblushing attempt at national hari-kari I have ever seen: On June 19th, at a peace meeting held in Carnegie Hall, New York, the principal speaker was one of the most talked of men in the United States. At the door was distributed this pledge: "I, being over eighteen years of age, hereby pledge myself against enlistment as a volunteer for any military or naval service in International War, and against giving my approval of such enlistment upon the part of others." The author of this treasonable document is a clergyman of note, and every lover of our country owes it to himself to unite in condemning in the strongest terms such a dangerous, disloyal agitator, whose teachings, if followed, would make our people as helpless and spineless as jelly-fish. The same thing happened in Boston, July 4th, of all days, when 100 men and boys signed the pledge. No wonder the women of Boston prefer single blessedness to mating with such spineless creatures.

Owing to these treasonable teachings we are given surfeit of "I didn't raise my boy to be a soldier," and similar disloyal gush. Of course we do not breed men for the sole purpose of making soldiers of them, but when national salvation or national honor demands it, we expect them to do their full duty. Otherwise, we would breed a race of cowards.

The mothers of '61, North and South (God bless them), just as gentle, loving and devoted as the mothers of today, would have been ashamed if their sons had not become soldiers.

General Woodruff further points out how our unpreparedness in 1812 caused the shameful defeat of our land forces, and had it not been for the navy we must have been wiped out as a nation. And while we may be proud of our north and south armies in the civil war, yet it is a fact that both sides were unprepared, and as one General officer said:

"During the first year of the war, there was not a single battle wherein a regular force one-half the size of either army could not have defeated both armies combined."

GEORGE W. CASWELL HONORED.

George W. Caswell has been appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury, Hon. Wm. G. McAdoo, a member of the U. S. Board of Tea Experts to prepare and submit to the Secretary of the Treasury standard samples of tea under the Act of Congress approved March 2, 1897, to serve one year. The meeting of the board will be held at the U. S. Appraiser's stores, New York, N. Y., 10 o'clock Monday morning, February 14, 1916.

Dr. Byron Haines, Dentist, has resumed practice at his office in Gunst Building, S. W. corner Geary and Powell streets.

Wedding Presents.—The choicest variety to select from at Marsh's, who is now permanently located at Post and Powell streets.

Hotel del Coronado

Coronado Beach, California

American Plan

Polo January 1 to March 20

Annual Polo Tournament March 1 to 20

Bay and Surf Bathing

Boating Deep Sea Fishing Tennis

Motoring

18 Hole Golf Course

Write for Booklet

John J. Hernan -:- Manager

TYPICAL OF CALIFORNIA

PALACE HOTEL

Since 1875 the Historic Hotel of San Francisco
 NEW MANAGEMENT NEW POLICY
 European Plan Only. Rates from $2 per day upward.

FAIRMONT HOTEL
 The Most Superbly Situated Hotel in the World.
 Under Same Management.

Hotel St. Francis Announces the
Club Room Special

A Busy Man's Luncheon

Beginning January 10, 1916

50 Cents

Service From 11:30 to 2:00

HOTEL OAKLAND OAKLAND, CALIFORNIA
Overlooking Lake Merritt and the Mountains

The most picturesque location in America, commanding views of a salt water lake in the heart of the city, the mountains in the background, and the Bay. An ideal home for refined permanent guests.

European Plan: From $1.50 a day up American Plan: From $2.00 a day up
 Write for our extraordinarily low permanent rates. Carl Sword, Manager

Phone Kearny 2842

Cosgrove's Hair Store

Established 20 Years

239 Powell Street
 San Francisco

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL ITEMS

ENGAGEMENTS.

- DUVAL-PEARCE.—San Francisco society is much interested in the engagement of Miss Alice Duval and Elston E. Pearce of New York, which was made known Wednesday through notes received by the San Francisco friends of the bride-elect. Miss Duval passed several months in San Francisco last year, when she visited her cousin, Miss Mary Phelan, at her home on California street. The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Louis Duval of New York. The marriage will take place the latter part of the month.
- FINNELL-SLADE.—Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Mary Helen Finnell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Finnell of Chico, Cal., to Mr. Russell C. Slade, son of Mr. and Mrs. Spencer E. Slade of this city.
- ROBINSON-POILLION.—News of the engagement of Miss Winifred Robinson of Colorado and Captain Arthur Poillion, United States Army. Is a piece of news that is causing much pleasurable excitement here, where the popular army officer was stationed for several years. The announcement was made a few days ago by the mother of the bride-elect, Mrs. Cornelia S. Gambrell. Captain Poillion will secure a leave of absence in the spring, when the marriage will take place.
- ROWLEY-KEITH.—An engagement announcement that is causing much pleasurable interest on both sides of the bay is that of Miss Alice Rowley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Sears Rowley, and Roger Keith of Des Moines, Iowa. Miss Rowley left Sunday night for Chicago, where the marriage will be solemnized on February 9th. Roger Keith is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles V. Keith, of Des Moines. He has passed much time in California and attended the University of California, where he was a member of the class of 1912. After the marriage, he and his bride will make their home in Des Moines.

WEDDING ANNOUNCEMENTS.

- WILSON-MOORE.—Society will be interested in the announcement that Miss Madge Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Wilson, and Dr. Chester Moore will be married at noon Saturday, March 25th. The ceremony will be performed by Dean Wilmer Gresham in the Swedenborgian Church, and only relatives and close friends will be among the witnesses.

WEDDINGS.

- BRUNE-VAN FLEET.—The early arrival of spring in Marin County seemed to glorify the marriage of Miss Alice Brune and Alan Van Fleet, and Monday's sunshine was all that was needed to make it a wonderfully beautiful ceremony. The wedding took place at St. John's Episcopal Church in Ross, with the Rev. William de Witt reading the ritual. Following, the relatives and a few family friends greeted Mr. and Mrs. Van Fleet at the Brune home, remaining for the daintily served repast. Mr. and Mrs. Van Fleet left on their honeymoon, and will reside at a newly furnished home in Jackson and Broderick streets, San Francisco.
- HARRISON-LAWSON.—Miss Theresa Harrison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin C. Harrison, was married to Andrew Werner Lawson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew C. Lawson, of Berkeley, Tuesday night. The ceremony took place at the Harrison home on Washington street, with the Rev. Father John S. McGlenty reading the ritual. After the ceremony there was the greeting to the newly-weds and a wedding repast, with informal dancing. Mr. and Mrs. Lawson have a beautifully furnished new apartment in Green and Broderick streets awaiting them when they return.

LUNCHEONS.

- BELL.—Mrs. J. Franklin Bell will entertain at a luncheon to-day at her home at Fort Mason. Mrs. Bell has been receiving her friends at Tuesday afternoon teas, and next Saturday's luncheon will be one of a series of several this month.
- BOARDMAN.—Miss Dorothy Baker and Miss Gertrude Thomas shared the honors at the luncheon given by Mrs. Samuel Boardman Wednesday afternoon at her home on Broadway.
- DE YOUNG.—Miss Phyllis de Young entertained a coterie of congenial friends at a luncheon which she gave Monday.
- ELLCOTT.—The younger matrons of Mare Island were the guests of Miss Priscilla Ellicott recently at her home at the navy yard. After the elaborate luncheon the afternoon was devoted to bridge.
- FRANKLIN.—Mrs. Walter Scott Franklin had a pretty springtime luncheon at the Fairmont Hotel Wednesday. It was in the gray room, which was massed with golden acacia boughs and quantilles of violets, creating a brilliant-hued ensemble.
- HIRSCH.—Among the enjoyable events of last week was the luncheon given Friday at the Presidio in compliment to Mrs. J. Franklin Bell. Mrs. Harry Hirsch, wife of Major Hirsch, was the hostess on the occasion.
- HUNTER.—Mrs. A. M. Hunter, wife of Colonel Hunter, U. S. A., commandant at Fort Winfield Scott, was hostess at a luncheon at her home Friday.
- MILLER.—Mrs. H. M. A. Miller was hostess Saturday at a luncheon given at her apartments at Stanford Court, in compliment to Miss Alice Brune, whose marriage to Allan Van Fleet was solemnized on Monday.
- MINTZER.—Miss Mauricia Mintzer has issued invitations for a luncheon to be given Wednesday afternoon at her home in this city. Miss Dorothy Baker, the fiancée of Dr. George Willeut, is its inspiration.
- PILLSBURY.—Miss Emily Timlow, one of the most popular debutantes of this year, was the complimented guest at a luncheon at which Mrs. Horace Pillsbury presided Thursday afternoon.

- TREAT.—The Town and Country Club was the setting for a luncheon at which Miss Myra Treat was the hostess Tuesday afternoon. The delightful affair is being planned in compliment to Miss Dorothy Baker.
- WOLFE.—Mrs. Orrin Wolfe, who has been staying with her mother, Mrs. A. A. Watkins, in Sausalito, while her husband, Captain Wolfe, U. S. A., is away at the Mexican border, gave a luncheon Wednesday. The luncheon took place at the Watkins home.

DINNERS.

- BAKER.—The Palace Hotel will be the setting for a dinner at which Miss Marion Baker will compliment over a score of her young friends. This affair will take place in the Rose Room of the hotel on Monday evening.
- BAKER.—Complimenting Miss Dorothy Baker and her fiancée, Dr. Geo. Willeut, Alfred Holmes entertained Tuesday evening at a dinner dance at the Palace Hotel.
- BOCQUERAZ.—Complimenting his fiancée, Miss Gertrude Thomas, Roger Bocqueraz was host at dinner Friday evening at the St. Francis, and afterward the party occupied a box at the benefit affair given for the blinded soldiers and sailors of the Allies.
- CRIMMINS.—A delightful dinner was the compliment Wednesday evening by Mrs. Martin Crimmins to Lieutenant and Mrs. Charles Nulsen, who are in San Francisco en route to the Philippines. They will sail to-day.
- DUTTON.—Mr. and Mrs. Henry Foster Dutton will be dinner hosts this evening. Their guests will assemble at the Burlingame Country Club.
- GIBBONS.—Dr. and Mrs. Morton Gibbons will entertain a coterie of friends at dinner Wednesday evening at their attractive home on Washington street.
- HAYNE.—Mr. and Mrs. Robin Y. Hayne entertained at a dinner at their home in San Mateo, preceding the dance at the Polo Club Saturday evening.
- HOLBROOK.—Mr. and Mrs. Harry M. Holbrook entertained informally on Monday night at a dinner for Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wakefield. Mrs. Wakefield was formerly Mrs. Edith Huntington Spreckels.
- HOWLAND.—Captain Charles Howland, commandant of the Disciplinary Barracks at Alcatraz Island, entertained at a dinner Tuesday evening at the Bohemian Club, and later with his guests occupied a box at the benefit given at the St. Francis Hotel in aid of Father Arch Perrin's work in behalf of prisoners and ex-convicts.
- HUNT.—Mrs. Randall Hunt was hostess Sunday evening at a dinner which she gave at her home on Pacific avenue. The affair was in honor of Miss Dorothy Baker and her fiancée, Dr. George Hayes Willeut.
- KOHL.—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Frederick Kohl entertained a number of friends at dinner Friday evening. This affair had for its setting the St. Francis Hotel.
- LAPHAM.—One of the largest dinner parties already planned to precede the Mardi Gras ball on March 7th is that at which Dr. and Mrs. Rodger D. Lapham will preside. It will be held at their home in Washington street.
- MARTIN.—Mrs. Eleanor Martin was hostess to a group of friends at dinner Friday evening at her home on Broadway, and afterward they went to the St. Francis Hotel, where they shared in the pleasure of the benefit entertainment given that evening for the blind soldiers of the Allies.
- MILLER.—Mr. and Mrs. H. M. A. Miller were hosts at a handsome dinner party Tuesday night, given in compliment to Miss Gertrude Thomas and Roger Bocqueraz, who are to be married on the 23d of the month.
- WOODRUFF.—General and Mrs. Charles Woodruff entertained a coterie of friends at dinner Saturday evening at their apartments on Chestnut street.

RECEPTIONS.

- MOORE.—In response to invitations issued by Mrs. Stanley Moore, a large number will cross the bay this afternoon for an elaborate reception at which she will be hostess at the Claremont Country Club.

THE HOTEL PLAZA

overlooking the beautiful Plaza of Union Square, the Hotel of refinement and service, is offering special rates to permanent guests.

Hotel Plaza Company

TEAS.

FOURIE.—Mrs. James W. Fourie entertained informally at a tea Sunday afternoon at her home at Fort Milby.

CARDS.

BRYAN.—A bridge party will be given by Miss Linda Bryan this afternoon at her home on Vallejo street. The complimented guests will be Miss Edith Cumming of Sacramento, who is visiting Miss Bryan.
DAVIS.—Mrs. Richard William Davis gave a bridge party recently, assembling some of the friends of Mrs. Conrad Peters, who is here from Paris en route to the Orient.
KNECHT.—Mrs. Gustav Knecht has sent out cards for a bridge party to be given February 10th at her home in West Clay Park.
OLNEY.—Miss Anna Olney was hostess at a bridge party on Thursday afternoon at their new home on Green street.

DANCES.

DAVIS.—On Saturday evening Mr. and Mrs. Richard William Davis had a dancing party to entertain the young friends of Miss Grace Cramer, who is spending the winter here from Nevada City while attending school.
PEOPLE'S PLACE.—Many reservations for the benefit dinner dance, to be given for the support of the People's Place, have been made, making a total of some two hundred or over. It takes place on Saturday, February 19th, at the Palace Hotel.
SAN MATEO POLO CLUB.—The San Mateo Polo Club set enjoyed a jolly leap year dance at the Club Saturday evening. The membership was well represented, and several dinner parties preceded the dancing. The dance was quite informal. To George Howard, president of the club, and to Mrs. Howard the guests accorded much of the credit for the success of the affair.
SEQUOIA CLUB.—A fancy dress party is to be given this evening, February 5th, at Sequoia Club, by the members.

THEATRE PARTIES.

MARGOTTI.—Dio Margotti, the affable Italian commissioner to the Exposition, was host at the Cort Theatre Monday night, having a few less than a dozen of his friends. Afterwards all had supper at the St. Francis, where dancing concluded the evening.
MILLER.—Mr. and Mrs. C. O. G. Miller were hosts at a theatre party Monday night as a compliment to Mr. and Mrs. Cyril Tobin and after the play, supper and informal dancing were enjoyed.
MOORE.—Kenneth Moore was host at a theatre and supper party Saturday evening.
PILOVER.—John Plover was host at a dinner and theatre party on Wednesday. After the play, dancing at the St. Francis terminated a pleasant evening.

PARTIES.

McCUTCHEEN.—It is with genuine satisfaction that the friends of Mrs. Edward J. McCutchen have heard that she is planning a repetition of the "freak party" held three weeks ago at her home on Pacific avenue for the benefit of the Belgian relief fund.
SCOTT.—Mr. and Mrs. Henry T. Scott entertained at a family party at their home in Burlingame on Sunday.
THIERIOT.—Mrs. Ferdinand Theriot entertained all the little friends of her son, Charles de Young Theriot, at a babies' party at the M. H. de Young residence Tuesday afternoon. The mothers of the youngsters were guests at tea time. The event celebrates the first birthday of the Theriot baby.

ARRIVALS.

EARLE.—A cordial welcome is being extended to Mr. and Mrs. George H. Earle III of Philadelphia, who arrived Wednesday in San Francisco, where they have a host of friends. They are guests at the Palace Hotel.
GOODFELLOW.—Mrs. Arthur Goodfellow has come up from her home in Fresno, and will spend several days in town visiting friends.
GREEN.—Dr. L. D. Green, who has been in India for many months, returned a few days ago.
HENSHAW.—Mrs. William G. Henshaw and her daughter, Mrs. Alla Henshaw Chickering, have returned from New York, where they spent the greater part of the winter, and are again at their home in Oakland.
HOWARD.—Mr. and Mrs. Andrew L. Howard of Minneapolis are at the Palace Hotel. They have friends here and in Oakland who make their visit pleasant. The Howards are making a tour of the coast.
JACKLING.—Mr. and Mrs. Daniel C. Jackling, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Martin, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Judge and Mrs. Mountford Wilson, who went to Coronado several weeks ago on the Jackling yacht Cyprus, returned to town Sunday afternoon. Because of the rough weather they left the yacht at San Pedro and returned by rail.
MOORE.—Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Moore, who have been enjoying a month's visit in New York, have returned to San Francisco, and are settled at the Fairmont Hotel, where they will spend the remainder of the winter.
PEASE.—Richard Henry Pease and his son, Richard Henry Pease, Jr. who have been enjoying a tour of the Northwest, returned Saturday.

DEPARTURES.

HOBART.—Mr. and Mrs. Lewis P. Hobart left Monday afternoon for New York, to be gone a month.
MARTIN.—Mrs. Davenport Martin, who has been the guest of Mrs. W. B. Bonfils at her home in Chestnut street for several weeks, will leave to-day for her home in the East.
OTIS.—The Misses Cora and Frederika Otis have accompanied their father, James Otis, to Guatemala, to be gone a month or so.
SHERWOOD.—Mr. and Mrs. John Dickinson Sherwood had a royal send-off Saturday morning when they left for their home in Spokane.

INTIMATIONS.

BATES.—Mr and Mrs Harry Bates, who have been sojourning at the Cecil Hotel, left recently for the peninsula, where they will be the guests of Mrs. John Merrill.

EYRE.—Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Eyre are planning to return earlier than usual to their home in Menlo Park this year, where they will pass the late spring and summer months.
FORD.—Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Ford are spending several weeks in town as the guests of Mrs. Ford's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. O. G. Miller, at their home in Pacific avenue.
GALLOIS.—Mr. and Mrs. John Gallois, who have been spending the past month at the Menlo Country Club, have returned to town and are again settled at their home on Florence street.
JOSSelyn.—Miss Marjorie Josselyn has returned to town after a visit with Mrs. Charles Templeton Crocker at her home in Burlingame.
KEENEY.—Mrs. Charles McIntosh Keeney and her daughter, Mrs. Theodore Tomlinson, have decided not to return to New York for several weeks, and are at present in Louisville, Ky.
KOHL.—Mr. and Mrs. C. Frederick Kohl are entertaining as their house guest Mme. Melba, who will be feted by a number of the residents of the peninsula during her stay.
NULSEN.—Lieutenant and Mrs. Charles Nulsen are here for a few days, en route to China to live for the next two years. Mrs. Frederick Spencer Palmer is entertaining for them informally. Mrs. Nulsen was Miss Marion Long, the pretty cousin of Mrs. Palmer.
POOL.—Mr. and Mrs. William Henry Pool are en route to California from their home in Virginia, and plan to spend the summer on the peninsula.
PRESTON.—After an enjoyable visit with Mrs. Edgar Preston at her apartment on Powell street, Mrs. Sands Forman of Chicago has gone to Menlo Park for a brief stay. She is the guest of Miss Etta Marion Warren.
SHERWOOD.—Mrs. William Sherwood will leave next week for the East to be gone two months. She will go first to Boston, where she will visit with Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Foss.
SUTTON.—Mrs. Effingham Sutton has returned from Pomona, where she spent three weeks as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Roobert Henderson.
VON SCHRADER.—Colonel and Mrs. Frederick von Schrader have taken an apartment at 2335 Pacific avenue, the St. Xavier.

GREAT BRITAIN'S GREAT SIZE.

This is the most dominant and conquering nation of the world to-day, governing an empire which possesses something over one-fifth of the known surface of the globe, and more than one-fifth of all its inhabitants, a people whose "farflung battle line" protects, we are told, a country "fifty-three times the size of France, fifty-two times the size of Germany, three and one-half times our own size, and three times the size of entire Europe; with three times the vast population of all the Russians, embracing four continents and 100,000 islands"—this, the most dominant nation, this little home island, possessed now of this overwhelmingly vast empire, was with its people in their childhood, more conquered, seemingly, than any other people; conquered by the Romans, the Britons, the Saxons, the Danes, the Angles, the Jutes, and finally the Normans. Conquest after conquest! A strange and one might even think a humiliating childhood. Yet the very contrary, when one looks closer, is true.

FLANDERS, 1915

The men go out to Flanders
 As to a promised land;
 The men come back from Flanders
 With eyes that understand.

They've drunk their fill of blood and wrath,
 Of sleeplessness and pain,
 Yet silently to Flanders
 They hasten back again.

In the Low-lands of Flanders
 A patient watch they keep;
 The living and the dead watch there
 Whilst we are sound asleep.

—Margaret Sackville in The Outlook.

—"What did you say your business was?" "I am a critic."
 "You criticise people?" "You might say so, yes." "And do you mean to tell me you get paid for that?"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

—She (nestling closer, while sitting out dance in conservatory)—It's true, isn't it, that it's love that makes the world go round? He (dull and slightly tipsy)—Blest if I didn't think it was that beastly champagne.—Vanity Fair.

—First Recruit—What do you think of the Major, Bill?
 Second Recruit—He's a changeable kind of a bloke. Last night I says to him, "Who goes there?" and he says, "Friend!" and to-day he hardly knows me.—Punch.

Bringing in the Wood

By Fred Emerson Brooks

I often hear my mamma say:
 "How is my little man to-day;
 I wonder if he wants to play—
 Bring in the wood?
 Just play the game a little while,
 A few big armfuls from the pile
 And get a cooky and a smile!"
 So I play good,
 And bring in wood.

I sometimes wonder whether she
 Calls it a game, just fooling me,
 To make me work, so I'll agree
 To bring in wood.
 But when I'm wrapped up in the game,
 To call it work 's an awful shame,
 It's jolly sport—but all the same,
 When I play good
 I bring in wood.

When I grow up to be a man,
 I shall adopt my mamma's plan;
 Make play of work just all I can,
 But bring in wood.
 I'll pour the gold into her lap;
 Around me then her arms she'll wrap,
 Like when I was a little chap,
 And say: I'm good
 To bring in wood.

—"Would your wife vote for you as a candidate for office?" "I don't think there's any use of bothering my head about that," replied Mr. Meekton. "I don't believe Henrietta would let me run in the first place."—Washington Star.

The Angel

A train which has met the approval of the most exacting

—daily at 4:00 p. m. for

Los Angeles
 and San Diego

no change of cars

Santa Fe all the way

Santa Fe City Offices

673 Market St., San Francisco—Phone Kearny 315
 Market Street Ferry—Phone Kearny 4980
 1218 Broadway, Oakland—Phone Lakeside 425

MISS HARKER'S SCHOOL

PALO ALTO, CALIFORNIA

*Boarding and Day School for Girls,
 College Preparatory,
 Grammar and Primary Departments.*

Special Care Given to Younger Children.

HITCHCOCK MILITARY ACADEMY

Located one mile from San Rafael in the healthiest part of beautiful Marin County. School fully accredited. Highest rank accorded by U. S. War Dept. High morals and strict attention demanded. Special attention to Physical Culture and Athletics. Expert and experienced instructors. Separate room for each pupil. Juniors in separate building. Write for catalog.

ADDRESS

President Hitchcock Military Academy
 SAN RAFAEL, CALIFORNIA

The Beringer Conservatory of Music

926 Pierce Street, near McAllister
 PHONE FILLMORE 840 SAN FRANCISCO

Directors: Joseph Beringer (Concert Pianist)
 Mme. Jos. Beringer (Concert Contralto)

Thorough education in Pianoforte Playing and Singing. Special departments for beginners, amateurs and professionals. Pupils prepared for the operatic and concert stage. Opportunities given to advanced piano and vocal students to join the well known Beringer Musical Club for public appearances.

ARRILLAGA MUSICAL COLLEGE

SAN FRANCISCO

MUSIC IN ALL ITS BRANCHES

Sight Reading, Ear Training, Theory,
 Musical Form, Appreciation
 TERMS ON REQUEST—CATALOG

2315 JACKSON STREET PHONE WEST 4737

MISS HAMLIN'S SCHOOL FOR GIRLS

2230 PACIFIC AVENUE

2117 } BROADWAY SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
 2123 }

Boarding and Day Pupils. "Accredited" by all accrediting institutions, both in California and in Eastern States.

TELEPHONE WEST 546

California Conservatory of Music

Offers Instructions and Training in All Branches of
 MUSIC, ELOCUTION, DRAMATIC ART, DANCING
 Private Lessons in All Branches to Suit the Convenience of the Pupil

Studios and Recital Hall

1509 Gough Street, near Sutter San Francisco, Cal.
 Oakland Branch—Pacific Building—16th and Jefferson Streets

A. W. BEST

ALICE BEST

BEST'S ART SCHOOL

1625 CALIFORNIA STREET

Life Classes
 Day and Night

Illustrating Sketching
 Painting

SPORTS AND PASTIMES

BY OUTSIDER

"Outsiders see most of the game."—Old Saw.Effect of the U. S. G. A. Rules on Golf

The president of the California Golf Association is quoted in a morning paper as saying in reference to the proposed ruling of the United States Golf Association to the effect that a man may not capitalize his skill or prominence in golf and retain amateur standing; that if this ruling becomes effective, there would be a loss to the game of a number of the country's prominent players. Surely, who else, forsooth, but "prominent" players have "prominence" to capitalize?

However, as players having sufficient "prominence" to use as an asset do not constitute one-tenth of one per cent of the whole, it is difficult to see exactly how their disbarment would hurt the game of golf as a whole. It might hurt the P. P. (Prominent Players), but the rest should worry.

Nevertheless, I am quite in favor of doing away with all distinctions between amateur and pro, and making general tournaments "open." The clubs, by their membership committees, can take care of those eligible to play in local contests. I expressed this opinion in print a number of years ago, and was supported by the late Garden Smith, the former and much loved editor of GOLF ILLUSTRATED of London.

* * *

Douglas Grant Comes Back

The return of Douglas Grant from England, where he has lived for a number of years, and where he is credited with some phenomenal golf scores on the difficult links of the United Kingdom, is regarded with much interest in local golfing circles. Before leaving, Grant was regarded as easily our most promising player, but he would never settle down to the game—too many other distractions. He has, however, devoted much more attention to the links while abroad; and my friend Henry Leach, the wellknown golfing writer, thought him to be one of the coming players of England.

Since his arrival he has played an Ingleside round or two around 72, and he has more than a look-in at some of our local titles. The W. G. A. Championship meeting at Del Monte will be an excellent tryout, succeeding the Northern California championships, which come off in the early spring.

* * *

A "Manufactured" Miler

It is a recognized axiom of sport that a truly great performer like a truly great artist, must have native ability as well as training. Or if expressed in terms of aesthetics, talent plus technique. But Norman S. Taber, late of Brown and Oxford universities, now of the Boston A. A., is to-day holder of the world's record for one mile because, in the opinion of many experts, he is what is known in track parlance as a "manufactured miler."

This assertion does not mean that he is a manufactured runner, for naturally Taber was built for the cinder path, but because of his great strength, and his peculiar, plodding style, he was apparently intended by nature for distances above a mile. Nevertheless, he has trained himself into the fastest of milers.

Seemingly handicapped by lack of style, yet possessed of more running strength than any other track star of the present day, Taber, on July 16, 1915, on the splendid cinder trail of the Harvard stadium, stepped a mile in 4:12 3-5 seconds, faster than the distance had ever before been accomplished by a runner. It was one of the greatest performances in the history of track athletics. Experts were amazed, for they expected W. G. George's world mark of 4:12 $\frac{3}{4}$, three-twentieths of a second slower than Taber's figures, to stand for years to come. George made his record as a professional in Lilliebridge, England, on August 23, 1883, and for thirty-two years the best milers in the world unsuccessfully shot at this target.

However, as I pointed out in this column before, watches were not split on the fifths in George's day, so, at that, he might have been caught on the three-fifths. But in addition, George made his record in competition, easing up on a slow track; his competitor, Cummings, the champion, having fallen before the finish.

Taber, though for two years before his record-smashing performance had been listed with the best in his class, was almost the last man generally considered equal to the task. He was naturally a mile runner, the experts contended, and for that reason he did not have a chance. Taber, the plodder, could never do, they said, what such great mile runners as Tommy Coneff and John Paul Jones had failed to achieve.

Yet Taber did.

Taber has a longer stride than any mile runner of to-day, but its length is not equal to that of George's, who was nearly six feet tall. Taber is a well built fellow, but by no means as tall as George.

A SPRING JOURNEY.

We journeyed through broad woodland ways,
My Love and I.

The maples set the shining fields ablaze.

The blue May sky

Brought to us its great spring surprise;

While we saw all things through each other's eyes.

And sometimes from a steep hillside

Shone fair and bright

The shadbrush, like a young June bride,

Fresh clothed in white.

Sometimes came glimpses glad of the blue sea;

But I smiled only on my Love; he smiled on me.

The violets made a field one mass of blue—

Even bluer than the sky;

The little brook took on that color, too,

And sang more merrily.

"Your dress is blue," he laughing said. "Your eyes,"

My heart sang, "sweeter than the bending skies."

We spoke of poets dead so long ago,

And their wise words;

We glanced at apple-trees, like drifted snow;

We watched the nesting birds,

Only a moment Ah! Ah, how short the day!

Yet all the winters cannot blow its sweetness quite away.

—Alice Freeman Palmer.

Pears'

"A cake of prevention is worth a box of cure."

Don't wait until the mischief's done before using Pears Soap.

There's no preventive so good as Pears' Soap.

Established in 1789.

Novelties for "Welcoming" and "Bon Voyage" Packages

Flowers Delivered to Any Part of the World

SEND YOUR HOSTESS A DISTINCTIVE BOX OF FLOWERS

FROM JOSEPH'S FLORISTS

GRANT AVENUE, NEAR SUTTER STREET

Here, There and Personally

The Burnett bill, imposing a literacy test upon persons who seek admission as immigrants to the United States, is to be forced to passage during the present session of Congress, it is reported. A delegation from New York has already appeared in opposition to the bill, before the committee that has the measure in charge. In a case of this kind charity will find an excuse for New Yorkers, in view of the showing recently made by some of their public school teachers who were examined on current history.

* * *

It is not difficult to define United States Supreme Court Associate Justice Charles Evans Hughes, but it is difficult, when the definition is made, to understand why certain people, who are looking hopefully toward his candidacy for the presidency, are doing so. Justice Hughes is a militant reformer. He started the greatest fight ever made on big business. He is a "regular" Republican. He is a protectionist. He is masterful in politics. He is not a "mixer." He is not "genial." He does not inspire enthusiasm. His personal integrity is as adamant. To what faction, or party, do these qualities appeal?

* * *

Prof. Emily Balch of Wellesley College told the American Sociological Society at Washington last week that one of the effects of war on the status of women would be to make them "a drug on the market." "It may be that in more primitive times such a situation would be a cause of polygamy," she said. "In our day it will mean a vast overplus of women. Men will return not only with importance enhanced by the glory of the battlefield, but with a scarcity value. A second and conflicting effect is that women, being more necessary, become more important instead of less. A third effect will be a great increase of unmarried women. Another result is that there is forming under our eyes a new sex—international. Some one has said: 'If the brotherhood of man had grown as much in the last two centuries as the sisterhood of women has grown in the last two decades, this war would not have occurred.'"

* * *

Mr. Roosevelt does not surprise one in saying at this juncture that the United States should have sent its army into Mexico years ago. It did—"years ago"—back in 1846-48; and the army came back with California, New Mexico and Arizona as spoils of war. If the army should go down there again, what would it come back with. All Latin-America is interested in that question. All Latin-America thus far has been much pleased because, under Presidents Taft and Wilson, the United States has not gone into Mexico.

* * *

The Kansas man who secured on a bet 200 signatures to a petition asking the Governor "to shorten the road to Tipperary," illustrated the familiar ease with which indorsements of all sorts of proposals are obtained. The moral is merely that the citizen should be sure that he knows and approves what he is signing. The petition and the "memorial," properly used, are excellent instruments for the expression of public opinion.

* * *

One share of United States steel preferred was the prize at each of the six tables of Mrs. Elbert H. Gary's bridge party at her Fifth avenue residence recently. It was thought likely that this will not be regarded as necessarily a precedent for the givers of bridge parties in general. If it should be so regarded, it might have the dire result of materially reducing the number of such parties.

* * *

Enthusiastic applause greeted advocates of national preparedness at Tuesday's session in Washington of the national civic federation, and at the close of the discussion a resolution was adopted unanimously favoring adequate preparation for defense and authorizing an investigation of methods by a special committee. Senator Phelan of California, characterizing the Japanese on the western coast as "an enemy within our gates against whose expansion we must prepare."

—John—The French have gained four hundred metres from the enemy. Auntie—How splendid! That should help to put a stop to these dreadful gas attacks.—Liverpool Mercury.

—The People's Water Company has filed with the Railroad Commission an application for such a modification of the Commission's decision of July 10, 1915, as will bring about the Commission's approval of the company's modified plan of reorganization. The application will be heard by the Commission on February 3d. The July decision of the Commission found the value of the People's Water Company property to be $14,000,000 and approved certain features of the reorganization plan then submitted and disapproved of other features. Nov. 1, 1915, the reorganization committee adopted a new modified plan of reorganization, and this is the one filed. It is signed by P. E. Bowles, John S. Drum, W. N. Garthwaite, John A. Hooper, E. J. McCutchen, C. O. G. Miller, Percy T. Morgan, F. W. Van Sicklen, J. F. Carlston, Sidney M. van Wyck, Jr., and Howard Throckmorton, as secretary.

—Our neighbor, the State of Nevada, is vitally interested in the present advance in the price of silver. The rise of a fraction of a cent means thousands of dollars added to the incomes of the silver mining properties there. The principal influences that have given a more optimistic aspect to the silver market are the increased coinage demand from western countries, the probability of a greater absorption by India, the prospect of China executing her silver currency reform plans, and the virtually stationary state of the world's production.

—By reason of the refusal or neglect of holders of more than 30 per cent of the claims against the Northern Electric Railway company and affiliated companies to deposit, the success of the plan of reorganization is threatened, and the committee in a circular which will be sent to creditors, intimates that the plan will be abandoned. Since the announcement of the plan on October 5, 1915, claims amounting to $6,967,159.42 have been deposited, leaving $3,069,965.81 outstanding. It is announced that the time for depositing claims has been extended to February 15th next.

—Value of shipments of ore from Tonopah for the week ending January 29th were as follows: Tonopah Mining, $52,820; Tonopah Belmont (two weeks), $81,349. The total production of the camp was $176,280 on the gross milling value of the ore.

—Tonopah Ex. is preparing to add 10 more stamps to its mill by July 1st. This will bring the battery up to 50.

—The price of refined sugar jumped 15 points in one advance in New York this week. Holders of Hawaiian sugar stocks continue to look pleasant.

—"Now," said the professor of chemistry, "under what combination is gold most quickly released?" The student pondered a moment. "I know, sir," he answered. "Marriage."—Dallas News.

First Frosh—My father has a fine cedar chest. Second Frosh—'Snothing. My father is a veteran and has a hickory leg.—Dartmouth Jack-o'-Lantern.

—Brown—Back to town again? I thought you were a farmer. Green—You made the same mistake I did.—Judge.

E. F. HUTTON & CO. BANKERS

Members—New York Stock Exchange; New York Cotton Exchange; New York Coffee Exchange; New Orleans Cotton Exchange; Liverpool Cotton Association; Chicago Board of Trade.

Private Wire—New York, Chicago to San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Branch Offices—San Francisco, 190 California St., and Hotel St. Francis; Los Angeles, 118 Fourth Street, 1. W. Hellman Building.

PIONEER HOUSE OF THE PACIFIC COAST

Safety First: Courtesy Always

There is a story told of a New England farmer driving to town with his son, and who was delayed by a slow-moving hay wagon which would not draw aside. The son cursed and objurgated, but the offending driver stolidly continued to "hog" the road. The father then took a hand and civilly asked the other if he would be so kind as to let them pass. At once the request was granted, and the old man turned to his son and remarked: "My son, there is a lesson for you. Be polite—it pays." This may be a poor reason for politeness, but the commercial motive is commendable in so far as it produces results.

Courtesy may be defined as a kind of small change which enables a man to live more comfortably and conveniently. Thus by tacit consent we give the first speaker "the floor," and do not interrupt within a reasonable time, the consideration being that he likewise indulges us. It is obvious that the minor rules of politeness cannot be embodied in formal law, and so we have devised etiquette to supplant the written statutes. It is by the degree of punctilliousness with which a man observes these unwritten rules that he is known, in this country at least, as a gentleman. On the whole there is no doubt but that motorists have been fairly considerate of the rights of others, but on the other hand, whether through ignorance or selfishness, there are some who excite hostility by their ruthless disregard of the common principles which should govern conduct on the road.

To crystallize these principles and as reminder to us all, for any of us is apt to slip up at times, the Wolverine Automobile Club of Detroit has formulated a set of road rules in a little pamphlet entitled "Courtesy First," and the News Letter is able to present a copy of it for the consideration of our local autoists.

Be Courteous

First, do not hog the middle of the street. Give the other fellow room to go by, and when he attempts to pass you, do not speed up and perhaps crowd him into a safety zone. Be courteous.

Keep out of the safety zones. They are for the pedestrian. It is up to you to make them safe. Be courteous.

When a fellow comes in from a side street give him room to turn the corner; do not crowd. When you park behind another car, remember he may wish to leave before you do. Give him room to get out; don't crowd. When you expect to stop or turn, do not keep your intentions secret; think of the fellow behind. Be courteous.

Do not dodge in and around cars in line in traffic. Remember they were there first, and have just as great a desire to get through as you have. Be courteous.

Do not presume too much when you have the right of way. Perhaps the other fellow does not know it. Be courteous.

Do not cut in front of a street car. Remember the motorman is human, and most of them will learn all the courtesies you will teach them. Be courteous.

When you get the "go" signal from a traffic officer, remember to give the pedestrian time to get out of the way. Be courteous.

When you see people on the curb trying to reach a car, or vice versa, slow up, stop if necessary, but let them cross without danger. This is one of the courtesies that will pay the motoring public best. Be courteous.

When a pedestrian does not or will not pay any attention to your horn, it is well to remember that the deaf, hundreds of them, use the streets as well as you do. Be courteous.

When you have an insane desire to speed, remember the other fellows you are passing have just as much right to break the law as you have. Think of the sentiment you are creating against motoring by your mania. Think of the accidents that may happen by your hitting some other driver coming in from a side street, or pedestrian who does not see you coming. Think of the people in your own car, perhaps, who have a fear of speeding and are trying to be game and not let you know it. It is not sport to drive fast in the city; it is the utmost discourtesy to your fellow motorist and fellow citizens. Be courteous.

When you see a child on a curb, slow up. Remember, the child can start quicker than you can stop. Be courteous.

Do not open your cut-out on the streets during the day. Remember there are many sick people and people on their deathbeds, whom such a sound greatly disturbs. Do not open your cut-out at night, for you probably remember some night when you were disturbed when trying to sleep by some fool whose greatest claim to fame was his noise. Be courteous.

Be courteous to police officials and they will more than repay it. And if you feel like swearing at the ordinances, or if you do not like the traffic arrangements, remember that perhaps you may be wrong, as most cities of the United States to-day have identical arrangements and ordinances.

* * *

Superintendent H. A. French of the State Motor Vehicle Department, gives the following figures for 1916 to January 29th:

Registrations—Automobiles, 141,262; motorcycles, 13,258; chauffeurs, 2,995; automobile dealers, 1,095; motorcycle dealers, 126. Receipts—Automobiles, $1,435,928.60; motorcycles, $26,516; chauffeurs, $5,990; automobile dealers, $25,035; motorcycle dealers, $545; substitutions, $2,097.40. Totals, $1,496,112.

* * *

St. Louis Test for Lights

In the city hall at St. Louis, Mo., is a shadow box where the headlights of more than 5,000 motor cars have been tested and adjusted in conformity with the recently adopted anti-glare ordinance without expense to the car owner. To the steering wheel of every machine tested is fixed a lead seal which makes the owner or driver immune from arrest for violation of the law which requires that the main shaft of light shall not be higher than 3 feet from the ground at a distance of 75 feet in front of the car. The shadow box proper is of wood and is six feet high and 4 feet wide, painted white. It is framed in black curtains which extend about a foot from the board. A black canvas curtain, which drops behind the distant archway, makes the tunnel as dark as a Stygian cave. The headlights are thrown on the shadow box which has a graduated scale; a city inspector tilts the lamps until the main ray of light falls on the three-footline of the device; and then affixes the O. K. seal to the car.

* * *

There are 30,000 automobile dealers, garages, repair shops, supply houses and charging stations in the country. These include 19,500 dealers, 17,800 garages, 6,500 repair shops and 1,000 stores that make automobile supplies their principal business.

* * *

Pedestrians Must Watch Out

No longer will careless pedestrians who attempt to cross a street without looking to see if they are in danger be able to obtain damages in the event of an accident, according to a recent decision handed down by the New York Court of Appeals, which reverses the findings of the lower court. The trial judge charged the jury that "the law does not require that a pedestrian should look at all, but should only exercise ordinary care for his own safety."

An educational campaign has been conducted under the auspices of the Safety First Society of New York during the last two years. One of the commands which the society has consistently promulgated since its inception reads as follows:

"Look before you cross a street. Cross at the regular crossing, and not in the middle of the block.

It is the general belief that this decision will have a far-reaching effect in reducing the number of street accidents as soon as it becomes known to those persons accustomed to cross a street without looking in either direction to see if there is any approaching vehicular traffic or street cars.

* * *

To Test Legality of Auto Laws

Following the plan consistently advocated by the News Letter in opposing the discrimination between autos and other vehicles in taxation and regulation, steps are being taken to have the matter adjudicated by the highest authority in the country.

What may prove to be the concluding general effort to fasten another tax upon the motor-car owner, is included in the preparedness legislation in process at the national capital.

From its first appearance on the road, there has been a pronounced tendency to single out the automobile as a thing calling for multiplied and special taxation. To such an extent has this increased that the American Automobile Association has taken a test case to the United States Supreme Court, to obtain for all time a Federal ruling which shall bring about uniform consideration of the self-propelled vehicle by the several States.

That there is discrimination in singling out one road vehicle and allowing all others to go untaxed and untaxed, and to prevent one vehicle from crossing and recrossing the State boundaries while this liberty is granted to other methods of travel, is so plainly unjust that it would seem a certainty that the highest court in the land will arrive at a logical and clean-cut decision.

President John A. Wilson concisely sized up the situation when he contended that if a tax must be imposed it should include all road vehicles or none, and all power producing fuels or none.

* * *

Buick Cars Stand Test of Time

Performance is the one sure test of a motor car. No matter what the manufacturer may say of his product, and no matter how persuasively his salesman may tell about it, the final test is performance. The manner in which the car acts when the user himself takes it out upon the streets and highways is what counts in the long run.

In speaking of this subject recently, C. S. Howard, head of the Howard Automobile Company, Pacific Coast Distributors of Buick cars, said: "It is performance that has stamped Buick worth so indelibly in the minds of the motoring public. This record of performance covers not one or two years, but the entire life of the Buick organization, which is twelve years. Of course, the 1916 six-cylinder Buick is not to be compared with the old "two lugger" of 1904, but those who have followed the auto industry from its infancy will remember that the old two-cylinder valve-in-head Buick always gave good account of itself in every kind of a contest, as well as in the hands of private owners. Even now it is not an unusual sight to see one of those old cars running around the streets of San Francisco. In many cases they have been rebuilt into delivery wagons, but there are quite a number that are still in use as pleasure cars. The performances of these old veterans should certainly give the owner of one of the later Buicks the utmost confidence in his car."

* * *

Marion Makes Difficult Delivery

"The next time we sell a car on condition that it is to be delivered overland to the home town of the purchaser, we will consult the State Automobile Association as to the condition of the road before the deal is closed," says E. E. Wickstrom, of the American Auto Company.

"Last week we sold a Marion which was to be delivered Wednesday to the owner in Healdsburg. We left San Francisco on the early boat and arrived at Sausalito at 7:40 a. m., and drove on to San Rafael over the new State Highway. Passing through San Rafael we dropped over the hill and encountered our first trouble. We had practically come to a sea of mud, which meant a horse tow of some five or six miles to get through. Returning to San Rafael we found that we might be able to get around the bad spots by going over White's Hill.

"White's Hill, however, was not so bad, but when we dropped into the valley on the other side it was fierce. We struggled through and then started the ascent of San Geronimo Hill. It was a hard struggle to the summit, all second gear work.

"We stopped and debated whether to go on or turn back. The thoughts of what we had passed through made us feel that before us could not be any worse than what we would have to go through in returning.

"Down the hill and into the valley we worked the car, and there found a stretch of road that would make a corduroy highway seem like a boulevard.

"Fighting our way through, we came to the foot of Red Clay Hill, which was the hardest piece of going that I have ever encountered. The slippery red clay hardly furnished any traction for the rear wheels. At times the car would almost come to a standstill with the wheels spinning. Then we would work on a few yards and repeat the operation. This kind of driving marked our journey to the summit.

"Just near the summit we found a spot where the road had been partially washed away. There were marks of where some four-horse team had had a narrow escape from going over the embankment. We hugged the inner bank and slowly crept through this spot, fearing every minute that the car would skid across the road and over the side of the hill.

"Once across the summit we found the going just as hard; in fact, we had to use our low gear—power—to drive the Marion down the other side of Red Clay Hill.

"With Red Clay Hill behind us, we found better going into Petaluma, where we arrived at 10:45. The first question they asked us was how we had shipped our car, as they would hardly believe that we had come through, being the first car to get through since the big storm."

* * *

Premier Absorbs Mais Truck

With the passing of the Mais Motor Truck Company into the hands of the newly formed Premier Motor Corporation of Indianapolis, the distinctiveness of the Mais motor truck suddenly looms up as a commercial asset of more than ordinary importance. Those who have kept in touch with the development of the motor truck will recall that the Mais was the first American-built internal gear-driven truck.

It has been built in Indianapolis for approximately six years, and its record for durability has won commendation from the United States government authorities. Large users of commercial vehicles, such as department stores and newspapers, have found the Mais equal to the gruelling task which heavy, continuous hauling imposes. Gradually the most exacting of truck users have gravitated to the Mais internal gear-driven idea, and the influence of the Mais motor truck on American truck building is notable.

In each instance, with practically no exceptions, commendatory statements have been based on economy of operation, which in turn has been based on a comparative analysis of cost per ton mile. Those in position to know are authority for the statement that the margins of strength in the three-ton Mais truck compare favorably with the margins in wellknown standard trucks, with rated capacities of five tons, which no doubt goes far toward explaining the remarkable endurance and economy of the Mais. Another feature that is distinctively a Mais idea, and which has been almost universally adopted, is the automatic speed governor with which every Mais truck is equipped.

The value of this device lies in the fact that a Mais truck cannot be driven faster than thirteen miles an hour, unless a particular need arises, as in the case of military trucks, where speed is desirable—in which event the governor is eliminated. This device was first embodied in Mais motor trucks, and is demanded by truck users, because of its obvious insurance against excessive wear and abuse, to say nothing of the fact that it protects the owner against possible casualty and liability.

* * *

Klaxon Hand and Motor Horns

Five new models of Klaxon motor vehicle horns are exhibited. They are all of the motor driven type, and differ from the previous forms in that the L construction in which the motor is placed at right angles to the centerline of the horn proper has been abandoned and the motor placed at the rear on the centerline, making a more compact unit. The prices of the old models carried over have not been changed.

The new models are known as UH Klaxon with straight-sided projector, selling at $12 list, and UH Klaxet with bell projector at $6. Three short-length projector motor-driven horns complete the newcomers. No change has been made from previous Klaxon design in the method of sound propagation. Klaxon horns are now offered in twenty-two models for motor vehicles and four for fire signal work.

* * *

A self-respecting man respects his car, and he insures the painstaking attention to which every car is entitled by keeping it at Dow & Green's Garage in Taylor street, between O'Farrell and Geary. Service is the slogan of this deservedly popular garage.

Chevrolet to Start Oakland Plant

Work on the construction of the Chevrolet Motor Car Company's Western distributing plant, which is to be located in Oakland, will start at once. F. W. Hohensee, W. C. Durant and W. E. Wood have completed details for the big transbay plant, and according to their reports, work will be commenced immediately.

With the beginning of the construction of this big automobile plant in Oakland, one of the most important steps ever taken towards the commercial development of this part of the State will be made. It is the plan of the Chevrolet Company to produce twelve thousand cars annually in the Oakland plant, and according to Norman De Vaux, Western representative of the company, this factory will be the distributing point for the entire Pacific Coast and the Philippine Islands.

The construction of the factory will mean the employment of several hundred men. This will bring this section into the manufacturing field and will impress the Eastern motor car makers with the advantages of having big assembling plants here.

The new plant will make it possible for the Chevrolet Company to compete with the largest manufacturers in this country. That concern will bring the material and parts here in large quantities and have the finished product ready for immediate deliveries at all times.

* * *

Bankers Dine Willys

Probably the most notable tribute the banking industry has ever paid an automobile manufacturer was accorded recently to John North Willys of Toledo, when he was guest at a dinner given by Elisha Walker, of William Salomon & Company, New York. The dinner was attended by many of the leading bankers in the United States. Walker, the host, made an informal speech, in which he explained that the sole purpose of the dinner was to give the bankers present a chance to meet one of the real giants of the automobile industry.

Willys is head of the big Willys-Overland Company of Toledo, and, with one exception, is the largest builder of motor cars in the world. The history of his remarkable success reads like a chapter from "Monte Cristo."

Starting in as the head of the Overland concern when the automobile industry was still in an experimental stage, he built up in less than ten years one of the greatest industrial organizations in the world. His factory in Toledo has the facilities for producing 1,000 motor cars every twenty-four hours, and the 1916 output will have a value of $100,000,000.

* * *

Chandler Forges Ahead

The announcement of the Chandler Motor Car Company to the effect that it will build during the present year models which will possess a longer wheel base, will have a handsomer and roomier tonneau, and will possess a motor giving greater power and more speed than ever before, has created unusual interest in motor car circles.

Declaring that the Chandler Company set out with the fixed idea of catering to that large body of motorists who are willing to pay a reasonable price for their automobiles, but who, in turn, are satisfied with nothing less than the highest class machine—both in material, design and construction, the officials emphasize the fact that in their new products they have fulfilled these ideals and brought to the market a machine that marks an epoch in American motor car construction.

The arrival in this city of several of these new cars, which are known as type 17 models, will enable motorists and the general public to inspect them and get a first hand idea of just what this new product of the Chandler factory is. The cars are now on display at the salesroom of the Peacock Motor Sales Company.

E. L. Peacock, president of the Peacock Motor Sales Company, Northern California distributors of the Chandler, who has returned from a visit to the factory and the New York Automobile Show, brings back the news that the company is preparing for the biggest year in the history of that organization. The company has just occupied the new plant and is preparing for an output in 1916 of 20,000 cars. The recent increase of the capital stock of the company to $10,000,000 has brought this company well up to the fore amongst the country's leading automobile manufacturers.

TELEPHONE FRANKLIN 1836

FOR A

Touring Car, Limousine or Taxi-Car

The White Star Line

AUTO TOURING COMPANY

TARIFF: 7 Passenger Touring Cars
$2.00 per hour

7 Passenger Closed Cars
$2.50 per hour

Special Rates by week or month.

TAXI-CAR RATES FOR SHORT TRIPS

Day and Night Service

Our Taxi-Car Service is most reasonable and unexcelled. We use seven passenger closed cars for this service which bear no mark of identification signifying a rent car. The "Zone" rate applies to all Taxi-Car service. When ordering a car for this service please state that you desire the Taxi-Car Tariff.

THE WHITE STAR LINE

Auto Touring Co.

Telephone Franklin 1836

AUTOISTS

SHOULD NEVER BE

WITHOUT

THEM

=

Your Grocer Sells 'Em

WHERE SERVICE MEANS SERVICE

M & H GARAGE

819-835 ELLIS ST. Between Polk and Van Ness Avenue

WHERE THE PRIVATE OWNER FEELS AT HOME

TIRES

VULCANIZING

TOM H. ELKINGTON

Long Mileage Tires and Second-Hand Tires
Everything Needed for the Bus

1135 VAN NESS AVE.—Near Geary Phone PROSPECT 1566

London and Lancashire Fire Insurance Company

Orient Insurance Company

332 PINE STREET

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Sam B. Stoy, Mgr. G. O. Smith, Agency Supt. W. B. Hopkins, Local Sec.

Automobile Department W. M. KLINGER, General Agent

Tips to Automobilists

(CUT THIS OUT.)

The News Letter recommends the following garages, hotels and supply houses. Tourists will do well to cut this list out and keep it as a guide:

PALO ALTO.—LARKIN'S CAFE just opened. The only strictly first class cafe on the Wishbone Route available to the patronage of automobile owners and their families. Corner of University Avenue and The Circle.

SAN JOSE.—LAMOLLE GRILL, 36-38 North First Street. The best French dinner in California. 75 cents. or a la carte. Automobile parties given particular attention.

PALO ALTO.—PALO ALTO GARAGE, 443 Emerson St. Tel. P. A. 333. Auto service at all hours. Tires and sundries in stock. Gasoline, oil, repainting, lathework, vulcanizing. Open day and night.

Wassel Weather Strips

In these days when the auto is nearly fool proof, and sedan and other bodies are designed to enclose all of the occupants of a machine, there is a tendency everywhere to dispense with a chauffeur, and therefore devices to make the front seat as comfortable as any other are in demand. A. Wassel, 1554 Van Ness avenue, makes a weather strip which keeps out the cold, wind and rain from passing through the windshield, thereby measurably increasing the comfort of the driver and his companion on the front seat. As it is customary to have the windshield in two pieces, closing in the middle, the joint cannot be made weather proof without some such device as Wassel offers. He also weatherstrips other parts of the car and keeps on hand windshields, glasses, reflectors, dimmers and other allied accessories.

Waltham Clock Models

There are two new models of Waltham clocks made by the Waltham Clock Co., Waltham, Mass., types F and K. Both are for cowl mounting, the former being a double telescope type which is thinner and more compact than the single telescope design brought out last year. The telescope feature is for winding, as the clock sets flush with the cowl, with only the bezel showing, but when it is to be wound it is given a quarter turn and pulled out about 1 1/2 inches, exposing the winding key. In this position the clock may be rotated in any direction so that the most convenient position for winding may be obtained. The type K is also a flush mounting, but the winding stem is extended so that the knob for winding and setting extends to the lower edge of the cowl. This design has the advantage of neatness and maximum convenience. The price of either type is $25, and they are furnished in all sizes and styles of cases and finishes.

Stewart Horn Prices Lower

The prices of Stewart hand and motor driven horns have been reduced for 1916. The 1916 line consists of one motor driven type for either direct or alternating current with different motors for 6, 12, 18 and 24 volts. The standard model with 6 volt motor sells for $6—the former price was $10—complete with cord and push button. Stewart hand horns are offered in models for passenger cars, motor trucks and motorcycles. Each follows the same principle of design, although naturally different in strength and size. Each is operated through a vertical rack plunger which vibrates a metal diaphragm through a train of gears.

Wanderstone Hand Horn

The first time shown, the Wonderstone hand horn, made in but one size and sold by the Motor Appurtenances Corporation, New York, is of the ratchet type, but differs from others of this design in that the rotor is not placed perpendicular to the vibrating button on the diaphragm, but at an angle to the latter. This construction permits the ratchet handle to be placed on the centerline of the horn, thus making it equally suitable for vehicles with either left or right steer. The ratchet drives the rotor shaft direct without the use of any intermediate gears. The wonderstone horn is made in several different finishes to suit the taste of the purchaser, and retails at $3.

Pittsburgh Achromatic Headlight

The Pittsburgh Achromatic headlight made by the Pittsburgh Electric Specialties Co., Pittsburgh, Pa., is a development of the Roffy-Grace and is designed for mounting on the radiator. The lens construction is such that the light is concentrated on the road, and no rays can be emitted at a greater angle than the horizontal. Light for city driving is obtained through the illumination of the semi-transparent tubes at the bottom of the light.

FIRE PROOF BUILDING Phones—Park 8396, Park 5138
20---MARSHALL SQUARE---20
GARAGE
 EXPERT AUTOMOBILE REPAIRING and MACHINE WORK
 AUTO SUPPLIES
 NO. 20 MARSHALL SQUARE
 Opp. 8th and Market Sts. San Francisco

MOTOROL
 "it suits because it doesn't soot"
 If you want to prolong the life of your engine
 If you want to eliminate smoke and carbon
 If you want to reduce your oil expense
 Use MoToRoL
Hughson & Merton, Inc.
 5 0 Golden Gate Avenue
 San Francisco, Cal.

PANHARD OIL
 FREE FROM CARBON
BERNARD I. BILL
 543 GOLDEN GATE AVE. SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

CLASS "A" GARAGE, INC.
 Strictly Fire Proof Building
STORAGE SUPPLIES REPAIRS
 BEST SERVICE ASSURED
 735-751 POST STREET SAN FRANCISCO
 TELEPHONE PROSPECT 2280

Automobile Starting and Lighting Systems
 Give Satisfactory Results When Given Proper Attention
 We specialize on electrical equipment, storage batteries, etc.
 and guarantee satisfaction
GUARANTEE BATTERY COMPANY
 639 Van Ness Ave. BRAND & CUSHMAN Phone Prospect 741

Mitchell
 MOTOR CARS
 The Six of Sixteen
Osen McFarland Co
 Golden Gate Avenue

LARKINS & COMPANY
 CARRIAGE AND AUTOMOBILE BODY BUILDERS
 Established in 1865
 1610-1612-1614 VAN NESS AVENUE
 Between California and Sacramento Sts. Phone Prospect 30
 Where their entire attention will be devoted to the prompt delivery of the best work that a modern plant, high-class mechanics and materials can produce.

City Index and Purchasers' Guide
 CHIROPODISTS.
 Dr. R. T. Leaner, Surgeon Chiropradist, formerly of 6 Geary street; removes corns entirely whole—painless—without knife. Bunlons and ingrowing nails cured by a special and painless treatment. 212-214 West-bank Bldg., 830 Market St. Tel. Kearny 3578.
 NOTARY PUBLIC.
 Martin Aronsohn, Notary Public and Pension Attorney. All legal papers drawn up accurately. 217 Montgomery St., above Bush, San Francisco, Cal. Phone Douglas 601.

ATTORNEYS-AT-LAW
 Samuel M. Shortridge, Attorney-at-Law, Chronicle Building, San Francisco. Tel. Sutter 36.
 Marcus Lorne Samuels, Attorney-at-Law, Pacific Building, Market St., at Fourth, San Francisco, Cal. Tel. Douglas 304

The Background of the War Zone

A New York World cartoon represented a shop with a sign over the door reading "William Hohenzollern, Bird Fancier." In the shop window is a cage containing the Dove of Peace, price $3,520,000,000, and at the door stands the Kaiser anxiously looking for a customer. The title of the cartoon is "Nothing doing."

* * *

Sir Robert Borden has issued a New Year message to the Canadian people. He announces that an increase of the Canadian overseas force from 250,000 to 500,000 men has been authorized. The number of men already enlisted in Canada is 212,000. The increase is a "token of Canada's unflinching resolve to crown the justice of our cause with victory and unending peace."

* * *

There is great curiosity to know the real object of the mission of Colonel House, President Wilson's most intimate friend, to Europe, but his instructions have been so carefully guarded that nothing definite can be ascertained. No doubt one of the purposes of sending Colonel House to Europe is to eliminate certain friction said to exist between some of the American Ambassadors. Colonel House is a man of great tact and judgment, a personal friend of Dr. Page in London, Mr. Gerard in Berlin, Mr. Nelson Page in Rome, and other men in the American Diplomatic Service, and it is expected that he will be able to adjust minor difficulties a great deal easier than the Department could in writing, and in personal intercourse there is less danger of ambassadorial susceptibilities being wounded than there would be if the Department had to communicate in writing. Colonel House is also expected to have informal conversations with Sir Edward Grey and to endeavor to make him understand the resentment caused by British interference with American trade.

* * *

A scene in Stockport.—Recruiting Officer to Passing Workman: Now, sir, what do you say to fighting for your country? P. W.: Nay, lad; I don't want to fight. R. O.: Don't want to fight? Where would the war be if every one spoke like you? P. W.: I suppose there'd be no fight.—Labor Leader.

* * *

"There is a marked increase in the tendency to desert from the enemy lines," says Reuter's correspondent with the British headquarters. "The Germans themselves are aware of this, and take the utmost precaution to prevent it. Any man whose movements even give rise to the suspicion of a design to break away is fired at without demur. Deserters who have come in of late have been unanimous in their declaration that but for the perils and difficulties of running there would be wholesale flitting from their lines. War-weariness and a sense of hopelessness of the outlook are the principal reasons assigned by deserters for their action."

* * *

Baron Adelsward, ex-minister of finance in Sweden, who has been visiting the belligerent countries, is now at Berne, and reports that there is not the slightest prospect of peace at present. In Germany he found a strong sentiment for ending the war, but in France and England there was indignation at the very suggestion of peace. The same story comes from all sources.

* * *

The Rome correspondent of the London Star says that the illegitimate son of the late King Milan of Servia has been proclaimed King of Servia, at Belgrade, by the Austrian and German authorities. He has been living in Vienna.

* * *

Ten children who were playing in a gravel pit near the aviation grounds in Cologne, Germany, recently, were killed by an air bomb. The children found the unexploded bomb and were playing with it when it exploded.

TRAVEL EAST IN LUXURY.

Sunset Limited to New Orleans through balmy skies. Thence through historic scenes of days of war, now alive with southern life and industry. The Sunset Limited and its connection at New Orleans with the New York and New Orleans Limited makes an ideal winter trip East. Service the best. Stop-over at points of much interest. For booklets and information apply Washington Sunset Route, 874 Market St., San Francisco, Cal.

Los Angeles Pasadena Oakland

Fred Hartsook

PHOTOGRAPHS
41 GRANT AVENUE

San Jose Sacramento San Francisco

STYLE AND FIT

Are a man's first consideration when he is about to buy a suit. Price is the next. We have studied both very closely and we are prepared to make a first-class stylish suit to order at cash prices, on installments, weekly or monthly.

C. H. NEUHAUS, Merchant Tailor
787 MARKET STREET, Upstairs

The New Poodle Dog

Hotel and Restaurant
At Corner
Polk and Post
STREETS
San Francisco

Phone:
Franklin 2960

San Francisco's Leading French Restaurant
MUSIC

French Dinner Every Evening, 75 Cents
Sunday, $1.00

NEW DELMONICO'S

862 Geary Street

Above Hotel St. Francis Telephone Sutter 1572

BLANCO'S

O'Farrell and Larkin Streets
PHONE FRANKLIN 9

No visitor should leave the city without seeing the finest cafe in America

J. B. Pua J. Bergez C. Mailheuan C. Lalanne L. Coutard

BERGEZ-FRANK'S Old POODLE DOG Co.

HOTEL AND RESTAURANT
MUSIC AND ENTERTAINMENT EVERY EVENING

415-421 Bush St., San Francisco (Above Kearny) Exchange, Douglas 2411

Tel. Kearny 1461 Private Exchange Connecting all Warehouses

SAN FRANCISCO WAREHOUSE CO.

Warehousemen Forwarding Agents Distributors Public Weighers
Spur Track Connection with all Railroads
Main Office—625-647 Third St., San Francisco, Cal.

INSURANCE

The Life Underwriters' Association of San Francisco held its annual banquet and installation of officers at the Palace Hotel this week. The addresses dealt chiefly with progress made in the local insurance field during the last year. Horace R. Hunter, assistant manager of the Pacific Mutual Company, retiring president, reviewed the year's work. Mr. Hunter acted as toastmaster. The other speakers were George B. Scott, manager of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company; J. E. Phelps, State Insurance Commissioner; W. F. Heron, supervisor of the Fidelity Mutual Insurance Company; Robert Newton Lynch, of the Chamber of Commerce, and Rev. Frederick W. Clampett.

Following are the officers elected for the ensuing term: President, George Leisander, manager of the Germania Life Insurance Company; vice-president, O. O. Orr, general agent of the Prudential Life Insurance Company; secretary and treasurer, W. C. Palmer, supervisor of agents for the Providence Life and Trust Company. The new executive committee includes the officers and Hunter; J. B. Thomas, manager of the Northwestern Mutual Company; A. Allen Fiske, general agent of the Mutual Life Insurance Company, and S. B. Thompson, agent of the Union Central Life Insurance Company.

* * *

The discovery that the Guardian Casualty and the California were on the bond of Sheriff Finn for fifty thousand, the contractor to finish the Hetch-Hetchy railroad for seven hundred and seventy-two thousand, a Superior Court bond for two hundred thousand, State Harbor Commission for two hundred thousand, and that they had issued various other bonds for amounts not warranted by their assets, has prompted the local representatives of companies with a government rating to send a letter of expostulation to Mayor Rolph of San Francisco. After ascertaining that companies of the character mentioned have already written by far the greater part of the bonds now held by the city, and at the request of the Surety Underwriters' Association of California, Mayor Rolph has directed the various heads of the city departments to accept bonds only from bonding companies listed by the United States Treasury Department as acceptable securities on Federal bonds, limiting, as with the government the amount of any one bond to ten per cent of the capital and surplus of the issuing company. The business secured by the California Casualty and the Guardian Casualty has been written as low as one-fourth of one per cent.

* * *

The Pacific Board, through A. W. Thornton and George W. Dornin, members of the underwriters' arson committee, have notified Mayor Husted of San Jose that unless competent assurance can be at once given that conditions in that city will be righted within thirty days, rates will be advanced on all property 25 per cent. The board has reached the conclusion that the city authorities have not been sufficiently energetic in stamping out the crime of arson which has been rampant in that city for months, and that radical measures must be taken to protect the companies from further loss from that cause. The Grand Jury has threatened to bring charges of malfeasance in office against any city officer who shall in future offer evidence that he is neglecting his duty in this respect, and declares that it will remain in session all summer, if necessary, in order to stamp out the epidemic of arson now prevailing in San Jose.

* * *

W. A. Wann, who recently resigned as San Francisco manager of the Manhattan Life, has joined the field force of the Mutual Life under W. H. Hathaway.

* * *

David A. Dickie, assistant secretary of the Western States Life, has been promoted to the office of secretary, succeeding F. S. Withington, former actuary and secretary, who resigned January 1st.

* * *

Chas. Simpson, of San Francisco, California manager of the Casualty Company of America, who this week suffered a fractured collar bone and two broken ribs in a jitney accident at Los Angeles, is resting easily at his home in Oakland.

* * *

The Insurance Federation of California will hold a general meeting Thursday, February 27th, at 2 p. m., in the assembly hall of the Merchants' Exchange Building, San Francisco.

The California Inspection Rating Bureau has turned down by a vote of 12 to 8 the proposal to have the pay-roll audits on compensation policies issued by its members conducted by that body. The project has been under discussion since the organization of the bureau some four months since, and was favored by Commissioner Phelps and opposed by the State Fund.

* * *

The firm of Klitgard and Newmeyer has been dissolved. C. J. Klitgard will hereafter represent the Continental Life in Northern California, and B. H. Newmeyer will have the southern part of the State. H. C. Edwards, vice-president and general counsel of the company, will hereafter act as general manager also.

* * *

Governor Warren R. Porter, president of the Western States Life Insurance Company, has resigned as a member of the California State Board of Prison Directors, owing to pressure of private business, and his resignation has been accepted with regret by Governor Johnson.

* * *

William V. Lloyd, brother of Fred B. Lloyd of the Pacific Coast Casualty, and member of the brokerage firm of Lloyd, Spengler & Fraser, died Saturday after a brief illness. Mr. Lloyd was a high degree Mason, a prominent club man and prominent in insurance affairs in San Francisco. He is survived by a widow and daughter.

To New York by Rail and Ocean

Through fare from San Francisco same as All-Rail and includes Berth and Meals on Steamer

"Sunset Limited"---74 Hours to New Orleans

Leaves Third Street Station 5:00 P. M.

Connects at New Orleans With

Southern Pacific's Ocean Liners

Sailing to New York Wednesdays and Saturdays

The Marvelous "APACHE TRAIL" Auto Trip, Phoenix to Globe, Made by Detour Maricopa to Bowie, Arizona

For Fares and Berths Ask Agents

SOUTHERN PACIFIC

FIRST IN SAFETY

VISIT CAPITOL CITY of your STATE

A Day's Trip—Well Spent

Visit beautiful Capitol Grounds—Capitol Building—Sutter's Fort—Crocker Art Gallery—Riverside Drive, etc.
$3.35 Round Trip Saturdays and Sundays, with return limit Monday.

OAKLAND, ANTIOCH & EASTERN RAILWAY

SAN FRANCISCO
 THE CITY AT THE FOOT OF THE MOUNTAIN
 THE BAY OF THE GOLDEN GATE
 THE SACRAMENTO VALLEY

NEWS LETTER

California Advertiser.

Devoted to the Leading Interests of California and the Pacific Coast.

Vol. XCI

San Francisco, Cal., Saturday, February 12, 1916

No. 7

The SAN FRANCISCO NEWS LETTER AND CALIFORNIA ADVERTISER is printed and published every Saturday by the Proprietor, Frederick Marriott, 21 Sutter street, San Francisco, Cal. Tel. Kearny 3594. Entered at San Francisco, Cal., Post-office as second-class mail matter. Chicago Office—Geo. Hische, 1310 Westminster, Westminster Building, Chicago.

London Office—George Street & Co., 30 Cornhill, E. C., England. Matter intended for publication in the current number of the SAN FRANCISCO NEWS LETTER AND CALIFORNIA ADVERTISER should be sent to the office not later than 5 p. m. Wednesday. Subscription Rates (including postage)—1 year, $4.00; 6 months, $2.25; Foreign—1 year, $6.00; 6 months, $3.25.

—Isn't it about time to kill a president and start a new revolution in Mexico?

—Gasoline keeps climbing in price as though some one had touched a match to it.

—If the President wants a better navy, it would be well to get a better naval secretary.

—Bryan's brother is running for the Governorship of Nebraska. Running for office runs in the family.

—Those who saved for a rainy day have had plenty of chance since the first of the year to profit by their foresight.

—The woman who cut a man up after she killed him protests volubly because she is held for trial. All cut up about it, in fact.

—Roosevelt's worst enemies couldn't wish any more disastrous fate for him than to be a candidate against Wilson for the presidency.

—It took a war to make the United States realize that there was such a country as South America, and that it held rich trade possibilities.

—Advertisers are being prosecuted now for false statements. The only ones who object are the cheap, crooked, fly-by-night merchants.

—The Fish and Game Commission is to teach the women of California how to cook fish. Why not instructions for the men in how to catch 'em?

—Ford is so well satisfied with his peace crusade to Europe that he is to send a second one. But he can't expect to get such a laugh this time as he did before.

—The Tourist Association of Central California is to open headquarters in Los Angeles and distribute information to travelers as to the attractiveness of this part of the State. Will the Association be popular in Los Angeles? It will not.

—The net result of the law against opium and such drugs seems to be that a powerful ring has been formed to violate the law; that the government has to add a lot of detectives to its force; that there is a capture once in a while that means temporary suppression; and that the drug fiends get as much of the stuff as before, but have to pay two and three prices for it.

—San Francisco imported thirteen million dollars' worth of goods in January—five million ahead of any previous month. Looks as though our middle name is "Prosperity."

—President Wilson says he has been lying awake nights worrying over war problems. And many a Republican leader has been lying awake nights worrying over President Wilson.

—As the probation fad grows, the record of violence and murder grows—but that does not seem to disturb the faddists, who prefer the carrying out of their theories to the good of the community.

—Theodore Bell has discovered a strong anti-Wilson sentiment in the East. It will be remembered that when Theodore ran for Governor in California he discovered a strong anti-Bell sentiment.

—A concerted movement has been started to keep the jitney 'buses off Market street east of Sixth. As everybody except the jitney drivers is in favor of the move, it should go through.

—The French prophetess, Madame Thebes, says that the Kaiser will probably commit suicide this year. The word "probably" is a very safe and handy anchor to windward for prophets.

—The Allies have taken Kamerun, in Africa, away from the Germans. As only about one person in a million knew that Kamerun existed, there has been no real public excitement over the victory.

—Has it come to your notice that the majority of the criminals arrested within the past two or three weeks are out of prison on parole? And do you think that is a good recommendation for the parole system?

—The New Jersey Board of Education, after much pondering, has decided that boys may come to school without collars on warm days. These intellectual problems of education are enough to wear out officials.

—If somebody comes up behind you and cracks you over the head and goes through your pockets don't get peevish. It's only one of our parole-protected thugs exercising the rights that the sob-sisters have conferred.

—There has been a protest among some of the old-fashioned over the prospect of paper money replacing coin here. The only people who have any real kick are those who can't get hold of either coin or currency.

—The Supervisors and the Works Board members, in their bickering and quarreling, show about as much dignity as a couple of slum women jawing over a back fence. And we pay them salaries for such disgraceful proceedings.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

CRACKING THE NUTS OF PREPAREDNESS.

For several weeks past, committees of business men appointed by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States have been conferring with the heads of the Army and Navy Departments at Washington with a view to getting details on proper preparedness, its scope and efficiency, all of which will be embodied into a preliminary report to be presented at the annual meeting of the National Chamber which meets in Washington this week. The heads of the Administration, including President Wilson, will attend to join in the discussion. As originally planned, this preliminary committee was divided into three sub-committees: a navy committee to consider the problem of national defense from the ocean to the coastline, an army committee to study the situation from the coastline to the last reserves of men and material, and an industrial committee to look into the possibilities of speeding up the industries controlling munitions and food supplies. Business men eminent in the fields named are working assiduously on these committees, and the report due this week should be an epitome of the views of the best business men of the country, sprinkled with a leaven of the best suggestions of several army and navy experts.

JITNEYS AND SUSPENSE. Local street car traffic has largely fallen off since the Exposition closed and this situation has largely affected the various carriers. The big motor buses have practically disappeared, one big company having withdrawn all its buses, the two big electric street car lines have tied up numbers of cars and reduced the number of platform men, while the energetic jitney service has fallen off one-half. However, jitneys continue to be a persistent and large partner in the receipts of the Municipal and United Railroads Company, particularly the latter, as the January receipts show. The receipts of the United Railroads Company for January show an enormous decrease for that month as compared with the Januaries of the past four years. Maintenance charges on both the big electric lines have been reduced to a minimum, but the only possible saving that could be made was perforce in operating expense, which meant curtailment in service. Result: the platform men are in face to face competition with the jitney men. The new car men who succeeded in getting jobs during the Exposition were the chief sufferers and had hardly broken in their new uniforms when they were discharged with barely enough to pay for the outfits they had bought. The decrease in receipts will be more severely felt by the Municipal Railway, as its biggest paying line, that from the ferry to Market street to the Exposition entrances, is a very scant fare producer.

IT'S HARD TO HOIST THE FLAG.
—Donahy in the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Practically all the fares coming from visitors to the Arts Building on the Exposition grounds. This situation will likely set the local Harrimans on the board of supervisors to study out new rights of way to extend the system in efforts to replace the light receipts. It is most likely that these local Harrimans will decide that the easiest and most profitable routes will be to parallel tracks or boldly invade territory belonging to the United Railroads. A likely big mark for them will be the Twin Peaks tunnel, which would open up a new fat land to exploit. Already there is underway a big contest over upper Market street as there was over lower Market street, and any half-baked prophet can easily hazard the forecast that other legal contests are incubating to materialize in the near future. Meanwhile the surviving jitneys are gradually finding themselves and the place they occupy in local street traffic. They have organized for defense in the city, but have no alliance with the jitney organization across the bay or anywhere else, despite the fact that the local electric lines, the taxis, the teamsters, local labor unions and soft-corned pedestrians vehemently proclaim them anathema. Practically all the jitney buses running down the peninsula are doing well, and it is only a question of a little while when their service will reach San Jose. The traffic development of the San Francisco peninsula is developing at a lively rate, with feeders on both sides, but it is in a melting pot condition, and has not yet found itself, owing to the jitney bus conundrum.

A HELPING HAND TO THE UNEMPLOYED. An excellent institution, if adequately handled, was started this week by the State through the opening of a public employment bureau in this city, Sacramento, Oakland and Los Angeles. In the last named city the office will be run in conjunction with the already well conducted employment bureau established by that city. All kinds of help will be furnished, and separate departments will be maintained for male and female help. A strong effort will be made to develop the commercial department, as bookkeepers, stenographers and employees in like lines are now obliged to pay twenty-five per cent of their first month's salary to obtain employment through the usual private agencies. No fees will be charged directly or indirectly by the new bureau. Labor Commissioner John P. McLaughlin is endeavoring to make the bureau a service to both the employer and the employee, a consideration of mutual benefit. Such a policy is naturally regarded with contempt by most of the owners of agencies as their object is to collect the fee and "devil take any guarantee that the applicant is fitted for the job."

An excellent institution, if adequately handled, was started this week by the State through the opening of a public employment bureau in this city, Sacramento, Oakland and Los Angeles. In the last named city the office will be run in conjunction with the already well conducted employment bureau established by that city. All kinds of help will be furnished, and separate departments will be maintained for male and female help. A strong effort will be made to develop the commercial department, as bookkeepers, stenographers and employees in like lines are now obliged to pay twenty-five per cent of their first month's salary to obtain employment through the usual private agencies. No fees will be charged directly or indirectly by the new bureau. Labor Commissioner John P. McLaughlin is endeavoring to make the bureau a service to both the employer and the employee, a consideration of mutual benefit. Such a policy is naturally regarded with contempt by most of the owners of agencies as their object is to collect the fee and "devil take any guarantee that the applicant is fitted for the job."

Employers of labor and office clerks should get in touch with these new State agencies and help them to attain their success. Their efforts are along efficiency lines and the intelligent distribution of laborers in their proper working zone throughout the State. This relieves congestion of labor and incidentally reduces the number out of employment, which naturally helps to better conditions. Over $500,000 is now paid annually by applicants to private employment agencies, money that is keenly needed by those in search of work.

Numbers of the so-called employment bureaus in this city and other big cities of the coast are simply deadfalls to trim the ignorant laborer of his hard-earned meagre pocket savings. These harpies have a number of bunco tricks which they play with enormous total profits out of the ignorant applicant for work. One of the most common and most profitable is an agreement between the employment agent and the gang boss of some big contracting company, milling or other company located somewhere in the interior of the State. Applicants are promised a steady job at the prevailing rates of pay, and, after paying the regular fee of $2, are given a tag to present to the gang boss at the end of the steamship or railroad ride. The laborer goes to work according to promise; but at the end of a month or two months he is notified by the boss that the manager has decided to cut down the working force for certain any old reasons, and he is instructed to take his blanket roll and skip. In these cases the gang boss and the employment agent are in cahoots and divide the $2 fee. As laborers are robbed in this way through the working summer season the loss to labor both in time and money is extremely large. A clever and pitiless employment agent is often able to clean up several thousand dollars in fees for his share in one camp alone, and as he usually has a large number of camps on his service list, the profits grow in proportion. Employers should patronize the new State Public Employment Bureau.

Just now Bryan is somewhat of an enigma in the presidential campaign now underway. From the day of his famous cross of silver speech delivered at a Democratic convention, and up to the time that President Wilson took charge of the Administration at Washington, he was recognized as the unchallenged leader of his party. Since then Bryan has endeavored to show that the President is simply the titular head while he, Bryan, is the real source of policy, leadership and control. Since his retirement from the Cabinet he has been quietly working to demonstrate to his followers that he still retains his grip on the situation. Politicians have expected that he would attempt to demonstrate this in some definite and articulate way on the hustings while Wilson is still making his whirlwind swing around the big circle to set forth his position on preparedness. Should Bryan attempt such a blow it will be recognized as a deliberate attempt to create schism in the party, factional trouble, a result which would delight the Republicans and rouse the ire of Wilson's supporters. Bryan is regarded by those who know the man as something more than a mere astute politician. His courageous and forceful work against several extremely adverse and notorious interests at the Baltimore convention illustrates his higher principles and the broad moral aspect in which he regards his party. Wilson has something more than opposition in his own ranks, bitter enemies, in fact, as was developed in the attitude of Clark, Hearst and Tammany during the Baltimore convention. Part of the hatchet is now buried in the case of one of these, but the others are of the Casca type, and are awaiting their opportunity. Wilson feels safe in his policies and the support of the American public under the present great worldwide strain. To most thinking Democrats it would seem that if Bryan should manage to recapture the control, the party would again return to its fruitless and palavering days in chasing dreams through the wilderness.

Of course the explanation of Wilson's plan is that he is handling the matter as a national proposition in which all parties in this country are vitally interested. Bryan seems to have taken a new position since the platform of the Baltimore convention, which he practically drafted, was adopted. In that platform he subscribed to the plank which determined a "definite naval program with a view to increased efficiency and economy and for a council of national defense to defend American policies, protect our citizens and uphold the honor and dignity of the nation."

PLIGHT OF THE REPUBLICANS.

The forthcoming election for the Presidency of these United States certainly demands, under the present crisis in the world, that it should be conducted with extreme gravity in respect to the situation, and that efforts to acquire the best statesmanship and competency to handle the situation on broad, substantial and comprehensive plans should prevail. All the nations are sailing on a stormy sea, and it behooves each to have a capable pilot.

It is almost a certainty that Wilson will be nominated by acclamation in the St. Louis convention next June. His name will be on the primary ballots of several States in March, despite the fact that the Baltimore convention provided a plank favoring a single presidential term. Republicans will likely make a quibble over this clause, but will fail to score on it. If Roosevelt is the Republican candidate there will arise the offset quibble of the third term. Such airy, ineffectual bubbles should not be allowed to appear in a campaign of such importance as the forthcoming one. It is safe to forecast that all such trivial questions will be buried by the big problems of the hour. These must be handled from the broadest viewpoint of statesmanship, while demagoguery, the weakness of most conventions, is carefully and insistently leashed in the background.

The present plight of the Republicans in settling on a satisfactory candidate is significant of the fact that they regard Wilson as a notably hard man to beat. For over a year their whips have beaten the bushes of every State in the Union, and have held up dark horses in every neck of the woods on the map, and all without practical results. Not one candidate of commanding statesmanship and the required attractive personality has been discovered. The committee has been practically forced to consider the proposition of running one of its two former candidates, Roosevelt and Taft. Both have been summarily beaten at the polls since they vacated the presidential chair. It is also significant that the strongest representatives of the Republican party, Root and Hughes, refuse to run,—apparently they see the handwriting on the wall. After a two years' search in quest of a "cinch" candidate the whips of the party have practically abandoned the hunt. It is fairly well understood in political circles, at this nick in time, that Roosevelt is the last hope to carry the handicap of their dampened hopes in the forthcoming presidential race in November. Roosevelt's greatest "qualification" as the party's candidate is the confident "hope" that he will be able to bring the remnants of the Progressive party back into the Republican camp, and thereby attract the necessary votes to beat the Wilson ticket. What a gem inspiration of practical patriotism to flash in the present crisis of the world! Who but a dyed-in-the-wool politician would make use of such political chicanery to win executive office at this juncture, when a loyal rivalry, an emulation, between the two parties should prevail to see which should provide the best executive statesman to meet the grave problems of the hour.

TOWN CRIER

—The hitherto popular clocks on stockings that used to strike the bell of attention to what was going on here and there in lingeries when the wind blew, are at this moment being swept helter-skelter from ball rooms, tea dansants, inside skating bees and bunny-hug corners by the new and fatally alluring hosey-hosey "conversational hosiery." This latest revelation in haut ton circles indicates, or rather states explicitly, in a readily readable cryptic form, what it would have the male biped attendant to understand. The "cryptic" business is simply stage play, of course, for the mushhead. The old clock-stocking of yesterday simply titilated the expectations. This new "conversational hose" is an electric shocker of the deep emotions and is distinctly warranted to yield impulsive results. If it does not happen to have the luck of laying the victim low at the first revealed sign, appeal or coquettish challenge, it substitutes a "come back" guaranteed to end the "conversation" satisfactorily. Skirts are made, of course, specially to curtain these innovations in stockings so that the cryptic signs and announcements develop in accentuating giddiness. A silk-stitched mouse running up a stocking does not have to use a megaphone to announce for the wearer that said mouse thinks he is unsafe, nor need the visitor take alarm. Nothing like "Do you use Pear's soap?" and "How's business?" disfigures these new movie "screams." The subtle appeals courageously skirt the altogether sensitive emotions of the best society on the principle, well laid down, that submarine warfare will never be settled by a palavering diplomacy. As these new dreams in hose are now being woven for only those who can afford to pay $100 per pair, the position of the wearers is naturally unassailable, even if over $500,000,000 is spent by the government for preparedness. As these new conversational hose get results by wireless and cost no more to launder than ordinary silken hose, society will certainly make elaborate use of them till the new bellum spectrum hose comes into vogue. Then watch the marriage and divorce columns in the daily prints and gape amazed. The chlorine gas surprises sprung by the Germans in the present war will not be a marker to the convulsions introduced by the new bellum spectrum hose. Watch for the advertisements.

—Nothing in our planetary system illustrates so completely and illuminatingly the glorious success of municipal ownership as represented in the extraordinary success, from a financial and managerial point of view, as the present situation of the two big auditoriums recently constructed by the cities of Oakland and San Francisco for the special purpose of holding conventions and like big public gatherings. The Oakland auditorium was barely rescued from ill-fame by Oakland citizens pungling up additional funds to cover those that were sunk somewhere out of sight while the contracts of the foundations were being mislaid. Of course, nothing of this character could have happened in San Francisco, but nevertheless Mayor Rolph and his political henchmen heaved a big sigh of relief over the fact that they had held out deliberately $1,000,000 from the $5,000,000 tax money voted to the Exposition management as promised payment for the completion of the structure. It was a close shave, one of the closest the local taxpayers ever escaped in paying a tax twice. Though these two big auditoriums were built professedly by the politicians for "convention gatherings," etc., a quiet and adroit movement is evident that the structures will ultimately be used to exploit profits for the bosses. The plans to transform the Oakland auditorium into a skating rink and the local auditorium into a grand opera headquarters, indicates the line of policy that is likely to prevail. The attempt to make the local auditorium a profitable "opera" headquarter for certain insiders, miscarried simply because a rather influential organization, the Theatrical Managers Association, opposed the enterprise because it would cut heavily into their own box office receipts. Some other "show" will eventually be found that will not be objectionable to theatrical managers. Under the present combination in the political regime the auditorium is likely to prove a rather ragged expense to the city. There is one great compensation: the leading merchants and professional men are so absorbed in watching over the interests of the municipality, as conducted at the New City Hall, that they deliberately neglect their own private affairs.

—A bottle cast into the bay by a captain of an outgoing vessel was recently picked up on the shore of Hawaii, after an eleven months' voyaging around the shifting waters of the broad Pacific. With the "wets" and the "drys" dated for their fatal affray within the next few months, no bottle of any promising contents will be able hereafter to duck through the blockade and mine zone field that is beginning to blanket the Pacific Coast. Washington and Oregon are making the welkin ring with "How Dry I Am," and bottles of "red light" tendencies, but chemically impure, traveling through those territories, get the bunny-hug and the Nelson cross. Iron crosses, German pattern, were popular among Oregon enthusiasts for war till it was discovered that the content of alcohol in the liquor was eating the iron. No respectable Oregonian likes to see the iron cross he has received by parcels post badly eaten in spots, when he expects to drink it himself. So the imports of iron crosses into Oregon are rapidly giving way to receipts of Red Cross "first aid to the injured" kits. How fiercely dry men get when they are mixed up in war?

—Now that certain city officials are getting something like $25,000 worth of motor conveyance out of the gullible taxpayers they are endeavoring to increase their "easy" emoluments by attempting to gouge an unlimited free service from the telephone company. As the telephone company is paying annually two per cent of its gross receipts to the city, besides contributing the limited number of 1,000 telephones to certain officials, it is difficult to understand the caterwauling of the kickers. Certain salary jobbers in the City Hall seem to think they possess the unique privilege of gouging all they desire out of local public utilities, and any influential individual who applies for the ordinary courtesies and rights belonging to a citizen. The number of free telephones ranged well over the 1,000 mark. Upon the righteous protest of the telephone company the number was recently cut to 300. The only ones on the free list now are the eighteen supervisors, the members of the appointed commissions and heads departments who are likely to be called up on official business at night. The habit of grab seems to intensify with exercise.

—The hyper-conscientious local physician who appropriated jewelry valued at $4,400 from a semi-unconscious woman patient in order to assure himself of the payment of his fee, is undeniably leading his profession in the conception that he would rather be safe than right. As the woman had three bullets in her neck, fired by her husband, and no one near to protect her interests, the physician was certainly entitled to all he could grab in order to protect himself, and incidentally the woman, from the thugs from Bulgaria that are reported to be planning to work this city after they finish their campaign in Asia Minor. This Johnny-on-the-spot and far-reaching physician doubtless will see that his fee approximates very close to the $4,400, because of the extraordinary strain on his nerve. May Sawbones find the Devil waiting him should he make any such attempt.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN

BY FRED EMERSON BROOKS

FROM out the common toil was born a man
The bible manger where man's faith was bred:
Within a rude log cabin plainer than
A man whose fame shall thru the ages spread—
The great immortal of our mortal clan.

Among his forebears who is there of worth
To warrant this great miracle of birth?
No morning stars in gladsome chorus sung
When greatness out of mild oblivion sprung:—
The hope of freedom, the beloved of earth.

His life as pure and gentle as a sage
He had not thought of wealth, no thought of wage:
True wealth is found alone in noble deeds;
Religion is not parcelled off in creeds;
'Twas his religion sorrow to assuage.

Obscurely born and yet he rose to be
The most colossal man of history.
Walking with wisdom made the heart his guide;
In every action took the human side
As though he had been bred in Gallilee.

At Lincoln's name all hearts will overflow
The noblest type the nation has to show.
We love the awkward, handsome frame he bore,
We love his homely, handsome face the more.
The most exalted soul the ages know.

His lantern out still others held the plan
To keep the search Diogenes began
The torch of liberty was set aflame
And from the wood the tall railsplitter came:—
The world at last beheld an honest man.

We marvel one so wise could be so droll:
His wit has made the world with laughter roll;
His speech so plain the plain could understand,
And none too poor for his extended hand;
At the portal of his eyes you met his soul.

Our eagle dropped from yon aerial sea
A plume from out the wing of liberty,
A pinion by the bird of Freedom sent
To make the pen that signed the instrument
That saved the state and set the bondman free.

"A soldier shot for discipline? O, no!
Our volunteers shall not be slaughtered so:
That mother's son I wrote the pardon for
Turned out the bravest soldier of the war.
Let no more men be shot save by the foe!"

At Gettysburg, as freedom's advocate,
This orator and master of debate
Poured from his soul impressions so sublime
He stands proclaimed the noblest of all time:
The friend of rags, the peer of all the great.

With tragedy of war his heart was rent,
On liberty of man his soul was bent:
A nation's martyr to one purpose wed;
So great in life, yet greater still when dead:
The foremost nation's noblest president.

The century in travail had conceived
A man in whom both rich and poor believed,
With sovereign wisdom and a peasant's heart
Who played in his short life so huge a part
That in his death humanity was grieved.

No princely Croesus with his golden mace
Nor royalty that history may trace
Can match the fame of this untitled man:
The earth can hold no greater title than
To be Emancipator of a race.

Our greater names high on the walls of fame
Are set in letters bold of living flame;
But higher yet, up where our eagles fly,
Where Dawn has flung our aegis on the sky,
There love, in letters gold, puts Lincoln's name.

The welcome news that Mme. Melba, the great prima donna, is going to make her home somewhere on this peninsula, has sent waves of delight over the fashionable musical set, and has made many a poor girl with musical ambition to hitch her wagon of hope to the Melba star. For the great diva announces that she loves to teach, and that she will personally conduct promising voices into the land of realization, acting as official guide without recompense.

Mme. Melba, who in private life is Mrs. Armstrong, has, with her son and daughter-in-law, been the house guest of Mrs. Fred Kohl during her visit here, and has taken part in all the gayeties of the Burlingame set. It makes one realize how the last taint of provincialism and stupidity has been eradicated by the years that have passed—about twenty—since the first appearance of the Metropolitan Opera Company at the old Grand Opera House in Mission street. Melba, Sembrich, the De Retzkes, all the great singers of the day, were in that magnificent assemblage of artists, and society thrilled to the opportunity, not only to hear glorified sound, but to wear clothes and jewels cut to opera measure.

The women, as usual, showed more sartorial adaptability than the men. Their gowns were as indecorous as decency would allow (which is an Irish bull for décolleté), and every safe deposit box in town was rifled of its jeweled contents for the night. The men managed pretty well, save in the matter of headgear. The folding opera hat was not yet ubiquitous. The Mad Hatter would have found in this blundering everything from a straw hat to a silk tile.

But it was the matter of receiving the artists that caused the real qualms. The social status of the artist was not so firmly established all over the world then as it is now, and San Francisco had never had an opportunity like this. It seems inconceivable now that there should have been so much sorting and weighing and choosing of the proper thing to do; and such division of opinion when some made the choice of complimenting the artists by entertaining them.

I think that it was Mrs. Will Crocker who gave the first big dinner party in honor of some of the artists. And as I remember, it was Ned Greenway who gave them a supper at the Bohemian Club. At any rate, I do know that there was actually much discussion among the mothers as to the propriety of letting the young girls go to such an affair, and several of the more conservative dowagers decided against letting their darlings breathe the rarified air in which the artists move and have their private beings! Sounds like a prehistoric yarn, for in these days the great artists are the ones who sort and label and choose from the mob of society aspirants for their favor. And when the chatelaine of a mansion can actually capture one for a house guest, she is considered the real lion tamer by those who have only succeeded in stroking a celebrity's mane via some entertainment. The man was all wrong who said "the world do move." This story proves that the world really races along.

Mme. Melba, like every one else who visits here, is touched by the response of this city to the war sufferers of Europe. New York, of course, and some of the other big Atlantic cities, are doing relief work very actively with one hand and banking war profits with the other, but nowhere in this great hinterland of the Atlantic does society seem to bestir itself so actively for war-torn Europe as here in San Francisco.

The thing that so impressed Mme Melba was the thoroughbred, disciplined way in which some of the principles on the program of the Benefit supper dance the other night went on with their parts in spite of the fact that they were really not feeling fit. Mrs. Fred Kohl was down for a song, and she was naturally nervous at singing on the same program with Mme. Melba, and then to add to her trepidation came the unpleasant experience at the Melba concert a day or two before the Benefit, when the metal on her gown caught the current of the electric apparatus behind the stage and gave her a severe electric shock. Her physician strongly opposed her singing at the Benefit, but she went through it with the finish of a professional, holding her nerves under thorough discipline until it was all over, and then taking to bed.

Mrs. Francis Carolan was down on the program to recite "King Albert of Belgium," and she, too, went bravely through her part in spite of the fact that she was suffering from a blinding headache that would exact a sever toll unless given perfect quiet. But Mrs. Carolan did not feel that she had any right to "coddle" herself, and went on with her part after the traditional manner of professionals, who seldom let physical discomforts prevent their appearance. As she recited the poem, if possible more tellingly than when first she stunned her friends and surprised her critics by the wonderfully dramatic but controlled and sympathetic rendition of those verses that acclaim the King of Belgium's part in the hideous conflict now raging in Europe.

§ § §

Miss Madge Wilson and Doctor Chester Moore, whose marriage will take place in early spring, could hardly stand the endurance test of hospitality showered on them did it take the usual formal tone of pre-nuptial affairs. But they belong to that coterie, out the Presidio way, which has banded itself into a group called the "neighbors" to work and play together in harmonious fashion. The Neighbors take part in the larger social life of the city, and indeed they could not be spared from the "big doings." But their intimate affairs, their reading and their dancing clubs, are the envy of other coteries that have attempted the same thing, but because the relationship was founded on artificial foundation the friendships soon toppled over. The Neighbors have gone the friendly tenor of their happy way for several years now, and out of this delightful camaraderie have sprung many romances—like that of Miss Wilson and Dr. Moore. Among those who have recently entertained for this engaged couple are Miss Marion Huntington, a pioneer in the Neighbor group, Robert Porter and Phil Paschel.

§ § §

Mrs. A. B. Spreckels, whose tombola drawings will take place the second week in March, has received another letter from King Albert of Belgium, in recognition of her services in behalf of his stricken people. Mrs. Spreckels is sending the funds which she collects to that little strip of country which is occupied by the Germans, the inhabitants of which are called the "Free Belgians." They are still politically free, but they are likewise free to starve and freeze to death, as, like the rest of their countrymen, they are without the necessities of life and entirely dependent on outside help.

§ § §

The Ross Amber Currans are not superstitious, but they are going to buy a rabbit's foot; refrain from giving scissors or knives to friends; look at the moon over the left shoulder; wait until they are outside before they put up their umbrellas, and avoid dinner parties of thirteen. The ill wind which has blown their way makes the average whirlwind of that sort look like a mild zephyr. First their house burns down, destroying most of the bric-a-brac which they have collected, singly and doubly, in Europe. Then they move the rest of it to a town house, and things begin to disappear, whereupon the services of a private

CHAMPAGNE

PIPER-HEIDSIECK

Anc^{ne} M^{on} HEIDSIECK fondee en 1785

KUNKELMANN & C^o Succ^{rs}

REIMS

CHARLES MEINECKE & Co.

AGENTS PACIFIC COAST

314 SACRAMENTO ST., S. F.

detective are called upon. After his advent the most valuable things in the house take wing so fast that another detective is brought in and detects the first one in the act of making away with the loot.

Curran has a jaunty sense of humor, and at the Pacific Union Club the other day remarked that he had always wondered how detectives managed to beguile themselves during the long, slow intermissions between detecting—now he understands. They turn to burling when there is nothing doing for them as detectives.

Mrs. George J. Bucknall, president of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Society of California Pioneers, presided at a notable reception of that body given at the Fairmont Hotel recently, in commemoration of the sixty-sixth anniversary of the signing of the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo which marked the ceding of California by Mexico to the United States. The beautiful large ball room of the hotel was artistically decorated with floral effects, and made a rarely attractive background for the large gathering. The entertaining program of the afternoon was graced by an excellent selection of music in which Miss Heyman and Robert de Bruce took part. During the mingling of the many delighted guests, refreshments were served. In the receiving party were Mrs. George J. Bucknall, Mrs. John T. Brice, Mrs. Timothy Guy Phelps, Mrs. E. B. Holladay, Mrs. Robert White, Mrs. Henry Weatherbee, Miss Laurilla M. Hathaway, Mrs. Lewis E. Stanton, Miss Caroline A. Snook, Mrs. John Gallway, Mrs. Wm. F. Fonda, Mrs. Eleanor Martin, Mrs. Jerome Madden, Mrs. Josephine Daniels, Mrs. John M. Burnett, Mrs. Emma L. Hunt, Mrs. James Burnham and Mrs. Jas. Martel.

The informal dansant at Pebble Beach Lodge, near Del Monte, was a most enjoyable affair. The Hotel orchestra furnished the music, and instead of stopping at midnight, as planned, the guests insisted on their continuing till two o'clock. A very fine buffet supper was served throughout the evening. The night was clear and moonlight, so the drive out was especially beautiful.

The St. Francis Hotel has started another attractive innovation this week, in the shape of a kindergarten that will be conducted in the green room on the mazzanine floor by Mrs. Harriet A. Fay Richards, an instructor of little children, who has acquired national fame by her work in Massachusetts. Mrs. Richards will be assisted by Mrs. Hinde of San Francisco and other ladies. The work in the kindergarten will follow the best precedents in the course of instruction, such features as clay modeling and folk dancing being given particular emphasis. A notable feature of this department, however, is that it permits parents to place children in charge of the kindergarten during the day, while they are out shopping or visiting, with the assurance that the little ones will be entertained and cared for in the pleasantest sort of environment.

Dollar Day Dance and Show for Associated Charities.

Arrangements for the "Dollar Day" canvass and dance next Monday have sufficiently advanced to warrant prediction that the former will be a financial success and the latter a social triumph. More than 2,000 women will devote the day to combing the city for one dollar donations to the Associated Charities, and in exchange for each dollar received will be given a "valentine" entitling its holder to free admittance to the dance that night in the Civic Auditorium. This function promises to be one of the most democratic dance revels ever attempted in San Francisco.

Mrs. George Whitney entertained Monday with a luncheon and bridge party at the Hotel Oakland. Table decorations were baskets of spring flowers. Her guests were Mrs. Cutting, Mrs. Milvain, Mrs. Wakefield, Mrs. Lohman, Mrs. Batchelder, Mrs. Morton, Mrs. Elliott.

Miss Marjorie Williams was hostess at a tea at the Hotel Oakland Saturday, honoring Miss Lulu Houts. The invited guests were Misses Ruth Brophy, Vilma Butler, Betty Hughes, Elsie Merrivether, Marion Howell, Elizabeth Cook, Winifred Berg, Sybel Murray and Grace Bradford.

San Francisco Day by Day

As seen by A. S. Macleod

DRESSES WILL STILL BE FULL

THE NEW CRAZE

DANCING PAVILION
5¢
A DANCE

ONE KIND OF A DANCE

ASHACLED

ON THEIR WAY

PLEASURE'S WAND

"Obey no wand but Pleasure's."—Tom Moore.

"Motherhood" at the Columbia.

Here is a play which has a message to convey—which seeks no cheap sensationalism—nor an appeal to the salacious minded. Sincerity of purpose is evident. The subject is a big one, and the authors have much to learn as to the technical side of play construction. Brieux's "Damaged Goods" led the way with this new generation in the frank discussion of plays dealing with sex problems. Personally, I have no patience with a certain kind of play which relies on the manner in which it touches intimate matters in a cheap, clap-trap way, in which the dominant feature is the appeal which is made to the vulgar-minded who go to the theatre to be shocked. "Motherhood" is not this kind of a play. It is a frank and candid discussion of an evil which is amazing in its scope, and for which in this country there is no remedy, legal or otherwise. Education is the torch-bearer of progress and right living, and a play which in a sincere manner gives a clear and vivid exposition of a prevailing evil and points a remedy—certainly has a purpose. Our modern civilization is a funny thing at best, and when we sit back and think over things in a logical way, I believe that we are more amused than otherwise at the inconsistency of humans.

The company of five presenting "Motherhood" was gotten together in Los Angeles. Special credit is due Jack Bryce, who as the blind inventor gives us a character which, after he has rounded it out and worked out more of the real significance, with time would develop into a performance of sterling calibre.

Mr. Bryce should try and avoid a certain monotony in his delivery, which detracts. Blanche Hall as the heroine is most conscientious, and Nat Holmes should not be forgotten. "Motherhood" is going to create a lot of talk, and after careful revision will be ready to go to New York and make a good many people sit up and take notice. It should crowd the Columbia to the doors during its brief stay.

* * *

Pantages Theatre.

One great popular form of entertainment nowadays is popular vaudeville, and nowhere can we see a better example of this than at our own Pantages Theatre. Here, for a modest pittance, we are shown the best things culled from the entire vaudeville world, and one of the best things about a Pantages program is the uniform excellence of the acts. The bill this week is a splendid example of this kind of policy, and it is what the public evidently likes. The trend of the great theatre loving public is for good, clean entertainment, something to amuse the masses, something varied enough to please the most exacting taste. Of Pantages circuit of theatres it can be stated that they have adopted a definite policy, and that is to give the public the best for the least. For this condition of affairs, credit is due the untiring energy of Mr. Pantages himself, who has the invaluable local assistance of Mr. J. J. Cluxton and Mr. Drady. These two lieutenants are on the job every minute of the time, and they are unceasing in their efforts to secure good acts of the kind which please the majority. To see the show this week means becoming a regular Pantages patron. Beginning with Richard Haveman and his wild animal act, every number registers an individual hit. The program never becomes tiresome, and there is just enough of moving pictures to more than satisfy your average moving picture devotee. Pantages has developed into a genuine San Francisco institution, with a regular clientele, and the habitual

Joseph E. Howard, who will present his own song revue next week at the Orpheum.

Pantages attendant always becomes a Pantages booster. Personally, I always enjoy a Pantages show, because as a rule all the acts are here for the first time, and none of the stunts run too

MELLOW AS MOONLIGHT CASCADE

For your HI-BALL today

The finest, purest and mellowest whisky that brains and money can produce, cost to you no more than inferior grades; so why not ask for and insist on getting CASCADE.

Instead of saying whisky, just say CASCADE, you will enjoy it and feel much better.

Special enjoyable drink recipes for the asking by writing
J. H. Norton, care San Francisco News Letter

A group of models attired in some of the spring creations as will be seen at the monster fashion show at the Fete in Fairyland, at the Civic Auditorium this Saturday evening. The affair is being given under the auspices of the Indoor Yacht Club, in behalf of the poor orphan children of San Francisco.

long. Bertha Gardener this week should have special mention, on account of her conscientious singing, and the display of a voice which is of most excellent timbre, and which she uses with fine judgment and discretion. Moreover, she never strains her voice in order to gain an effect, a fault so often noticed among ambitious vocalists. Don't miss the show this week. It's a real Pantages bill at its best.

PAUL GERSON.

Ossip Gabrilowitsch and the Symphony Orchestra.

The fifth pair of concerts, with Beethoven and Mozart in the first half and Weber and Smetana in the second, represented two distinct periods in musical composition. The former gave to lovers of the "old school" melody incomparable which lingers in the heart and mind of the listener long after the instruments are stilled, while the latter two, in a measure, anticipate the extravagant idea of to-day. One listens to Debussy, Ducas and Schoenberg, marveling at their skill in manipulating their themes in orchestral arrangement, but if there is enjoyment, generally it is of the head entirely, wherein the soul of the listener is never reached. One is led to speculate as to whether out of all this qucerness in art and music alike, another prophet (as our beloved Wagner) may not arise, gifted with a divine insight, who can bring about another "Renaissance," so to speak, welding the old and new into a perfect oneness.

But to revert to the concerts of last week: Each number held the interest because of its own particular value, while the work of the orchestra, especially the violins, which wove a tracery at times, infinitely delicate. Of the Symphony, the "Larghetto" shows Beethoven at his best, to my mind, but the entire work seems to breathe a happier spirit than his later efforts. Gabrilowitsch read the Concerto in "D" Minor of Mozart with its full poetic value. It was the first time the writer had ever heard this great artist, and his playing left an unsatisfied longing for more. The absolute understanding between Conductor Hertz and the pianist was a great delight, throughout both the "Concerto" and the "Concertstuck" in F Minor of Weber. The closing number is said to be Smetana's greatest work in the field of orchestra, and forms one of a cycle of six symphonic poems called in its entirety "Ma Vlast" (My Fatherland.) The particular one played was the second, "Vltava," which describes the river Moldau as it flows through sylvan scenes and finally disappears in the distance.

BETTY.

Feed Your Baby Regularly

Regularity in feeding, sleeping, bathing and airing are of utmost importance at the beginning of your baby's life. It means so much to you in managing your household duties. It means so much to the little one in health and happiness.

Your baby should sleep well at night. If he does not the trouble is often with his food. If you are nursing the baby and your milk does not agree with him try the time-tried substitute that is made from clean, pure cow's milk—

Gail Borden
EAGLE
BRAND
CONDENSED MILK
THE ORIGINAL

Three generations of careful mothers would tell you that they use "Eagle Brand" because it is pure, clean, uniform, easily digested, quickly prepared.

If you have never used "Eagle Brand" in cooking you have a happy surprise in store. It gives a delicious, rich flavor to your most delicate baby. Use it as you would fresh milk and sugar.

Send coupon today.
Borden's Condensed Milk Co.
"Leaders of Quality"
Est. 1857 New York

Borden's Condensed Milk Co. N. L. 216
111th Street, New York

Please send me "Baby's Welfare" and "Baby's Biography" as well as Borden's Recipes

Name _____

Address _____

ADVANCE ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Big All-Star Show at Auditorium Saturday Night.

Following is the complete program for the Fete in Fairyland and Fashion Show at the Civic Auditorium this Saturday evening, under the auspices of the Indoor Yacht Club, for the benefit of charity. Everybody should go:

Overture; Boyd's Circus, direction Professor W. Boyd; Naval Reserve Drill by Engineer Corps of National Guard; tableau, Christmas and the Kiddies; beauty chorus in black and white, Tait's; William Kydd Nelson, song by the Magna Box; dancing skit, Lenore Peters, Vivian Tweedey, Erna Hermort and May Garcia, direction Anita Peters Wright; Indoor Yacht Club Middies, arranged by Blake and Amber; Columbia Park Boys Drill; Ben Beno, the King of the Air, in an aerial thriller; California Grays, preparedness drill; Slaves of Buddha, Oriental act by Chinese maidens, Faustina & Co., stage setting by Sing Fat & Company; La Loie Fuller in scenes from life, the modern way; the Fashion Display, models from H. Liebes & Co.; Mag-nin & C., O'Connor & Moffatt, Roos Bros., Livingstone Bros., Gantner & Mattern Co.; Fairy Dance, direction Doris De Fides. I. Y. C. Beauties, direction Blake and Amber. The pageants and spectacles will begin at 8:30 o'clock.

* * *

Gifted Violinist to Appear Here.—Of great interest to music lovers will be the first appearance in San Francisco of one of America's most gifted violinists, Miss Amy Ahrens, who graduated with high honors at the Royal Academy of Music, Berlin, Germany. She studied under Carl Halir and Arrigo Serato. Wherever she has appeared in concert she has aroused enthusiasm, and the glowing tributes of musical critics. Her interpretation of the best works in musical literature has always proven to her audiences that she not only has achieved technical mastery, but that she has within her soul the real genius of music. Her first concert will take place on Wednesday, February 23d, at Sorosis Club, in the evening. Miss Ahrens will be assisted by Mr. Harold Pracht, baritone, who sang at Festival Hall, P. P. I. E. Mr. Gyula Ormay, an ideal accompanist, will accompany both Miss Ahrens and Mr. Pracht. Tickets will be on sale at Kohler & Chase, Sherman & Clay, Wiley B. Allen music stores, and at the St. Francis Hotel.

* * *

Revue des Modes Promises Big Society Success.—Plans are progressing rapidly for the Revue des Modes which is to take place at Scottish Rite Auditorium on the evenings of March 1st and 2d for the benefit of the Free Kitchens for Nursing Mothers in France, and for the California Ward in the American hospital in Paris. The sketch, which will accompany the tableaux portraying the latest fads and fancies in Spring costumes direct from Paris and New York, is being written by Joseph D. Redding in collaboration with Roy Folger, who will impersonate the compere. The music will be furnished by the Family Club. The advisory committee for the Revue, consisting of Mesdames Charles Templeton Crocker, George T. Cameron, C. Frederick Kohl, Walter S. Martin and Augustus Taylor, have proven themselves splendid judges of feminine beauty, as the parts in the pictures will be taken by the smart set's most stunning beauties. Among the participants are Mesdames Willard Drown, Andrew Welch, Jean Gallois, Wm. C. Duncan, James C. Eaves, Morgan Gunst, Arthur Bachman, E. Clinton La Montagne, E. Grahame Parker, Edgar Peixotto, Abe Stern, Juanita Huse, Alanson Weeks, Edgar Sinsheimer, Misses Gertrude Hopkins, Leslie Miller, Einnim McNear, Marita Rossi, Ruth Perkins, Ethel Crocker, Helen Crocker, Leonore Mejia, Coralie Mejia, Helen Hamilton, Lloyd Meiere, Jean Wheeler. The boxes are being rapidly taken by prominent leaders in society.

* * *

Famous Song Review at Orpheum.—The Orpheum bill for next week will have as its headline attraction Joseph Howard, the famous composer of "The Time, the Place, and the Girl," "Prince of To-Night," "Land of Nod," "Girl Question," "Sweetest Girl from Paris," and "The Flowers of the Ranch," who will present his own Song Revue, twenty minutes of delightful entertainment. He has an attractive and capable assistant in Miss Ethelyn Clark. Brandon Hurst, a fine actor with many important successes to his credit, will present a sensational comedy by Edward Peple, entitled "The Girl." It was originally produced at a Lambs' Gambol in New York by Mr. Hurst, where it scored an immense success. The sketch is responsible for introducing to the stage an entirely new idea. Tom Smith and Ralph Austin, a merry couple, will keep the audiences in roars of laughter. They are immense favorites in musical comedy, as well as in vaudeville. The five Kitamuras, a clever troupe of Japanese, surpass in athletic skill any of their compatriots who have visited America. The stage settings and costumes used in their offering are valued at six thousand dollars. James Tooney and Annette Norman will return for next week only. Others in the bill will be Billy McDermott; Eddie Cantor and Al. Lee and Bessie Clayton in "Dances of Yesterday, To-day and Tomorrow." The seventh installment of "The Uncle Sam at Work Motion Picture," secured exclusively for the Orpheum Circuit, entitled "Uncle Sam's Children," will be exhibited.

* * *

Program of the Sixth Symphony Concert.—The San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, Alfred Hertz conductor, will give the sixth pair of concerts of the current season at the Cort Theatre next Friday afternoon, February 18th, at 3 o'clock and Sunday afternoon, February 20th, at 2:30 o'clock, and the program will have the valued assistance of Maude Fay, dramatic soprano, from the Royal Opera, Munich; Covent Garden, London; Theatre de la Monnaie, Brussels, and recently signed for leading dramatic soprano roles by the management of the Metropolitan Opera House, New York.

The program contains the Symphony No. 3, F Major, op. 90, of Brahms; Scene and Aria from "Oberon;" "Ocean! Thou Mighty Monster," of Weber; Aria from "Tannhauser," "Dich Theure Halle," of R. Wagner; and Scherzo, "The Apprentice Sorcerer," (after a ballad of Goethe) of P. Dukas.

Mr. Horace Britt, the very capable violincellist, will be the soloist at the seventh pair of symphony concerts, which will be given Friday afternoon, February 25th, and Sunday afternoon, February 27th. Mr. Hertz has programmed these numbers: 1. Overture to "Anacraon," Cherubini. 2. "Lied" for Violoncello, Vincent d'Indy, Horace Britt. 3. From Suite, "Ballet Scenes," op. 54, Alex Glazounow; (a) Oriental Dance; (b) Marionettes. 4. Prelude, "The Afternoon of a Faun," Debussy. Intermission. 5. Symphony No. 1, B Flat Major, op. 28, R. Schumann.

Tickets for the sixth pair of Friday and Sunday concerts, which has Miss Fay as soloist, are $2, $1.50, $1, 75c., and $3 for the box and loge seats. Tickets for the Sunday concert of the seventh pair with Mr. Britt as soloist will be 50c., $1, and box and loge seats, $1.50. Tickets are on sale daily at the box offices of Sherman, Clay & Co., and Kohler & Chase, except on days of concerts.

* * *

Another Big Show at Pantages.—The "Twelve Speed Mechanics," one of the real novelties in vaudeville, will top the new show at the Pantages on Sunday. The act is an arrangement of different parts of an automobile which are distributed about the stage and the two crews of six men each, start assembling the machine. The mechanics representing the two crews have been especially picked from the standard auto repair shops in this city, and have issued a challenge to compete against any other team of six men for a cash or trophy prize. Alexander Pantages placed an act of a similar character in Seattle for a week recently, and every automobile concern in that city entered contestants. The local management will do

Perfection of Beauty

A liquid powder for the complexion that will remain unnoticed on the skin — superior to dry powders.

Gouraud's
Oriental Cream

We will send a complexion chamolis and book of Powder leaves for 15c. to cover cost of mailing and wrapping.

Ferd. T. Hopkins & Son
87 Great Jones St.,
New York City.

nate a solid gold cup to the winning crew. One of the regular circuit acts, Alf. Goulding, a well liked local comedian, is the star of "In Mexico," a breezy little musical tab which also includes Edythe Stayart and fourteen girls. The production, which carries special scenery, is a delightful travesty on present war conditions in Mexico. Hugo B. Koch, a legitimate actor, with Marie Dunkle and E. H. Horner assisting, will present "After Ten Years," a vaudeville dramatic gem built on the plane of "On Trial." The action of the playlet is in the three scenes with the eternal triangle of the wife, husband and another man as the background for gripping situations. O'Neil and Walmsley, who will be recalled for their comedy offering last year, will be seen in "Stop the Music;" Peggey Bremen and brother, in "The Imp's Playground;" Dorothy Vaughn, a sweet singer; George Ford, late star of the "Soul Kiss," and the newest episode of "The Red Circle," will round out a strong bill.

* * *

Events in the Paul Elder Gallery.—In the course on "Paintures, Pictures and the Public," Eugen Neuhaus, of the University of California, will lecture on Harmony and How it is Achieved, in the Paul Elder Gallery, 239 Grant avenue, on Tuesday afternoon, February 15th, at 3 o'clock. On Wednesday forenoon, February 16th, at 10:45 o'clock, Leo Cooper will read "The Great Name," translated from the German by J. C. Harvey. This is by the kind permission of Henry W. Savage. In the course on "The Soul of Woman in Modern Literature," Paul Jordan Smith will lecture on "Olive Schreiner—The Economic Thraldom," Thursday, February 17th, at 3 o'clock.

* * *

The San Francisco Symphony Orchestra.—The San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, Alfred Hertz, conductor, will give an all Wagner program at the Cort Theatre next Sunday afternoon at 2:30 sharp. The prices will be 50c., 75c., and $1, with $1.50 for the boxes and loges. It is anticipated that Sunday's attendance will eclipse the record attendance at the Wagner concert of January 28th and 30th. In connection with the concert of next Sunday afternoon the Musical Association has issued the following announcement: "The Music Committee of the Musical Association of San Francisco announces that the Wagner concert to be given under the direction of Mr. Alfred Hertz at the Cort Theatre next Sunday afternoon, February 13, at 2:30 o'clock, is in memory of the anniversary of the death of this great composer, and is given by and for the Musical Association of San Francisco."

Seats for the Wagner concert are on sale now at Sherman, Clay & Company's music store, and the program follows:

1. Prelude, "Parsifal." 2. "Tristan and Isolde," prelude and Isolde's Love-Death. 3. Tristan's Vision (arrangement by A. Seidl.) 4. Overture, "Flying Dutchman." Intermission. 5. Siegfried Idyl. 6. Prelude to "The Meistersinger von Nurnberg."

MAKE THE BELLIGERENTS PAY OUR EXTRA WAR TAXES.

Congress seems to be working overtime these days to extort taxes from the every-day plain people in order to meet the rapidly climbing bills of the nation. The tax may be necessary to meet extraordinary exigencies which have arisen here since the war began, but a slight examination of the situation which prevails throughout the country and a finer display of discrimination would reveal to our Washington lawmakers that these extraordinary taxes, imposed primarily to replace the deficiency occasioned by the falling off of duties on imports, should not be made a burden on the every-day working men and small business men, whose incomes ebb and slack with the months.

At present taxes in the shape of revenue stamps are being imposed on the small business man when he signs a note to borrow money from a bank; taxes are laid on his small transfers of real estate, on his small income, and the like. But the one prodigiously rich field just now, the field that is rolling in riches and enormous profits, the field that would contribute by far the largest percentage of the total tax and hardly feel the payment, is an export tax on materials being so prodigiously shipped to the foreign nations. A shift in this direction would give immediate relief to the depressed small business man. The present form of taxation, under the depression caused by the war in small retail business, is forcing prices up for the consumer and thereby increasing the vehement protest against the climbing high cost of living. The quickest and most logical solution of the situation is to shift these small taxes under which the small business men of the country are suffering to the natural and rightful place where they belong through an export duty on the goods sold to those nations which started the war. They brought on this direful calamity, and they should in all equity and justice be made to pay for it, and not the struggling small business men of America.

SUDDEN PASSING OF HARRY F. GORDON.

The hosts of friends of Harry F. Gordon are in gloom over his sudden death recently, while enjoying a dance at the brilliant reception given at the Hotel Oakland by Mr. and Mrs. Roland Letts Oliver in greeting Roland Letts Oliver, Jr., and his bride. At the time he was dancing with Mrs. Harry East Miller. Dr. A. S. Larkey was quickly summoned, but his ministrations proved useless, as a blood vessel had broken. Professional opinion was that his end was not necessarily occasioned by dancing: his condition was such that death might have occurred at any time. Gordon was widely known in social, business and club circles; his regular business was insurance, with offices in San Francisco. He was born in Massachusetts 56 years ago, and came to California when 11 years old. Early in his career he joined the staff of the Home Mutual Fire Insurance Company, which was later merged into the Fireman's Fund. He reached the title of general manager, and later went into business for himself, under the firm name of Gordon & Hoadley. Recently he joined J. F. Curtis of this city in the firm of Curtis & Gordon. Twenty-five years ago he married Miss Ellen Knowles; she died three years ago. There were no children. A mother, Mrs. Nellie Gordon, survives him, and also a sister, Gertrude, married to Josiah Stanford, nephew of Leland Stanford. He was connected in relationship with the prominent Houghton, Bliss and Knowles families. Gordon was prominent in club circles, and was a member of the Pacific-Union and Bohemian Clubs of San Francisco, and of the Athenian of Oakland. His funeral was very largely attended.

S. F. Symphony Orchestra

ALFRED HERTZ CONDUCTOR

EXTRA CONCERT THIS SUNDAY: 50c-75¢-1.00 Box, Loge Seats $1.50

CORT THEATRE. 2:30 P. M.

Selections from Compositions of

RICHARD WAGNER

"Parsifal," Prelude; "Tristan and Isolde," Prelude and Isolde's Love Death and Tristan's Vision (arranged by Anton Seidl.) first time here; "Flying Dutchman," Overture; "Siegfried Idyll;" "Masteringers of Nurnberg," Prelude.

SEATS AT SHERMAN, CLAY & CO.

Orpheum

O'Farrell Street Bet. Stockton and Powell
Phone Douglas 70

Week beginning THIS SUNDAY AFTERNOON. MATINEE EVERY DAY.

VAUDEVILLE DE LUXE

JOSEPH E. HOWARD and His Own Song Revue; BRANDON HIRST and Company in Edward Peple's Comedy "The Girl;" TOM SMITH and RALPH AUSTIN, All Fun; THE FIVE KITAMURAS Featruing Koman and Tommy Kitamura. The Premier Risley Performers; JAMES TOONEY and ANNETTE NORMAN Just Nonsense (Return for One Week Only); BILLY McDERMOTT; EDDIE CANTOR & AL LEE; "UNCLE SAM'S CHILDREN," Seventh Installation of the Uncle Sam at Work Motion Picture. Last Week — The American Premiere Danseuse BESSIE CLAYTON Supported by Lester Shoshan and The Famous Clayton Sextette in "The Dances of Yesterday, To-Day and To-Morrow."

Evening Prices, 10c., 25c., 50c., 75c. Box seats, $1. Matinee prices (except Sundays and holidays), 10c., 25c., 50c. Phone Douglas 70.

Pantages' Theatre

Market Street Opposite Mason

Commencing Sunday Afternoon, February 13, 1916

AN EXTRAORDINARY BILL

12 SPEED MECHANICS, Challenging the World In Assembling Automobiles. One of the Greatest Novelities In Vaudeville; ALF. GOULDING and COMPANY of fourteen including Edythe Satriani "IN MEXICO;" HUGO KOCH and COMPANY "AFTER TEN YEARS;" O'NEILL and WALMSLEY, "Stop the Music;" ANOTHER GREAT EIGHT ACT SHOW INCLUDING 9th EPISODE OF THE RED CIRCLE.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of FREDERICK T. FEISEL, sometimes known as Fredrick T. Feisel, sometimes known as F. T. Feisel and sometimes known as F. T. Feisel, Deceased.

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned administrators of the estate of Frederick T. Feisel, deceased, to the creditors of and all persons having claims against the said decedent to file them with the necessary vouchers within ten (10) months after the first publication of this notice, in the office of the Clerk of the Superior Court of the State of California, in and for the City and County of San Francisco, or to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers within ten (10) months after the first publication of this notice to the said administrators at the office of J. J. Lerman, Room 504, Balboa Building 593 Market St., San Francisco, Cal. which said office the undersigned select as their place of business in all matters connected with said estate of Frederick T. Feisel, deceased.

EDWIN J. FEISEL and EMMA J. SCHWARZ, administrators of the estate of Frederick T. Feisel, deceased.

Dated, San Francisco, February 12, 1916
J. J. LERMAN, Attorney for Administrators 504 Balboa Building San Francisco, California.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES

BY OUTSIDER

"Outsiders see most of the game."—Old Saw.The Moss Beach Golf Course

The proposal to lay out a golf course at Moss Beach on the Seventeen Mile Drive in Monterey County, and which is being considered by the Pacific Improvement Company, the owners of the Hotel Del Monte, will, if carried out, realize a lifelong dream of John Lawson, the wellknown golfer of San Francisco.

A few years ago Lawson took Will Crocker, Charlie Maud, Templeton Crocker, Prescott Scott and some others interested in golf (including myself), to the site of the proposed links. Each man came provided with brassies and played for upwards of a couple of miles along the beach without being obliged to change a lie. The ground is covered with a tough, wiry, salt grass, on which the ball sits up in a manner delightful to the golfer. Underneath, the soil is sandy, and the ground rolls in true links fashion. Diversity can be obtained by running some of the holes into spaces between the trees which border the beach on one side, while the surf sounds the requiems of the ages on the other.

No water would be necessary to keep the grass in condition, as the sea fog produces a constant moisture. All that is required is to lay out and sod the putting greens, add bunkers, and a course would be produced which would be unequaled in America; in fact, some enthusiasts think that in five years as good a links as St. Andrews could be made.

It is also proposed to retain a nine hole course near the hotel for those who object to the distance to the new links. Whether this move would be so popular from a hotel point of view remains to be seen.

* * *

Del Monte Midwinter Golf Tourney

The eighth annual midwinter tournament of the Del Monte Golf and Country Club will be held over the links by the sea near Monterey during the Washington's birthday holidays. It will be a four days' affair, and the program includes events for men and women golfers.

On Saturday forenoon, February 19th, the qualifying round for men will be held over 18 holes. Prizes will be given to the players who make the best gross and net scores. Sixteen will qualify in each flight.

In the afternoon of the same day the women players will contest for qualifying honors, and the winners of the best scratch and handicap scores will receive prizes. Eight players will qualify in each division.

The men's final will be over 36 holes, while the women will decide their winner over 18.

On Monday afternoon there will be a two-ball foursome for men at medal play, partners being automatically arranged by the positions gained in the qualifying round. A special event for women players on Tuesday afternoon will wind up the tournament.

Entries for the events will be received at the Hotel Del Monte up to 9 o'clock on the eve of the tournament.

* * *

Dan Morgan Makes Sporting Offer

Damon Runyon, the sporting writer of the string of dailies with the "longest leased wire in the world," tells a story about my friend Danny Morgan of New York, the one who sends me prize-fight dope. Danny was backing an Irish pug in a fight with an Italian hope in a hall packed with the latter's friends. When the Emerald lad swung over the haymaker that sent the son of Italy to the land of Nod, there was a wild rush of the latter's supporters towards the ring. As visions of keen-bladed Catalan knives flashed over Morgan, he realized that only quick thinking and quick action could save them, as there was no time to send for the police. The Irish pug happened to be a good singer, so the backer told him to start a song. In a rich baritone the "Wearing of the Green" came floating over the hall. The crowd stopped, enthralled, and shortly broke into the Italian equivalent of three rousing cheers. Music conquered the impressionable children of the land of opera.

Here is Mr. D. Morgan's latest letter:

Sporting Editor.

Dear Sir—Battling Levinsky, the world's famous heavy-weight, is all ready to show Frank Moran a few points in boxing. It is a pity to watch Moran in action, for he knows absolutely nothing about the game of hit, stop and get away. Frank is about as graceful in the ring as an elephant, for all he does is to let go a slow, wild, right-hand swing, for general results. If the boxing game had to rely on men like Moran and Willard it would soon come to an end, for all they do is to make a home run once or twice a year. Battling Levinsky, who is a high class boxer and fighter, goes right on making a hit once and sometimes twice a week. At the end of the year he stands above a dozen Morans and Willards, for hard work and services given to the public. Willard beat Johnson, who was all in, while Moran whipped Coffey, who has a glass jaw, but Battling Levinsky whips all the heavyweights from top to bottom, and when he is finished, he starts doing it right over again. Levinsky is willing to give either Willard or Moran $5,000 if they can hit him once in 10 rounds. This is no bluff. Battling Levinsky is all ready to give up the money if he can get either one of the Circus Boys into the ring.

Sincerely,

MORGAN.

* * *

A Great Athlete

The recent indoor walking record of 6:28, made by George Goulding of Toronto, the world's champion walker, at a recent meet in New York, calls attention to the fact that out here walking as an athletic competition is neglected. In the East there has been quite a revival of the sport of late, and the appearance of such a phenomenon as Goulding has added materially to the attraction. When you consider that the number of times that seven minutes has been beaten in this country can be counted almost on the fingers of one hand, you will realize the vast superiority of the Canadian. Goulding's stride, measured from toe to toe, the correct way, is reported to be 57 inches, which leads some critics to think that he did not walk fair heel and toe. It is very difficult to judge a man walking at the rate of Goulding, but I do not doubt that the officials took every precaution to prevent any unfair method in such an important competition. In any event, these matters are, after all, relative, and I am of the opinion that the champion walked as fairly as any other who has held the title. Goulding also holds the outdoor records up to seven miles.

Hitherto most of the records for the shorter distances have been held by G. E. Larner of England, but many wonderful times have been recorded in the English long-distance walks, not only by the top-notchers, but by the rank and file of the contestants.

The most widely known of these walks is that from London to Brighton and back. The distance for the round trip is 104 $\frac{3}{4}$ miles, and needless to say the road is almost perfect, the traffic in and out of London being the only drawback to fast time. This disadvantage is obviated, however, by walking from Croydon to London and back in the early morning hours, thus making the finish at Croydon.

The record, fair heel and toe walking, is held by T. E. Hammond, who made the distance in 18h. 13m. 37s.; this includes the world's record for 100 miles, amateur or professional.

Incidentally this is at the rate of nearly five and three-quarters miles per hour, and as there were in all likelihood some short stops, the record holder undoubtedly averaged close to six miles per hour while actually going. There are not many men who can walk a mile at that rate, and very few who can go six miles in one hour.

There is a club in Great Britain called the "Centurians," composed of men who have done 100 miles within 24 hours, and the membership is being augmented yearly.

Incidentally, it may be noted that the three mile walk is regarded as the hardest form of athletic competition.

—Binks—Shafer, do you know that woman across the street? Shafer—She certainly does look familiar. Let me see. It's my wife's new dress, my daughter's hat, and my mother-in-law's parasol. Sure. It's our new cook!!—Macon News.

Little Talks on House Decorating

By Judd Shirley

Cubist Art and Its Influence Upon Interior Decorating

During the Exposition of blessed memory, the writer stood before a particularly dynamic explosion of color in the Annex of the Art Building, faithfully trying to adjust her mental compass to an ultra-modern conception of fine art. Along breezed a clear-eyed, wide-awake rancher; in his wake, a sophisticated townsman. The rancher came to a full stop. He pointed to the lurid, seething waves of color. "Look who's here!" he gasped. The townsman looked, and shrugged. "Nobody home but the artist, and he's probably an absinthe fiend," he punned shamelessly; and steered the countryman into calmer artistic channels.

Cubist room, showing lines and checker-board effect. Viennese.

But though one rails, scoffs, laughs or admires, the fact remains that Cubist Art has undeniably and markedly affected the art of to-day. Especially is this true of decorative design. It must be conceded to the Cubists, at least that school known as the Viennese Secessionists, that they have recalled to our attention the value of the straight line in applied ornament, and in that way rendered a service to successful decorating. Perhaps, when this barbaric boiling-up of color and form, together with the continental war—of which it seems a sort of psychical interpretation—shall happily be over, we shall find ourselves possessed of a precipitate of force and pristine simplicity that will bring reality and new vigor into our art. Let us hope so; we certainly deserve some compensation. But while one admits that a real benefit accrues from the popularizing of the line effects and the resulting conventionalizing of ornament, there are other Futurist influences that have had a reverse effect. They are the godfathers and godmothers of the purple parrots in red trees, against a mustard yellow sky, and flapping blue and magenta wings. And they really flap them! the "action" was meant to be apparent, and it is. And the wild flowers! not the kind that used to "blush unseen," not wild in that sense at all—but really wild; crazy ones, that wriggle and writhe and make the conservative decorator long to catch them and put them in straitjackets. True, there is something compelling in this mad riot of color, and a certain unholy joy in casting overboard the whole theory of color; "using color as Nature uses it," just because Nature does—and Nature is barbaric! Merely as a mode of expression, Futurist Art is interesting, even fascinating.

But houses are not for barbarians, supposedly. Houses are for the civilized. They should not express the barbaric. Houses are homes, or should be; and their decoration is unsuccessful if it does not help to make them so. The interior of your house should be but a background for the individuality of those who dwell beneath its roof; a modest, rather self-effacing background at that. And before everything, and beyond everything, it should be restful! If your wall shows a Futurist cornfield with the wind blowing at fifty miles an hour, say; or your draperies and upholsteries are a battlefield of conflicting color-vibration, it certainly won't be!

Up-to-Date Textiles

Most fascinating in design, color and texture are the English hand-loom tapestries, called "needlework tapestries." They are woven of Angora goat's wool, and vary in width, ranging from thirty to over sixty inches. Some show charming, conventional flower designs; others, scrolls and quaint, mediæval figures of men and women. All have the look of old-time fine needle-work. Unfortunately, the price will be prohibitive to the average pocket-book; the best examples retail from thirty to eighty dollars the yard. One chair, however, upholstered in this delightful fabric, and toning in with the color scheme, would give distinction to the room. A note of pathos adds interest to these English fabrics, the result of many years of patient toil and experiment on the part of a father and his three sons. Now that achievement has been attained, the father meets their success alone: the three sons are in the trenches in France.

Chair with "needle work" tapestry.

Although they have been used for some little time, nothing is more attractive and thoroughly satisfying for living-rooms, bedrooms, dens, and particularly country houses, than the figured linens. And this year they are prettier than ever. One specially stunning design shows scrolls and flower forms in soft tans, tawny yellows, and dull burnt orange; this, on a black ground. Used for curtains, one large, quaint old chair, a few cushions, with the rest of the chairs and the divan done in a plain dull orange fabric, and perhaps one or two cushions of black, to echo the background of the linen, a delightful room would be achieved. Linens have about doubled in price; owing to the war there is a scarcity of flax; but a fabric, made in America, which has the look and the "feel" of linen, and is called linette, is being offered at about the price at which the linens used to be quoted. They come in quite good designs and colors. Some of the new linens and linettes show a strong Cubist influence, but the more attractive and latest designs faintly foreshadow a wave of Orientalism; Chinese particularly is indicated.

About the newest fabric is the silky, pliable mohair, used for curtains. It comes in two-toned stripes in soft greys, and browns toning into yellows, and is often used unlined, allowing the light to filter through in a pleasing way. Some of the mohairs have the vari-colored chintz colors.

Then, there is an alluring, filmy fabric called Kapock. The fibre comes from Java, but it is woven on Eastern looms in this country. The shades are soft grey, dull gold, browns, etc.

Those who love greys in draperies and wall-papers are especially favored this season. Never have the grey shades been more exquisitely soft and harmoniously combined with black, white and colors.

The new figured chenilles must not be passed over. Quite wonderful in color they are, looking for all the world like stained glass, the colors have such depth and richness.

—"Seems to think well of himself, eh?" "Do you know what kind of a fellow he is?" "Tell me." "He takes stock of himself a dozen times a day for fear he'll overlook some of his good points."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

—Fair Maiden (stranded on sandbar by incoming tide)—I knew some succor would come. Would-be Rescuer—If I'm a sucker you can stay there.—Penn State Froth.

Lamps and Fixtures

that harmonize with their surroundings
Made of the new Metal Tapestry,
as softly colored as a fabric.

Indestructible

Especially charming in English chintz
pattern or in Oriental design.

THE PALMER SHOP
1345 Sutter Street

Phone Kearny 2842

Cosgrove's Hair Store

Established 20 Years

239 Powell Street
San Francisco

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL ITEMS

ENGAGEMENTS.

BAGGETT-MITCHELL.—By means of notes sent from Washington, D. C., the friends of Miss Nell Rose Baggett were told Wednesday of her engagement to George F. Mitchell. Miss Baggett is the daughter of Mrs. William Baggett. Her father, who died a few years ago, was one of the most prominent lawyers in this city. George F. Mitchell formerly lived in Charleston, S. C., but for several years has made his home in Washington, where he holds an important government position.

GOLDBERG-GERSON.—Mr. and Mrs. J. Goldberg announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Rena Goldberg, to Eric Gerson of this city. A formal reception in honor of the betrothed couple is to be given on next Tuesday at the Goldberg home in Pacific avenue. The marriage is to take place in March.

WOOSTER-R. CHARD.—Society here and on the Peninsula is interested in the announcement of the engagement of Miss Oroville Wooster and Walter L. Richard of New York. The bride-elect passed her childhood in California, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Wooster, having had an attractive home on the Peninsula. The marriage will be an event of the early spring.

WEDDINGS.

STERN-BARDE.—The wedding of Miss Sophie Stern of San Francisco to Leonard B. Barde of Portland took place at the Palace Hotel Sunday, and was an event in local society. The bride, a native daughter of San Francisco, has numerous friends. The bridegroom is a son of M. Barde, steel and copper magnate of Portland, and a member of the firm established by his father. The Reverend Martin Meyer performed the wedding ceremony, while three-year-old Gwendolyn Carrie Heller, the bride's niece, acted as bridesmaid.

LUNCHEONS.

BANCROFT.—Mr. and Mrs. Paul Bancroft presided at an enjoyable dinner preceding the dance of the Wednesday Evening Dancing Club on Wednesday evening.

BELL.—Mrs. J. Franklin Bell, wife of Brigadier-General Bell, was hostess at a luncheon on Saturday at Fort Mason.

BEYLARD.—Miss Hannah Hobart was the complimented guest at the luncheon at which Miss Sophie Beylard presided Wednesday afternoon at the Town and Country Club. Afterward the hostess and her guests attended the matinee at the Orpheum.

BOTHIN.—Complimenting a coterie of friends, Miss Genevieve Bothin entertained at luncheon Thursday afternoon at the Town and Country Club.

DARLING.—Mrs. Clara L. Darling will give a luncheon on next Wednesday as a farewell favor to Mrs. Hannah Nell Hobart, who is leaving for the Orient very soon.

DEERING.—Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Deering were hosts at a dinner Tuesday night in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Mersman of St. Louis, who are here en route to Honolulu.

COTCHETT.—Mrs. Walter V. Cochet gave a luncheon on Friday, entertaining a number of her army friends.

EYRE.—Miss Elena Eyre entertained informally at luncheon Wednesday afternoon at her home in this city.

HEWITT.—Mrs. Dixwell Hewitt asked a group of friends to a luncheon given Thursday at her home on Broadway. It was planned in honor of Mrs. James Parker. Mrs. Parker arrived last week, and is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Potter Langhorne, on Pacific avenue.

HILL.—Mrs. Horace Hill has issued invitations for a luncheon to be given Wednesday afternoon at the St. Francis Hotel.

KELLAM.—An enjoyable dinner was given on Sunday night by Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Kellam at their residence on Broadway. Miss Mudge Wilson and Dr. Chester Moore, whose marriage will take place in March, were the honored guests.

MARTIN.—Mrs. Walter S. Martin presided at an informal luncheon recently at her home in Burlingame, half a dozen in all making up the party.

MIALL.—Red roses and maidenhair ferns were combined in the decorations for the informal dinner dance given Tuesday evening by C. M. Miall at the Palace Hotel.

MINTZER.—A luncheon was given Wednesday afternoon for Miss Dorothy Baker, who has been in a round of gaiety since the announcement of her engagement to Mr. George Wilcutt. Miss Mauricia Mintzer was the hostess.

MONTEAGLE.—Mr. and Mrs. Louis F. Monteagle will give a dinner dance party at the Palace Hotel on Saturday the 18th, entertaining the debutantes of this winter and their escorts.

MOORE.—The Francisca Club will be the setting for a delightful luncheon Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. Duval Moore will be the hostess and the affair is being planned in compliment to Miss Gertrude Thomas.

McNEAR.—Mr. and Mrs. Frederick McNear are among those who are planning to entertain at dinner Monday night, the date of the benefit performance of "The Only Girl" at the Cort. The proceeds not only of the production, but of the dance that will follow it at the St. Francis Hotel will be given over to the Recreation Club for Girls Who Work.

ROTH.—Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Roth entertained a number of friends recently at a dinner which they gave at their home in Jackson street. About a dozen friends enjoyed their hospitality.

TOBIN.—Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Oliver Tobin gave a dinner party at their handsome new home in California street Wednesday night.

TUTTLE.—An informal luncheon followed by bridge was given Friday afternoon by Miss Charlotte Tuttle at her home on Pacific avenue. It was one of the chain of parties that are being held to raise funds for the Belgians.

UPHAM.—Mrs. Frank Wakefield, whose return from the Orient, where her honeymoon was passed, has been marked by many social accomplishments, was the honored guest at a luncheon given recently by Mrs. Isaac O. Upham, at her home in Leavenworth street.

WILSON.—Messrs. and Mesdames John S. Drum and George Cadwalader will enjoy the hospitality of Mrs. Russell Wilson at a dinner to be given Monday evening, the party later going to the Cort Theatre for the benefit performance of "The Only Girl."

ZEILE.—A group of the younger set will be the luncheon guests of Miss Marion Zeile Monday afternoon. This affair will take place at the St. Francis.

ZOOK.—An informal dinner was enjoyed Tuesday evening by a group of the friends of Judge and Mrs. Edgar Zook, the affair taking place in their attractive home in San Rafael.

DINNERS.

BERTHEAU.—Misses Elise and Jeannette Bertheau entertained a group of friends at dinner at the Palace Hotel Saturday evening. Mr. and Mrs. Max Bertheau chaperoned the party.

BRADLEY.—Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Bradley gave a dinner on Tuesday night in compliment to Mrs. Samuel Woodward, who is here from Salt Lake City, the guest of her cousin, Mrs. Thomas P. Woodward, on Broadway.

DARR.—The St. Francis Hotel was the scene of an enjoyable dinner Saturday evening, when Mr. and Mrs. Laurence Darr entertained a group of friends.

NEWHALL.—Mr. and Mrs. George Newhall entertained at dinner and the Orpheum recently, the affair having been arranged in compliment to Dr. and Mrs. Henry Kierstedt, who were their house guests for a few days.

PILLSBURY.—Mr. and Mrs. Horace Davis Pillsbury will be dinner hosts Monday evening, and afterwards, with their guests, will go to the Cort Theatre, where they will enjoy the benefit performance of "The Only Girl," to be given that evening for the Recreation Club for Girls Who Work.

TEAS.

BENNETT.—Mrs. Frank M. Bennett entertained Thursday according to her weekly custom at a tea dance at her home at Mare Island.

NERNEY.—Mrs. Stephen Nerney will give a tea on the 17th in honor of Mrs. Allan Van Fleet and Miss Helen Johnson.

POURIE.—Mrs. James A. Pourie was hostess Sunday at a tea at her home at Fort Miley.

PRATT.—Mrs. Gertrude Cadwalader poured tea at the bridge party at which Mrs. Orville Pratt was hostess Wednesday afternoon at her residence on California street. It was in honor of Mrs. Pratt's mother, Mrs. Russell Wilson.

WOODWARD.—On Saturday afternoon, Mrs. Thomas P. Woodward and her daughter had a delightful tea and musicale as a means of introducing their kinswoman, Mrs. Samuel Woodward of Salt Lake, who is here for a few months.

DANCES.

BAKER.—The dinner dance given Monday evening by Miss Marion Baker at the Palace Hotel was more than usually enjoyable.

DUTTON.—Of the dinner dances given recently for newly-wedded couples, none has been more delightful than that at which Mr. and Mrs. Henry Foster Dutton presided Saturday evening. It was planned in compliment to Mr. and Mrs. Cyril Tobin, whose marriage took place a few months ago, and who since their arrival in San Mateo have been extensively feted.

MORGAN.—Precy and Jack Morgan were hosts at a dinner dance on Friday night at the Palace Hotel, entertaining all of the debutantes and their escorts.

THE HOTEL PLAZA

overlooking the beautiful Plaza of Union Square, the Hotel of refinement and service, is offering special rates to permanent guests.

Hotel Plaza Company

MARX. A coterie of the friends of Mrs. Ralph Marx will enjoy her hospitality, at a dining party to be given February 21st at her home in Berkeley. It is planned in compliment to Miss Ida Graff, whose marriage to De Launey Smith will take place in the near future.

PARTIES.

KELLAM.—Miss Madge Wilson was the complimented guest at a supper party which Mr. and Mrs. Frederlek Kellam gave Tuesday evening at their home in Pacific avenue.

SMALL.—Captain William Small, U. S. N., and Mrs. Small gave a supper Wednesday evening after the Wednesday evening hop of the navy set at Mare Island.

WINGFIELD.—Little Jean Wingfield, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Wingfield, was hostess at a children's party Saturday in honor of her fourth birthday. Twenty youngsters enjoyed the affair. It began with a luncheon and ended with a Pinch and Judy show, and another collation which consisted of all the things dear to the palate of a child. The affair was given in the Wingfield home in Vallejo street.

THEATRE PARTIES.

WALKER.—Mr. and Mrs. Talbot Walker will entertain a group of friends at a theatre party next Thursday evening, and later with their guests will enjoy supper downtown.

CARDS.

BRYAN.—Miss Linda Bryan was hostess Saturday afternoon at a bridge party given at her home in honor of her house guest, Miss Edith Cunningham of Sacramento.

CHAPPELEAR.—Mrs. Louis Chappelle's attractive home at Fort Miley was the setting for an enjoyable bridge party Wednesday, when this charming hostess entertained with two tables.

SAHM.—Mrs. Leo Sahn has sent out cards for a bridge party to be given at her home at Mare Island to-day.

WHITLEY.—Mrs. Henry Whitley entertained a number of her friends at a bridge party recently, having four tables and almost as many guests for tea.

CONCERTS.

WILSON.—Miss Marion Wilson, who has returned from Dresden, Germany, where she has been for the last five years with her mother, Mrs. Ramon E. Wilson, will give a concert on February 24th at the Hotel St. Francis.

ARRIVALS.

ARMSEY.—Raymond Armsby returned Monday from New Orleans, where he has been visiting friends during the past month.

CARR.—General Carr has arrived from Honolulu, and is a guest at the Palace Hotel.

FINNELL.—A cordial welcome is being extended to Miss Mary Helen Finnell, who arrived Friday from her home in Chico. She is the guest of Mrs. Spencer Slade at her home on Devisadero street.

HAYES.—Mrs. John Coffey Hayes has returned from Louisville, Kentucky, where she has been visiting relatives. Mrs. Hayes has joined her mother, Mrs. John McMullin.

HUNT.—Judge and Mrs. W. H. Hunt arrived Tuesday from New York, and are at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Barnaby Conrad, for a visit of several weeks.

NICHOLS.—Miss Margaret Nichols, who went to New York with Mrs. W. H. Crocker and Miss Helen Crocker, returned home recently with Mr. and Mrs. Frederlek Whitwell.

MIZNER.—Edgar Mizner has returned from the East, where he has been visiting relatives for the past two months.

POTTS.—Captain Douglas Potts recently arrived at his new station at Alcatraz, and is receiving a cordial welcome in this city.

DEPARTURES.

BERTHEAU.—Mrs. Caesar Bertheau has gone to Melones, where she is the guest of her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Fulton.

NICHOLS.—Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Nichols, who have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Schlesinger for the past ten days, left Tuesday for their home in Chicago.

INTIMATIONS.

BARRON.—Mr. and Mrs. Ward Barron have taken a home on Florence street, where they will spend the remainder of the winter.

CAROLAN.—Mr. and Mrs. Francis Carolan moved Monday into their beautiful chateau, "Carolands," which they have just erected in the hills back of Burlingame.

CLARK.—Miss Ellse Clark returned Monday from Burlingame, where she spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. H. McDonald Spencer.

CROCKER.—Mrs. Wm. H. Crocker's return home from New York has been postponed on account of her interest in the war benefits given in New York by various of her friends.

GILLISON.—Mrs. Sawyer Gillison of Santa Barbara, who is to marry Harry K. B. Davls very soon, is in town, visiting friends.

HOBART.—Mrs. Hannah Neil Hobart has been passing the week-end at San Mateo, where she has been the house guest of Mrs. John Casserly. Mrs. Hobart is planning a trip in the Orient, and will leave the first week in March, to be gone several months.

JACKLING.—Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Jackling will leave shortly in their private car for Arizona, where the former is going on a business trip.

KEENEY.—Mrs. James Keeney and her attractive daughter, Miss Helen Keeney, will return to San Francisco the latter part of the month.

PARKER.—Mrs. James Parker and her sister, Mrs. Richard Hammond, are being cordially welcomed by their many friends after an absence of over a year from San Francisco. They will spend several months visiting their parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Potter Langhorne, at their home on Pacific avenue.

PARROTT.—John Parrott, Jr., returned this week to "The Bungalow," his home in San Mateo, from the hospital, where he has been confined for several weeks following a severe case of pneumonia.

REDDING. Miss Katherine Redding will leave February 15th for Nevada City to spend several weeks with friends.

REID. Mrs. Whitelaw Reid is expected to arrive in San Francisco within a few weeks, and, according to her custom, will spend the early spring in California. It is probable that she will open Millbrae.

WALLACE.—Colonel Hamilton Stone Wallace, chief quartermaster of the Western Department of the United States army, has moved from the Palace Hotel to the Bellevue.

WHITWELL.—Mrs. Frederlek S. Whitwell, remembered her as Miss Gertrude Howard, is being welcomed by her many friends after an absence of four years. Mr. and Mrs. Whitwell make their home in Boston, and come here every few years to spend part of a winter.

ZEILE.—Miss Marion Zeile will leave shortly for the East to join her sister, Miss Ruth Zeile, who left several weeks ago with Miss Beatrice Nickel.

W. D. Fennimore J. W. Davis A. R. Fennimore

California Optical Co.

Invention Surprises Optical World. Formerly Believed a Mechanical Impossibility

To duplicate that which we did yesterday is halting in the field of endeavor. Standing still is equivalent to a step backward. To strike off the shackles from the old and find a better way is progress. This has been successfully accomplished in the grinding of a lens called "Caltex" for far and nearsighting. Ground from a single piece of optical glass, the objectionable features of the old style bifocals are eliminated.

181 Post Street } San Francisco
2508 Mission St. }
1221 Broadway, Oakland

Dewar Scotch Whisky

Awarded Gold Medal

At Panama-Pacific International Exposition

San Francisco

Sherwood & Sherwood

Pacific Coast Agents

San Francisco Los Angeles San Diego

FOR SALE BY THE TRADE

The Angel

—Departs 4:00 P. M. Daily

Safety and Comfort

You Get Both on this Excellent Train of the Santa Fe to

Los Angeles

Superior Equipment
Superior Dining Service
We Will Make Your Return Trip Reservation on The SAINT
Just Tell Us When

Santa Fe City Offices

67 Market St., San Francisco—Phone Kearny 1
Market Street Ferry—Phone Kearny 1
121 Broadway, Oakland—Phone Lakewood 1

"Paragraphs on Thrift."

The financial backbone of the nation is its banks and the people who contribute to this end are the thrifty home builders and business builders of the nation. Frank C. Mortimer, who is prominent in Oakland banking circles, and is regarded as an authority among his fellow bankers, has set forth the eminent merits of thrift in the individual and in the community as a cardinal essential of success in life. He furnished a number of new ideas in his two former successful books, "The Investment of Trust Funds" and "The School Savings System." In this new book he presents in short and pregnant paragraphs the necessity of thrift and the abundant and fruitful returns it yields to those who practice it; he cites our forebears in this country and the success they developed by the exercise of energy, thrift and level-headed management. In this fat period of our history, the temptations of luxury is attracting those lacking in self control. In counter spirit, the author's page of pithy paragraphs set forth the merits of thrift in this particular, and both stimulate and encourage the reader in that course.

Published by The Banker' Publishing Company, New York.

* * *

"Wall Street Stories."

Edwin Lefevre offers a very interesting group of sketches, depicting the picturesque side of stock gambling. The stories number eight, and their action is of some years ago, when less stringent restrictions than those of to-day made possible pooling, manipulation, the engineering of panics and spectacular plunges by daring traders. Mr. Lefevre is an adept at visualizing historic clashes in Wall street. These stories are, of course, fiction, and it would no doubt occasion surprise to the big stock manipulators to suggest to them that their operations were potentially spectacular or dramatic. But Mr. Lefevre is able to present these to the reader in all the trappings of the merciless warfare between powerful, adroit financial forces, which can possess qualities as thrilling and brutal as if the opponents battled with steel weapons instead of the dollar. In the course of the stories, the author introduces several operators, readily recognizable between thin disguises, as famous Wall street leaders of the '70's and '80's. The stories are so uniformly interesting that a unanimous verdict as to which is the best would not be easily reached.

Price $1. Published by Harper & Bros., New York.

* * *

"Men of the Stone Age."

This is the most notable general contribution to the literature of European archaeology that appeared last year. It is one of the best general works (as opposed to specialized studies) that have yet appeared. Prof. Henry Osborn apologizes quite needlessly in his introduction for treating a field already covered by Sollas and Lord Avebury. Lord Avebury treated the age of bronze almost exclusively, and the work of Sollas, while of great value, is far from being as unified as that of Prof. Osborn. Sollas' object was confessedly to picture prehistoric man by describing living or but recently extinct races whose artifacts show them to have been similar. Prof. Osborn has achieved the unusual distinction of leaving in the reader's mind a definite picture of the characteristics and succession of the races that peopled Europe in prehistoric times.

Price $5. Published by Scribner's, New York.

* * *

A new novel by George Agnew Chamberlain, author of "Through Stained Glass" and "Home," is announced for early publication by The Century Co. It is called "John Bogardus," and is said to be the story of a young man who, eager to recover the youth of which he has been robbed by a devoted but over-ambitious father, breaks away from conventional society, takes to the road, and meets with all manner of amatory and philosophical adventures in Europe, South Africa, South America and his own country.

"The Aftermath of Battle," by Edward D. Toland, a publication of February 2d, is a narrative of the experiences of the author with the Red Cross in France. It is illustrated with many photographs and is provided with a preface by Owen Wister. In this preface, which well sets forth the character and content of the volume, Mr. Wister says: "Most of these pages following are, like the photographs which go with them, torn fresh and hot, so to speak, from the diary of a young American, just as he jotted them down day by day in the war-hospitals of France.

Published by The Macmillan Company, New York.

* * *

In a time of world-stress like the present there is something singularly fine and bracing in Dr. Samuel McComb's new book, "Faith: The Greatest Power in the World," which Harper & Brothers have just published. The appeal of this little volume should be wide, for not only does it propound anew the most bitterly contested problem of the ages, but its sanely reasoned and inspiring pages are addressed to minds of every shade of opinion—those that sit in darkness as well as those that grope falteringly for light, or those who rejoice in having found it.

* * *

Harper & Brothers are putting to press this week for reprinting three of their recent books: "Clipped Wings," the new novel by Rupert Hughes; "Acres of Diamonds," the inspirational book by Russell H. Conwell; "Sandsby's Pal," the story of the boy who had nothing, by Gardner Hunting. The same firm is also reprinting this week in the new leather, thin-papared edition of Mark Twain's works "Life on the Mississippi" and "The Prince and the Pauper."

* * *

The old professor had been a botanist for fifty-four years. "When I was a boy," he said to David Grayson, as David tells us in one of his books, "I believed implicitly in God. I prayed to Him, having a vision of Him—a person—before my eyes. As I grew older I concluded that there was no God. I dismissed Him from the universe. I believed only in what I could see, or hear or feel. I talked about Nature and Reality." He paused—as David says—the smile still lighting his face, evidently recalling to himself the old days. I did not interrupt him. Finally he turned to me and said abruptly: "And now, it seems to me, there is nothing but God."—Thomas Rreier in February Nautilus.

PROMOTION OF BODE K. SMITH.

Bode K. Smith, assistant general passenger agent of the Western Pacific Railroad under the late E. L. Lomax, passenger manager, has been placed in charge of the field covered by the latter's authority of that department by General Manager C. M. Levey. It is understood in railroad circles that this recognition of Smith's abilities, experience and services means that the title of passenger traffic manager will be conferred on him in the near future. Smith has seen a long and successful service in the employ of the Western Pacific, and formerly with the Denver & Rio Grande and Missouri Pacific Railroads.

"I am absolutely convinced that my arguments are correct," said the earnest man. "Well," replied Senator Sorghum, "it's a good start. You've got one man converted, anyhow."—Topeka Journal.

—It is a distinct pleasure to spend an hour enjoying the different flavors—lunch at 50 cents or dinner $1—each course pleasing to an epicure, at Maison Doree, Ellis above Powell.

A Beautiful Gift Book

California as a Health Resort

Its History, Climate, Missions, Industries, Places of Interest, Educational Advantages, and Mineral Springs.

Told In A New Way

300 Pages 80 Full Page Pictures

Publishers: Bolte & Braden Co.

San Francisco

Price Two Dollars

The Background of the War Zone

An important conference of scientists, doctors and public men to discuss the declining birth-rate will take place early next month at Berlin. The Prussian Minister of the Interior, in an official warning to parents, which he has just issued on the subject, says: "The results of the investigations made force us to admit that the declining birth rate constitutes one of the most anxious questions of the future, and involves perhaps the whole future of the German people. If we do not succeed in arresting this decline immediately and banishing its causes from the lives of our people, it will be too late, and with absolute certainty at a date earlier than we anticipate the breeding of our folk will come to a standstill, and the waning of the German people begin. This question constitutes the great danger point in the future of Germany."

"The attack upon Egypt, however largely it develops, or with whatever energy it is pursued, must (and it is exceedingly important to remember this) remain subsidiary to the campaign as a whole," says Mr. Hilaire Belloc in Land and Water. "I have seen printed in more than one paper what the government should never have allowed to have been printed—the statement that a successful enemy invasion of Egypt would mean to this country the loss of the war. It would mean nothing of the sort. Even a disaster of this kind, powerfully as it would affect public imagination of the country, and certainly as it would be used to our detriment by the sensational press, could have no final effect upon the fortunes of Germany in Europe, and therefore on the whole campaign. That vast campaign was probably determined at the battle of the Marne. It will in any case certainly be determined upon the great Eastern or Western fronts in Russia, or in France, and, much the most probably upon the latter."

Hundreds of young Americans have gone to Canada since the beginning of the great war to enlist in the Canadian army; hundreds of others have entered the service of other belligerents. The question has already arisen as to their treatment on their return—such as do return. Shall the United States authorities treat them as aliens? The Immigration Bureau of the Department of Labor has issued a common sense ruling, by which it avoids raising the question of the loss of citizenship. Immigration officials have been ordered not to question the American citizenship of an applicant because of the fact that he took the oath of allegiance and enlisted in the Canadian forces.

The Belgian government, says the Pctit Journal, is about to address a note to the neutral States on the levy of 19,200,000 pounds sterling made by the Germans in Belgium. The note declares that the contribution is contrary to the Hague Convention, and adds that, in any case, the requisitions made for provisioning the army of occupation can never have reached this enormous sum.

—The Tavern Sunday Dansant Club is an organization of dancing enthusiasts which has selected the Tavern as its headquarters, and holds its weekly dances in the Colonial ballroom on the mezzanine floor. Dinner, at $1.50 per plate, is served in the Club quarters. This service is to members only. The Club is in a flourishing condition, and the membership is increasing weekly. A new and delightful perfume, La Boheme, is presented to the ladies who visit the Tavern on Saturdays. It makes a pleasing souvenir, being a perfume of as great merit as the famous Parfum Mary Garden.

Novelties for "Welcoming" and "Bon Voyage" Packages

Flowers Delivered to Any Part of the World

SEND YOUR HOSTESS A DISTINCTIVE BOX OF FLOWERS

FROM JOSEPH'S FLORISTS

GRANT AVENUE, NEAR SUTTER STREET

Californians in the Limelight

During the recent golf tournament at Del Monte, William Crocker, president of the Crocker National Bank, received a telegram that sent a broad smile wavering over the links. The message was from Europe, from a member of his family whose relationship may be surmised. The wire said: "Twenty short happy years have passed may we have twenty more children all well." Now, Mr. Crocker has done his duty by the race, but it is understood he was not wildly enthusiastic over the suggestion of "twenty more children," and has advised the Del Monte telegraph operator to be more cautious about punctuation in future.

Senator Phelan, of California, who served as a commissioner from the President in 1913, to urge foreign governments to exhibit at the San Francisco fair, recalls the interesting remark of a "high official" that "the German government had no interest in what the German-Americans of the United States thought or felt; that they had expatriated themselves; that they had left their country, having in many instances first acquired their education and assumed the obligations of military service, and that their conduct was, in his mind, reprehensible." It is the nature of the hyphen, at least in war times, to be scant of honor in the countries on both sides of it.

Secretary Lane's conservation bills are passing the House in a most encouraging way. A week ago the water power development bill was passed with comparatively little opposition, except from some irreconcilable north-western members, and on a recent date the bill under which more than 700,000,000 acres of public lands would be thrown open for lease by private interests passed without a roll call.

A few days before Senator Works of California introduced his resolution calling for armed intervention in Mexico, he delivered a speech denouncing any strengthening of the army of the United States. There is a statesman for you.

There are politicians who would like to know positively if Jane Addams is correct in her view that nowadays Mr. Roosevelt "does not speak for any large body of people."

TYPICAL OF CALIFORNIA

PALACE HOTEL

Since 1875 the Historic Hotel of San Francisco
NEW MANAGEMENT NEW POLICY
European Plan Only. Rates from $2 per day upward.

FAIRMONT HOTEL
The Most Superbly Situated Hotel in the World.
Under Same Management.

Hotel St. Francis Announces the
Club Room Special
A Busy Man's Luncheon

Beginning January 10, 1916

50 Cents

Service From 11:30 to 2:00

HOTEL OAKLAND

Oakland, California

Overlooking Lake Merritt and the Mountains

A pleasing focus of social amenities and public affairs.
European Plan, from $1.50 a day up; American Plan, from $3.50 a day up. Extrordinarily low rates to permanent guests.

CARL SWORD, Manager

INSURANCE

Urged by the criticism of fire underwriters that fires have been too prevalent in Los Angeles, Fire Chief Eley proposes as remedies the organization of a fire prevention bureau, reference of all proposed fire ordinances to the fire commissioners; a modern fire alarm system; twin hydrants; extension of down town fire limits; better protection for the harbor and a law penalizing neglect where fires result. He warns the City Council that a serious conflagration is bound to occur in Los Angeles unless proper fire preventive methods are applied promptly and effectively.

Insurance Commissioner Wells of Oregon has returned the sixty fire policies written by thirty-five Portland agents on the contents of vacant property without inspection of the premises, and warned them that traps are liable to be set for them in future. With this the whole proposition will be dropped so far as the evidence gathered by Marshal Stevens is concerned.

The following has been adopted as article two, setting forth the object of the Insurance Federation of California: "Through education, co-operation and organization the Federation will seek to bring the policyholders, the insurance agents, the brokers and the insurance companies to a fuller realization of the fact that they have a mutual interest in any movement affecting insurance."

The State Social Insurance Commission will meet February 21st at Sacramento to organize an office force and fix dates for public hearings at which testimony will be taken from employers, workers, labor leaders, and sociological experts as to the desirability of insurance by the State against accident, sickness, old age and unemployment. California is the first State to interest itself in this issue.

The entire third floor of the Royal Insurance Building is being reconstructed for the accommodation of the Royal Indemnity's Pacific Coast business. The rapid growth of this department has made this necessary, as the cramped quarters on the ground floor have been found inadequate for the convenient accommodation of the office force.

California fires—Premiums, two hundred and twenty-one thousand, seven hundred and fifty. Losses, ninety-five thousand nine hundred and two.

William L. Brown has been engaged by Miller, Henley & Scott to represent the Western and Firemen's Underwriters as special agents in California.

Governor Warren R. Porter, president of the Western States Life, has resigned as member of the California State Board of Prison Directors, and his resignation has been regretfully accepted by Governor Johnson.

Roberson & Hall, San Francisco managers of the Massachusetts Bonding Company, have been appointed general agents for California of the Tokyo Marine for both automobile and marine business.

Otto L. Zeus, who began with the Travelers in San Francisco in 1908, as cashier under Manager A. S. Holman, has been promoted to the position of assistant manager.

Willim Goldman, who has represented the Manhattan Life in Portland for the past twenty years, has resigned to accept the general agency for Oregon of the National Life of Vermont.

The finance committee has cancelled its policy with the State Industrial Accident Commission on Hetch-Hetchy laborers, involving an annual premium of twenty-four thousand dollars.

R. W. Chandler has been elected secretary of the California Inspection Rating Bureau, succeeding C. S. Pearson, who resigns to accept the secretaryship of the Pacific Coast Automobile Underwriters' Conference.

The Continental Casualty Company announces, through Homer T. Miller, manager of Northern California and Nevada territory, that on and after February 19, 1916, the company's office will be located at 708 Pacific Building, San Francisco.

The Frank K. Mott Company, one of the largest insurance agencies in Oakland, Cal., representing the Springfield and other companies, has sold out to Joseph Ghirardelli. Ralph G. Stitch, insurance director for Mott, will remain for a while with Ghirardelli.

Kenneth Spencer, assistant underwriter at the Chicago office of the Globe Indemnity, will on February 15th succeed William C. Ramm, in the company's San Francisco office as assistant to Pacific Coast Manager David Duncan.

Charles L. Burreight, who confessed to eighteen arson cases in Washington, Oregon and California, netting him fourteen thousand dollars in insurance, was recently sentenced to five years in San Quentin by an Oakland Judge, and was denied probation.

THRIVING SUCCESS OF WESTERN STATES LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY.

Western States Life, a Western company managed by Western men, continues to grow like the great bay tree with amazing strength and prosperity. For instance:

Gain in amount of new insurance	38.04 per cent
Gain in amount of insurance in force.....	24.73 per cent
Gain in admitted assets	14.71 per cent
Gain in amount of reserve on deposit with the State	45.77 per cent

The 3,453 policies written by the company during the year 1915 represent $6,850,000 of insurance, first premiums in cash, being a gain over the year 1914 of 890 policies, representing over $1,690,000 of insurance, more than a handsome showing. This brings the company's total number of policies up to 8,866 policies, representing over $18,000,000 of paid for insurance, being a gain for the year of over $3,575,000. The Western States Life Insurance Company now has admitted assets of over $2,670,000.

Another gratifying feature of the company's record during 1915 was the showing that, in spite of these large increases in business, it was able to effect a considerable saving as compared with 1914 in the expense of writing new business. Based on premium income, the saving during 1915 over the preceding year was 17.07 per cent in expenses, against the cost of producing new business. This indicates that the company's record is one not only of progress, but of conservative, substantial building, and the company is being generally commended on its careful methods, as well as for its liberal policy contracts, which contain many special and unique provisions for the protection of the policyholder, including disability and double insurance, with decreasing annual cost to the policyholder.

The full reserve of every policy is secured by a deposit of the same with the State of California.

—The government's figures on South American trade with this country for 1915 broke all records. The imports from that country in that year reached an estimated total of $320,000,000, and the exports $145,000,000. The combined total, $466,000,000, is greater by about $92,000,000 than the figure of 1915—the previous banner year.

Not
Gray
Hairs
but tired
Eyes
Make us look older than we are.
Old age
and Dull
Eyes—
tell-tale.

Don't Tell
Your age

After the Movies
go home
and Murine
your Eyes.
Two
Drops
will rest,
refresh
and cleanse.
Have it
handy.

Murine Eye Remedy Company, Chicago, Sends Book of the Eye upon request.

Go Slow and "Drive Slow"

Those anaemic grammarians, amateur or professional, who object to the admonition "Drive Slow," frequently displayed as a warning to motorists, on the ground that "slow" is an adjective there used improperly as an adverb, fail to realize the racial and idiomatic qualities of the language. "Drive Slow," like "Go Slow," "Hold Hard," and the like, is a phrase which has crystallized into an idiom; and as such it is not confined by the ordinary rules of grammar. It has become interwoven in the very tissues of our thought, and it is just such expressions which lend variety, interest and vigor to our tongue. These are the outcome of the very terseness and directness which are English characteristics; and after all, we are English in our speech and literature, regardless of the number of hyphens that have been in evidence of late. Had like-minded sham purists been in the British battle line at Waterloo, they probably would have declined to advance on the command, "Up, guards, and at them!" on the ground that it was a sentence with out a verb.

While there is no necessity for the News Letter to take the defensive in regard to the quoted phrase, nevertheless there are some who like the blare of the academic drum, and these may be interested to know that John Kenyon, professor of English at Butler College, finds erudite sanction for the common usage.

Kenyon refers to two dictionaries that list the word as both adjective and adverb, and says in the Outlook:

"One of the common fallacies which it seems impossible to eradicate is the assumption that adverbs must end in 'ly,' and, conversely, that all words identical in form with adjectives are wrongly used as adverbs if they do not end in 'ly.' The adverb 'slow' is by no means obsolete even in the vicinity of Boston, as I have often observed on the road signs referred to.

"It should be noted, first, that if 'Drive Slow' is bad English, it is not at all a violation of the laws of grammar when those laws are scientific enough to cover the facts. The most common way of forming adverbs in older English was the addition of a pronounced 'e' to the adjectives. Often the adjectives so converted had previously ended in 'ly,' like 'manly' (speaking in modern forms), but just as often they had no ending, like 'deep.' The audible final 'e' seemed to distinguish all such adverbs from the corresponding adjectives. But in the course of time this final 'e' became worn off in pronunciation, and often in spelling, so that the forms of the adverbs became identical with the forms of the adjectives, though the words have, of course, still remained adverbs, and are not 'adjectives used for adverbs.' As a result we have adjectives like 'stately' and 'deep,' and also the adverbs 'stately' and 'deep.' So we have a great number of genuine adverbs that have lost a final 'e' that formerly distinguished them from the corresponding adjectives, such as 'high,' 'low,' 'quick,' 'long,' 'fast' (imagine 'He is driving fastly!'). The adverb 'slow' has developed, by the common law of analogy, from the adjective 'slow' without actually having had an 'e.' No fault can be found with the grammar of 'Drive Slow' (except by those who make some of our school grammars.)

"The only ground on which the phrase could be condemned is that of usage. The good standing of the adverb 'slow' is not questioned by two leading American and English dictionaries, the International and the Oxford. A glance at the latter shows that it has been in good use since 1500. Among others, it is used by Shakespeare, Milton, Byron, Thackeray and the Edinburgh Review. It is extremely common in such phrases as 'slow-breeding' (Darwin); cf. 'slow-moving vehicles.' As a matter of actual fact, the adverb 'slow' is in general use by cultivated speakers and writers."

Europe Ignores U. S. Feats

Should Eddie Rickenbacher, the famous Maxwell pilot—or any of the other speed demons of premier fame—celebrate the first race of 1916 by rolling 300 miles in two hours, or some such revolutionary figure, the result could be nothing more than an American record. No such thing as a world's record can be successfully claimed, when the feat is accomplished in the United States, under the sanction of the American automobile Association.

This strange and anomalous condition arises from the fact that, with characteristic European aloofness, the automobile judiciary across the sea recognizes no performance in America as really authentic.

Despite the fact that many recent American records excel those on the books of the Automobile Clubs of Great Britain and France, recent compilations of European records placidly ignore them, and still refer to venerable European feats as world's records.

The American Automobile Association, after vainly trying to secure mutual recognition which would result in a real table of world's records, has temporarily given up the battle, and modestly refers to all marks established under its jurisdiction as American records—only this and nothing more.

Vast Sums Spent on Highways

Government figures show that nearly $250,000,000 was spent in construction and maintenance of highways in the United States during 1914. One-fifth of this was done under State-aid system. In addition, thirteen States spent more than $25,000,000 on trunk line roads. The waste due to building types of highways not suited to modern travel is demonstrated forcibly by the immense expenditures for maintenance. Six Eastern States paid two-thirds as much for maintenance as for construction. At the date of the report there were 247,490 miles of hard-surfaced roads in the country out of a total of 2,273,000 miles of highways.

War Motors Worth Sixty Million Work for Allied Armies

There are over $60,000,000 worth of automobiles hard at work for the allied armies back of the front in France, according to the estimate of a war correspondent. Some are huge trucks, the owners of which were granted subsidies long before the war broke out. Others are limousines, more or less fresh from the social world. Others are light runabouts, used by messengers. Some of the latter drive over broken down walls and across rough country, when the roads are crowded or do not reach the right destination directly enough. Repair work is taken care of by what are practically portable factories some distance behind the lines. These have complete equipments of machinery, and can be taken apart and moved to another spot in a day, or less.

Superintendent H. A. French, of the State Motor Vehicle Department, gives the following figures for the year to February 5th: Registrations—Automobiles, 144,272; motorcycles, 19,009; chauffeurs, 4,352; auto dealers, 1,115; motorcycle dealers 135. Receipts—Automobiles, $1,467,077.40; motorcycles, $28,018; chauffeurs, $8,704; auto dealers, $25,455; motorcycle dealers, $570; substitutions, $2,554.30. Total receipts, $1,533,378.70.

Adamson Registration Bill Meets With Favor

Washington, D. C., Feb. 5—Many members of both branches of Congress unhesitatingly have expressed themselves in favor of the Adamson registration bill which provides that a motorist

Travel on the Big Ships

"Congress," "Governor," "President," "Queen"

LOS ANGELES SAN DIEGO SEATTLE TACOMA
VICTORIA VANCOUVER

Berth and Meals Included at Sea

Tickets to all Points East by Rail and Water

PACIFIC COAST STEAMSHIP CO.
653 MARKET STREET (Palace Hotel) PHONE KEARNY 492

with his home State number can travel freely anywhere in the United States without additional taxation.

A. A. State and local clubs throughout the country, in asking the support of their spokesmen in Washington, have been gratified at the practical unanimity of the replies received.

Commenting upon the change of public opinion, President John A. Wilson says: "Of course the fact alone that the A. A. A. now speaks in organized form for over two and a quarter million road users, with another million in sight before the close of the present year, as against less than a hundred thousand ten years ago, tells its own story. The self-propelled vehicle is an accepted necessity and economically has its place.

"I believe that the time is nearer at hand than most of us realize when Representative Adamson's prophecy will be realized, and that it will be only the operator and not the vehicle calling for a number. His number will be displayed on whatever vehicle may be in charge of the operator, who will be subject to an examination sufficient to demonstrate his ability to handle a motor car under diversified traffic conditions.

"In the country districts which are absorbing the greater part of the motor cars now being produced there is a growing dissent at the multiplying increase of vehicle taxation. Some day soon the motor car will be taxed like any other piece of property, for roads confer a general benefit and should be paid for out of general funds."

* * *

Good Roads Will Keep Money at Home

About $100,000,000 that usually is taken abroad for spending by American tourists last year stayed in the United States, and was spent among the various enterprises catering to the traveling public, according to the annual report of the Hon. Frank R. Lane, Secretary of the Interior. In this fact he sees a great argument for the pursuing of road improvement work, for the European war is not over, and there is every indication that a season of even greater American prosperity is approaching.

Travel over the Lincoln Highway increased from 300 to 600 per cent, according to the best estimates of the number of trans-continental parties, and the increase was probably much greater in those who made shorter trips over the highway, as from New York to Chicago, or Chicago to the West. Much of this movement would have been impossible but for the good roads. In fact, in many cases the roads formed the incentive to tour.

Secretary Lane, in his report, refers to this directly, and to the economic value of encouraging home travel. In his report he presents the advisability of a plan to make the beauty spots of the United States more accessible to the public at large, particularly those in the West, and to continue to attract each year to the natural playground of this country more and more of those American citizens who, in former years, spent their vacation abroad.

* * *

Autos Take Fourth Place

The recent automobile shows bring forth the startling information that the automobile manufacturing industry ranks fourth in the United States, with lumber first, steel second and clothing next. This is startling when viewed by the brevity of the industry's existence. There are 448 automobile factories in the United States, and these promise to produce more than 1,000,000 cars during 1916. Parallel with the growth and increase in the manufacturing element of the business, the sporting side as represented by speedway races has made colossal strides and promises newer, bigger and greater things for the coming year.

* * *

Goodrich Has "57" Buildings

The addition of three enormous buildings, which are nearing completion, will make the plant of the B. F. Goodrich Company at Akron, Ohio, much the largest rubber factory in the world. Before these new buildings were erected, the Goodrich institution was already the world's largest plant devoted to the manufacture of rubber goods, but with the immensely increased capacity provided by the recent additions, which are in themselves larger than most of the more widely known rubber factories throughout the country, the Goodrich plant now ranks far ahead—becomes a veritable plant of the industrial world.

An idea of the immensity of the Goodrich factory may be gained when it is said that the group of fifty-seven buildings composing the plant have a floor space of nearly a hundred acres, and that one would have to travel 3.8 miles in going once around the grounds which the buildings occupy.

Unlike many of the industries of the day, the business of the B. F. Goodrich Company has none of the characteristics of mushroom growth. It has not sprung up over night, nor is it the result of abnormal conditions which have developed within a year or two. It has been built up gradually for many years, in accordance with the soundest principles. The solidity and permanence of the new buildings, as well as the others composing the group that makes up the enormous plant, is characteristic of the whole Goodrich institution.

Steady and natural growth of the company's business in the general lines of rubber products, coupled with the widespread demand for Goodrich Black Safety Tread and Silvertown Automobile Tires, "Hipress" and "Straight Line" rubber footwear, Goodrich Double-Duty Waterproof Clothing, Truck Tires, Mechanical Goods, etc., may be named among the factors which have made enlargement of the plant necessary. The largest of the new buildings is a finished goods warehouse, 320 feet long and 280 feet wide, with one wing which is six stories high and another of seven stories. This structure is about completed.

All the new buildings exemplify the latest ideas in factory construction. Lattice steel columns and girders encased in reinforced concrete are used throughout for the frame-work. Each of the buildings has concrete floors, brick walls and steel window frames and sash. The buildings are equipped with elevators and enclosed fire escapes. The new structures will have the same adequate sprinkling system that contributes to the safety of all the buildings which constitute the great Goodrich plant.

* * *

Cleanliness First

The new home of J. W. Leavitt & Company on Automobile Row is to be a wonder in the way of up-to-dateness. The great amount of attention paid to detail will be most interesting when finally installed.

"One of the hardest things we have to contend with to-day along Automobile Row is cleanliness. It seems that the constant moving of motor cars creates such a dust that our offices and building throughout have to be cleaned daily," says A. D. Plughoff, general manager of J. W. Leavitt & Company, Overland coast distributors.

"This, even in our present quarters, demands the employment of considerable labor. In our new building there will be installed a complete vacuum cleaning system that will permit of the complete cleaning of the whole structure easily between the hours of closing and opening, with a great reduction in the janitor service. Along the same line there will be installed an incinerator of the smokeless order, in which will be disposed all of the daily accumulation of refuse.

"There will also be a continuous mail chute that will tap all departments in the building, bringing the mail to one point for delivery. In the same way the incoming mail will be distributed throughout the structure. A new and improved method of handling the exhaust in the service station is to be installed."

* * *

Display Stand of Hamr-Handl Tool Offered to Dealers

As a sales help to the dealer, the Crescent Tool Co., Jamestown, N. Y., is offering a display stand showing its Hamr-Handl screw driver in two positions, also illustrations of the correct way to use the tool. The stand measures 13 by 10 inches and weighs 2¼ pounds. The size of tool shown on it lists at 75 cents.

As a hammer the tool is used to start the screw by giving it a light tap, after which it may be used as a screw driver to turn the screw the rest of the way in. The shape of the handle is such that it affords the operator additional leverage for driving in a screw that turns particularly hard. The folding "T" handle is held in either position by a strong spring. The driver is drop forged and oil tempered. It is finished in nickel plate. The tool is made in several sizes and styles. The 75 cent type has a 5-inch blade.

* * *

An Excellent Garage

A self-respecting man respects his car, and he insures the painstaking attention to which every car is entitled by keeping it at Dow & Green's Garage in Taylor street, between O'Farrell and Geary. Service is the slogan of this deservedly popular garage.

Studebaker Does Mountain Climb Stunt in California

When C. E. Holcombe, who was looking for a car to use in a stage service between Los Angeles and San Diego, Cal., asked the Los Angeles Studebaker agent for a demonstration of the ability of the Studebaker car to do hard work without overheating, he was taken on a mountain climb, after which the dealer washed his hands in water flowing from the radiator. Previous to the trip, which was up Lookout Mountain, the transmission was put in high gear, and shifting lever removed, and the radiator fan taken off, so that it was a high gear test with every opportunity given the motor to overheat. When the car ended its run, the hose was disconnected from the radiator, and the hand-washing accomplished without scalding. Holcombe drew a check, and placed the car in service after the gear lever had been replaced and the fan put to work again.

* * *

Only Small Increase in Tire Prices

In view of the constantly increasing cost of raw materials as a result of war conditions, the price of certain finished products has naturally advanced, the ratio of advance depending largely upon the peculiar conditions now confronting any individual industry as to the available supply of raw materials indispensable to its particular products.

While at the present time this condition applies to a great variety of industries, especially is it true of automobile tires, as far as the rubber and other materials which enter into their construction are concerned, and which during the past eighteen months have advanced in a very substantial degree.

As a consequence, after a steady decline in tire prices during the past four years, all tire manufacturers now face the necessity of an increase for the reasons herein stated. In fact, several of the leading tire companies already have announced increased price levels, including the Federal Rubber Manufacturing Company of Cudahy, Wisconsin, makers of the well-known Rugged Tread non-skid tire with double cable base construction, and a complete line of mechanical rubber goods.

Due to the fact, however, that the Federal Company, 1239-41 Van Ness avenue, has on hand at present a reasonable supply of raw materials, and the further fact that an entire rearrangement of its selling territory has recently been made, enabling it to merge many of its branches into large district centers and thus materially reducing the cost of national distribution, the company announces for the present an increase of approximately only 10 per cent on tires of the standard sizes.

* * *

Vesta Starting Battery Gives Satisfaction

At the Chicago Automobile Show, the Vesta Accumulator Company showed a new feature in starting battery construction that created a sensation in battery circles. It is claimed that from a battery of this construction at least twice the life could be expected in comparison with an ordinary battery, and technical knowledge is not required to understand the common sense principle on which this claim is based. It is well known that the plates of a battery must not touch. Nine times out of ten when batteries have given out and are opened, the battery repair man reports "short circuit" on account of worn separators. In the new Vesta construction the plates are locked apart by patented indestructible isolators. The wooden mat is neither depended upon to separate or space the plates, and the plates of the battery are locked apart to stay, and equidistant from each other.

For eighteen years the Vesta Accumulator Company has steadfastly adhered to a policy of quality first. It maintains that while this new construction costs a little more to build, that by reason of its easier selling possibilities, thereby increasing its output, it will not raise the price on this account. The service organization is very extensive, but the company expects, during 1916, to add a great many more distributing points and service stations to its list.

B. I. Bill is the Pacific Coast distributor of the Vesta, which appears to have given great satisfaction to all local users.

* * *

Where are the Cars of Yesteryear?

"Since the Kissel Motor Car Co. was organized ten years ago there have been many changes in the roster of the industry," said W. L. Kissel the other day. "In 1906 there were 104 makes of automobiles, and of these, 76 have retired from the field. There are now 237 makers of pleasure cars, these including but 28 that were in existence when the KisselKar was born.

"Among the leading cars at the automobile shows of 1906 were the Knox, Pierce-Racine, Pope-Toledo, Rambler, Tourist, Thomas, Chadwick, Duryea, Berkshire, Frayer-Miller, Royal Tourist, and many others that have passed away.

"Of the competition the KisselKar encountered in 1906 there remains only the following, Auburn, Austin, Buick, Cadillac, Dorris, Ford, Franklin, Glide, Haynes, Jackson, Locomobile, Mitchell, Maxwell, Oldsmobile, Pierce-Arrow, Premier, Peerless, Packard, Reo, Stanley, Simplex, Winton and White."

TELEPHONE FRANKLIN 1836
FOR A
Touring Car, Limousine or Taxi-Car

The White Star Line
AUTO TOURING COMPANY

TARIFF: 7 Passenger Touring Cars
$2.00 per hour
7 Passenger Closed Cars
$2.50 per hour

Special Rates by week or month.

TAXI-CAR RATES FOR SHORT TRIPS
Day and Night Service

Our Taxi-Car Service is most reasonable and unexcelled. We use seven passenger closed cars for this service which bear no mark of identification signifying a rent car. The "Zone" rate applies to all Taxi-Car service. When ordering a car for this service please state that you desire the Taxi-Car Tariff.

THE WHITE STAR LINE
Auto Touring Co.
Telephone Franklin 1836

CRINKLET TOWELS
WASHLESS
USE LIKE AN ORDINARY TOWEL

AUTOISTS
SHOULD NEVER BE WITHOUT THEM
=

Your Grocer Sells 'Em

WHERE SERVICE MEANS SERVICE
M & H GARAGE
819-835 ELLIS ST. Between Polk and Van Ness Avenue
WHERE THE PRIVATE OWNER FEELS AT HOME

TIRES VULCANIZING
TOM H. ELKINGTON
Long Mileage Tires and Second-Hand Tires
Everything Needed for the Bus
1135 VAN NESS AVE.—Near Geary Phone PROSPECT 1566

Tips to Automobilists
(CUT THIS OUT.)

The News Letter recommends the following garages, hotels and supply houses. Tourists will do well to cut this list out and keep it as a guide:

PALO ALTO.—LARKIN'S CAFE—Just opened. The only strictly first-class cafe on the Wishbone Route devoted to the patronage of automobile owners and their families. Corner of University avenue and The Circle

SAN JOSE.—LAMOLLE GRILL, 36-38 North First street. The best French dinner in California, 75 cents, or a la carte. Automobile parties given particular attention.

PALO ALTO.—PALO ALTO GARAGE, 443 Emerson St., Tel., P. A. 333. Auto livery at all hours. Tires and sundries in stock. Gasoline, oil, repairing, lathework, vulcanizing. Open day and night.

Simplex Jack Offered in Two New Styles

Two new models of Simplex automobile jack recently have been placed on the market by Templeton, Kenly & Co., 1020 South Central avenue, Chicago, Ill. The model "38" is offered as a medium priced jack containing the Simplex feature of a variable lifting height. The adjustable shoe locks firmly in any position on the I-beam shaped rack bar and may be adjusted by hand to any car height. Having a capacity of 1,500 pounds, the jack is suitable for any average use to which it may be put around the garage. This model weighs 9 pounds and is 10½ inches in height with a 6-inch lift.

Four different lifting positions are afforded by the model "45" jack, which is made throughout of alloy steel. This screw jack has a capacity of 4,000 pounds, thus covering a wide field of usefulness. Though of the screw type, the operating mechanism of the jack is particularly simple. The operating pawls engage a large gear, upon the shaft of which is the rack pinion that meshes into the rack. The drop-forged detachable shoe, which makes possible the four lifting positions, can be easily adjusted to any height of car. Thirteen pounds is the weight of this model and the height of the lifting positions are 9 inches, 10½ inches, 11¾ inches, and 13 inches.

* * *

Tire Punctures Located by Du Tell Devices

To find a small leak or puncture that otherwise would not be easily discovered is the object of the Du Tell puncture finder, invented by J. W. Anderson, now located at 1105 Amsterdam avenue, New York City.

When a small puncture caused by a nail or a very sharp stone develops in the tire, considerable difficulty is experienced in locating the exact position of the leak. Often it is necessary to resort to the use of water, and by partly submerging the tire, discover the leak from the resulting air bubbles. Even after the water has been obtained and the dirty job of covering the dusty casing has been accomplished, considerable uncertainty often will exist as to the location of the leak because of the fact that a good deal of free air is carried in the pores of the tire, which will form small bubbles in an entirely sound section of the tire.

The Du Tell consists of a sort of frame or box, which is curved to conform to the tread of the tire. On the underneath side of the device is a fine mesh screen and on top of which is a sort of transparent celluloid window. On the screen are small strips of very thin cork. The method of using the puncture finder is to place it tightly against the tire and slide it around, at all times observing the pieces of cork. When the leak is reached the corks will fly up from the air pressure below, thus indicating its exact location.

Anderson first marketed the device abroad and has sold a large number in Australia. He is now about to place it on the market here, however, and is arranging American representation. The Du Tell puncture finder was patented on September 29, 1914.

* * *

Marvel-Mist Body Polish is Sprayed On

Marvel-Mist is the name of a dust absorber, cleanser and polisher for automobile bodies and tops, produced by the Marvel-Mist Mfg. Co., Brooklyn, N. Y. It comes in a combination sprayer and oil container. The sprayer is an atomizer, which produces a fine spray that, when rubbed off, leaves a highly polished surface, said to be impervious to changing climatic conditions. Two sizes of the outfit are offered, the "Midget," which lists at $1, and the "Giant," which lists at $1.25. Ordinary cans of the liquid may be obtained for refilling the sprayer, after it is empty. The method of applying the polish makes for the elimination of all waste and assures thorough covering of the surfaces with just the right amount of polish.

—"What is your boy studying at school now?" "Jedgin'," replied Farmer Cornstossel, "from the way he keeps remindin' me of expenses, I should say it was mostly arithmetic."—Washington Star.

FIRE PROOF BUILDING Phones—Park 8386, Park 5138
20---MARSHALL SQUARE---20
G A R A G E
 EXPERT AUTOMOBILE REPAIRING and MACHINE WORK
 AUTO SUPPLIES
 NO. 20 MARSHALL SQUARE
 Opp. 8th and Market Sts. San Francisco

MOTOROL
 "It suits because it doesn't soot"
 If you want to prolong the life of your engine
 If you want to eliminate smoke and carbon
 If you want to reduce your oil expense
 Use MoToRoL
Hughson & Merton, Inc.
 5 0 Golden Gate Avenue
 San Francisco, Cal.

PANHARD OIL
 FREE FROM CARBON
BERNARD I. BILL
 543 GOLDEN GATE AVE. SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

CLASS "A" GARAGE, INC.
 Strictly Fire Proof Building
STORAGE SUPPLIES REPAIRS
 BEST SERVICE ASSURED
 735-751 POST STREET SAN FRANCISCO
 TELEPHONE PROSPECT 2280

Automobile Starting and Lighting Systems
 Give Satisfactory Results When Given Proper Attention
 We specialize on electrical equipment, storage batteries, etc.
 and guarantee satisfaction.
GUARANTEE BATTERY COMPANY
 639 Van Ness Ave. BRAND & CUSHMAN Phone Prospect 741

Mitchell
 MOTOR CARS
The Six of Sixteen
Osen McFarland Co.
 Golden Gate Avenue

LARKINS & COMPANY
 CARRIAGE AND AUTOMOBILE BODY BUILDERS
 Established in 1865
 1610-1612-1614 VAN NESS AVENUE
 Between California and Sacramento Sts. Phone Prospect 30
 Where their entire attention will be devoted to the prompt delivery of the best work that a modern plant, high-class mechanics and materials can produce.

London and Lancashire Fire Insurance Company
Orient Insurance Company
 332 PINE STREET SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
 Sam B. Stoy, Mgr. G. O. Smith, Agency Supt. W. B. Hopkins, Local Sec.
Automobile Department W. M. KLINGER, General Agent

FASHION'S FADS AND FRILLS

The "dress-up" notion seems to have taken a strong hold on us, one and all. Our shop windows present wonderful changes each day, and our avenue has become a veritable kaleidoscope of attractively gowned and hatted women. Perhaps it is the opening of the new season with its suggestion of coming spring, although the frost and snap of old winter still lingers, which causes us to look with more appreciative eyes than usual on the new offerings in frocks, suits and hats. But, leaving aside these flattering elements, there is really more of beauty and smartness in this season's styles than we have had for many a year.

Ostrich Trimming on Frocks.

Fur is still the smart trimming for all garments, and it promises to remain in favor well into the spring. There is already a hint here and there, however, that designers and manufacturers are tentatively reaching out for an attractive successor. In one of the smart shops the other morning, a most attractive afternoon dress was displayed; it was made in Russian effect, was very simple, and sparingly ornamented, the only trimming, in fact, being bands of ostrich in the same shade of blue as the dress, edging the high, standing collar, the cuffs and the lower edge of the blouse peplum. The effect was pleasing and perfectly appropriate for the warmer weather.

Trimmings for Spring Hats.

Whether ostrich as trimming for hats will be favored to any great degree, is still a question; that it will be used considerably as in the past season or two, for fancies, odd little stick-ups, balls, rosettes, and similar effects, on the chic small hats which are being introduced as first models for spring, has already been confirmed. Many handsome hats are being shown this season. The new braids are mostly shiny; glace effects will predominate—although one sees some effective dull-finished hems and tagals. A new glace braid from Paris resembles nothing so much as the scales of a fish, and it is appropriately named "fish-scale" straw. Some flowers will be used on the new hats, and quantities of ribbon. The new colors in millinery are, generally speaking, black, which is quite as strong as ever, geranium, pink, absinthe, polished-gold, mint-green and baby chic; the last a charmingly suggestive title.

Drop-Shoulder Frock—Band-Trimmed Skirt.

Among the attractive millinery notions being displayed in the shops, and worn at the southern resorts are sets consisting of hat, handbag and collarette, and fashioned of faille, or the new soft luster satins. One of the most attractive of these is developed in the new Callot color, a soft shade of pinkish lavender. The hat is very simple, a medium sailor turned up sharply on the left side, having no contrasting trimming; the bag is of the same soft luster satin as the hat, and the collarette, also of silk, is corded about an inch apart, and finished with long ribbon ends for tying. These sets are being made up in many colors and are unusually effective as a finishing touch on an afternoon frock of silk, or one of the sheer cottons.

Fashions in Handbags.

Now that so much attention is being given to details, and in consequence we are all presenting a better groomed appearance than ever before, the handbag is being shown considerable attention. Once upon a time it was considered for its useful qualities alone. Now it lends an added touch of color or richness to tailored suit and afternoon frock, and its appropriateness for both must be considered. The voluminous bag of soft morocco and like soft leathers in dark colorings, the black patent leather bag, lined with bright red or cream-colored moire silk, and the envelope purses, also lined with bright silks, are good form with tailored suits. There are some attractive novelty striped leathers also being used with dark tailored suits very effectively. Antique brocades, Japanese embroideries, and dyed laces are fashioned into effective and artistic bags for the afternoon gown.

Several of the newest fashion features are illustrated in the afternoon frocks illustrating this letter; the cape-collar is one, the drop-shoulder and attractive sleeve is another. The band-trimmed skirt is new and effective, and the full-pointed tunic is smart and becoming.

Illustrating the Cape-Collar

Dr. Byron Haines, Dentist, has resumed practice at his office in Gunst Building, S. W. corner Geary and Powell streets.

New Mid-Winter Style Dresses

Easily Made at Home
With February

McCALL PATTERNS
NOW ON SALE

A whole season's smartest styles are accurately forecast in the beautifully illustrated

McCALL
BOOK OF FASHIONS
(Winter Quarterly)

NOW ON SALE

Get your copy to-day and see the interesting changes which are appearing in the world of fashions.

Attractive Afternoon Dress
McCall Pattern No. 828-091
Two on the cover February 1916

Dainty Skating Costume
McCall Pattern No. 1001-697
Two on the cover February 1916

NEWMAN, MAGNIN CO.
San Francisco, Calif.

MARKS BROS

The States of Massachusetts and EXTENDING RURAL CREDITS. New York have recently adopted legislation designed to establish debenture systems for supplying rural credits. The Massachusetts act, which was passed in 1915, authorizes the organization of Farm Land Banks, with a capital of not less than $50,000, which shall be under the supervision of the Bank Commissioner of the State. These banks are authorized to issue debenture bonds based upon farm mortgages which are a first lien and do not exceed fifty per cent of the value of the property, but the amount of bonds issued must not exceed 95 per cent of the face value of the mortgages. Loans shall be for not less than five or more than thirty-five years, and if for more than five years must provide for regular amortization payments which will extinguish the loan at maturity. Interest rates upon the mortgages must not exceed rates upon the mortgages by more than one per cent.

—1916 has started out to outdo 1915 in the amount of business transacted. Incidentally, 1915 broke all records in the amount of bank clearings, exports, imports, postoffice receipts and passenger travel. Bank clearings for January are the second highest for any January in the history of the city. With a score of ships building or contracted for at the Union Iron Works, the shipbuilding industry has taken on an activity in excess of anything known in this section before. The Pacific Coast Steel Company has added to the equipment of their plant in order to take care of larger work. The shipping of the port has never been as brisk. Charters are at a premium, and ships are sailing with cargoes loaded to the hatches. The Pacific Coast Steamship Company has announced direct sailings to Alaska, which means that much of that business will go direct instead of being trans-shipped at Seattle. Lumber is showing more activity and it is expected that with the opening of the Panama Canal, redwood and sugar pine will go direct to Europe. Collections are reported easier, and the volume of sales during the past three months has been ahead of the fall trade of recent years.

—Eastern advices report a general reorganization of the financial condition of General Petroleum. A new company will be organized to foreclose and take over all the assets. Andrew Weir and his associates will be given $1,500,000 in 6 per cent first mortgage bonds, callable at par. The new company will issue 7 per cent preferred stock in exchange for collateral trust notes and common stock for $12,500,000 outstanding on G. P. bonds and other forms of exchanges for readjustment, which will earn the new bondholders approximately $118,000 per year.

—Blyth, Witter & Co., purchasers for cash of \$1,250,000 of the city of San Francisco $4\frac{1}{2}$ per cent water bonds, have met with such remarkable success in disposing of them that there is no longer any doubt about their taking up the remaining \$750,000 under their agreement. Up till last night the bond house had sold more than \$700,000 of the first allotment of these bonds. It has until May 1st to pay for the remainder of the total issue of \$2,000,000. The most favorable feature concerning the market, which these municipal bonds have found is that, to a large extent, the demand for them has come from California and the Pacific Coast.

—Metals have all largely increased in price, and mining in consequence is enjoying a boom throughout the United States. Copper and quicksilver have more than doubled their price during the war. Recent quotations were: Copper, 26 cents; silver, 57 cents; zinc, $17\frac{1}{2}$ cents; platinum, 44 cents; tin, 42 $\frac{1}{2}$ cents; quicksilver per flask, \$350; yead, \$6.10.

—The output of the Tonopah producers for the week ending February 5th showed an estimated total of $177,270.

—The Pan-American Oil Producing Company, recently organized in the East by Mexican Oil, Union, Independent Producers, General Petroleum and other big oil concerns, was incorporated this week in Delaware with a capital stock of $150,000,000, the largest oil company organized in the State and one of the biggest in the world.

—Great strides have been made in rice culture in Kern County. The first planting of 15 acres was made in 1913 as an experiment. In 1914, 160 acres were planted, and in 1915, 2,400 acres, and it is conservatively estimated that in 1916 there will be over 7,000 acres planted.

—Reports this week from Hawaii show that practically all the big sugar plantations have increased largely their former estimates regarding the season's crop. If weather conditions continue favorable a record crop will be obtained.

—The net profits of Tonopah Ex. for December totaled $57,290. This is a reduction on the total of November, due chiefly to the shut-down over the Christmas holidays.

—Pacific Gas and Electric Company has absorbed the Oro Electric Company by the purchase of the latter's bonds at 75.

—January's clean-up in Tonopah west-end shares shows an estimated value of $34,951.

TRAVEL EAST IN LUXURY.

Sunset Limited to New Orleans through balmy skies. Thence through historic scenes of days of war, now alive with southern life and industry. The Sunset Limited and its connection at New Orleans with the New York and New Orleans Limited makes an ideal winter trip East. Service the best. Stop-over at points of much interest. For booklets and information apply Washington Sunset Route, 874 Market St., San Francisco, Cal.

Wedding Presents.—The choicest variety to select from at Marsh's, who is now permanently located at Post and Powell streets.

E. F. HUTTON & CO. BANKERS

Members—New York Stock Exchange; New York Cotton Exchange, New York Coffee Exchange; New Orleans Cotton Exchange; Liverpool Cotton Association; Chicago Board of Trade.

Private Wire—New York, Chicago to San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Branch Offices—San Francisco, 190 California St., and Hotel St. Francis; Los Angeles, 118 Fourth Street, 1. W. Hellman Building.

PIONEER HOUSE OF THE PACIFIC COAST

VISIT CAPITOL CITY of your STATE

A Day's Trip—Well Spent

Visit beautiful Capitol Grounds—Capitol Building—Sutter's Fort—Crocker Art Gallery—Riverside Drive, etc.

$3.35 Round Trip Saturdays and Sundays, with return limit Monday.

OAKLAND, ANTIOCH & EASTERN RAILWAY

City Index and Purchasers' Guide

CHIROPODISTS.

Dr. R. T. Leaner, Surgeon Chiroprapist, formerly of 6 Geary street; removes corns entirely whole—painless—without knife. Bunions and ingrowing nails cured by a special and painless treatment. 212-214 West bank Bldg., 830 Market St. Tel. Kearny 3578.

NOTARY PUBLIC.

Martin Aronsohn, Notary Public and Pension Attorney. All legal papers drawn up accurately. 217 Montgomery St., above Bush, San Francisco, Cal. Phone Douglas 691.

ATTORNEYS-AT-LAW

Samuel M. Shortridge, Attorney-at-Law, Chronicle Building, San Francisco. Tel. Sutter 26.

Marcus Lorne Samuels, Attorney-at-Law, Pacific Building, Market St. at Fourth, San Francisco, Cal. Tel. Douglas 304

LOST.—Savings Pass Book, No. 21376, with Union Trust Company. Finder will please return to the Bank, Market street and Grant avenue.

SAN FRANCISCO
 OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF THE BAY AND SUPERIOR
 OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA
 OF THE PACIFIC COAST

NEWS LETTER

California Advertiser.

Devoted to the Leading Interests of California and the Pacific Coast.

Vol. XCI

San Francisco, Cal., Saturday, February 19, 1916

No. 8

The SAN FRANCISCO NEWS LETTER AND CALIFORNIA ADVERTISER is printed and published every Saturday by the Proprietor, Frederick Marriott, 21 Sutter street, San Francisco, Cal. Tel. Kearny 3594 Entered at San Francisco, Cal., Post-office as second-class mail matter. Chicago Office—Geo. Hilsche, 1310 Westminster, Westminster Building, Chicago.

London Office—George Street & Co., 30 Cornhill, E. C., England. Matter intended for publication in the current number of the SAN FRANCISCO NEWS LETTER AND CALIFORNIA ADVERTISER should be sent to the office not later than 5 p. m. Wednesday. Subscription Rates (including postage)—1 year, $4.00; 6 months, $2.25; Foreign—1 year, $6.00; 6 months, $3.25.

—The country promises to be well garrisoned even if the Cabinet isn't.

—The Lusitania affair has been settled to the satisfaction of all but the foes of the administration.

—Another cure for leprosy has been found. And they'll find another, and another—and leprosy will still continue.

—The politicians who have pledged their support to Roosevelt may be regarded as optimists of the most advanced type.

—Justice Hughes' reluctance to be a candidate for the presidency indicates that he has full appreciation of Wilson's strength.

—Germany is to raise rabbits for food. Belgian hares, we presume, so that the more pleasure can be taken in the slaughtering of them.

—The weather has been such as to make one forgive even the spring poet. The only unforgivable one is the croaker who predicts March storms.

—Venus and Jupiter have been snuggling up scandalously these past few nights. And there isn't a thing that the poor purity leaguers can do about it.

—Bryan says he will go to Europe and remain there until the war ends. That would almost justify public prayers that the conflict continue indefinitely.

—Alameda woman who killed her husband has been freed without trial. That's more sensible than the usual custom of freeing them after expensive litigation.

—Taft says that he has quit politics and is now in a respectable profession, that of teaching. The rule about fouling one's nest should apply to last year's nest, also.

—The armored cruiser San Diego has captured a silver cup by making one hundred hits out of a possible one hundred. That's the kind of preparedness that counts.

—A New York woman has been operated on ninety-eight times in nine years. That gives her material for gruesome conversation for nine hundred and ninety-nine years.

—Toledo, Ohio, proposes to have an ordinance forbidding women to wear skirts more than three inches above the ankle. There will be a scramble for the job of official measurer.

—The newest German Zeppelin is said to be fish-shaped. There are plenty of British in bombarded towns who are ready to swear that they have horns and hoofs and a fiery tail.

—Up in the heavens this year there are to be three eclipses—one of the moon and two of the sun. Down here on the earth that record will be beaten by the eclipse of many, many politicians.

—The population of the United States is now more than one hundred million, says the census bureau. And what a lot of that number is made up of people who are of no value beyond helping swell a census report.

—The Pacificists are wasting a lot of ammunition battering at the forts of Preparedness. But if they were not chattering about defense they would be making an equally great noise about something else. So let them jabber and be happy.

—The Order of Merit has been given by the Kaiser to some of the Zeppelin raiders who attacked English towns, and the iron cross to others. The first for those who killed adults, we presume, and the others for the slayers of mere children.

—San Francisco woman who persuaded her husband to surrender on the charge of murder applied for the reward offered for his capture, and was sent away penniless. But if the husband has any sort of temper she has her reward coming.

—Governor McCall of Massachusetts says that "if" it hadn't been for the war in Europe this country would have been financially wrecked by now by the Underwood tariff. The Republicans need not think they can win this campaign on "ifs."

—An Australian lawyer visiting in this city declares that our judges do not put in enough "time" on the bench. We know perfectly well where some of them should be spending "time," but dassent say it for fear of being hauled up for contempt of court.

—The tailors of the United States, in national convention, declare that a complete wardrobe for an American gentleman will cost him $2,000. It will rather discourage the tailors to find out how many of us can get along without being real American gentlemen.

—Bassity's gambling club closed for several hours the other night on account of a rumor from police headquarters that it was to be raided. The thing turned out to be a practical joke on the part of the police. Nothing like a little jest between close friends.

—The anarchist who put arsenic in the soup at the Chicago banquet and narrowly missed killing four hundred people, would have been a martyr among his fellows had he succeeded. As it is, he is a fugitive, and will have to lay low and keep still—which is a greater hardship to an anarchist than hanging.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

SHIFT OUR "WAR TAX" ON WAR EXPORTS.

One of the small retailers in the Mission district of the city happened to be cramped for ready money recently on the call of an unexpected pressing bill. Naturally he sought his bank to negotiate a loan. He was given the loan, but it stuck in his throat when he was charged with the present war tax imposed by the government on all such transactions. The man's predicament just now is such that he carefully weighs a dollar before he spends it. Becoming curious regarding the extent of this war tax he sought a real estate dealer of ample capital to learn if he could have mortgaged his small unimproved lot and thus have raised the money and dodged the tax. Not a chance: the war tax was on guard, backed by the imposing insistence of the U. S. A., and stoutly insisted on its regular rakeoff on any mortgage transaction. He edged carefully along the circumscribed circle hedging his business, and discovered, in supplies and other lines, that he was hedged by a fence bristling with war taxes and trimmed with higher prices in commodities he handled and needful articles he wanted. War was the excuse of all these imposed surcharges. Explanations were offered that the war had cut off the importation of certain ingredients and of necessary components in manufacture," so pre-war prices must necessarily be advanced to protect ourselves." The curious retailer consulted his fellows, and discovered that most of them were in the doldrums and harassed with climbing prices in trying to replenish stocks. They felt the pinch badly because their trade was falling off, due to the fact that their class of customers were forced to economize, as they could not afford to pay the climbing "war prices."

The present Congress will likely exceed the disbursement of over $500,000,000 in rounding off the plans for preparedness now underway, which means that the taxpayers of the country must contribute much the larger part of that sum, as Congressmen will likely regard it as an extraordinary tax for special purposes. In the present emergency the tax will be placed largely in the direct form, the form that the small business man mentioned above inveighed so bitterly against. It is a singular fact that the ordinary citizen, whether through ignorance or jaundice, pays practically no attention to the indirect taxes artfully imposed upon him by legislators, except through the high wail he sets up periodically against the high cost of living, oblivious of the fact that the larger part of that cost is directly due to the indirect tax artfully imposed upon him by legislators, national, State and municipal. Why should the small business men of this country be mulcted of these taxes in order to replenish the national shortage now prevailing in import duties due to the present war. The United States had no hand in making this war, and has striven to remain neutral, and neutral nations should not be compelled to suffer in the payment of extraordinary taxes because of the war. These taxes should be shifted upon those nations engaged in the war. They started the music—let them pay the piper. A ready remedy is to remove the tax from the shoulders of the business men of this country and impose it on the shipments of munitions, foodstuffs and other materials exported from this country to the belligerents. Germany is exercising this idea by forcing Belgium, Servia, Montenegro and the captured provinces in France and Russia to pay her bills in the cost of war in capturing their territory. The United States has far more right and reason to make the belligerents pay the indirect war taxes which have developed in this country through the disturbance of the world's trade, and this can be done through a proper tax on the exports shipped them from this country, shipments that are unmistakably for war purposes.

Darling, in the Des Moines (Iowa) Register

Ruining That Rehearsal

For over two years the leaders of the Republican party have pussy-footed over the country seeking a likely standardized candidate to head their ticket this fall. One of them stumbled on Hughes hiding in the bullrushes alongside of the U. S. Supreme Court. Hughes, however, declares he is no Moses to lead the party back to the promised land. He has officially announced that he is out of politics. With nobody wanting to head the Republican ticket the position naturally falls to Teddy Roosevelt, the titular heir of all such jobs. The only practical use the nomination will be to the big Bull Moose is to wreck his way to the boneyard.

Oh, what a fall this is, my countrymen, when the obese party of Tom Platt, Jim Blaine and Mark Hanna bumped the bumps and the citizens of the U. S. A. rose in a wrathful protest in 1912 and swatted the remnants of that old-time political oligarchy out of office and into the limbo of "has beens." Twenty years ago there was an embarrassment of super-godly and thrifty practical politicians ready to sacrifice their constituencies for the welfare of the Republican Moloch paying the campaign bills. To-day, there is none to do them reverence and take the slightest interest in the quadrennial parade of the stuffed elephant that no one but the irrepressible Teddy is hankering to ride. At the best, the parade of the Republican party this year will be only a cheap sacrificial show.

Roosevelt is the only runner-up in sight, and even though the radical Republican wing of the party continues to regard him askance. Efforts are being made to impress these radicals that Teddy did not mean any great harm when he backed the insurrecto Progressives and split the Republican party in 1912. Very likely some hyphenated foreigner was really the party incriminis by placing a bomb in Teddy's joke. Claim is made that Hughes will be able to attract the disgruntled Progressives back into the Republican party. To an outsider, it looks as though the Progressives would divide between the two other parties. A forlorn attempt is being made to groom the Progressive party into a shape where it will be able to furnish a ticket. Despite the envious efforts of certain publicists to weaken Wilson's position as a candidate, his strength and support is growing with the days, and he will be elected by the convention on the first ballot, a logical forecast of what the people will do.

BRANDEIS AND THE JEW VOTE.

Wilson is a hard nut to crack. Generally, they regard the action as being in line with the same motives which actuated President Roosevelt to appoint Mr. Strauss, a Jew, to his Cabinet, and President Taft's approval of the abrogation of the treaty with Russia to appease the artfully worked up inflamed Jewish sentiment of the country on the opening of the Presidential campaign of 1912. At the same time, according to the logic of these same politicians scanning the cards in Wilson's hands, the latter by the appointment of Brandeis has put the Republican leaders in an awkward pickle, for if they take action against Brandeis they will evidently sacrifice blocks of Jew votes throughout the country; if they make no move, Wilson is certain to draw heavily on the Jew vote. Following the logic of the politicians, Wilson controls the situation.

Brandeis has earned a national name for himself through his acknowledged grasp of the fundamental principles of the law and his ability to use them forthrightly in contests at the bar. In the Oregon ten hour labor law for women, the New York clothing trades strikes, the Ballinger-Pinchot inquiry, in many congressional investigations, and in warfare on Big Business that centered in the limelight, he won for himself a notable reputation. In the great questions of the movements along which this republic is ranging he stands for labor and the social uplift. Such a position naturally antagonizes the capitalistic class, and they dread his influence on the banch as well as that he may prove a forerunner of others of his kind there. For many decades, no appointee of a radical character has been able to reach the bench of the United States Supreme Court, and the strongest effort will be made to maintain its impeccability in that respect. Already the preliminary skirmish in the attack is underway in Washington before the Senate sub-committee. The opening charge was that Brandeis is guilty of unprofessional acts in favoring certain railroads while he was retained to protect the interests of shippers. Other charges will naturally develop along the lines of unprofessional conduct and of practices inconsistent with the honor and dignity of the bench.

Before the case closes, it is likely charges will be made that he lacks the judicial quality of mind. Brandeis is conspicuous as a fighter in contests of this character, and no doubt he will make a showing, and thus give the American public some opportunity to gather ideas regarding his qualifications for the high honor he seeks.

How many people living on the Pacific Slope know that the Southern OF RAILROAD EMPLOYEES. Pacific Company, with its thousands of miles of trackage and innumerable trains, both passenger and freight, pays 45 cents, out of every dollar it receives, into the pay envelopes of employees? That sum indicates how far labor has wedged its demands into the receipts of the company. As that 45 cents represents the sum which the railroads of the country are paying employees, it explains the vigorous protest which the railroad companies of the country are making against the present demands of certain combines, union labor railroad organizations, for a further advance in their wage scale, on an eight hour scale.

In other lines of industry an eight or a nine hour or a ten hour day means that employees do not work less than eight, nine or ten hours, as the case may be, for a day's pay. In railroad train service, however, wages are on a dual basis, either hours worked or miles run by train, the latter being the most common usage. In freight service, most wage schedules name ten hours or less, or 100 miles or less as a day's work. So that every man is guaranteed a full day's pay no matter how few miles or hours. Should he work ten hours without running his 100 miles, he is paid for his hours. Should he run 100 miles or more in less than ten hours, he is paid for his mileage. Beyond ten hours, or 100 miles, he is paid overtime or excess mileage, the one that yields the larger wage. Ten miles is thus equivalent to the hour, or one-tenth of a day. If the train runs slower than ten miles an hour the engineer is paid by the hour; if it goes faster he is paid by the mile. Thus is it that practically no employee works for more than ten hours for a day's pay, and thousands work less than that, and even less than eight hours, for a day's pay. The result is that every man is guaranteed a full day's pay, no matter how little service he performs. He can't work for less than a day. He gets overtime for everything in excess of ten hours. All in all, railroad employees cannot be said to work an eight hour day or a ten hour day, except in those special cases where it takes just that number of hours actually to complete the run. This is the reason why laymen fall into error in trying to compare railway labor conditions with labor conditions in other lines of endeavor.

—From various parts of these United States significant signs foreshadow that any immigration bill that may come up for discussion before Congress this session will be greatly modified in character through the questionable methods of the hyphenated foreigners who have been trying to make this country a football field for their sinister designs. Public interest has taken on an entirely new aspect since President Wilson vetoed last year's bill passed by Congress. National interests and welfare and the dignity of the Republic are now becoming recognized as something of more moment than the low class of immigrants herded up in southeastern Europe for the combination of Atlantic steamship companies who handle these hordes solely for the annual profit there is in the transportation. Experience has taught Uncle Sam that a large percentage of these immigrants bring internal strife to this country and no loyalty whatever for the United States. The time has come when the strictest immigration bill ever framed, consistent with religious freedom and education, should obtain.

TOWN CRIER

—The Delcher case illustrates what a temperamental woman can do in the yellow press with the reputation of any business man that ventures near the baited nets of fascinating Lorelei. Oddly enough, it happened that in one of the yellow journal's issues describing this passionate mating-tale that the career of a "Much Married Matrimonial Swindler," dubbed a "Love Faker," was blazed up in the next column, a happy meeting of garish stories of this character. The "Love Faker" masqueraded as a foolish grass widow with money—"They tried to fleece me, but I beat 'em at their own games; they literally forced me to take their money." The four times married Mrs. Carrie Thompson—Nigre Bryant—Isaac—Christensen—is now a Federal prisoner charged with using the mails to defraud. Of course, Mrs. Delcher's notes were not framed to defraud, but to help kindle that blazing Cleopatra love that so insidiously unmans the capitalist at the moment when "one touch of nature makes all the world kin." Mrs. Delcher has not yet been married four times, nor has she confessed in her voluminous press work detailing the campaigns that she has had or intends to have four love affairs. Her story, however, indicates that she has passed the half-way post in left-handed affairs. Her extraordinary cleverness in developing cumulative evidence for her campaign of redress indicates that like Napoleon and the German Emperor she believes that the enemy should pay the bills of court proceedings that might develop from any "love" tangles. Her clever and vigilant lawyers handled the publicity end of the game by publishing the duplicate copies of her letters, so that she could not be charged with making soulful "inside" matter public. Cleverly handled, to be sure: so extraordinarily artfully handled, and with such circumspection, adroitness and completion that the prosecution makes an unusually strong case for the defendant in showing that he was cleverly baited into a trap.

—Since the outbreak of the European war there has developed in this country a raging sporadic outburst of venom, spite and vindictiveness on the part of certain resident foreigners who are bitterly opposed to the impartial position and acts of the United States as a neutral nation. Aggressive action on their part has been plentiful in all parts of the country. Munitions plants have been blown up, American ships wrecked for carrying supplies, and railroad lines threatened with destruction for hauling materials consigned to their enemies. The object obviously is to terrorize neutral nations shipping munitions, food and other supplies. The most flagrant case in the present volcanic eruption of crimes of this character was the recent attempt to poison 400 guests that attended a banquet recently given an archbishop in Chicago. Long before Macaulay, students of politics prophesied that this Republic would be forced to undergo the greatest of national throes and agonies to test its ideals as embodied in the Constitution. Since the Civil War the nation has suffered periodical and drastic tribulations. This European war has disclosed another problem, the hyphenated foreigner who fattens on the prosperity of this country, and serves his national allegiance abroad, an interloper in disguise who makes use of America to skin what benefits he can before returning to Europe. More fire should be kindled under the melting pot of the immigration laws to fuse or force out these sons of evil.

—One of the biggest waves of crime in the history of the country is sweeping over the States, and the attempt of the so-called anarchists who attempted the poisoning of the guests at a dinner in Chicago, given in honor of a prominent ecclesiastic, is part of the development. In San Francisco the "hold up" industry seems to be getting away with the local police. Vicious attacks by thugs are again thickly punctuating the night's events with all the usual blackguardly details. Something is apparently weak in the police machinery when such conditions are allowed to prevail. No excuse can be offered for an open season of crime. Chief of Police White declares that this new wave of crime is due to the leniency of probation officials in giving prisoners "tickets" of leave. "What's the use of catching criminals," he says, "if these probationers turn them loose as fast as we can catch them?" he complains. His record shows that in the last six months 268 men were arrested for burglary. The comparatively small number of convictions is suspicious. Is the result due to the "straw" bail system, so malefic in local criminal trials? A glance over the State shows that crime is on a riot, and that the chemically pure Los Angeles is the storm center. Warden Johnson of San Quentin recognizes the unusually high wave of crime sweeping over the country. San Quentin has 2,471 convicts and Folsom 1,200, the highest number in their history, and one-half of these are under age.

—Another kindly nature-born Ishi has just come out of the brush in Pittsburg in the shape of the Rev. Dr. James E. Norcross, pastor of the Shandy Avenue Baptist Church, panoplied with the temerity of a Roland and a Richard Coeur de Leon, and gently announces to the sex that "a trouser like skirt would result in better health." This second Livingston in sartorial aviation somehow escaped from his pastoral quarters in Pittsburg recently and reached San Francisco, where he was astounded to see some Chinese women walking about with their legs draped in trousers. (Luckily for himself, he did not fall into a burlesque show on the Barbary Coast and see legs draped in less gauzy materials.) Chinese legs in trouserings made a great impression on this imaginative sweetling, and he now urges the ladies of his congregation to adopt this masculine attire and use them for the benefit of pure health in mountain climbing and otherwise. If the Rev. Dr. Jas. will pick up the latest leading periodical on Fashions and Fleshlings he will discover to his amazement and chagrin that trousers were adopted by radical dresses of the sex as a fashion some time ago, and that the leglings have been shrinking ever since. One of the hold-over bronze plaques of the Exposition should be presented specially to the pastor for his unrestrained courage in suggesting to the sex what they should wear.

—The belligerents in the European war are divided over the issues of that great struggle, but they appear to be united in their attack upon Liquor in its various alcoholic forms. The British Government is taking over all the large whisky distilleries in the kingdom, and proposes to transform them into munition factories. Orders will shortly be issued to prohibit the importation of barley for distilling purposes. For some time past the Russian Government has been collecting the vodka of that country, and has accumulated millions of gallons which probably will later be transformed for use in the arts and manufactures. France is handling absinthe and her other liquor problems on Spartan principles. Abroad, where the nations are still under grinding war influences, legislation continues to drive alcoholic drink deeper into the ditch. This is the sore payment that Liquor is forced to pay for the wild pace it swaggered without license and with defiance, in the days when the nations of the world lolled luxuriously in the sun and thought only of business and pleasure.

The Growing Field of Art in California

As Exemplified in the Memorial Museum, Golden Gate Park

The new California Art Exhibition in the Memorial Museum in Golden Gate Park is unquestionably contributing a healthy and invigorating stimulus to local art. The interesting visitors who throng the rooms daily, despite the wintry weather, indicate a strong desire to develop the seeds sown by the recent displays made in the Palace of Fine Arts, on the Exposition grounds. Those considerate and far-sighted patrons who bridged for them the way to this new collection, happily helped to preserve this budding enthusiasm which will now enjoy every opportunity of becoming permanent. For this happy result, these patrons are entitled to far more than passing credit, for they took advantage of an opportunity, which, if lost, might have stranded the community in matters of art and left us only with the ardent remembrance of the ideas of Art introduced here by the Exposition.

The present display in the Park Memorial Museum and kindred places will certainly emphasize more clearly and practically the permanence of art ideas in this section, and ultimately gain the recognition that the bay counties are the center of the art movement in the West. This situation has been brought about by those influential patrons who have been working quietly and zealously for a long time to establish a substantial foundation for sound and permanent schools of art in this city. In this work, M. H. de Young has been prominent among the leaders for more than twenty years, and he and his excellent co-workers are only now beginning to see the results of their labors finding a place in the sun. Mr. de Young's efforts awoke general attention following his administration of the famous Mid-winter Fair, when, from its remains, he established the present museum in Golden Gate Park. With that as a nucleus, he has been working indefatigably ever since to increase the attractive exhibits from the best available sources. Recently, Mr. M. H. de Young has added still more largely to the collection with generous purchases of rare works of French and Italian art.

Shoals of new contributions to this excellent exhibit are coming in weekly, artists and patrons evidently striving to make it the greatest success possible. Among the recent exhibit provided by leading local artists for this excellent stimulus to higher endeavor are the pictures of a number of cherubic infants that Mary Curtis Richardson does so ideally, several characteristic woodland scenes from Keith's magic brush, "Windblown Pines" by Bertha Stringer Lee, Matteo Sadona's striking portrait of the sculptor, Leo Lentelli; "Mother and Child," and "October," by John A. Stanton; "The Mirror," a striking contribution by Frank Van Sloan; an illustration of modern coloring in Lee Randolph's "Footbridge in France;" two brilliant pastels by A. Sheldon Penoyer; De Neale Morgan's carefully handled Monterey landscape; a number of Maynard Dixon's famous desert scenes, with their characteristic atmosphere; C. H. Grant's "Breaking Storm;" Charles Rollo Peters' sterling new canvas, "San Juan Capistrano," which has been given to the Memorial museum by Mrs. Paul Brion, and several of his famous moonlight scenes; C. D. Robinson's noble canvas depicting the "Crest of the Sierras," a portrait in the best style of Orrin Peck; several of Cadenasso's vivifying and sympathetic forest studies; Walter Francis with a cleverly handled shipping scene on Mission Creek; H. W. Seawell's "Golden Gate;" G. Piazzoni's fine realization of the placid calm of the California Foothills. Harry A. Law has added a rich decorative bit in his "Inglewood Autumn," and excellent characteristic showings of their individual work are made by Theodore Wores, Arthur Matthews, M. A. Breuner, Amadee Jouillin, Genevieve Rixford Sargent, W. S. Rice, Xavier Martinez, C. Chapel Judson, R. L. Partington, Wm. Hutachek, Chris Jorgensen, C. D. Robinson, E. W. Christmas, Will Sparks, Hanson Putthuff, and a score of other masters of oils and brush.

Aside from this wide and attractive selections of notable canvases by local artists, there are qualities of art treasures exemplifying artistic development in other lines, sculpture, mosaics, bronzes, miniatures, royal Chinese cloisonne from the Imperial Palace of Peking, Italian majolica of exquisite form and coloring, ancient armor, ceramics old Japanese prints and oil paintings on silk, antique and colonial jewelry, ancient forms of silverware, medallions and other like lines, all stimulating to those possessing fine emotions and aspirations for the beautiful and the ideal.

Dr. Morris Herzstein has enriched the museum with a "Joan D'Arc" in Carrara marble by the Italian sculptor, Raffaele Romanelli, "Cleopatra," and the bronze "Flying Mercury," the latter by Gian. Boglona. Mrs. D. F. Allison has donated a perfect suit of French armor of the 15th century.

Though the exhibit was planned to show only the work of California artists, an exception has been made in order to afford the public an opportunity to view some of the notable works of art that were purchased by San Franciscans at the Exposition. The latter exhibits are placed in the galleries. In contributions of this character for the benefit of the public, Mr. M. H. de Young has proved to be an extraordinarily generous contributor. His collection is of exquisite merit and of rarely discriminating variety. Many of his finest bronzes Mr. de Young has already given to the museum. Among them are the two bronze "Greek Runners," prominent at the Exposition, and the bronze "Mercury in Repose." In another group of ten bronzes which he donated is Donatello's famous "David," the greatly admired "David" of Verrochio, two "Gazelles," one of the celebrated "Dancing Girls" from Herculaneum, the "Discus Thrower," from the Capitoline, the "Praying Boy," "Venus With the Sword of Mars," the "Athlete" and the striking group, "The Rape of Polyxena." In another notable set are "Love and the Dolphin," a fountain group that attracted great attention in the Italian building at the Exposition, and two "Centaur's." Mr. de Young has also installed for exhibit some wonderful pieces of cloisonne from the Imperial Palace of Peking, and Pompeian bronzes, including wonderful vases, jars, masks, unique candelabra, musical and architectural instruments and tripods, together with wonderful samples of ceramics and medallions, the latter by Luca della Robbia, Michael Angelo's "Angel with the Candelabra," vases in the Savona, Deruri and Venetian styles, and those of majolica make of the 16th century, together with a notable collection of famous busts of notables of the past.

—The Sunday Dansant Club at Techau Tavern is greatly appreciated by an ever increasing membership of those who enjoy a certain exclusiveness which this Club, with its own quarters on the mezzanine floor, affords. Dances are held in the Colonial Ball Room, and dinner is served, to members only, in the Club's quarters, at $1.50 a plate. The management and stockholders of Techau Tavern are about to open a magnificent ice skating rink in the quarters now occupied by the Arcadia Dancing Pavilion at the corner of Eddy and Jones streets. The skating surface will be 125 feet square and ample seating capacity will be provided for spectators. Professional skaters of note will be brought from New York, including instructors who will teach the plain and fancy skating every morning. This new rink is large enough to accommodate the public, and fills an immediate and strong demand of devotees to this popular sport.

R. B. Hayden

STRAIGHT
Bourbon

CHARLES MEINECKE & Co.

AGENTS PACIFIC COAST 314 SACRAMENTO ST., S. F.

San Francisco society is looking forward to the promised visits of the Alfred Vanderbilts. They have taken the William Miller Graham house in Santa Barbara for three months, and plan to come up to Burlingame several times during their stay in California. A friend in Santa Barbara, who is in the "know," writes me that Mrs. Vanderbilt feels that she was very thoroughly "done" by the Grahams, via their agent, and that her feeling in the matter is very apt to react against the ambitious New York plans Mrs. Graham entertains for her daughter. Those who know her declare that Mrs. "Freddy" has the Vanderbilt thrift, plus, when it comes to making terms, and would never have paid $3,000 a month for the Graham place if she had seen it before closing the deal. She has no hesitancy in saying that things were misrepresented to her, but now that the weather is in softer mood and the days and nights down there are perfect raptures, she will probably feel less bitter.

When the Vanderbilts arrived, the skies were leaking, and so was the house, and both kept at the job with a persistency that defied prayers and plumbers. The house is more decorative than substantial, and while the Grahams have spent a great deal of money on the place, the recent years have taken toll on the shabby construction of the building. Santa Barbara is beginning to regard the house as a piece of Montecito cast-off finery, driving visitors by at a speed which enables them to just get the general effect of the place, without itemizing the flaws. So there was general astonishment down there when it was known that the "Freddy" Vanderbilts had leased it for $3,000 a month, and three months at that.

Meanwhile, blessings on the fearless head of the agent who brought the Vanderbilts to these parts. Mrs. Alva Astor, the first wife of the late John Jacob Astor, is likewise talking of spending a month or two out here, and the rumor is given substance by the presence of Captain Rupert Higgins, the dashing British officer, who has set his helmet of ivory and silver for the vivacious and be-millioned widow. Captain Higgins spent last week in San Francisco, and is now in Santa Barbara, where he has announced that he will make his headquarters for the spring. So the gossips regard Mrs. Astor's coming as a certainty, for they do not believe the Captain would conduct his wooing by long distance, the propinquity method being more strategic.

One of the Santa Barbara belles, a New York girl, who has spent the winter there with her mother, created a sensation on the veranda of the Country Club the other day by asking Captain Higgins what would happen to England if all the officers were made of pasteboard and gilt, and went gallivanting off, putting an ocean between their carefully tailored persons and the trenches. The Captain answered: "I say, that'sh a bit rough!" turned on his heel and walked off, leaving the honors, it must be admitted, to Miss Impertinence.

Recent visitors to New York bring back a rumor, so strong that it is able to sit bolt upright and defy incredulity, to the effect that Clarence Mackay is regarded as the successful suitor of Mrs. Madeline Force-Astor, the girl-wife of the victim of the Titanic disaster. It's not altogether easy to remember in just which bouquet to place the various astors, so if Mrs. Astor I becomes Mrs. Higgins, and Mrs. Astor II takes the good old California name of Mackay, it will not be nearly such a tax on the world in general.

Mme. Melba has set a standard in generosity which the High and Mightinesses will find it difficult to follow. The things that she has done for people great and small are the talk of the peninsula set. For example, a number of years ago the great diva met "Jerry" Landfield, and a pleasant friendship has existed between the two ever since. Mrs. Landfield belongs to a Royal Russian family, and wore the title of Princess until she chose to marry the young American attache in Petrograd. Mme. Melba, it so happened, had likewise met her during one of her tours of Russia, so one of the pleasantest acquaintances which the great singer renewed on her visit here was with the Landfields. The other day she rang them up, and said that she was sending around a little gift which she thought they would find a great convenience—the little gift proved to be a stunning automobile.

Sunday, February 27th, has been selected for loosing the beagle pack that Mrs. Fred Kohl and Frank Carolan have imported from the East. The dogs are already straining at the leashes; the women are anxious to don the new sports clothes that they have had made for the occasion; and the men are anxious to have a try at this new diversion. About three hundred have signified their intention of beagling, and the first hunt will bring out the full number, even if some of the less nimble heeled do drop out as the novelty wears off. Society rode to hounds and paper chased for several seasons, but it has never followed the dogs on foot, so it will be a survival of the fittest pedestrians, as far as the human element in the game is concerned. As for the squirrels and rabbits and other quarry, if these beagles live up to their Virginia reputation, there won't be any survival at all!

The wedding of Miss Dorothy Baker and Dr. George Willcutt was celebrated on Wednesday night at Trinity Church, and brought out the most representative gathering of the old California families that has been seen in many a moon. It is seldom that a ceremony unites two families so deep-rooted for several generations in the social life of the city. The wedding party likewise linked back to the social life of old San Francisco, the representatives of this generation in all the bridal regalia recalling the days when their mothers took part in similar ceremonies. Miss Marion Baker, the young daughter of the bride's step-brother, was the maid of honor, and the bridesmaids included the Misses Gertrude Thomas, Elva de Pue, Mauricia Mintzer and Myra Treat. Two young cousins, the Misses Kate Darragh and Louise Stone, acted as flower girls.

After the church ceremony an elaborate wedding supper was served at the Century Club, only the members of the two families, their nearest connections and the bridal party, attending this, but so many were the connections that almost a hundred people sat down to the wedding supper.

One of the significant straws that show which way the economic-independence wind is blowing has been demonstrated by the business venture of Mrs. George Garritt, Mrs. Macondray Moore and Mrs. Harry McAfee, the young protegee of Mrs. Francis Carolan's. For several years it has been an accepted fact that it was far more praiseworthy for a woman who had no male to support her, to go out and become economically independent, rather than gather in scant crumbs from the tables of wealthy friends. But it is only recently that society has been introduced to the newer angle of the problem—the married woman who desires to take or to keep her profession, as the case may be. For example, when Miss Lucy Page-Brown confided to her relatives that she was going to marry the young architect who had won her heart while she was a pupil at the New York School of Design, her family remonstrated with her, presenting the usual arguments, capping their objections with a reminder that she had spent years in preparation for a career, and was going to give it up without a trial. But she had no intention of giving it up, she announced. She belonged to the ultra modern group that believes that a married woman need not give up her profession when she sets sail on the sea of matrimony.

In this she was upheld by the fairy-godmother of her family—Mrs. Carolan—and that settled the matter. The young people were not made to wait until he had written his name on the halls of Fame with a corresponding bank book. With the social sponsoring that Mrs. McAfee will have, she is sure to be a success, and Mrs. Garritt and Mrs. Moore likewise command the good-will of the most exclusive set, so the Goddess of Success is bound to spread her wings over the new venture.

Not
Gray
Hairs
but tired
Eyes
Make us look older than we are.
Old age
and Dull
Eyes—
tell-tale.

Don't Tell
Your age

After the Movies
go home
and Murine
your Eyes.
Two
Drops
will rest,
refresh
and cleanse.
Have it
handy.

Murine Eye Remedy Company, Chicago, Sends Book of the Eye upon request.

Fanciful Costumes for Mardi Gras Ball.

The masculine element of the pageant for the Mardi Gras, which is to take place at the Palace Hotel on the evening of March 7th for the benefit of the Children's Hospital, will be just as fanciful and as attractive as the feminine part in it, judging from the drawings made by Edgar Walter of the costumes. The attendants to the eight dainty flower fairies will impersonate the little wild creatures of the garden. There will be two lady-bugs, two beetles, two crickets and two bull-frogs, the parts to be sustained by Messrs. George Bowles, William Leib, Nion Tucker, Kenneth Moore, Fred Tillmann, Robin Y. Hayne, Heine von Schroder and William Parrott. Stanford Gwin, who is to be king of the court, will wear a dragon fly costume.

The Lotos Queen, Mrs. Charles Templeton Crocker, will wear a gown of lotus petals, and she will be drawn into court on a golden lotus throne. Her attendants will be Mesdames Rudolph Schilling, Talbot Walker, J. Cheever Cowdin, Samuel Hopkins, the Misses Marion Zeile, Marian Newhall and Gertrude Hopkins, who will take the parts of a fuchsia, a jonquil, a daisy, a nasturtium, a bluebell, a larkspur, a rod rambler rose and a forget-me-not. The court will be a wild, moonlit garden with canopy of fruit blooms, wistaria and acacia, with the green turf underfoot and moonbeams from a great round moon filtering through the branches of deodars and pines. The pageant is under the direction of Edgar Walter.

Those who have subscribed to boxes for the evening and who will entertain at dinner and supper parties are: Messrs. and Mesdames James L. Flood, William B. Thomas, Talbot Walker, Cyrus Walker, John McMullin, E. S. Heller, Selah Chamberlain, Webster Jones, Charles Templeton Crocker, Frank Proctor, Andrew Welch, M. H. de Young, E. W. Hopkins, John F. Merrill, George A. Pope, C. O. G. Miller, Herman Levy, Daniel C. Jackling, Henry T. Scott, Samuel Knight, George Almer Newhall, Francis Carolan, Cuyler Lee, Joseph A. Donohoe, Marcus Koshland, Abraham Hart, I. N. Walter, William Hart, Francis Davis, Sigmund Stern, John Buck, George MacGowan, Seward McNear, Adolph Spreckels, Fred Talbot, William H. Crocker, Rudolph Spreckels, Daniel T. Murphy, Eugene Lent, Charles W. Clark, Mesdames William G. Irwin, Eleanor Martin, Helen Hecht, Russell Wilson, Henriette Zeile, Dr. Herbert Law, Dr. George Lyman and William A. Lange.

Delightful Program for Revue des Modes.

The program for the Revue des Modes, which is to take place at the Scottish Rite Auditorium on the evenings of March 1st and 2d, for the benefit of the Free Kitchens for Nursing Mothers in France, has been augmented by a number of vaudeville "stunts" by local talent, adding to the interest of the Revue, which promises to be one of the brilliant events of the closing season. Instead of introducing the tableaux portraying the modes by a monologue with a "compere," it has been decided to create a dialogue with both a "Commere" and a "Compere," the parts to be maintained by Mrs. Ethel Hager and Mr. Roy Folger. Joseph D. Redding has written the sketch, and it is immensely clever. Miss Dorothy Churchill, a charming member of the younger set, who has a beautiful contralto voice, will sing a solo with violin obligato. Daniel MacIntyre Walker will dance an Oriental fantasy in imitation of Nijinsky. He will wear a Loon Bakst costume after the manner of the Russian ballet. Mrs. Arthur Lewin, who studied with Rochanara, will give the Kashmiri incense dance. The tableaux vivants will be posed by members of the smart set, the following having consented to act as models: Mesdames William C. Duncan, Jean Gallois, Willard Drown, Andrew Welch, Abe Stern, Juanita Huse, James C. Eaves, Alanson Weeks, E. Clinton La Montagne, Edgar Sinsheimer, Julain Hart, Edgar Peixotto, Misses Gertrude Hopkins, Ruth Perkins, Phyllis de Young, Ethel Crocker, Helen Crocker, Marita Rossi, Coralie Majai, Helen Hamilton, Dorothy Churchill, Marie Hathaway, Leslie Miller, Einnim McNear, Leslie Miller and Viola Page.

Events in the Paul Elder Gallery.—"Rhythm as Found in Nature and in Pictures" is to be the subject of the lecture by Eugen Neuhaus, in his course on "Painters, Pictures and the Public" for Tuesday afternoon, February 22d, at 3 o'clock. The lecture will be given in the Paul Elder Gallery, 239 Grant avenue, San Francisco. Leo Cooper will continue his Interpretative Readings from the Modern Drama on Wednesday forenoons at 10:45 o'clock. On February 23d he will read "Midchannel," by Pinero.

Recently, Mrs. George William Whitney was hostess at a tea in the Hotel Oakland, honoring Mrs. George Allen Sweet. Her guests were Mrs. Henry Clay Taft, Mrs. John J. Valentine, Mrs. Robert S. Phelps, Mrs. E. B. Beck, Mrs. George E. Whitney, Mrs. E. H. Marwedel, Mrs. Benjamin Grant Beadshaw, Mrs. Charles Tripler Hutchinson, Miss Crissie Taft, Miss Edith Selby, Miss Edith Beck, Miss Phelps, Miss Elsie Marwedel.

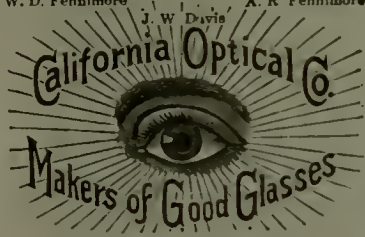

A great crowd is expected for the eighth annual Midwinter Golf Tournament, February 19-22. Preparations are going on for the Leap Year Mask Dance the closing night of the tournament. A costumer from San Francisco is to come down with a complete supply of all kinds.

—As the season advances, it becomes more and more manifest that discriminating shoppers are exercising keener judgment in making their selections in millinery because of the exuberance displayed both in stocks and variety. A safeguard in this respect is to patronize a shop with a well-earned reputation for regularly carrying in stock the best of the season's models to be had, both in smart design and quality of material. Magnus, the well known milliner at 178 Geary street, is recognized by the best shoppers of the bay county towns as the ideal establishment in San Francisco which furnishes strictly model millinery at popular prices, saving the buyer from $3 to $15 on each hat. His new spring models, now being shown, are distinguished by their individual modishness and smartness. His stock of high class millinery covers the best artistic designs to be had, and patrons find peace and comfort in the fact that they can so readily find "just what they want" in the ample selection furnished by Magnus.

PASSING OF WILLIAM F. OHM.

William F. Ohm, sales manager of the big house of Blake, Moffitt & Towne, wholesale dealers in paper, and for thirty-five years in their employ, passed away recently at his home in this city after a three months' illness. He was fifty years old, and leaves a widow and three children and a host of friends who highly appreciated his sterling qualities.

—Chas. H. Victor, who is lecturing at University of California on business organization and efficiency, will address the Business Men's Efficiency Club at the Palace Hotel next Monday noon, February 21st, on "Efficiency in Salesmanship." Another address will be given by Miss Bessie Beaty of the Bulletin on "Success in Newspaper Work." The meeting, which will be open to the public, will begin at 12:15 o'clock, and lunch will be served.

W. D. Fennimore	J. W. Davis	A. R. Fennimore	HOW WE HAVE "REBUILT" EYES Rebuilt automobiles and typewriters are common nowadays, but rebuilt eyes are something new. Two pairs of glasses are a sign of age when you need different glasses for reading and distance use. It means your eyes are not as young as they were once. Now come the "Caltex Oneplex" bifocals to make your eyes young again, to rebuild them, as it were. With the wonderful "Caltex" double vision lenses only one pair of glasses are needed. Reading and distance corrections are combined in one lens and have the appearance of regular glasses.
 California Optical Co. Makers of Good Glasses
181 Post Street } 2508 Mission St. } San Francisco 1221 Broadway, Oakland

Gouraud's Oriental Cream
A liquid powder for the complexion that will remain unnoticed on the skin—superior to dry powders.
AT DRUGGISTS AND DEPARTMENT STORES

 GOODYEAR RUBBER CO. HIPPO TRADE MARK	The best and strongest Garden Hose Guaranteed to stand 700 lbs. Pressure Try it and Be Convinced
GOODYEAR RUBBER COMPANY R. H. PEASE, President 589-591-593 Market Street San Francisco

The hard-riding Del Monte Polo Team, which recently defeated the Army on the Del Monte polo field. From left to right, the players are: Harry Hastings, George Parsons, Ray Splivalo, Will Tevis. Much interest is being shown by society and other followers of the sport in the revival of polo by the Del Monte management. A number of ponies will be kept for hire, so that visiting poloists may be accommodated.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES

By OUTSIDER

"Outsiders see most of the game."—Old Saw.

Five Yale athletic stars have been barred by the executive committee of the Yale Athletic Association from playing this year. The athletes are: Captain Milburn of the baseball team; Harry Legore, one of the greatest football players of the year and a baseball star; William Easton, Spencer Pumpelly and Robert Rhett of the baseball team. The charge is that they accepted free board for "summer baseball." What a splendid opportunity the ivory hunters of Africa would have if they transferred their activities to the governing bodies of college athletics, who make a college education look foolish by their silly rules and distinctions.

Yale has added the saber to its list of minor sports, and will meet Harvard in annual competition. I suppose there is not a chance for a Yale athlete to be disbarred for accepting free board for "summer sabering."

Jess Willard is reported as having bought a home in Chicago. The Windy City certainly is a fitting residence for this hot air athlete.

The Oregon Aggies are scheduled to play University of Southern California on Thanksgiving Day. Is Berkeley no longer even a way station on the football map?

The curtailment of boxing has brought wrestling to the fore again, and in New York there are matches nightly among an international quintette of matmen. There are a fresh lot of boobs developed with each generation, but those who remember the hippodromes pulled off in the days of Clarence Whistler and Billy Muldoon would hardly fall for the old stuff. By the way, any game is in pretty bad shape when it is necessary to introduce such bunk as a "Masked Marvel." There is one performing nightly in the New York Hippodrome, and it was through him that the exquisite idea arose to spring an M. M. in local boxing circles. However, George Pappas, the local heavy-weight, put the "mar" in the Marvel when he mussed him up at the Association Club last Monday evening.

In local golfing circles Harry Davis is reported weekly as having a "come back." There is no doubt that Harry is back again, but whether it is coming or going remains for the first general tournament to show. However, when he is going right there is no local golfer that can touch him. A match between him and Douglas Grant would be well worth seeing, although as a rule a golf contest is about as exciting as playing poker for beans.

Douglas Grant, who was acclaimed in England as one of the most promising players in the United Kingdom, recently took the great Jimmy Braid, the only man in the world to dispute Vardon's supremacy, to the eighteenth hole for a decision.

Prince Henry, third son of King George, ran fourth in the mile at the Eton sports. An inconspicuous lad named Rice took first in 4:54, good time for a school boy race. And yet there are some who think that England is not a democratic country.

There is a rumor to the effect that the special train proposed by the California Golf Association to fetch the players for the Del Monte tournament will not be accepted by the W. G. A. Come to think of it, why should we send a special train anyway? A trip to California ought to be enough inducement for the amateur golfer without having his expenses paid. Chick Evans and the other stars—writers and golfers—will be taken care of in any event.

W. J. Travis, the grand old man of golf, came back and won the qualifying round of the South Florida golf championship last week. The field was large and comprised some of the best of the metropolitan talent. The ex-national champion returned a 71.

Wedding Presents.—The choicest variety to select from at Marsh's, who is now permanently located at Post and Powell streets.

Dr. Byron Haines, Dentist, has resumed practice at his office in Gunst Building, S. W. corner Geary and Powell streets.

MELLOW AS MOONLIGHT
CASCADE
For your HI-BALL today

The finest, purest and mellowest whisky that brains and money can produce, cost to you no more than inferior grades; so why not ask for and insist on getting CASCADE.

Instead of saying whisky, just say CASCADE, you will enjoy it and feel much better.

Special enjoyable drink recipes for the asking by writing
J. H. Norton, care San Francisco News Letter

PLEASURE'S WAND

"Obey no wand but Pleasure's."—Tom Moore.

Gertrude Hoffman and company in "Sumurun," next week at the Orpheum.

Happy Hits at the Orpheum.

Eddie Cantor and Al Lee follow right after the overture on this week's programme. They have a mixture of nonsense and patter, with some eccentric dancing for good measure. They are funny chaps with a real sense of humor. Brandon Hurst, an actor with a very good reputation, who has done some very clever things in the past, presents himself in an episode in two scenes, written by that versatile vaudeville writer, Edward Pele—and entitled "The Girl." The element of intense interest is maintained from the beginning, and works up in a logical manner to a very surprising finish. The act is unusually well written, and fits the personality of Hurst in a most excellent manner. William Lee as the boy does an excellent piece of acting. The role of the butler, to me, strikes a false note in the little play, and is incorporated solely with the idea of provoking comedy, really not essential in an act of this kind. James Tooney and Annette Norman made such an impression here a couple of weeks ago that they are brought back for a brief return visit, and again do their melange of fun and dancing.

Bessie Clayton, than whom we have no finer exponent of toe dancing in this country, brings a splendid act, in which, with her capable partner, Lester Sheehan, they illustrate the dances of yesterday and to-day and to-morrow. No little success of the act is due the Clayton sextette of instrumentalists, who certainly manage to keep things lively. Tom Smith and Ralph Austin have one of those acts which combine a little singing, a little dancing, and a great deal of pure, unadulterated, out-and-out fun. These chaps have a style all their own, and are quite original. Billy McDermott does a tramp act a little different from others, and his jokes are all new. McDermott has a fine tenor voice, which he purposely mangles. I'd like to see him use it in a legitimate manner. Joseph Howard, the composer, is here again, and brings with him a partner in the person of Ethel Clark, who made a great big hit. She is very pretty, and has decided charm of manner, and can sing and dance well; she also dresses in several ravishing frocks. Some of Howard's songs are the kind which will never die. They are a great treat.

Nikolai Sokoloff

Nikolai Sokoloff, the distinguished Russian violinist, assisting artist at Maude Fay's recital to-night.

He has a baritone voice of excellent quality. Their act goes tremendously well. The Five Kitamuras do some fine athletic feats. Tommy Kitamura is undoubtedly the greatest risley performer who has ever visited here. It's a splendid bill all through.

* * *

"On Trial" Scores Big at Alcazar.

The "On Trial" performances at the Alcazar brings to the front in a decided manner little Ruth Ormsby, a San Francisco youngster, who in this play registers the greatest hit of her short career. At the end of her big scene she secures through her own efforts the greatest number of curtain calls of the entire evening. She does great work. Incidentally, a word of praise for Addison Pitt for the masterly way in which he staged this great performance and production in the short space of a week. Mr. Lytell and Miss Vaughan and their able associates registered one of the greatest hits in the history of the Alcazar in this play. It is a great performance all through. Don't miss it.

PAUL GERSON.

* * *

Pantages Uncorks Lively Stunts.

A riotous scream hits Pantages this week when the lively girls and comedians in the musical comedy skit, "In Mexico," turn loose with their cornucopia of fun, frolic and nonsense. Comedian Alf Goulding materializes laughs by simply standing still and looking serious; he is one of those fun-makers that give his fellow actors the giggles. It's a 'slam-bang' twenty minute sketch that works the high gear on laughs during every second of the time. O'Neil and Walmsley are a capital and original patter team that exchange jokes, quips, conundrums and surprises at a rate that rivals anything done by the gatling guns of the belligerents. They have an original method all their own, and make a bull's-eye hit which is garlanded with insistent recalls. A very cheerful singer of exceedingly cheerful songs is Dorothy Vaughn, with a sweet voice, plump figure and a provocative eye that chastely sweetens any suggestions in her capital songs. The playlet of the evening, "Ten Years After," developed on the lines of the new idea introduced by "On Trial," wherein, after a statement of an action made by one of the players, the curtain is dropped, and on its rise the action mentioned is enacted. In the triangle of "Ten Years After" the wife enacts the scene when she was a stenographer and her employer deceived her into a mock marriage. On the rise of the curtain the husband is about to shoot this man who is again pursuing his wife. He relents on realizing that such vengeance will bring disgrace on his wife, and the betrayer slinks away. It is a strong situation, well handled. George H. Ford, late star of "The Soul Kiss," contributed a revue of his best songs and recitations, and Peggy Bremen and her brother introduced some clever new stunts of novelty feats while balancing themselves on upraised ladders kept busily moving about the stage. A competitive contest between two crews in assembling two makes of automobiles occasioned lively interest, the wheels being turned by the gasoline power in about 150 seconds. The film depicting the ninth episode in that sterling sensational reel, "The Red Circle," is given.

* * *

La Belle Toledo Makes Hit at Overseas Club.

Last Tuesday night a benefit entertainment and dance was given by the Overseas Club for the benefit of the British Red Cross. Miss Clara Alexander had charge of the event. A programme introducing the clever farce, "Object—Matrimony," was produced with skill. In the cast were Thomas Nunan, Mrs. George Uhl, F. D. Brandon, Dr. C. B. Root, Ray Polk and Miss Clara Alexander in her faithful portrayal of Melinda.

The feature of the evening was the performance of a beautiful young Spanish artiste, La Belle Toledo, in song and dance. This was Miss Toledo's first appearance in San Francisco, and her success was enthusiastically acclaimed. In her dancing she expresses the very soul of Spain, the meeting of the East and the West. The Oriental mysticism and sensuousness is harmoniously blended with the technique and rhythmic sprightliness which is associated with France. It is this plastic presentation of the emotions which lifts the dance from being a mere spectacle into the realm of a fine art. It is to be hoped that our local audiences will have further opportunities to see and hear La Belle.

Mrs. Reginald Brooks, the Anglo-California mezzo-soprano,

La Belle Toledo, beautiful young Spanish artiste, at the Overseas Club Entertainment gave a group of songs; Tania Akounine, baby danseuse of the Exposition, danced; La Belle Toledo, the Spanish vocalist, gave songs and dances; Mrs. George Uhl recited a number of poems. Senor Emilio Gonzales and Jose Arias presented a group of Spanish folk songs and dances. Roy Folger of the Bohemian Club gave monologues; John Mahan of the Family Club gave a number of his famous Irish songs. Miss Gertrude Morrison was the accompanist of the evening. Dancing concluded the entertainment.

* * *

ADVANCE ANNOUNCEMENTS

Gertrude Hoffman Comes to Orpheum with Great Play.—The famous Gertrude Hoffman comes to the Orpheum next Sunday matinee for a two weeks' engagement, during which she will present Max Reinhardt's "Sumurun," a wordless play in eight scenes, adapted from "The Arabian Nights." It is without doubt the most stupendous, sumptuous and extravagant production ever witnessed in vaudeville, and Miss Hoffman, who appears as the beautiful slave of the Hunchback's Theatre, will have the support of a company of sixty artists of ability, whose efforts will be enhanced by costly and superb Oriental scenery and costumes and a considerably augmented orchestra. "Sumurun" was first produced by Professor Reinhardt at the Kammer-spieler or Chamber Theatre, Berlin, but the immediate sensation it created caused its transfer to his greater Deutsches Theatre, where it ran over a year. Then the company was taken to London, and "Sumurun," in the present somewhat shortened vaudeville version lasting an hour, crowded the huge Coliseum Theatre there for two seasons. Then it was played for a long supplementary season at the Savoy Theatre. After that followed the engagement at the Casino Theatre, New York, where "Sumurun," under the direction of Winthrop Ames, scored the hit of the year.

The Langdons—Rose, Harry and James—will introduce a screamingly funny act, called "Kidding and Skidding in Johnny's New Car." The Olga and Mishka Company will appear in a series of classic and modern dances. Mlle. Olga comes from the Imperial Opera House, Petrograd, and her dancing is grace beyond compare. Her partner, Eugene Santo, is also famous for his terpsichorean ability. Corelli and Gillette exhibit as much brains in their comedy work as they do control of music in their acrobatic evolutions. "The Odd Pair," as they bill themselves, furnish what is known as a dumb act. Caliste Conant, who styles herself "A Tuneful Tale Teller," in reality enacts characterizations to a musical accompaniment provided by herself at the piano. The other acts will be Tom Smith and Ralph Austin in their "All Fun" skit, and Brandon Hurst and his company in the sensational comedy, "The Girl." The eighth installment of the Uncle Sam at Work motion picture, entitled "Fisherman, Postman and Health Officer," serve as a finale.

* * *

Maude Fay in Song Recital To-night.—Maude Fay, the California girl, sister of Postmaster Charles W. Fay, leading dramatic soprano of the Royal Opera, Munich, the Theatre de la Monnaie, Brussels; Covent Garden, London; and but recently engaged for leading dramatic soprano roles at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, will, assisted by Nikolai Sokoloff, the distinguished Russian violinist, and Gyula Ormay, the accompanist, be heard in song recital at Scottish Rite Auditorium, Van Ness at Sutter street, this Saturday night, February 19th, at 8:30 p. m., and not Monday, February 28th, as was previously announced. Owing to demand made by the management of the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, it is necessary that Miss Fay cancel all her concert bookings on the Pacific Coast, and report immediately in New York. Sold-out houses awaited Miss Fay next week in San Jose and Los Angeles, but she must confine all California appearances, until her return from Europe next season, to those with the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, Friday and Sunday afternoons, and her Saturday night song recital. Monday morning will find Miss Fay en route to New York and the Metropolitan, the scene of her next conquests. Tickets for Miss Fay's concerts are on sale at the box office at Sherman, Clay & Co., and the prices are $2.50, $2, $1.50. Admission $1. Boxes seating six, $20.

* * *

Program of Sixth Symphony Concert.—With Maude Fay, leading dramatic soprano of the Royal Opera, Munich; Covent Garden, London; Theatre de la Monnaie, Brussels, and but recently engaged for leading dramatic soprano roles at the Metropolitan Opera House, as assisting artist, the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, Alfred Hertz, conductor, will give the sixth pair of symphony concerts of the current season at the Cort Theatre this Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock and this Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The house for Friday afternoon has for several days been sold out, and it behooves all who wish to be among those present when the wonderful program is repeated on Sunday afternoon, to hurry to the box office at Sherman, Clay & Co. Seats will be on sale Sunday at the box office of the Cort Theatre.

For the seventh pair of symphony concerts, which will be given at the Cort Theatre, Friday afternoon, February 25th, at 3 o'clock and Sunday afternoon, February 27th, at 2:30 o'clock sharp, the orchestra will have the assistance of Horace Britt, violoncellist, as soloist. Mr. Britt has appeared as soloist for the Lamoureux Orchestra, the Colonne Orchestra and the Royal Orchestras of Brussels and Antwerp. The prices for all of the remaining Sunday concerts, commencing with the seventh pair, will be 50 cents, 75 cents, $1, with $1.50 for the box and loge seats. Tickets are on sale at the box office of Sherman, Clay & Company, and the program for the seventh pair of concerts follows:

1. Overture to "Anacreon," Cherubini.
2. "Lied" for Violoncello, Vincent d'Indy, Horace Britt.
3. From Suite, "Ballet Scenes," Op. 54, Alex. Glazounow; (a) Oriental Dance; (b) Marionettes.
4. Prelude, "The Afternoon of a Faun," Debussy. Intermission.
5. Symphony No. 1, B flat major, Op. 28, R. Schumann.

* * *

The Famous Burton Holmes Travelogues at Columbia.—Burton Holmes, the most famous traveler and lecturer on travel, is sending his great combined travelogues to the Columbia Theatre for an engagement of one week, opening Sunday night, February 20th. The Travelogues will be given each afternoon at 3 o'clock and each evening at 8:15. He has arranged a combined program for the Columbia Theatre, and this arrangement for the week will bring out some wonderful films and interesting talks on "The Cliff Dwellers of Chicago and the Pueblos of New Mexico," "A Day With the Middies at Annapolis," "The Grand Canyon of the Colorado," "Western Australia," "Training for War at West Point," etc. Each subject will take up twenty minutes of the performance, which will be of two hours' duration. This is the twenty-third season of Burton Holmes' career in the field of his famous Travelogues, and he has brought his audiences genuine and original pictures in scenes where action was the keynote of interest and the talks of great value. Never before have these interesting Travelogues been given at the twenty-five cent scale of prices. A limited reserved seat section at 50 cents is being rapidly bought up for the evening Travelogues. All matinee seats will be 25 cents.

* * *

Clever Vaudeville at Pantages—"From Coney Island to the North Pole," a spectacular musical comedy, starring Arthur Lavine and a big company of comedians, will be a splendid attraction on the new bill at the Pantages next Sunday. The production is in three scenes, with an elaborate stage mounting, beautiful costumes and several mechanical specialties, including an aeroplane which is used for several effective chorus numbers. "Locked Out," a sparkling little comedy skit, will be presented by Ray Raymond and Florence Bain, a clever couple who were formerly favorites here with the old Tivoli Opera Company. Hanlon and Clifton have a musical and acrobatic offering which they term "The Unexpected," and the Valerie Sisters will present a swagger novelty displaying 1916 gowns and hat creations in their specialty, "Fun and Fashions." Greenlee and Drayton, a nimble footed duo of dusky hued funmakers; Arline, the gypsy violinist; and Le Roy and Paul, sensational horizontal bar comedians, will round out the other acts programmed. The tenth and most absorbing incident of the Pathe serial, "The Red Circle," will also be shown.

Columbia Theatre

Corner Mason and Geary Streets
Phone Franklin 150

The Leading Playhouse

One week, beginning SUNDAY NIGHT FEBRUARY 20. Every afternoon at 3. Every night at 8:15.

BURTON HOLMES TRAVELOGUES

In a great combined selection of motion pictures and talks. Two hours' programme includes "Cliff Dwellers of Chicago and New Mexico," "A Day at Annapolis," "The Grand Canyon of Colorado," "West Australia," "Training the Art of War at West Point," etc. Seats 25 cents. Limited reserved section 50 cents.

S. F. Symphony Orchestra

ALFRED HERTZ CONDUCTOR

CORT THEATRE—SUNDAY AT 2:30 P. M.

Soloist MAUDE FAY, Soprano.

Tickets—75c., $1, $1.50, $2, box and loge seats, $3. On sale at Sherman-Clay.

Seventh Pair of Symphony Concerts CORT, FRIDAY, FEB. 25, 3 p. m., and SUNDAY, FEB. 27, 3 p. m. Soloist—HORACE BRITT, Cellist. Prices—Friday, 75c. $1 $1.50, $2, box and loge seats, $1.50. Tickets on sale daily at the box offices of Sherman, Clay & Co., and Kohler & Chase, except on days of concerts, when after 1 p. m. on Friday and 10 a. m. on Sunday the tickets are on sale at the box office of the Cort Theatre.

Orpheum

O'Farrell Street Bet. Stockton and Powell
Phone Douglas 70

Week beginning THIS SUNDAY AFTERNOON. MATINEE EVERY DAY.

GERTRUDE HOFFMAN

And company of sixty in her greatest sensation, "SUMURUN," THE LANGDOONS, in "Johnny's New Car," OLGA & MISHKA CO., assisted by Eugene Santo in classic and modern dances, CORELLI and GILLETTE, "The Odd Pair," CALISTE CONANT Tuneful Tale Teller, TOM SMITH and RALPH ALSTIN, BRANDON HURST & CO. in the comedy, "The Girl," FISHERMAN, POSTMAN AND HEALTH OFFICER," and 8th installment of the Uncle Sam at Work Motion Picture.

Prices—10c., 25c., 50c., 75c. Phone Douglas 70

Scottish Rite Hall

FRANK W. HEALY, Manager announces SONG RECITAL OF MAUDE FAY Assisted by NIKOLAI SOKOLOFF

Distinguished Russian violinist, GYULA ORMAY at the piano. THIS SATURDAY, FEB. 19, 8:30 P. M. Seats and programmes at Sherman, Clay & Co.'s. Prices $2.50, $2, $1.50. Admission $1. Boxes seating six, $4. (Music & Hamilton piano used.)

Pantages' Theatre

Market Street Opposite Mason

Commencing Sunday afternoon, February 20th

EXTRAORDINARY VAUDEVILLE

ARTHUR LAVINE AND COMPANY, "FROM CONEY ISLAND TO THE NORTH POLE," RAYMOND & BAIN in "LOCKED OUT," VALERIE SISTERS, "FUN AND FASHIONS," HANLON & CLIFTON, "THE UNEXPECTED," A SPECTACULAR FLIGHT ACT, BILL AND ANITA

Little Talks on House Decorating

By Judd Shirley

In Black and White

Chintz lambrequin and curtains with stenciled shades; bungalow living room with window-seat.

Concerning Curtains, but Not a Curtain Lecture.

By their curtains ye shall know them is writ large in the gospel of good taste. Many a house wears its heart on its window-sleeve, and speaks loudly to the passer-by of its owner.

Just now there is a joyous deviation from the highroad of conventional curtaildom. A primrose path the curtains are dancing down, in the opinion of the staid, conventional decorator; but it is alluring!—done by just the right artist. But a word of caution: I beseech you do not attempt the daring and bizarre without the aid of a competent designer. A real artist it takes, one who knows how to juggle successfully with color and form, for it is a sort of wizardry. As well expect a medal picture from your three-year-old with his bundle of brushes and box of colors, as a success along these lines from a tyro or an amateur in decoration!

A quite fascinating example of the original and daring in curtain effects is to be seen in the Grant avenue studio of a successful young decorator, whose recent window embellishment in behalf of charity was so unique and thoroughly delightful that it successfully flagged the attention of even the rushed Christmas shopper, who halted to gaze upon the quaint little bouquets and garlands painted on the windows, and remained to buy the charming conceits within the little shops. I am giving it as an example because it so emphasizes the point of "caution" I have been making. In hands less capable to choose and subtly blend contrasting shades, one shudders to think of the possible result with such a color scheme; but the effect achieved by this decorator is unique, thoroughly Parisian, and most charming.

Running the full length of the cluster of large windows are four or five steps; these are covered, as is the studio floor, with a soft, rich, deep red carpeting. A lambrequin of dark color, toning in perfectly with the floor covering, hangs across the top of the grouped windows. At each end are heavy silk hangings, an exquisite shade of day-break pink; these fall over the steps and slightly sweep the floor. They are finished at the bottom with deep scallops. Within and next the delicate pink hangings are filmy curtains of the palest, silvery blue; these in turn flank curtains of blue and white striped material of the same gauzy texture, the blue in the striped fabric exactly matching the shade of its neighboring curtain.

Elaborate lace curtains, provided they are real, and appropriately placed, will always be used with good effect beneath velvet and heavy silk hangings in large, formal rooms or elaborate boudoirs. But in the average, conservative home, under the outer hangings, whether they are of velvet, silk or chintz, the simple nets, filets, or Scotch madras of dainty design are always in good taste, and the more simply made the better. The plain hem can scarcely be improved upon.

Apropos of the plain hem as a finish for an inside curtain, an exception may be made of the dotted muslin which seems as in keeping with the glazed English chintz—now so difficult to obtain because of the war—as does mint sauce with Spring lamb. These curtains are often finished with a narrow, hemmed ruffle, and are very attractive. While the English use the glazed chintz in their breakfast rooms, and even in informal living rooms, on this side of the water its use is ordinarily restricted to the bedroom, or perhaps a living room in a country house of the bungalow type. And nothing can be more charming for such a room. It was not new, neither are the unglazed linens and cottons, but it is always good. In fact, in the whole field of Interior Decorating but little is new, although a clever and original designer, through his ingenious manipulation may hoodwink us into thinking the opposite.

And speaking of things that are not new, but still desirable, the valance is still used extensively, the frilled one of linen or printed cotton restricted exclusively, however, to the bedroom, or a small house of the bungalow type, being superseded by the

Feed Your Baby Regularly

Regularity in feeding, sleeping, bathing and airing are of utmost importance at the beginning of your baby's life. It means so much to you in managing your household duties. It means so much to the little one in health and happiness.

Your baby should sleep well at night. If he does not the trouble is often with his food. If you are nursing the baby and your milk does not agree with him try the time-tried substitute that is made from clean, pure cows' milk—

Gail Borden
EAGLE BRAND
CONDENSED MILK
THE ORIGINAL

Three generations of careful mothers would tell you that they use "Eagle Brand," because it is pure, clean, uniform, easily digested, quickly prepared.

If you have never used "Eagle Brand" in cooking you have a happy surprise in store. It gives a delicious, rich flavor to your meal delicate cookery. Use it as you would fresh milk and sugar.

Send coupon today.
Borden's Condensed Milk Co.
"Leaders of Quality"
Est. 1857 New York

N. L. 2-16

Borden's Condensed Milk Co.
108 Hudson St., New York.

Please send me "Baby's Welfare"
Also "Baby's Biography" as well as
"Borden's Recipes."

Name _____
Address _____

straight or shaped one, usually called a lambrequin in the more formal room.

The outer hangings may just hide the bottom of the window trim; they may just escape the floor, or they may sweep it slightly, or considerably, and be "in good form"—it is a matter of personal preference. Whether it has anything to do with the maintaining of that eternal balance we are forever hearing about I haven't the least idea, but it is noticeable that as women's skirts have bid fair to shrink into kilties (and have nearly achieved it), our window curtains have threatened us with court trains.

The "view window."

And just one little word more while we are still talking "curtains"—about your "view window." If you are the lucky possessor of a fine view—frame it!—with neutral hangings made with a transverse cord, that they may be drawn at night when your very best possible bet in a picture has melted into the blue-black outer darkness. And omit inside curtains, even of the most cobweb-like texture, for they will give to that wonderful painting of nature the look of a landscape done in oils, and done for by a swathing of mosquito netting to keep it from being fly-specked.

Some Novel Cushions.

There is a certain firm of decorators on Sutter street where all sorts of attractive novelties are to be had. And when you glimpse its sofa and couch cushions, you know without being told that only women have to do with the shop. They are such jolly little cushions! Quite different from the kind we have been bolstering the achy place in our backs, and mussing up our coiffures with for the past year.

One of the new sofa cushions

Some are round and some are square, and some are long and narrow, and double up like saddle-bags. All are desirable and quaint, with their appliqued fruits and flowers, puckered on in such a remarkable way that they are realistic to a degree; I know I should be worrying about possible fruit stains on the back of my bodice if I were so fortunate as to own one—until I got used to it, that is.

The Little Shop Around the Corner.

Only this charming little shop on Post street, a studio, really, is up-stairs—several flights (there is an elevator), besides being around the corner. Before you enter the lobby of the building it is in and take the elevator, you come upon the wecest showcase, not the commonplace horizontal variety—a vertical one, glued to the side of the building. In this toy show case are the names of the firm, two names—each owning just a syllable apiece; and a striking bit of textile.

There is nothing unusual about the names, but there is about the fabric. You decide to investigate. You do; and are rewarded—amply, especially if you remember delightful hours spent browsing about in just such out-of-the-way little shops in Gotham; shops where rare brasses, quaint pieces of bric-a-brac, and textiles that are specially charming in design and color are to be found. And the young men who have collected all these attractive things were New Yorkers before they became San Franciscans. However, it is not necessary to be a Yankee to guess that. The atmosphere is unmistakable.

Lamps and Fixtures

that harmonize with their surroundings
Made of the new Metal Tapestry,
as softly colored as a fabric.
Indestructible

Especially charming in English chintz
pattern or in Oriental design.

THE PALMER SHOP
1345 Sutter Street

TYPICAL OF CALIFORNIA

PALACE HOTEL

Since 1875 the Historic Hotel of San Francisco
NEW MANAGEMENT NEW POLICY
European Plan Only. Rates from $2 per day upward.

FAIRMONT HOTEL
The Most Superbly Situated Hotel in the World.
Under Same Management.

Hotel St. Francis Announces the
Club Room Special
A Busy Man's Luncheon

Beginning January 10, 1916

50 Cents

Service From 11:30 to 2:00

HOTEL OAKLAND

OAKLAND, CALIFORNIA

Overlooking Lake Merritt and the Mountains

Ministering generously to the epicure, the artist, and the lover of a beautiful natural environment.

European Plan: From $1.50 a day up American Plan: From $3.50 a day up
Extraordinarily low rates to permanent guests
CARL SWORD, Manager

Novelties for "Welcoming" and
"Bon Voyage" Packages

Flowers Delivered to Any Part of
the World

SEND YOUR HOSTESS A DISTINCTIVE BOX OF FLOWERS
FROM JOSEPH'S FLORISTS
GRANT AVENUE, NEAR SUTTER STREET

NEW PARISIAN FRENCH LAUNDRY

Mme. C. La FON

First Class Work at Reasonable Prices

Laces and Lace Curtains a Specialty

Club, Restaurant and Hotel Service

991 OAK STREET
SAN FRANCISCO

Phone Park 4962

PILLSBURY'S PICTURES, INC
VIEWS OF CALIFORNIA

KODAK finishing done by EXPERTS. We will send for your films.

219 POWELL STREET Phone Kearny 3841

LOST.—Savings Pass Book, No. 21376, with Union Trust Company.
Finder will please return to the Bank, Market street and Grant avenue.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL ITEMS

ENGAGEMENTS.

BOARDMAN-COLE.—San Francisco society will be much interested in the engagement of Dr. Walter Boardman and Miss Elizabeth Cole of St. Paul. The news has been told within the past few days to the many friends of the bridegroom-to-be, following the formal announcement of the betrothal in the Eastern city. Miss Cole is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hady S. Cole, who are leaders in the social world of St. Paul. She will not come as a complete stranger in San Francisco on her marriage, as she has visited here several times.

WEDDINGS.

AYERS-MERRILL.—Miss Florence M. Ayers, daughter of Mrs. D. Ayers, 1558 Pacific avenue, Alameda, and Robert M. Merrill of Piedmont, former real estate broker of Oakland, were secretly married in Redwood City, Friday, according to announcements made by Mrs. Ayers this week. They are now on their wedding trip in the southern part of the State.

BAKER-WILLCUTT.—Two families for many decades prominent in the affairs of business and society in this city were united Thursday night in the marriage of Miss Dorothy Baker and Dr. George Mayes Willcutt, the ceremony taking place at Trinity Episcopal Church before an assemblage of friends that filled the church. After the ceremony, which was read by the Rev. Frederick W. Clampett, there was a small reception and a bridal supper at the Century Club, only the relatives and the bridal party being entertained here. Dr. and Mrs. Willcutt have a handsomely furnished apartment in the western part of town, where they will go to housekeeping when they return.

HARRISON-INGERSOLL.—Interesting to a wide circle is the news from New York of the marriage last Saturday at the Church of the Intercession of Miss Marjie L. Harrison and Colin Macrea Ingersoll, chief of the Department of Bridges in New York.

LUNCHEON.

BELL.—Mrs. Franklin Bell asked a group of friends to a luncheon given on Wednesday afternoon at her home at Fort Mason. The affair was arranged as a compliment to Mrs. Adna R. Chaffee, who came to San Francisco a few days ago.

BOTHIN.—Miss Genevieve Bothin presided over an attractive luncheon Wednesday at the Francisco Club.

CAMERON.—Mr. and Mrs. George T. Cameron had Miss Maud Fay as their guest of honor at a luncheon they gave Sunday at their home.

CLARKE.—Invitations have been issued by Mrs. Crawford Clarke for a luncheon to be given March 2d at her home in Presidio Terrace.

DARLING.—With Mrs. Hannah Neal Hobart as the honored guest, Mrs. Clara L. Darling presided at luncheon Wednesday afternoon at the Francisco Club.

EYRE.—Mrs. Perry Eyre was hostess at a luncheon Tuesday in honor of Mrs. William Howard, who is here from Boston, and of Mrs. Frederick Whitwell, Mrs. Howard's daughter, who arrived from the East a week or so ago.

HILL.—Mrs. Horace Hill complimented Mrs. Parker at a luncheon Wednesday at the Burlingame Country Club.

LOOMIS.—Mr. and Mrs. Francis E. Loomis were host and hostess Sunday at a luncheon which they gave at the Burlingame Club in honor of Madame Melba, who left that afternoon on a concert tour through Southern California.

LOOMIS.—Mr. and Mrs. Francis E. Loomis gave a luncheon Monday at the Burlingame Club, in honor of Mrs. Edith P. Corbin of Washington, D. C.

LOW.—Miss Flora Low had a few friends as guests at a luncheon party Wednesday in compliment to Mrs. Frederick Whitwell of Boston. It was at the home of Miss Eleanor Morgan, with whom Miss Low is spending the winter.

McMULLIN.—Mrs. John McMullin entertained at luncheon at the St. Francis Thursday. The complimented guest was her daughter, Mrs. E. B. Perrin, who arrived recently from Arizona for a brief visit in this city.

MOORE.—Miss Gertrude Thomas, the fiancée of Roger Bocqueraz, was the complimented guest at luncheon Tuesday afternoon by Mrs. Duval Moore. It took place at the Francisco Club.

ZEILE.—Miss Marion Zeile had some friends of Mrs. James Parker at a luncheon in her honor at the Hotel St. Francis.

SESNON.—Mrs. William T. Sesnon gave an Oriental luncheon Tuesday at her home in Ivisadero street in honor of Mrs. William Weir and Mrs. George Forderer. Seventeen were seated at the table, the other guests being former schoolmates of the hostess. At the conclusion of the luncheon Mrs. Sesnon delighted the assembly by giving a series of Oriental dances in a richly embroidered Persian costume.

STETSON.—Mrs. Harry Stetson was hostess at an informal luncheon Wednesday at her home in Burlingame.

VAN VORST.—Complimenting Mrs. Albert Rees, Miss Lillian Van Vorst entertained at luncheon Wednesday afternoon at her home on Vallejo street.

WELCH.—Mrs. Andrew Welch presided at a luncheon Wednesday at the St. Francis. The guests numbered sixty-five, and were mostly members of the Junior Board of the Catholic Humane Bureau.

DINNERS.

BABCOCK.—Mr. and Mrs. William Babcock were hosts at dinner recently at their home in San Rafael.

BOYD.—Miss Louise Boyd has issued invitations for a dinner to be given on the evening of Feb. 25th. Her guests will assemble at her home on Pacific avenue.

BREEDEN.—It was a veritable springtime party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Clarence Breeden in Burlingame Saturday evening, where nearly thirty guests assembled for dinner.

CARPENTER.—Captain and Mrs. Edward Carpenter were the honored guests at a dinner at which Mr. and Mrs. Horace Davis Pillsbury presided Thursday evening at their home in Pacific avenue.

COOPER.—Miss Dorothy Cooper was hostess at a dinner at her home in Taylor street Saturday evening before the Valentine Assembly of the Saturday Night Dances.

CORYELL.—Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Coryell entertained a number of friends recently at a dinner which they gave at their home in Menlo Park.

DEAN.—Their apartments at the Fairmont Hotel formed the setting for an informal dinner given Sunday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Dean. It was arranged in compliment to Miss Gertrude Thomas and her fiancé, Roger Bocqueraz.

DUTTON.—Mr. and Mrs. Henry Foster Dutton had the pleasure of having their friends at a handsome dinner party at their home on Saturday night.

FISKE.—Dr. and Mrs. C. N. Fiske entertained Monday evening at a Valentine dinner at their home at Mare Island, where Dr. Fiske is a navy surgeon.

HOLBROOK.—Mr. and Mrs. Harry Holbrook were dinner hosts Wednesday evening at their home on Pacific avenue.

MONTEAGLE.—Mrs. Monteagle will entertain the debutantes and their young cavaliers, about twenty-four in all, at a dinner at the Palace Hotel to-night.

McNEAR.—Mr. and Mrs. George W. McNear will be hosts this evening at a dinner at the Palace Hotel at the People's Palace dinner dance. Miss Gertrude Thomas and her fiancé, Roger Bocqueraz, will be the complimented guests.

McNEAR.—Mr. and Mrs. John McNear and Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Upham gave a dinner Tuesday evening at the McNear home in Washington street in compliment to Miss Peggy Fulton of Los Angeles, who is here visiting her aunt, Mrs. Frederick Kellogg.

PERKINS.—Members of the service set enjoyed the hospitality of Captain and Mrs. George Perkins at dinner Wednesday evening at their quarters at Fort Scott.

PILLSBURY.—Mr. and Mrs. Horace Davis Pillsbury were the hosts at dinner Tuesday evening at their residence on Pacific avenue. Miss Gertrude Thomas and her fiancé, Roger Bocqueraz, were the inspiration for the affair.

POPE.—Mr. and Mrs. George A. Pope will preside at dinner on the evening of February 25th at their home on Pacific avenue.

THORNE.—Mr. and Mrs. Julian Thorne presided at an informal dinner Monday evening, having a group of friends at their home on Broadway as a compliment to Miss Maud Fay.

TURNER.—Miss Ruth Haskell was the complimented guest at a dinner given Wednesday evening by her aunt, Mrs. Mary Turner, in her home at Mare Island. After the dinner party the guests attended the benefit production of "Alabama," which was produced by a group of the Navy coterie stationed on the island.

TEAS.

CONRAD.—Mrs. Barnaby Conrad gave a tea on Thursday in honor of her mother, Mrs. William Hunt, wife of Judge Hunt of Washington, D. C.

CROCKER.—One of the delightfully impromptu affairs that have enlivened the peninsula during the past few days was the tea given Sunday afternoon by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Templeton Crocker.

CROSBY.—Mrs. F. H. Crosby was hostess at a tea Monday at her home, 2315 Lake street, in honor of Mrs. Chaffee, Sr., who will return shortly to her Southern home.

MONTEAGLE.—Mrs. Louis F. Monteagle entertained at a tea Monday afternoon at her home in compliment to Lieutenant E. E. Pritchett, U. S. A., and Mrs. Pritchett, who arrived Sunday from the Philippines.

THE HOTEL PLAZA

overlooking the beautiful Plaza of Union Square, the Hotel of refinement and service, is offering special rates to permanent guests.

Hotel Plaza Company

FAN WYCK.—Mrs. Sidney Van Wyck, Jr., will preside at a tea to be given for Mrs. Hunt on the afternoon of February 23d. Her guests will assemble at her attractive home on Lyon street.

RECEPTIONS.

GOLDBERG. In honor of the engagement of Miss Rena Goldberg and Eric Gerson, announced last week, a reception was held Tuesday evening at the home of the parents of the bride-elect, 1782 Pacific avenue.

POWELL.—Mrs. Charles Fremont Pond, wife of Admiral Pond, was guest of honor at a reception Tuesday at the home of Mrs. R. E. Queen. Mrs. Pond is leaving soon to join Admiral Pond in the East.

DANCES.

ARGONAUT CLUB.—The Argonaut Club will give its annual dance and supper at the Fairmont Hotel this evening. There will be about four hundred guests.

RULOFSON.—Mrs. A. C. Rulofson will entertain this evening at a children's dance at her home in West Clay Park in honor of her son and daughter, Kenneth and Carol.

SEQUOIA CLUB.—A leap year dance, preceded with dinner parties, will be given at the Sequoia Club on this evening. Mrs. Ella M. Sexton is arranging the affair.

SOUTHERN CLUB.—On the evening of March 14th a dance is to be given at the Southern Club on California street, as a benefit to aid the Florence Crittenden Home. There will be a number of prominent Southern women to act as hostesses. Invitations of the affair will be sent out shortly.

PARTIES.

CLARK.—Mrs. Crawford Clarke has sent out invitations for a bridge party to be given Tuesday afternoon, February 29th, in honor of Mrs. Lawrence Brown.

DICKSON.—Mrs. Frederick Dickson was hostess Monday at a bridge party at her home in San Rafael.

SAHM.—Mrs. Leo Sahn was hostess Saturday at a tea and bridge at her home at Mare Island.

THEATRE PARTIES.

TEVIS.—Miss Hannah Hobart was the honored guest at a theatre party and supper dance given Friday evening by Dr. Harry Tevis. Following the performance at the Orpheum, where Dr. Tevis engaged several boxes, the party adjourned to the Palace Hotel for an hour or two of dancing. More than thirty guests shared the pleasure of this affair.

THORNE.—One of the pleasurable affairs scheduled for next week is the theatre party and supper to be given by Mr. and Mrs. Julian Thorne on Wednesday evening.

WALKER.—Mrs. James Parker was the honored guest at a theatre party and supper given Thursday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Talbot Walker.

ARRIVALS.

CHAFFEE.—Lieutenant Adna R. Chaffee, U. S. A., and Mrs. Chaffee arrived Sunday from the Philippines. Mrs. Adna R. Chaffee, Sr., widow of the late General Chaffee, came up from her home in Los Angeles to meet them.

COOPER.—Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Cooper and Mrs. J. Downey Harvey, who have been in New York and Washington, D. C., for several weeks, are home again.

DUNHAM.—Mrs. Robert Dunham of Lakeside, the fashionable suburb of Chicago, arrived Wednesday to visit Mr. and Mrs. John S. Drum.

GALLOIS.—Mr. and Mrs. John Gallois have returned to their home on Russian Hill, after a delightful visit of two weeks in Santa Barbara, where they were constantly entertained.

NEWHALL.—Miss Marian Newhall, who went East a few weeks ago with Miss Alice Herrin and William F. Herrin, returned home Friday.

DEPARTURES.

BULL.—Miss Edith Bull left Thursday for New Orleans to attend the Mardi Gras there. Later she will go to Palm Beach and then to New York.

LOWE.—Mrs. Edward Lowe, Jr., and her father, Mr. Charles S. Johnson, have gone to Coronado for a two weeks' visit.

EDD.—Mrs. William Ede left Monday for Honolulu for a visit with friends.

McNEAR.—Mr. and Mrs. George P. McNear and their daughter, Miss Louise McNear, who have been at the Bellevue all winter, left Monday for their home in Petaluma, to remain the balance of the season.

INTIMATIONS.

ANDERTON.—Mr. and Mrs. John Gayle Anderton have given up their home in Burlingame and are settled at the Hotel Bellevue, where they contemplate spending the next few months.

GRAVES.—Mrs. Walker Coleman Graves and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Walker Graves, Jr., have written friends in San Francisco of the jolly times they are having in Hanaya, Cuba. They expect to remain on the island for several weeks, and will take a number of trips inland.

KEENEY.—Mrs. James Ward Keeney and Miss Helen Keeney, who have been in Philadelphia this winter, will return to town on the 2d of March.

MILLER.—Mrs. Harriet Peterson Miller is expected to return to San Francisco about the middle of next month, after having spent the winter in the East.

OXNARD.—Mrs. Robert Oxnard and Mrs. Stetson Wallace, who have been in New York for several weeks, have returned to their respective homes.

SMITH.—Mrs. Robert Hayes Smith and Miss Anne Peters have written from New York of the good times they are having. They contemplate returning to San Francisco the first of March.

TEVIS.—Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Tevis have returned to their home in Burlingame, after a visit of several weeks at the Tevis ranch in Bakersfield.

San Francisco Day by Day

As seen by A. S. Macleod

—Discontented Wife—Several of the men whom I refused when I married you are richer than you are now. Husband—That's why.—Boston Traveler.

"Travels in Alaska."

John Muir, kindest of naturalists, has passed on, but behind him he has left in a series of books that will ever keep his memory green and will ever be dear to the nature lover, his indomitable spirit, his insatiable love of the great outdoors. His last words to the public, a living description of a glorious aurora borealis over Muir Inlet, Muir penned his book, "Travels in Alaska," devotedly and pertinaciously, but death left it to other hands to gather the leaves together. This was done by Mrs. Marion Randall Parsons, who had previously assisted him in preparing his notes. The introduction was written by William Frederic Bade.

The animals of the wild were always safe from Muir. So much did he dislike to see them killed that one of his Indian guides once complained that every time he aimed his gun at a duck Muir rocked the boat. He found an opportunity to impress his ideas on one of his guides when the man, merely to empty his gun and recharge it, wantonly shot a gull. His love for his animal friends is reflected in an adventure with a Douglas squirrel near Caribou House. He describes the adventure when the little creature "barked, chirruped and showed off in fine style on a tree within a few feet of us."

"What does the little rascal mean?" said my companion, a man I had fallen in with on the trail. "What is he making such a fuss about? I can't frighten him."

"Never mind," I replied; "just wait until I whistle 'Old Hundred,' and you will see him fly in disgust." And so he did, just as his Californian brethren do. Strange that no squirrel or spherophile I yet have found ever seemed to have anything like enough of Scotch religion to enjoy this grand old tune."

Price, $2.50 net. Published by Houghton, Mifflin & Co.

* * *

"Book of the Homeless."

A book which combines in an unusual degree excellence of workmanship, not alone in writing and illustration, but in actual printing also, with the utmost worthiness of purpose, is "The Book of the Homeless," which has been compiled by Mrs. Edith Wharton for the benefit of important Belgian charities. Many names famous in the world of literature, art and music are signed to the articles and illustrations forming this volume, and all these men and women have given of their art that the proceeds of the book may be greater and the work to which it is devoted the more effectively aided. The book is being sold for the benefit of the American hostels, for refugees and of the children of Flanders relief committee, founded in Paris by Mrs. Wharton in November, 1914, and enlarged by her in April, 1915, and chiefly maintained hitherto by American subscriptions. The chief task of the American hostels for refugees has been not only to feed and clothe and keep alive the fugitive Belgians, but to reassure and guide them. Since November, 1914, some 9,300 refugees have been assisted, more than 235,000 meals given and 48,333 garments distributed. But this was only the elementary part of the work. An employment agency has found work for over 3,500 men. The workrooms occupy about 120 women, and while they sew, their babies are kept busy and happy in a cheerful day nursery, and the older children are taught in a separate class.

Published by Charles Scribner's Sons.

* * *

"Modern French Novelists."

This is a second volume of studies by Winifred Stephens, in which she continues a series which began with a company much better known as a group than are those in the present discussions. Of the six men and one woman in the new series, the names of only two will have a familiar ring in most American ears—Romain Rolland and Marcelle Tinayre. None of the others—Jerome and Jean Tharaud, Rene Boylesve, Pierre Mille and Jean Aicard—have any extended international following, although M. Mille's "Two Little Parisians" has been widely read in its English version. His catch title of "the French Rudyard Kipling," if not quite just or exact, proves that he has a certain bilingual following.

Not the least momentous event in the career of M. Rolland is the storm that has raged about his head since the war started. Miss Stephens does not allude to it—her book was written before the tempest reached its present height—but she has presupposed its causes, possibly foreseen its coming.

Price $1.50 net. Published by John Lane & Co., New York.

* * *

The Macmillan Company has assumed the publication in this country of John Masefield's play, "The Tragedy of Nan," and issued it Wednesday, February 2d, in binding uniform with Mr. Masefield's other plays.

* * *

The Putnams, New York, have in train for immediate publication a volume entitled "An Army of the People," by John McA. Palmer, Major 24th Inf., U. S. Army. In this book the author gives a detailed description of a National Military System for the United States, a military system which will be found to meet the requirements of adequate military strength under forms that are in full harmony with American political conditions and ideals.

* * *

Harper & Brothers announce that on February 17th they will publish a new novel by Basil King, author of "The Inner Shrine." The title of this new book will be "The Side of the Angels."

* * *

A third volume dealing with the further adventures of Tarzan, the ape-man, to be called "The Beasts of Tarzan," is announced by A. C. McClurg & Co., Chicago, who report that the Tarzan stories have elicited more public approval than anything else they have issued for the last decade.

A Beautiful Gift Book

California as a Health Resort

Its History, Climate, Missions, Industries, Places of Interest, Educational Advantages, and Mineral Springs.

Told In A New Way

300 Pages

80 Full Page Pictures

Publishers: Bolte & Braden Co.

San Francisco

Price Two Dollars

Dewar Scotch Whisky

Awarded Gold Medal

At Panama-Pacific International Exposition

San Francisco

Sherwood & Sherwood

Pacific Coast Agents

San Francisco

Los Angeles

San Diego

FOR SALE BY THE TRADE

Phone Kearny 2842

Cosgrove's Hair Store

Established 20 Years

239 Powell Street

San Francisco

INSURANCE

The fortieth annual meeting of the Fire Underwriters' Association of the Pacific convened at San Francisco on Tuesday, February 8th, and in point of attendance and the general excellence of papers contributed and read by members equaled in success any previous gathering of fire underwriters on the Coast.

The proceedings opened with the reading of the president's address, the theme of which was a publicity that would awaken the public to better building and fire preventive methods. President Blanchard was followed by reports from the various committees, all showing the association to be in a highly prosperous and progressive condition.

The program included the following papers, which were read on the mornings and afternoon of Tuesday and Thursday: "Fire Insurance," McKee Sherrard, manager of the Yorkshire; "Relationship between Mercantile Agencies and Fire Underwriting," Edward G. Hollister, of Bradstreets; "Making Moving Picture Negatives," Weldon D. Whelan, Fireman's Fund; "Use and Occupancy Insurance on Pacific Coast," George E. Townsend; "The Ideal in Fire Prevention and How to Attain It," J. H. Shively, editor "Fire Facts," Seattle; "Our Extravagances" was especially valuable to present-day insurance literature, by Thomas H. Williams; "Development of Automobile Insurance," C. R. Stone, Phoenix of London; "Loose Adjustments," Thos. H. Anderson, Liverpool & London & Globe; "Underwriting by Schedule," Edwin Parrish, Niagara Fire; "Portland's First Year in Real Fire Prevention Work," Jay Stephens, Fire Marshal of Portland, Ore.; "Modern Map Methods," Henry A. Morrison, London & Lancashire; "Relation of Insurance to Banking," Francis W. Wolfe, Bank of California; "Round-up of an Arson Gang and the Confessions of a Fire Bug," J. T. Stealey, Springfield Fire & Marine; and "Co-operation," Maclure Kelly of the Yorkshire.

At the banquet, which this year was held at the St. Francis, covers were laid for three hundred, and with few exceptions every seat was filled. A splendid repast, beautiful music, choice floral decorations and snappy ten minute speeches contributed to an evening of perfect enjoyment. It was nearly midnight before the guests began to take their departure. The officers elected on the afternoon of Thursday were: President, Washington Irving, manager of the Phoenix of London's Pacific Department; vice-president, W. P. Porep, special agent Edward Brown & Sons, in the Pacific Northwest, with headquarters at Seattle; secretary and treasurer, Calvert Meade (re-elected); assistant secretary and librarian, J. P. Moore (re-elected).

More than one hundred were present at the special meeting of the Insurance Federation of California held Thursday afternoon in the Assembly Hall of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce for the discussion of the constitution and by-laws. Every branch of the insurance business was present, besides a number of representatives of allied businesses.

Frank J. Wallace, temporary chairman, called the meeting to order and introduced J. R. Molony of the Aetna, who addressed the gathering of the meaning and aims of the Federation. Mr. Molony pointed out the necessity of co-operation between all those engaged in the insurance business and the public, and how the federation idea would accomplish those results that all insurance men have hoped for but have never used any concerted action as a body to obtain. He further pointed out that the Federation meant the salvation of the insurance business in this State. He strongly urged co-operation of all those present in the present membership, and said that with this co-operation the Insurance Federation of California should have a membership of more than five thousand by the first annual meeting, which has been set for the second Thursday in April in San Francisco, and thereafter alternately in San Francisco and Los Angeles. The proposed constitution was unanimously adopted with a few small changes, and will be ready for distribution in the early part of the week. Meetings in Los Angeles and other sections of the State are now being arranged. The brokers present at this meeting pledged themselves to a campaign among the fire insurance offices.

A joint conference between members of the State Railroad and the State Industrial Accident Commissions has resulted in an agreement that the State Railroad Commission shall have prior rights over the latter body in the matter of jurisdiction over public utilities in safety regulations. It was agreed, however, that both commissions should work in harmony in the industrial accident field, and whenever necessary hold conferences when there is a difference of opinion.

Miller, Henley & Scott have appointed T. J. Craig special agent of the Western to succeed H. P. Hildreth, resigned. Craig, who will cover Washington and Oregon, has been with the Washington Surveying and Rating Bureau, under Lee MacKenzie, for several years.

On Tuesday evening, February 15th, a complimentary dinner was given to Frank L. Gilbert, retiring president of the Surety Underwriters' Association of California, at the Union League Club, at which the newly elected president of the association, Guy Leroy Stevick, presided.

Jeffre De Bruhl, special agent for Edward Brown & Sons in California, Utah, Wyoming and Montana, who resigned this month, has been succeeded in the same territory by W. H. Gibbon of the home office.

At the annual meeting of the Field Club, an organization of special agents covering Northern California, A. C. Thornton, metropolitan manager at San Francisco of the Prussian National, was elected president, and George C. Coddling was re-elected secretary. The new governing committee consists of F. P. Wilson, F. J. Schoeneman and W. W. Cleveland.

The entire field force of the Pacific Department of the London Assurance, together with department heads, met at Del Monte, Cal., on Friday last, February 18th. The second day's proceedings were concluded by a banquet, with Manager A. W. Thornton and Assistant J. M. Mendell presiding.

The field and office force of the Royal and Queen and Royal Indemnity in the Pacific field were elaborately dined by the management on Saturday night at San Francisco, the dinner concluding with a dance.

United States Manager H. N. Kelsey will arrive in San Francisco some time during the present week, at which time some disposition will be made of the Coast agency of the Hamburg Bremen, now in the Macdonald & Miles agency. Since the death of Colonel William Macdonald the office has been managed by Burns Macdonald, his son, who will retire upon the arrival of Mr. Kelsey.

The Angel

—Departs 4:00 P. M. Daily

Safety and Comfort

You Get Both on this Excellent Train of the Santa Fe to

Los Angeles

Superior Equipment
Superior Dining Service
We Will Make Your Return Trip
Reservation on The SAINT
Just Tell Us When

San Diego Train Service
Re-Established Saturday
February 19th.

Santa Fe City Offices

67. Market St., San Francisco—Phone Kearny 1
Market Street Ferry—Phone Kearny 1281
1218 Broadway, Oakland—Phone Lakeview 1

NEW ALIGNMENT IN FIGHT BETWEEN THE "WETS" AND "DRYS."

A year ago the wets and drys were stripped to the buff ready to grapple in a fight to the finish. Since then, Mercy, or old Hek, like the gentle dew dripping from heaven, has transformed the situation. Now it is indicated that there will be no fight in California against the allied liquor interests here for the simple reason that the so-called liquor interests have disintegrated into the component parts. The former allies have separated, with the result that the retail liquor saloon has been abandoned and left to shift for itself. The Wine Growers' Association and the wholesale liquor dealers have shut themselves up in their respective domains, which means that the opposition to the "drys" is immensely weakened, an advantage of which the latter will not fail to take swift and forceful advantage.

The Wine Growers' Association now regards the saloon as the pest painted by the "drys," and believes that it can establish itself on a firm footing as a worthy industry of the State if it drops all association with the saloon. If pressed, there is little doubt but that the Wine Growers' Association will even attack the saloon keepers, and help drive by votes the corner grocery store's liquor privileges from the map. The wholesalers have figured out that they can make a living by selling liquor wholesale, as provided in the proposed new liquor law. The saloon keepers of the State are therefore left to their own resources to meet the well prepared and aggressive attack of the phalanxes of the drys. Accordingly the saloon men and their personal friends are marshaling for the fray under the gonfalon of the Royal Arch. They are now digging their trenches and stringing the foreground with barbed wire, and will give the drys the last "punch" that is in them. The stories brought to this State by the saloon keepers who were voted out in Oregon and Washington indicate the seriousness of their fate if they are defeated.

In case of the defeat of the saloon keepers, a law should be quickly passed to compensate them for their stocks, fixtures, leases, improvements, etc., which will become almost junk and charges upon them, provided the people vote to remove the saloon business from the State. Such reimbursement was to have been provided if the wine grape growers had been voted out of business. A number of States that have recently voted "dry" have taken the precaution to reimburse the saloon owners for the attendant losses of being closed out of business. The well known characteristics of California for justice and equity should naturally prompt her to do likewise. Oregon is one of the few States which flatly refused to provide such succor to the retail liquor men who suffered heavily when the people voted the State dry.

BIG ADDITIONAL ELECTRIC SUPPLY FOR THIS CITY.

The Pacific Gas & Electric Company has recently completed a piece of engineering work by which it is enabled to deliver electricity in San Francisco direct from its water-power plants in the mountains, bringing it across the bay by means of two submarine cables between the main shore near Sausalito and a point on the San Francisco side in the Presidio Reservation. The final tests have been made, and at any moment it is needed several thousand horsepower of electricity can be brought in to supplement the output from the company's big station at the Potrero, where electricity is generated by steam power, and also the supply brought in over high-tension transmission wires by way of Alviso and the San Francisco peninsula.

The problem of bringing hydro-electric power from the north into San Francisco by the most direct route across the bay has long been a problem which the company's engineers have been puzzling over. An overhead crossing was impracticable. Golden Gate was at one time considered. This would have necessitated a span of more than twice the length of the company's overhead cable system crossing the bay at Carquinez Strait, a span which up to date is the longest of its kind in the world.

Recent improvements in the art of laying submarine cables have made possible the installation which has now been successfully put into service.

The company's main high-tension distributing system at Cordelia, near Suisun, was enlarged and reconstructed, and a new steel-tower transmission line was constructed from Cordelia around San Pablo Bay to San Rafael. And now, to complete the delivery of power into San Francisco this last named tower-line has been extended to Sausalito, a distance of about nine miles. A new sub-station has been erected on a commanding site at Sausalito, and by means of four immense transformers of 5,700 horsepower capacity each the voltage of the electricity received over the high-tension transmission lines is lowered from 60,000 or 100,000 to 11,000 volts for its journey across the bay. The end of their journey is at the foot of Lyon street in San Francisco. These cables were laid during the months of September and October last year.

From the foot of Lyon street to the company's nearest electric sub-station at Buchanan and Beach streets, the electricity is carried by four underground cables. From the substation named to the company's big steam-electric plant at the Potrero the electricity again goes by underground cables.

In this way, then, the city of San Francisco is in a complete circle of electric power supplied by the Pacific Gas & Electric Company, a circle which goes clear around the bay and takes in all points between Santa Clara County on the south and Butte County on the north.

FINANCIAL BRIEFS.

English freights from the colonies and from other countries have grown enormously since the war opened. Homeward freights from Bombay to the United Kingdom are now 594 per cent higher than in 1914, from the River Platte 1,011 per cent higher, and from Atlantic ports 769 per cent higher for cotton and 803 per cent for grain. The gross earnings of the fleets in 1913 were $618,046,000, compared with $1,995,265,000 in 1916, an increase of 222 per cent. In the same period, the expenses were $540,182,000 vs. $807,839,000, an increase of 50 per cent. The net profits were $1,187,426,000 vs. $77,864,000, yielding 1,425 per cent.

Standard Oil Company of California reports earnings of $12,974,655 for 1915. Depreciations in all departments were placed at $3,444,709, leaving a net profit of $9,529,945. Dividends for the year were 10 per cent per annum, amounting to $4,968,605 on issued stock, and $4,561,280 carried to surplus account.

Pacific Telephone and Telegraph's annual report for 1915 shows operating revenues of $20,114,458; operating expenses, $14,312,781; net operating revenues, $5,801,676. The net income was $2,021,599, less dividends $1,920,000, leaving a balance of $101,599.

G. H. Mastick, attorney for the receivers of the Western Pacific, has taken an option to buy shares of the capital stock of this company, signed by stockholders representing more than two-thirds of the outstanding shares. Mr. Mastick may accept this option on or before the 29th day of this month. The price is said to be $47.50 for the outstanding 35,521½ shares. Shareholders have been notified to this effect. Ten days ago the stock was heavy on the market at $1.50 per share. A week ago it jumped to $3. Last Monday $6 was bid. The price is still advancing. R. D. Robbins, a country banker, is said to have control of the shares. According to notices sent out by John G. Sutton, son in law of R. D. Robbins, and vice-president and manager of the Ocean Shore line, the intention of the agreement is that the shares of the present signers and all other shareholders may be deposited on or before April 29, 1916, at Wells-Fargo Nevada National Bank, and be purchased on or before May 2, 1916, by the buyer at the uniform price of $47.50 per share, net to the seller, for all shares so deposited. Should the option be accepted on or before February 29th, all shareholders will be promptly notified so that they may, if they desire, join in the sale.

—Whatever view may be held on the question of recruiting in Ireland, it is a matter of common record that the steady flow of emigrants from the country has brought about very special conditions. The way in which land is held in Ireland, for the most part in comparatively small holdings, means that it is worked largely by families, and that the openings for laborers are few. As a consequence, men who could not find employment in this way have emigrated, and they have been chiefly men of military age. Between the year 1851 and 1910 no fewer than 4,197,443 emigrants left Ireland.

Highway Adornment

In earnest protest against the proposal to cut down the lordly eucalyptus trees which line their highways, two hundred citizens of Burlingame rose up as one man (or woman) last week and voiced their opinion in a resolution at a meeting of the City Trustees. These trees, the first of the kind planted in America, were brought from Australia over thirty years ago, and as a conspicuous landmark adorn the State highway from Easton to San Mateo, and many of the side roads of the peninsula countryside. The objection to these silent sentinels with their graceful, waving tops has been that in a high wind their branches sometimes break off, thereby endangering life and property. With proper pruning, however, this objection would be invalid, and the trustees decided to restrict cutting to cases where there was obvious danger, as, for instance, where the trees stood too close to a house.

Any one at all familiar with the highways of Europe, especially northern France, cannot fail to be impressed by the rows of lovely chestnut, plane and poplar trees which border and embellish the historic roads; and in a comparison with our new State highways there is an apparent confirmation of the reproach that we are purely a material people.

The advent of the auto has changed our attitude towards roads, and California is taking the lead in highway construction. In this State we have spent more per capita in new construction, and our taxation on motor vehicles for the benefit of the roads not only exceeds that of any other State on a per capita basis, but actually in number of dollars spent, although there are three States with a greater number of cars.

As befits a country with a climate and physical surroundings not unlike that of Italy, the sheer love of beauty for its own sake is not unknown, as the townspeople of Burlingame have shown, and it is all the more fitting that we should take the lead and devise some comprehensive scheme for the planting of trees alongside of our highways. Apart from their beauty, trees are useful as a protection against wind, driving rain, and dust from the fields. Furthermore, even their beauty will have a utilitarian value as a tourist attraction when the Lincoln Highway and the National Parks Boulevard in the north shall have been completed. These two trunk lines will bring tens of thousands of motorists besides those who come by train.

The News Letter advocated at the time that the State highways were started that trees should be planted and the water for the concrete also be used for the young trees. It would not be necessary to plant eucalyptus, as the poplar thrives equally well, suits better in certain respects, and meets the objections which are made to the eucalyptus. The poplar, of which the aspen and cottonwood are varieties, does not topple readily, its branches are not brittle, and being deciduous, is bare in winter and the sun is not kept from drying the roadway. It grows rapidly and requires little attention after being started. While awaiting State action in the matter, it would be well for counties, local improvement associations, women's clubs and the like to take action in their particular section.

Think for a moment of the beauty and comfort which trees would add to our road system. Are they not worth the cost many times over?

November Motor Car Exports

Washington, D. C., Feb 10—According to a report of the department of commerce, the following exports of American motor cars were made during November, 1915:

Commercial cars, 1,553, valued at $3,837,307; passenger cars, 3,690, valued at $2,791,507; and parts, not including engines and tires, valued at $1,693,787. The exports for eleven months of 1915, ending November 30th, were 20,418 trucks, valued at $55,913,713; 38,205 passenger cars, valued at $32,334,734; and parts valued at $14,508,596.

The principal purchasers of American cars in November were France, 698 cars, valued at $1,848,965; Great Britain, 1,534 cars, valued at $1,706,832; other European countries, 520 cars, valued at $1,504,410; British Oceania, 832 cars, valued at $662,124; and Canada, 210 cars, valued at $209,684.

Warden Osborne Talks on Road Work by Convicts

"I wielded a pick and shovel myself for a week at the Auburn road camp," stated Thomas Mott Osborne before a large audience gathered to hear the first of his lectures on "Penology" at Yale University, where he was delivering the Dodge lectures for 1916.

The industrial side of prison life is held by the National Committee on Prisons as a most important factor in the reform of the prisoner. The committee is carefully studying the different industries available for the prison. It was to conduct this study at first hand that Mr. Osborne, at that time president of the committee, worked in the Auburn road camp.

"I was a member of the camp in good and regular standing in the summer and fall of 1914," he told his Yale audience, "and was in close touch with the camp during the three months of its existence. The camp was situated near the small village of Mendan, about 18 miles from Auburn prison, and there were 20 members besides myself, men who had been sentenced for all sorts of crimes, including murder in the first degree.

"Only one of these men had less than a year to serve; seven had between one and two years; one had still 17 years, and one was condemned to prison for his natural life. All but three of the men had served sentences before, one as many as seven. They worked in groups scattered over a considerable area, several miles from camp, and any one of them could easily have escaped at any hour, day or night; they were restrained by a fine sense of honor and loyalty toward their fellow prisoners, by whom they had been chosen as members of the 'honor camp.' There is nothing better for the men than the work with pick and shovel. It builds up lost manhood and gives a new spirit of courage and hope."

The Dodge lectures were established at Yale University by the late William E. Dodge for the purpose of creating an understanding of the duties of citizenship among educated persons. Former President Wm. H. Taft, Justice Brewer, Justice Hughes and Lord Bryce have in former years delivered these lectures. The National Committee on Prisons is assured that Osborne's endorsement of convict road work from such a platform will do much to create a right understanding of the opportunity such work affords for making better men through making better roads.

Rankin President of Mahin Co

Announcement of an important change in the Mahin Advertising Company has just been made. John Lee Mahin, founder of the company, has sold his interests to William H. Rankin, and retires from the presidency of the organization.

Rankin has been vice-president of the company during the last seven years. He went to Chicago in 1907, to assume the Western management of the Street Railways Advertising Co., under Thomas Palmer, who is now in England. He has a wide reputation as an advertising man of progressive ideas and unusual experience.

Rankin has had a thorough training in newspaper, farm paper, magazine and street car advertising, and as a circulation manager for a number of newspapers, advertising manager of a farm paper, and as business manager of the Bobbs-Merrill magazines in Indianapolis.

Under his direction the Mahin Advertising Company will undoubtedly maintain its position as one of the most prominent and successful agencies in America.

Associated with Rankin are Wilbur D. Nesbit, who will be vice-president; and Herman A. Groth, who will continue in office as secretary and treasurer of the Mahin Advertising Company. Both gentlemen are well known in the advertising world and each has had an extended and successful experience in building up the company with which they will continue to be identified.

San Diego Fair Encourages Autoists

Motor transportation will come into its own at the Panama-California International Exposition. There will be no automobile show—that is, as automobile shows have been known in the past; there will be no automobile exhibits, as such; there will be no medals or awards; but the automobile will be one of the biggest headlines ever presented at any exposition.

Automobiles, both pleasure and commercial, will provide a series of spectacular events, continuing from the opening day to the last day of the year 1916. Not only will the general buying public find entertainment and instruction in this innovation, but it will be held under the eyes of the various branches of the United States government service. Uncle Sam will have men on the ground during the year to collect data on the efficiency of motors to be used in the aviation service, on cars suitable for the work of the artillery, of machines adapted to scout duty, and for the endless tasks that fall to the caterpillar and tractors as shown in the world's greatest war.

This automobile demonstration, giving opportunity to every American car, will not have a single "still exhibit."

The motor transportation area is practically in the center of the Exposition grounds. Surrounding the demonstration field of ten acres are the arcades which will house the machines from the weather. A natural ravine stands within the enclosure, in which climbing and equilibrium tests will be conducted in a spectacular manner. Tugs of war, head-on collisions, slow races, tire-changing contests, gasoline tests, and every conceivable means of demonstrating the superior qualities of a car will be given.

Among other events will be special periods given to the demonstration of cars within certain price limits. During such a period all cars less than $750 will be entered, another demonstration will be offered by cars from $600 to $1,200, and by a group including the highest priced cars made. There will be roadster days, touring car days, truck days, and each will be designated far enough ahead so that the dealer or prospective purchaser can be on hand to witness a demonstration in which he is especially interested.

Special days for certain cars will not be overlooked, and at such times parades and special programs will be offered, giving full sway to one make of car.

Blythe H. Henderson, Chief of Transportation at the San Francisco Exposition, will be in charge of this new idea in automobile display; and W. E. Benton, who had charge of the automobile exhibits installation at San Francisco, will be Henderson's assistant chief.

The automobilist and the auto tourist who visits the Panama-California International Exposition during the present year will have good reason to believe that this Exposition was built for their special entertainment.

Instead of barring the automobile from the Exposition grounds they will be admitted at all times, and at the nominal charge of twenty-five cents. This charge also includes the right to park a machine twenty-four hours on the automobile field. Every traveler who comes to the Exposition by automobile, and who drives more than 500 miles, will receive special recognition, and will be given a special Exposition button to mark his achievement.

* * *

Superintendent H. A. French, of the State Motor Vehicle Department, gave out the following figures for 1916, to last Saturday: Registrations, automobiles, 146,660; motorcycles, 14,911; chauffeurs, 4,832; automobile dealers, 1,130; motorcycle dealers, 145. Receipts—Automobiles, $1,490,707; motorcycles, $29,822; chauffeurs, $9,664; automobile dealers, $25,971; substitutions, $5,099.90; motorcycle dealers, $605. Total, $1,561,868.90.

* * *

Motor Corps from Portland

Portland, Ore., Feb. 1—Motor owners of Portland, under the leadership of Captain Frank P. Tebbetts, of the machine gun company of the Oregon National Guard, have formed a machine gun company with motor cars as the mode of transportation. The owners are to be enlisted as members of the company, and during the summer months of the year will turn out once a week on a run of 20 miles to Clackamas, where field practice with the machine guns and the trucks will be a part of the efficiency program. Captain Tebbetts' plans call for the use of fourteen light and heavy trucks. This will offer transportation for the entire unit. The plans further include the working out of problems of speed and mileage. These can be studied admirably in the country around Portland, where is found almost every variety of road that the topography of any war might offer.

* * *

Goodrich Declares Dividend

Much interest centered around the annual meeting of the B. F. Goodrich Company, held last week. The unusual jump of the common stock from 17 to about 70 in the past year gave rise to rumors of a resumption of the dividend on the common stock, which prediction was realized and a dividend of one per cent, payable February 1st, was declared. While the action of the company only means the payment of one dividend, it is believed there is no doubt but that regular dividends at the rate of 4 per cent yearly will be continued. The financial statement showed that the net earnings for the year 1915 were $12,200,000—which far exceeds the preliminary estimates. The current assets are reported to be $31,250,000 and the liabilities $4,200,000. This figure is an increase of approximately $8,100,000 over the difference between the assets and liabilities a year ago.

B. G. Works was re-elected president of the corporation, W. O. Rutherford, formerly assistant sales manager, goes up a step higher, being made sales manager, succeeding H. E. Raymond, who becomes a vice-president. Mr. Raymond's position as second vice-president was abolished. He will continue in charge of sales and advertising. The office of general manager, held by A. H. Marks, also has been abolished, and he becomes a vice-president, but retains his duties as works manager.

* * *

New Company Organized

What promises to be one of the most important factors in the automobile industry during the coming season is the Lozier Motor Company of Detroit, the organization which grew out of what was known as the Associated Lozier Purchasers, Inc. The re-establishment of the organization to keep Lozier cars on the American market has resulted in the forming of an unusually strong company financially with one of the most modern equipped plants in the country, according to M. M. Hartmann, Western distributor of Lozier cars.

Hartmann, who has his headquarters in San Francisco, has recently returned from an extensive tour in the East, during which time he visited the Lozier factory at Detroit.

"The new company is one of the strongest in the automobile industry," said Hartmann recently. "The men in the company are well known and have had a great deal of experience in the production and sale of motor cars. Theodore Freideberg is president of the organization.

"Samuel and Harry Fiank, vice-president and treasurer of the company, respectively, have supplied nearly $1,000,000 for the proposition, and it is understood that Mr. Freideberg has subscribed to a large amount of the stock."

* * *

Important Changes in Bearings Co.

The Bearings Company of America is announcing the following changes in its organization, which have occurred recently: Mr. John W. Hertzler, who has for several years past been the Western representative of the Bearings Company of America, has been appointed assistant manager, and is now located at the factories of The Bearings Company of America in Lancaster, Pa. Mr. Hertzler is being succeeded in the Detroit office, 604 Ford Building, by Mr. William C. Little, who has represented Brandenburg & Co. and the Buda Co. in the Detroit territory, in the immediate past.

* * *

A self-respecting man respects his car, and he insures the painstaking attention to which every car is entitled by keeping it at Dow & Green's Garage in Taylor street, between O'Farrell and Geary. Service is the slogan of this deservedly popular garage.

FOR SALE...STEVENS DUYREA COUPE...FOR SALE
A1 CONDITION PRICE REASONABLE
H. F. SCHAEFER, 680 ELLIS STREET
SAN FRANCISCO

Secret of the Super-Six

The motoring public has been more or less curious to know how the Hudson Company has been able, in its new six-cylinder motor, to obtain fully 80 per cent more horsepower than was delivered by the previous Hudson engine, which had exactly the same cylinder dimensions of 3 1/4 by 5 inches.

Considerable mystery has shrouded the new design, and this curiosity was fostered by the fact that a patent on a principle involved on the engine was granted the Hudson Company in December 28, 1915, although the details upon which it was based were not divulged at the time the car was announced at the New York motor car show.

According to H. O. Harrison, Western distributor, the secret of the whole thing lies in the counterbalanced crankshaft, the method of balancing being the really new thing.

Careful attention to the working out of all details of valve passages, valve openings and carburetion, besides such other engineering considerations as design of the cams, timing and so on, have played their part in the remarkable increase of power which the Super-Six shows over its predecessors, and thus the ability of the new engine rightfully cannot be charged entirely to this new method of crankshaft balancing, although this is the one big factor.

The reasoning on which the Hudson engineers have worked is that a great percentage of the power developed by a motor is absorbed internally in overcoming the useless forces which manifest themselves, these resulting in vibration and crankshaft distortion and cause friction and loss of power.

The engineers realized that if they could reduce these wasteful forces to the minimum the delivered power would be greater. This was really the germ of the present engine.

* * *

Auto as a Trade Feeder

"Two of the first three industries of the United States are largely dependent upon the automobile industry, which is officially fourth in rank," writes William L. Hughson, president of the KisselKar branch now at the Kissel factory in Hartford, Wisconsin. Hughson writes:

"I refer to the metal and lumber trades. Of the former, hundreds of thousands of tons were used in 1915 motor cars, while an enormous quantity of hardwood was consumed in building car bodies. Then consider the relation of the leather, rubber, glass, paint and cloth trades to automobile building. Recent statistics show the following totals entering into the construction of last year's motor car output:

"Seven hundred and sixty thousand tons of fabricated steel; 8,450,000 board feet of manufactured wood; 67,232 leather hides; 3,280,000 square yards of imitation leather; 11,405,250 yards of top material and linings; 489,356 yards of burlap—and so on through the long list of materials entering into the modern automobile.

"Just think for a moment of the vast number of people interested in the production of KisselKars. Workers in steel and lumber, employing millions of men, are but examples. Men of the jungles, the forests, the highways, the mills, the foundries—all are favorably effected through the wonderful sale of automobiles. Literally millions of men participated, directly or indirectly, in the $691,778,950 which the automobile output brought in the retail market."

* * *

Studebaker Efficiency

Referring to the automobile factory of the Studebaker Corporation in Detroit, Mich., Edward Mott Woolley in a magazine article says: "Some years ago a certain automobile factory was employing nearly eleven thousand men and turning out one hundred and seventy-five cars a day. Its gross earnings were large, but there were not any net profits. At the present time, with six thousand men, it makes two hundred and fifty cars a day—bigger and better cars at that—and is earning good profits. Right here is a story that makes you skeptical at the start. It is difficult to believe that nearly five thousand ordinary men were employed in that plant. It is difficult to believe off-hand that this company would cut the price of its cars nearly twenty-five per cent, reduce its floor space ten per cent, decrease its payroll about one-third, raise wages eleven per cent, and cut a high slice off its overhead or indirect expense. It is even harder to believe that it could reach into its scrap-pile and take out of it a clean million dollars a year. Yet all these things have been done."

Motor Editor Dies

Roy Stanrard Drake, editor of Automobile Topics, died last week at his home in New York City, of pneumonia. He was born in Cleveland, and was 35 years old. His activities in motor journalism followed some years of work for the Cleveland Plain Dealer, Cleveland Press and the Washington Press, where he reported Senate affairs. Mr. Drake later joined the advertising department of the Winton Motor Car Company, Cleveland, and following this connection he became advertising manager for the Post & Lester Co., Hartford, Conn. His motor journalistic career began when he joined the editorial department of the Motor World of Chicago.

TELEPHONE FRANKLIN 1836
FOR A
Touring Car, Limousine or Taxi-Car

The White Star Line
AUTO TOURING COMPANY

TARIFF: 7 Passenger Touring Cars
$2.00 per hour

7 Passenger Closed Cars
$2.50 per hour

Special Rates by week or month.

TAXI-CAR RATES FOR SHORT TRIPS
Day and Night Service

Our Taxi-Car Service is most reasonable and unexcelled. We use seven passenger closed cars for this service which bear no mark of identification signifying a rent car. The "Zone" rate applies to all Taxi-Car service. When ordering a car for this service please state that you desire the Taxi-Car Tariff.

THE WHITE STAR LINE
Auto Touring Co.
Telephone Franklin 1836

CRINKLET
- WASHLESS -
TOWELS

USE LIKE AN ORDINARY TOWEL

AUTOISTS
SHOULD NEVER BE WITHOUT THEM
=
Your Grocer Sells 'Em

WHERE SERVICE MEANS SERVICE

M & H GARAGE

819-835 ELLIS ST. Between Polk and Van Ness Avenue

WHERE THE PRIVATE OWNER FEELS AT HOME

TIRES

VULCANIZING

TOM H. ELKINGTON

Long Mileage Tires and Second-Hand Tires
Everything Needed for the Bus

1135 VAN NESS AVE.—Near Geary Phone PROSPECT 1566

London and Lancashire Fire Insurance Company
Orient Insurance Company

332 PINE STREET SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Sam B. Stoy, Mgr. G.O. Smith, Agency Supt. W. B. Hopkins, Local Sec.

Automobile Department W. M. KLINGER, General Agent

Avery Spring Lubricator

The Avery spring lubricators, made by the Avery P. L. Co., Milwaukee, Wis., are made of thin strips of graphite compound to be inserted between each spring leaf. A steel spreader is furnished for separating the leaves of the springs in order to insert the lubricators, making it unnecessary to take the springs apart. The price is $1 per box of sixty, and the steel spreader is 50 cents extra.

* * *

Instanto Spark Plug Tester

W. Jackson & Co., 320 New York Life Building, Chicago, is marketing the Instanto spark plug tester. The device consists of a small piece of wood with two wire contact points put in at one end, these contact points running through the wood and entering a hole bored through the wood, the ends of the wires all but meeting within this hole. The contact points are sufficiently spaced to permit bridging the insulation of the spark plug, and when the motor is running, if the plug is working, a spark will be shown jumping across the gap within the hole carrying the two contact terminals.

* * *

Schoener Carbureter Adjuster

A carbureter adjuster, made for Ford cars, is being manufactured by the Schoener Mfg. Co., St. Cloud, Minn. The device consists of a dial connected by shaft to the needle valve of the carbureter, the face of this dial being acted upon by a pointer which at the same time, by reason of its being a spring, fits into the notches on the dial and holds the adjustments securely against being jarred out of place. Spaces on the dial are numbered, from which it is possible to get the same setting each time, either for starting or running, and a wide range of adjustment is offered to suit the weather conditions. The price of the device is 50 cents.

* * *

Stanley Springs

The Kalamazoo Spring and Axle Co., Kalamazoo, Mich., makes a spring that is said to be kept in a thoroughly lubricated condition at all times. These springs are made with an oiling recess in which is placed a felt pad to retain the oil, and leading from this felt pad is a groove or rim through which oil can be supplied as often as needed.

* * *

Everready Starter Attached Directly to Crankshaft

A new Everready starting and lighting system for Ford cars which is directly connected to the crankshaft at the front of the engine, is being offered by the American Ever Ready Works of the National Carbon Co., Long Island City, N. Y. The system consists of a motor-generator, a specially constructed 12-volt storage battery, lighting and starting switches and necessary wiring. The motor fastens to the front cross member of the car, with its weight evenly distributed on each side. It is directly connected to the crankshaft by a flexible coupling, and thus runs at engine speed. This construction avoids the use of chains or sprockets.

The storage battery rests on the floor board, flat against the heel board of the front seat, its weight thus being evenly distributed each side the center line of the car. Being a one wire system it can be installed with little labor. Control of the system is incorporated in the regular spark lever of the car. To start the engine the spark lever is shifted to full retard. This starts the electric motor spinning, which in turn cranks the gasoline engine. As soon as the spark lever is advanced and the engine attains the necessary speed, the dynamo begins automatically to regulate and charge the storage battery.

—“What was the longest sentence you ever heard, old man?” “I now pronounce you man and wife.”—Florida Times-Union.

FIRE PROOF BUILDING

Phones—Park 8286, Park 5128

20---MARSHALL SQUARE---20 GARAGE

EXPERT AUTOMOBILE REPAIRING and MACHINE WORK
AUTO SUPPLIES

NO. 20 MARSHALL SQUARE
Opp. 8th and Market Sts. San Francisco

MOTOROL

“It suits because it doesn't soot”

If you want to prolong the life of your engine
If you want to eliminate smoke and carbon
If you want to reduce your oil expense

Use MoToRoL

Hughson & Merton, Inc.

50 Golden Gate Avenue
San Francisco, Cal.

PANHARD OIL

FREE FROM CARBON

BERNARD I. BILL

543 GOLDEN GATE AVE. SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

CLASS “A” GARAGE, INC.

Strictly Fire Proof Building

STORAGE SUPPLIES REPAIRS
BEST SERVICE ASSURED
735-751 POST STREET SAN FRANCISCO
TELEPHONE PROSPECT 2280

Automobile Starting and Lighting Systems

Give Satisfactory Results When Given Proper Attention

We specialize on electrical equipment, storage batteries, etc.
and guarantee satisfaction.

GUARANTEE BATTERY COMPANY
639 Van Ness Ave. BRAND & CUSHMAN Phone Prospect 741

The Six of Sixteen

Osen McFarland Co.

Golden Gate Avenue

LARKINS & COMPANY

CARRIAGE AND AUTOMOBILE BODY BUILDERS

Established in 1865

1610-1612-1614 VAN NESS AVENUE

Between California and Sacramento Sts. Phone Prospect 30
Where their entire attention will be devoted to the prompt delivery of the best work that a modern plant, high-class mechanics and materials can produce.

Tips to Automobilists

(CUT THIS OUT.)

The News Letter recommends the following garages, hotels and supply houses. Tourists will do well to cut this list out and keep it as a guide:

PALO ALTO.—LARKIN'S CAFE—just opened. The only strictly first-class cafe on the Wishbone Route devoted to the patronage of automobile owners and their families. Corner of University avenue and The Circle.

SAN JOSE.—LAMOLLE GRILL, 36-38 North First street. The best French dinner in California, 75 cents, or a la carte. Automobile parties given particular attention.

PALO ALTO.—PALO ALTO GARAGE, 443 Emmerson St., Tel., P. A. 332. Auto livery at all hours. Tires and sundries in stock. Gasoline, oil, repairing, lathework, vulcanizing. Open day and night.

FASHION'S FADS AND FRILLS

Fortunate indeed is the young daughter of the American home who may indulge if she wishes, according to the old-time custom, brought down through the ages, in the filmy, dainty wedding gown of white, with its ethereal veil of net, bordered, perhaps, with an edge of rare old lace which had long ago decked the gown of her grandmother. Were she compelled by tradition to wear a jacket of red or black, or cumbersome draperies of silk and brocades, she would lose much of her spirituelle charm and take on a buxomness not suited to her type.

The wedding gown of to-day has lost some of its dignity with its train, but it has gained a youthful charm which is to be preferred. In the wedding frock of to-day there is much of the quaint charm and sweetness of grand-mother's gown; smocking, puffing, quilling, shirring and numberless other hand-made trimmings are used in its garniture, and it is fashioned of the sheerest, most airy of fabrics and laces.

The Attractive Use of Lace and Chiffon.

Laces, chiffons and nets were never daintier or more fairy-like than they are this season. It is to be a season of laces and transparent fabrics. Laces as graceful as the web of the spider, or the glinting, shimmering wing of the butterfly, vie for favor with the more substantial, Spanish and thread-run patterns; the sheerest of silk crepes and the crispest of organdies are modish for frocks. Paper-like taffetas are often used in the gowns of the bride's attendants, and then, again, they are of organdy, in the palest tints, trimmed with bands of taffeta. This combination of taffeta and organdy will be a noticeable feature of all imported frocks this summer; it is an unusually attractive notion, although not a particularly practical one, for Americans. The tub frock as such is not known in Paris. One may say that, owing to the climate, it is solely an American idea. In most parts of Europe it is cool enough to wear a frock of silk or lightweight wool the summer through, even for sport purposes.

The Formal Wedding Gown.

For the demure little bride who wishes to tread the beaten path of custom, for reasons sentimental or otherwise, there are gorgeously brocaded satins, with a touch of silver in the motif. A court train lends formal dignity to such a gown even though the frock itself is considerably shorter than would have been dreamed of in mother's or grand-mother's time. The smallest of pages or flower girls are often a detail of such a wedding, lending a novel, pretty note. There are softer satins, too, which may be used for the formal or informal frock equally well.

Simple Veil Arrangements.

Quite the most important part of the frock for June, October, February or any other bride, is the veil. It is often a simple length of tulle draped over the hair and caught with a wreath or cluster of orange blossoms or white clematis; then, again it is a cap or rouché, but always there is the cluster of dainty, waxy blossoms, so absolutely necessary to the true wedding spirit. The veil offers the best way of introducing the

© McCall

The Short Bridal Gown

© McCall

Frock for Bride's Attendant

bit of rare old lace without which the wedding gown is incomplete; if such a bit is to be found in the family treasure chest. If there is none, the bride must be content to bring in her "something old" in a bit of brocade, cleverly introduced on bodice or girdle; a piece of antique jewelry, also will serve to keep the spell.

The Bride's Bouquet.

The bride's bouquet may be a stiff formal little bunch of white rosebuds, with its quaint, stiff little paper manchette, or the graceful shower bouquet with drooping lily cups and ribbons.

One of our exclusive florists always furnished his bride with a bouquet in shower effect of lilies of the valley, white orchids and pure white ribbons; lilies of the valley and white rosebuds are equally effective and much less expensive. The serious bride may carry a flower decked prayer book if she prefers, instead of a bouquet.

Children as Attendants.

Small attendants, flower girls and pages are now more and more a feature of fashionable weddings. It is a pretty English custom, one that often saves much thought and planning. These small attendants are picturesque adjuncts to the ceremony, and whether they wear picture hats, small bonnets, or no head covering at all is a matter of no consequence; all three are correct, and perhaps the prettiest and simplest thing of all is to have the wee, curly head decked with a wreath of fresh flowers to correspond with those in her basket. Sometimes the small girl's dress is a quaint replica of the bride's own gown, and then again it is a Kate Greenaway frock, dainty and quaint to a degree.

Pears'

"A shining countenance" is produced by ordinary soaps.

The use of Pears reflects beauty and refinement. Pears' leaves the skin soft, white and natural.

Matchless for the complexion.

IMPROVING TIMES QUIETLY INVADING THIS COUNTRY.

The first six weeks of the year have not been lacking in interest and important developments bearing upon the financial and business outlook. These include the new demands of railroad labor for an eight-hour day, with a 50 per cent increase in compensation for overtime; the foreign liquidation of American securities which for the month of January alone is estimated to have reached $100,000,000; the extraordinary statement of earnings published by the United States Steel Corporation, showing $51,232,788 to have been earned in the last three months of 1915, which was $5,729,000 greater than the previous record quarter; the progress of the campaign for preparedness, marked by the addresses of President Wilson and the testimony of experts before the Washington committees; the warnings uttered by Paul M. Warburg of the Federal Reserve Board and other well known men concerning the need of avoiding inflation in a period of world-war, when the United States is acting as banker for the rest of the world, and this country will have to prepare for determined efforts by belligerent nations later on to obtain American gold; and the striking showing by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce indicating an excess of exports over imports for December alone of $187,459,609, this being the largest monthly export excess ever shown and an increase in the export excess over December, 1914, of $57,185,000. Business is still good, and it is evident that the prosperity throughout the country is becoming less and less dependent upon "war orders." There has been a marked falling off in speculative trading in the stock markets, with a sharp reaction in the price of those stocks which rose so violently during the speculative craze of last year. The railroads are still doing a heavy business—the prospect being for an official report showing net earnings during the last two months of 1915 of almost $100,000,000. This prosperity of the railroads has been reflected in large buying of rails, cars and equipment, some of the equipment companies being so overwhelmed with orders as to make it necessary for them to defer deliveries on new business for five or six months. It is clear that this movement must be carried a good deal further in order to put the roads in condition to handle the enormous traffic on hand and in sight.

—According to the annual report of Union Oil Company for 1915 the company reduced its funded and floating debt by more than $2,300,000, and earned 8.27 per cent on its capital. Profits for the year include only those derived from the ordinary course of the company's business and exclude profits on sale of steamships of approximately $143,000. In 1915 the provision for exhaustion of oil territory was increased over 1914 some $310,000, so that had the same provision for exhaustion been made in 1915 as was made in 1914, and the sum of $143,000 carried to profit and loss account, the net profit for the year would have been shown at about $3,272,000, as compared with $2,819,129.

—The earnings for January of the Western Pacific Railway Company show an increase of $117,300, and for the first week of February an increase of $46,100. Both increases are due to increased freight shipments. The passenger business shows a decrease compared with the same period last year, when the Exposition drew traffic. The closing of the Panama Canal has to some extent helped the road's earnings, but it is believed that even after the reopening of the canal the freight business will continue good.

—Instead of issuing common stock in the ratio of par for par for General Petroleum bonds, it has been decided to take into consideration the defaulted interest, amounting to 18 per cent on May 1st, and bondholders will receive, under the present plan, 120 per cent of stock.

Rise of Munition Stock Since War Began.

Stock—	July 22, 1914		Feb., 1916
	High,	Bid	High,	Bid.
Allis Chalmers	9 ³ / ₄		32 ¹ / ₂
Am. Locomotive	29 ¹ / ₂		68
Am. Locomotive Pfd.	97		102
Baldwin Locomotive	43 ¹ / ₂		115
Bethlehem Steel	41 ³ / ₈		468
Bethlehem Steel Pfd.	85 ¹ / ₄		130
Lackawanna Steel	29 ³ / ₄		80
Republic Iron and Steel	22		54 ³ / ₄
Republic Iron and Steel Pfd.	84 ⁷ / ₈		110
U. S. Steel	61		85
U. S. Steel Pfd.	109 ⁷ / ₈		117 ¹ / ₂

—The recent strike in the Colligan lease on the Weaver No. 2, with its 5 feet of $30 ore, and the late discovery in the lowest workings of Rochester Hill, where the ore went $12 in gold, with very little silver, are two of the most important happenings in the property of the Rochester Mines Company during the past few months. The former was made at a depth of 300 feet and proves the existence of the big West vein a distance of 1,400 feet by actual workings in the Crown Point No. 1 and the Weaver No. 2. The latter was made in a drift from the Friedman tunnel at a depth of 1,200 feet, and proves the contention often made heretofore that the ores of Rochester Hill would greatly predominate in gold values in the lower reaches of the vein system.

—Scarcity of ships is not the only cause which compels a South African freight advance at the present inauspicious moment, for it is common knowledge that the cost of working such vessels as remain in service is so enormously enhanced that the shipowners could not save the trade from this additional tax even if they had their normal fleet at disposal. It is useless to complain. Sympathy is due equally to shipowner, shipper and importer.

—I. W. Hellman, Jr., has been elected president of the Union Trust Company to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of his father, I. W. Hellman, Sr. Charles J. Deering has been elected vice-president, the remainder of the directorate remaining unchanged.

—At a recent meeting of the Mt. Tamalpais and Muir Woods Railway, J. D. Jamison and W. B. Flaville were elected directors to fill the vacancies caused by the resignations of Charles F. Runyon and H. F. Woods.

—Overruling protests, Superior Judge Seawell has granted the petition of Frank J. Symmes, receiver of the California Safe Deposit and Trust Company, to sell 37,792 shares of Western Pacific Railway stock belonging to the defunct banking institution for any price he could obtain.

—Tonopah-Belmont made a total of shipments of $129,366 for its two plants, February 5th. A two months' cleanup in Tonopah Mining furnished shipments of bullion aggregating $38,000. Tonopah Extension shipped bullion valued at $68,000, and concentrates valued at $10,000. The shipments of the camp for the week ending February 2d totaled $177,432, estimated values.

TRAVEL EAST IN LUXURY.

Sunset Limited to New Orleans through balmy skies. Thence through historic scenes of days of war, now alive with southern life and industry. The Sunset Limited and its connection at New Orleans with the New York and New Orleans Limited makes an ideal winter trip East. Service the best. Stop-over at points of much interest. For booklets and information apply Washington Sunset Route, 874 Market St., San Francisco, Cal.

E. F. HUTTON & CO. BANKERS

Members—New York Stock Exchange; New York Cotton Exchange; New York Coffee Exchange; New Orleans Cotton Exchange; Liverpool Cotton Association; Chicago Board of Trade.

Private Wire—New York, Chicago to San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Branch Offices—San Francisco, 190 California St., and Hotel St. Francis; Los Angeles, 118 Fourth Street, I. W. Hellman Building.

PIONEER HOUSE OF THE PACIFIC COAST

RESULTS FOR 1915

The Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Company

OF CALIFORNIA

FORTY-EIGHTH YEAR

GEO. I. COCHRAN, President

GAIL. B. JOHNSON, Vice-President

New Life Insurance Issued (Paid for Basis)	$21,518,654.00
Total Life Insurance in Force, Dec. 31, 1915	160,659,702.00
<small>GAIN IN LIFE INSURANCE IN FORCE</small>	<small>6,134,255.07</small>
Total Cash Income	9,753,687.16
<small>GAIN IN CASH INCOME OVER 1914</small>	<small>247,571.11</small>
Total Paid Policyholders	3,939,593.98
Grand Total Paid Policyholders Since Organization	44,350,477.81
Surplus, Assigned and Unassigned (<small>EXCLUSIVE OF CAPITAL</small>)	3,504,807.47
<small>GAIN IN SURPLUS (Assigned and Unassigned)</small>	<small>514,961.90</small>
Total Admitted Assets	35,656,611.04
<small>GAIN IN ADMITTED ASSETS</small>	<small>3,051,998.79</small>
Premium Income, Accident Department	1,794,094.77

All the Foregoing Figures are Compiled from the Sworn Report of the Pacific Mutual to the Insurance Department in each of the Forty-Five States in which the Company is Licensed to do Business.

KILGARIF & BEAVER, Inc., Managers

F. A. STEARNS, Manager ACCIDENT DEPARTMENT

EDWIN G. BATH, Manager
INTERMEDIATE DEPARTMENT

SHREVE BUILDING, SAN FRANCISCO

SOMETHING NEW

The Pacific Mutual has a plan for paying DOUBLE the AMOUNT of the Life Policy in case of Death by Accident, and at a trifling additional cost. You place yourself under no obligation whatever by sending in this coupon

KILGARIF & BEAVER, Managers
Shreve Building, San Francisco.

Please send me rates and information as to the Pacific Mutual's new Doubling feature.

Name

Address

Occupation Age.....

Breaking through with the FEDERAL

Reducing horse-drawn haulage costs to fractions with Federalized transportation has proven the efficient service-giving qualities of Federal trucks in over five thousand installations.

You are vitally interested in cutting all possible corners in the running expenses of your business. How about your traffic department? Is it using the horse-drawn methods of "Yesterday" or the "up to the minute" Federalized Transportation?

Our service facilities insure a minimum delay in case of accident and thus save you time and money.

May we show you how the Federal way is the road of low cost haulage in your business?

The Pacific KisselKar Branch

Geary at Van Ness

Phone Prospect 607

Oakland

San Francisco

Los Angeles

San Diego

Pasadena

SAN FRANCISCO
 THE CITY OF THE FUTURE
 NEWS LETTER
 California Advertiser

Devoted to the Leading Interests of California and the Pacific Coast.

Vol. XCI

San Francisco, Cal., Saturday, February 26, 1916

No. 9

The SAN FRANCISCO NEWS LETTER AND CALIFORNIA ADVERTISER is printed and published every Saturday by the Proprietor, Frederick Marriott, 21 Sutter street, San Francisco, Cal. Tel. Kearny 3694 Entered at San Francisco, Cal., Post-office as second-class mail matter. Chicago Office—Geo. Hische, 1310 Westminster, Westminster Building, Chicago.

London Office—George Street & Co., 30 Cornhill, E. C., England. Matter intended for publication in the current number of the SAN FRANCISCO NEWS LETTER AND CALIFORNIA ADVERTISER should be sent to the office not later than 5 p. m. Wednesday.

Subscription Rates (including postage)—1 year, $4.00; 6 months, $2.25; foreign—1 year, $6.00; 6 months, $3.25.

—The Los Angeles River shouldn't need to be irrigated this coming summer.

—Oklahoma legislators had a pitched battle the other day, and one of them was knocked out. Yet prize-fights are barred.

—Bryan has been challenged to debate on defense. Why draw him out when he shows a disposition to keep his mouth shut?

—There is a dim prospect that the question of what a submarine may or may not do will be settled by the time the next war takes place.

—"You can have what we do not want—provided we find anything we do not want" is the city's attitude toward the United Railroads.

—Yuah Shi Kai says that the revolution doesn't amount to much anyway. But at least there's enough of it to keep the crown off his head.

—West Virginia man slipped and fell while carrying two cans of nitro-glycerine. What became of him? Nobody has been able to find out.

—The Bureau of Weights and Measures has found that the county scales at the jail are out of order. Now let there be an inspection of the scales of Justice.

—The butter supply in Berlin has been cut down to one-quarter of a pound per person per week. With less butter to spread on it, the people will not need so much bread.

—"Please take us back," is the pathetic plea of the Progressives to the Republicans. And the elephant replies: "There aren't enough of you left now to make it worth while."

—The Chinese gambling clubs have asked for injunctions against police raids. The white gambling clubs find a little personal adjustment and understanding far more effective.

—Six armed boys, all under twelve years of age, were caught in the act of burglary the other night. Probably a combination of movies, dime novels and the probation system.

—President Wilbur and Chancellor Jordan have made a list of the ten greatest graduates of Stanford—and they are all men. Does that mean that co-education is a failure, or that the eminent makers of the list let masculine prejudice rule them?

—Woman divorces her husband because he has been intoxicated for fifteen years. One would have thought she could have grown accustomed to it in that time.

—Nevada stage driver says his team was halted by an army of jack rabbits, the landscape being so full of them that the horses could not proceed. That sage-brush brew is something fierce.

—Elihu Root says that Wilson is leading the United States directly into war. The possession of brains does not prevent a man talking bally nonsense when the exigencies of politics demands it.

—The State Fish and Game Commission announces that it is going to encourage clam farming. They must not forget to plant part of each farm to garlic, so that we may have clams bordelaise.

—Massachusetts legislator proposes a law providing that when whisky is served in a bar the bartender must pour the liquor into the glass. Must be a lot of brim-her-full drinkers in the Bay State.

—Immigration officials declare that there will be a great rush of Europeans to this country after the war. If the war keeps on much longer there will not be enough of them left to constitute a real rush.

—William Waldorf Astor took his seat as Baron Astor in the House of Lords the other day. Little did his progenitors think, as they counted over their coon-skins, that they were laying the foundation for such transcendental glory.

—The despatches tell us that the Sultan of Pelak is dead. We never heard of the gentleman; but from the sound of his name, we will hazard a guess that he was closely related to the Ahkoond of Swat, who, it will be recalled, is also decidedly dead.

—Stevenson received one hundred dollars for "Virginius Puerisque." A letter which he wrote to his mother, complaining of the small price, sold the other day for two and a half times that amount. Time brings its rewards—but is not always allowed to wait.

—Two Michigan men who killed a man for his money dug a grave for him before they knocked him in the head. That's more consideration than is shown by most murderers, who have a nasty habit of leaving their victims lying around cluttering up the landscape.

—Old General Gloom, coffined grimly, has been consigned to a watery grave by a lot of optimists. He was dumped overboard near the Farallones with joyous ceremony. He has a lot of kin in this neck of the woods who for the good of the community should meet the same fate.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

HOLDING UP THE RAILROADS FOR $100,000,000.

To what extreme measures the leaders of the train service brotherhood of the country will go in order to enforce their demands for a $100,000,000 a year increase in wages is still a hard nut which corporations are endeavoring to crack. One of the leaders of the brotherhood went on record recently by saying that there would not be any arbitration. "All the arguments will follow the strike order, and not precede and delay it. If our demands are not acceded to the men will walk out." Very likely this means that the only alternative to the granting of their demands is a strike.

The railroad managers will never accede to these demands unless as the result of the award of an arbitration board. The general public, knowing little of the fine questions behind the issue over this demand of a 25 per cent raise in the wages of engineers, conductors, firemen and trainmen, regards the problem with perplexity, and any chance tie-up of the railroads a terrorizing blow at the business activities of the country.

The present period is a rather critical one in railroad transportation in this country. Most of the transportation lines have only recently literally pulled themselves out of the morass of hopelessness by sheer grit. Hostile legislation and hard times had hammered them pitilessly for several years, and now when the sun of better times is just rising on the horizon they are confronted with the threat: "Hold up your hands and throw over $100,000,000." The public should know and realize clearly that that $100,000,000, if the brotherhood of railroad employees succeed in their demands, will ultimately come out of the passengers and shippers' pockets. The railroads will simply be collectors of the increased freight and passenger rates. These continuous demands of labor for higher wages is one of the principal causes of the present high cost of living. The three hundred thousand railroad men that are said to be connected with this proposed strike will pay back a proportion of this increase in wages, if they get it, in the higher cost of living; the heavier burden, of course, will rest on their fellow laborers.

According to the schedule of annual pay of railway men in the United States and other countries, the average yearly wages of railway employees in this country is very much higher than the wages of like employees in any foreign land. The figures for the first six nations on the list are as follows: United States (1914) $808 per year; Canada (1914) $700; United Kingdom (1912) $279; Germany (1912) $404; France (1911) $209; Belgium (1911) $256; Holland (1911) $334.

Vice-President and General Manager W. R. Scott, of the Southern Pacific Company, states that the increase of pay of engine and train employees since 1903 amounts to from 30 to 42 per cent, and as late as last year a board of arbitration allowed engine men a further wage increase on roads west of Chicago.

A JUNE WEDDING ANNOUNCED FOR CHICAGO.

—King in the Chicago Tribune.

Something like 42,000 miles of line, or approximately one-fifth of the mileage of the country, are even now being operated under receiverships. If this strike should be insisted on during the present wave of prosperity sweeping over the country, paralysis of the railroads naturally would prove to be the paralysis of the country's commerce at a most critical stage. The railroad managements believe the engineers and trainmen are now receiving adequate and even liberal wages for the services performed, and have been relieved of much labor heretofore performed. The present wage scales have been fixed by arbitration and the federal laws, by impartial boards of arbitration, representing not only railroads and their employees, but also the public, which boards have taken into consideration not only the conditions of employment and wages in the railroad service, in comparison with other lines of industry, but also the higher standard of living, and awards were made accordingly.

THE PHILIPPINES AND PARTIAL FREEDOM.

The Philippine question is likely to be with us for many years to come, despite the acts of the present administration to yield the islanders certain privileges of freedom of government as promised in the platform laid down at Baltimore. According to the bill under consideration, the Philippines will be removed from the direct jurisdiction of Congress four years hence or later. But there is attached a string which virtually declares the Philippines shall govern themselves with special regard to the interest of the United States. If the bill passes Congress unchanged, the islanders upon obtaining their partial freedom will not be permitted to enact any legislation levying duties on exports to the United States, no matter what the legislature of the islands may do in regard to exports to other countries. This means, of course, that the influence of Uncle Sam will still be extended over the islands to a restraining degree. Even the strongest radicals on the question of separation of the islands have gone so far as to urge Congress to make a complete separation between the two countries. In this wise there is a clause which provides that the President has the power to withhold proclamation of their freedom if he may purpose to refer any question arising in the meantime to a further consideration of Congress. This clause will likely be vigorously made use of by the Republican party should they sweep into power at Washington in the fall election. This elastic clause would enable them to reconsider the situation, and very likely that party would put several enveloping wraps around the Philippines that would indefinitely extend the date of full freedom indefinitely.

The bill, however, is not complete in the House, and more modifications may yet be introduced. An interesting angle of the discussion is the suggestion of what might occur should the Filipinos, with partial liberty granted them by the United States, appeal to an Asiatic power to help them to gain their independence. From present conditions prevailing over the Asiatic littoral, the chances are that such an appeal would pass unnoticed. Japan is the only country that might tip a wink of forbearance at such a proposition, shrug its shoulders, and turn contentedly to turning out war munitions for the Russians. Australia and the other British colonies in that part of the globe would file some very strong protests with the mother country, aside from showing a strong initiative against any Asiatic power attempting to take a hand in the Philippine affairs

JUBILEE YEAR OF
Y. M. C. A.

It is in a measure somewhat significant that this year of the great European war marks the jubilee anniversary of the Young Woman's Christian Association, as well as that of the Women's Christian Association. At the close of the Civil War in this country, fifty years ago, an extraordinary change swept over the conditions and prospects of the many women of the land who had lost the support of husbands, fathers and brothers, their usual providers, and in consequence were forced to seek some kind of employment to earn a livelihood, a momentous shift in the social and economic life of the country. Exactly the same momentous shift is now underway among the belligerent nations of Europe, where many of the women are taking to farm labor, becoming conductors on 'buses and tram cars, and invading other vocations formerly monopolized by men. After the Civil War a like flood of women invaded factories, offices and other lines offering employment in this country, and women's clubs, women's "homes" and organizations to protect women in their new lines of endeavor sprang up, among them the Young Woman's Christian Association. Such organizations furnished retreat headquarters, employment agencies, and social offerings for these women wage earners, counter attractions to allurements that beset many of them. Noble women in England and France are forming organizations on allied lines to find employment, homes and the proper social centers for the scores of thousands of women who have lost their protectors and providers in the present conflict. The present Golden Jubilee celebration of the Young Woman's Christian Association illumines the dark side of the present conflict, and cheers the despondent with the saying of the preacher that out of evil comes some salving good.

ANENT THE RISING
PRICE OF GASOLINE.

For once the drowsy Congressman is onto his job, and is now actively chasing the hooded masked mystery man that is putting up the price of gasoline in this country. The chances are he'll never "cotch 'im," for that price booster is one of the slickest price manipulators in this country, and has been at the game ever since honest old John D. Rockefeller prayed that the distillates of petroleum should peddle at satisfactory prices. That was some fifty years ago, and the game has been played almost on the square ever since. Gasoline in this State has advanced some 40 per cent in the last few months, and is busily climbing. In the East it commands 30 cents. Bear in mind, though, that California owns the greatest and most productive oil fields in the world, and that by a new process gasoline is now manufactured from heavy carbon oils, which are plentiful in the San Joaquin fields.

There may be no coincidence in the following situation, but during the early months of the war the oil business was hit harder than any other natural industry in the country, and prices at the well dropped to the lowest mark in many years.

Gasoline sold for 10 cents. The small producers, as usual, became the football of adversity, and scrimped in every way to escape the stress. Numbers of them were obliged to sacrifice their properties to the big oil companies in order to save something out of the wreckage. Monte Cristo and other formerly big, successful companies were glad to sell at anywhere near a figure that their property was worth. Nearly all the companies with short purses were forced out of the game, and the big oil companies, Standard and others, picked up the bargains and fortified themselves in a stronger position in developing, refining and marketing oil. The result is that four big oil companies now practically dominate the situation in marketing oil: Standard, Associated, Pan-American (the new Doheny combination), and Shell, a Dutch concern and a strong competitor with Standard in the world's trade.

On the Pacific Coast, Standard Oil of California sets the price of oil, as was testified by numbers of prominent oil men in a hearing held before the State Railroad Commission.

Among the many organizations energetically bent upon bringing visitors and colonists to California, the San Francisco Convention League stands prominent. Its recent summary of work consummated since its organization, November 30, 1909, to January, 1916, surveys a field of extraordinary exploitation and results that have richly added to the prospects of the State in advertising and residents, as well as in dollars and credit. In the five years ending with 1914, the hustling members of the organization induced 118 conventions to meet in San Francisco, an estimated attendance of 140,000. On the customary average that each visitor spends $70 during a week's stay, these 140,000 tourists left $9,800,000 here up to the close of 1914.

With the Exposition looming before them a year ahead, the Convention League began to reach out in a more systematized way to bag bigger game. The result was that in 1915 they secured 822 conventions with an estimated attendance of 650,000. Based on the usual $70 per week in individual expenses, these delegates and their families and friends contributed $45,500,000 to the coffers of California. This sum, added to the aggregate of the preceding five years, brings the total to $55,300,000. The expenses of the league in this period reached $100,000. Thus for every dollar expended by the organization the city received an estimated $550. It was due to the active preliminary work and the broad and varied experience acquired during the ripening years from 1910 to 1915 that primed the talents of the members into excellent shape to meet the gigantic work culminating in the record number of world wide conventions handled so successfully by them during the famous exposition year.

During these seven years the convention league has distributed each year approximately a quarter of a million pieces of literature throughout the country. Each year about 5,000 conventions meet in the United States, and the convention league sent about 10,000 letters on an average to the delegates attending them. Only a comparatively few residents and property owners here are aware of the persistent and active work that is being done week in and week out to attract visitors to San Francisco and advertise its attractions to outsiders. It is a herculean task, and its success is indicated by the growing population of the city and State. Local transportation corporations cheerfully recognize the effects. Both steamship and railroad companies state that the influx of visitors booked for visits here this year will surpass all records except the Exposition period. California and San Francisco are on the tourist's map of the world to stay.

TOWN CRIER

—A larcenous progressive, backed by an independent in politics, several Democrats of local credit and renown in holding down political offices perennially, a handful of non-partisans, a bunch of hilarious good fellows and several interested neutral dogs, attempted this week to capture the headquarters of that holy of holies of local republicanism, the Union League Club. As usual, those political heroes, the Coriolanus of the citadel, Gonfalonier Sam Shortridge, and the chief aid of the castle's keep, Sir George Pippy, B. A. C., were on their eternal watch. Frank Gould, the canniest politician in the West, in that he possesses the protean power to hold office under any party in power, led the attack, impelled by the fervid suspicion that the club had lost so much of its republican spirit that it would slide easily into a non-partisan headquarters if given the proper shove. Gould shoved. The republican spirit began to slide and hit the tinware in the kitchen basement with such a tremendous bang that the mighty Sam Shortridge started up with a bound. He looked around with one suspicious gaze, and instinctively sensed the situation. Sam has not specialized in political smells for nothing. In the next sixty seconds he stormed with the spirit of Achilles, the valor of Hector and the acumen of Ulysses; he recalled the day and hour when the club was in its swaddling clothes and every loyal Republican fought for the privilege of nursing it into a ganzgutlusty-republicanisherbund, and no yap dared say him nay. Of all the old guard of standard bearers of the party that has crowned the glories of republicanism in the West, Sam Shortridge is unanimously acknowledged to be the most towering Western pine, and when the wind whistles through his top branches, believe Shakespeare, some words flow, scamper, flood the surrounding landscape. Like another Cicero, he set forth in all its malefic aspect the sordid character of this Cataline conspiracy, and the torrent of his compelling execrations sluiced those larcinous progressives, other political eruptions, et als., etc., down the steps and into the cinerator wagon outside the front door. Shortridge smiled humanly, bowed to the driver, and closed the door of the Union Club with a "Thank you."

—The yellow journals of the country are enthusiastically wallowing in the unsavory details of the university student, Orpet, who is held by the police for the death of his high school sweetheart. All the letters of the deluded girl covering the course of her illicit love are published with infinite care and pride. To offset this contemptible act the papers play up accompanying moral dissertation furnished by oblique angled moralists ventilating a lot of moth-eaten advice to young men and women to avoid "such death traps of the soul and body set by Satan." Some war god stalking the earth in search of victims can do no better than taking a swipe with his club at these editors and scribes who "repaint morals while you wait." Crimes of the Orpet character are becoming less in the world, and higher morals along such lines would prevail were it not that the yellow press systematically exploits the most vicious side of life to its readers. The axiom of the business department of such papers that crime exploited in melodramatic fashion "gets the mutt's goat" and hooks subscribers. The dollar mark and profits hedges the policy of these yellow sheets, and warped lives such as Orpet and his alleged victim are the food they feed on.

—Great is the jubilation of the sugar men of the U. S. A. on account of the decision of the administration to repeal the free sugar clause. That means that the revenue department of the government will collect approximately $40,000,000, the round value of the tax on sugar shipped from abroad when international trading is normal. All the governments of the world are just now scrimping around to get more money from taxpayers in order to pay the big bills of that glutton of the hour, "Preparedness." The $40,000,000 in revenue that the government will continue to receive from sugar imports seems a rather huge sum to the ordinary piker in haberdashery wear, but to the Treasury Department of the U. S. A. that $40,000,000 is only a small marker in the $500,000,000 which the government is endeavoring to collect from the taxpayers and the revenue tax on imports to defray the bills of Preparedness. Sugar has been a "war baby" ever since the war began, and it has waxed fatter and fatter with the months, till now island sugar plantations are paying all sorts of extra dividends and a warmer place in the sun. During the year before the war, sugar was sunk in the doldrums, and sugar men were burrowing deep into the Discouragement mound to get out of sight of their creditors. War is a great juggler of the stock market, and the Hawaiian and California sugar makers get their fingers into the pie along with the Eastern munition makers.

—Since the saddening news came from Washington that the manufacturers of clothing in this country are running short of dye stuffs and a nation-wide appeal by the government was made to the public to content itself with the simplest colors used in apparel, very remarkable developments have occurred. Patriotic women of the country enthusiastically adopted the advice of the government by shortening their skirts, impelled with the double purpose of saving both cloth and dye stuffs during this direful war period and perhaps for a longer time. In the tumult of this enthusiastic spirit of patriotism which managed to dominate a large part of the sex, the skirts have been growing shorter with the days, and the somewhat alarming question now arises at Washington, "How far will patriotism carry them in their enthusiasm to shorten skirts." The Washington authorities, in their appeal, failed to put a limit to the shortness, and as that limit is now rapidly approaching the waist line, the administration thinks the moment has come to yank the alarm bell of the nation and have the curtain dropped. However, the dye situation has been saved.

—Despite the desperate efforts of the well meaning, fathomless efforts of the Bryan, Jordan-Ford-et als. combination to resurrect the badly shot-to-pieces bird of peace, and presenting its remnants as a souvenir to the belligerents, there is not the slightest sign of any chance of a "kick in." On the door of the former Peace Pandemonium at the Hague there is tacked a placard announcing "Closed for Repairs." Ford's recent Peace ship is now transporting war munitions abroad, and the devil himself has sown dissensions among the peace protagonists. Satan still handles the situation, and there will be nothing doing in the peace line till England completely wallops Germany or Germany effectually effaces England from the map. An axe will be preferable to a scalpel by either of these two combatants to efface his rival, and even the dulcet warnings of Jane Addams and her sobbing sisters may not alter the fixed and deathly determination of these two doughty fighters.

—A motorist who met with an accident while intoxicated has been sent to jail in San Mateo, and a San Francisco offender of the same sort who ran down and killed a man has been convicted of manslaughter. It will need only a few cases of this sort to convince a certain class of auto drivers that booze and safety first do not travel the same road.

Making Five Hundred New Millionaires

BY GEORGE FREDERICK.

"War, for Europe, is meaning devastation and death; for America a bumper crop of new millionaires and a hectic hastening of prosperity revival. The coming of war orders has created more value, by five times, than the war orders themselves!

"When the great war began, America had about 4,100 millionaires. If the war continues two years more, there will be a crop of at least 500 more millionaires.

"The making of 500 more millionaires is a mere detail compared with the psychological brace which war orders have put into a slack and snail-like return of prosperity.

"The 'war orders' placed in this country comprised nevertheless a gigantic industrial piece de resistance. A grand total of about two billion dollars in war orders of one kind and another is estimated to have been placed in this country.

"The DuPont powder firm and the Remington Arms people naturally secured a great slice of war orders. The Du Pont firm, on excellent authority, has war orders totaling about $320,000,000. It paid a 200 per cent dividend on October 1st last, sending the stock up to 750. Before the war it sold at 129. Stockholders of Du Pont since 1912 cashed in, or could do so, at 503 per cent profit. In other words, a 100 shareholder, if he could chose, could made $93,000 profit!

"The magic and the tragedy of the drama of munitions making at the Du Pont mills are alike fascinating. Ten thousand men worked to produce the additions to the mills, erected within several months and now accommodating 20,000 extra workmen. A group of cornfields, worth at most $15,000, were transformed in eight months into a full-fledged city with every convenience, populated by 29,000 and having an assessed valuation of about $3,000,000, all this only to be burned to the ground in a few hours on December 9th.

"The Bethlehem Steel Company is in a class by itself. It is the most gigantic smithy for the forging of engines of destruction which the Western Hemisphere possesses, and it surpasses the Krupp and Creuot plants in many particulars. Its profits are authoritatively expected to leap to $45,000,000 next year. The company is doing at least $200,000,000 more business than in normal times. Charles M. Schwab, to whose foresight in going early after war orders is attributed the entire 'war bride' boom, gets not only a salary but a 10 per cent bonus on business done. The rise of this stock from around 46 to about 600 acted like a high-tension electric current to Wall street speculation, and galvanized into life a whole string of dormant stocks. Even railway stocks and bonds, which had long gone a-begging, are now going actively forward.

"Although it does not figure so prominently in speculation, barbed wire is a very great essential in modern warfare. The slaughter before the trenches would be unthinkable if they could easily be 'rushed.' Barbed wire, often charged with electricity, keeps opposing forces off, and it is American wire that is used. Nearly one million tons per year is the rate of export at the present time, and the prices received for it are almost three dollars per ton higher than before the war.

"The making of shells is a particularly important feature of war orders. One Brooklyn firm is making 15,000 per day at $12.50, or about $180,000 worth per day, which is at the rate of $36,000,000 per year, if capacity orders are maintained. Scientific management exports have demonstrated that average shells can be made at a complete cost of $7.10 each, which leaves a profit of $5.40 per shell to any factory, achieving maximum efficiency if price obtained is $12.50. On 15,000 shells per day this would be a profit of $81,000 per day! But this is very optimistic figuring, for under hectic war time conditions the shells are costing the makers from nine to ten dollars each. Somewhere in the neighborhood of $2.40 is being wasted on each shell (or $30,600 in one factory alone each day.)

"Bluntly speaking, war orders acted like a great splash in a stagnant pond. The noise of the splash was exciting and was soon over, but the ripples resulting from it have been countless, for-reaching and insistent. Stupendous circles of trade have been started and the unnatural, diffident stagnation of before the war orders times has been dispelled, some say for all time in America.

"It is an amazing fact that war orders started the sluggish current of trade to the extent of billions of dollars. Factory windows lighted all night, the jamming of railway yards, the cry for mercy and announcing of embargoes by various freight handlers, has been just the tonic needed to bring the old-time American business temperament to its feet and set it going at something like the old pace.

"People who were last spring reluctantly persuaded to buy a month's raw material ahead are now excitedly clamoring for any amount—small or large—at a premium! Factory workers who only last summer had three ten-hour days a week doled out to them as though it were a charity, are now working every day until ten at night on overtime, and getting overtime rates on all over eight hours! A few months ago there were 300,000 idle freight cars; now presidents of railways are losing sleep because of shortage! It is a mad world suddenly come upon us!

"Naturally, one of the most important raw materials affected by war orders is steel. The effect of the war order influx was first of all to swell to great proportions the demands for machinery to make shells, etc., and for structural steel for the many new additions to factories; then again for material for more cars and ships to transport the goods; more locomotives to haul them. And now, to cap it all, as the result of the war, the United States wants great quantities of steel to build warships and submarines of its own, and nations are buying goods for use after the war is over.

"The situation in the steel industry is positively breath-taking. It is admitted that the steel market is running wild, and some say that in six months it will be almost impossible to get an order accepted. Even now orders are carefully debated before acceptance.

"The United States Steel Corporation is about to spend $15,000,000 in enlarging the capacity of its various centers.

"There is copper; everybody knows how it sagged down almost to the point of complete break. One-time powerful companies were reduced to bankruptcy. Now it is the main concern of the leading copper people to prevent the market from acting like a broncho! Not only are the Allies buying copper, but it is now rumored that German agents have contracted for some $40,000,000 worth for delivery after the war. Copper is now five cents above the average price for the past twenty years, and some producers are making 100 per cent profit.

Uncle Sam's Bill to the Allies for War Goods Delivered (First eight months of 1915)

Automobiles	$65,463,000
Copper	70,000,000
Horses and Mules	86,000,000
Explosives	65,000,000
Leather	55,000,000
Shoes	24,000,000
Barbed and other wire	14,000,000
Miscellaneous (food, etc.)	100,000,000
Total	$479,463,000

—"Reggie would tango perfectly but for two things." "Yes? What are they?" "His feet."—St. Patrick's Monthly Calendar.

FOR QUALITY, THE BEST

In Bulk and Cases

CHARLES MEINECKE & Co.

AGENTS PACIFIC COAST 314 SACRAMENTO ST., S. F.

PLEASURE'S WAND

"Obey no wand but Pleasure's."—Tom Moore.

Holmes Travelogues at the Columbia.

Burton Holmes, the celebrated lecturer, is here showing wonderful pictures. He touches several countries each evening, and his pictures on this account are doubly interesting. He begins with "The Cliff Dwellers of Chicago," and jumping from there to "The Pueblos of New Mexico." He showed us prehistoric houses that were old when our friend Columbus discovered America. From there he jumped to Australia, showing some wonderful and undeveloped country, the very wildness of which would be inclined to make us believe that we were in the jungles of darkest Africa. From there we skipped back to our own country, and on to Annapolis, giving a most interesting illustrated talk how our naval cadets are trained. That America has some wonderful scenes he exemplified by showing us some marvelous pictures of the "Grand Canyon of the Colorado," and this in turn was followed by a very attractive trip into West Australia. We were then shown how we are turning out the future officers of our army at West Point. For those who are satiated with the conventional form of entertainment, these illustrated lecture travels will prove a boon and a blessed relief. Large and appreciative audiences are in attendance, and the entertainments are given every afternoon and evening. They are worth while because they are unusual, and Holmes is without doubt the very best we have in America in doing travelogues.

* * *

Big Features at Pantages.

The big feature of the bill this week is Arthur Lavine and his company, presenting a tabloid musical affair entitled "From Coney Island to the North Pole." It is a most ambitious production, showing three big scenes, with all kinds of mechanical effects. The music is catchy, the comedians funny, the girls are pretty, and the costuming excellent. There is a snap and vim to the whole thing which is pleasing. It's the best thing of the kind I've witnessed for some time. LeRoy and Paul open the bill with a novelty acrobatic act which is cleverly executed. Greenlee and Drayton are two genuine colored folks who have a very neat act, quite different from the conventional song and dance stunt. They are undoubtedly crackerjack dancers of the eccentric order, and this is their strongest feature. Hanlon and Clifton have an act which they call "The Unexpected," and which is, as the title implies, a surprise. In a pretty drawing room setting they are discovered playing the violin and singing, and of a sudden they change into dexterous acrobats, their hand balancing being wonderfully well done and exceedingly clever. The act also has a surprising finish. Arline, the gypsy violinist, shows splendid technique and genuine musical qualities. While not a genius, she is undoubtedly a fine violinist, and she knows the kind of music the public likes. She scores a real success. Raymond and Bain, two San Franciscans, have an awfully good act called "Locked Out," which shows them off to decided advantage. The gentleman displays a fine tenor voice, and has real unction and fun-making proclivities. It is an act away from the conventional type, and is highly enjoyable. The Valerie Sisters have an act made up of singing and dancing and eccentric stunts. The lady who does the character stuff is really remarkably clever. Their act goes big. The "Red Circle" film continues to mystify and entertain. It's a dandy bill throughout, and should not be missed.

PAUL GERSON.

* * *

The Fourth Monday Morning Musical.

There was a noticeable increase in the number of the audience at the St. Francis last Monday morning, and those who assembled there to hear Mme. Lorna Lachmund and Mon. George Mascal felt that the hour had been well spent, I am sure.

Grace De Mar, with new songs and dainty gowns, at the Orpheum next week.

The program was operatic in character, and gave both artists ample opportunity to do good work; however, singers used to all the accessories of the stage as well as freedom of physical expression, seem to feel the lack thereof on the concert platform.

Besides the several groups of soli, there were three duettes, viz., from Verdi's "Traviata" (second act); Massenet's Thais (last act), and the closing number—the scene between the Jester and his daughter in the second act of "Rigoletto." While Mme. Lachmund would no doubt make a charming "Gilda," yet the proper singing of this onerous number was too great a task last Monday; to do her justice, however, she told me after the concert that she was suffering from a severe cold, which proved a serious handicap. In her individual work, the Mad scene from Hamlet, Chere Nuit (Bachelet) and Der Vogel im Wald (Tauber) she gave decided evidence of careful study and conscientious devotion to detail, singing the Tauber bird song with charming sweetness and freedom.

Mascal sang like the great artist he is. The first, a group, were "Sai tu voulais enfant" (Fiches), "Neiges Eternelles" (Dubost), and "J'ai reve de toi" (Collinet). Then for his secand solo, he sang the Aria from Massenet's "Herodiade," Salome, Salome, putting into it all the deep emotion it enacts and of which his beautiful mellow tone quality is so capable. A hearty persistent applause brought him back and we were again treated to the Aria.

The date of the fifth concert has been changed from the morning of March 6th to the afternoon of February 28th, at four o'clock, in order that we may have the advantage of hearing Miss Ada Sassoli, the harpist, and Mr. Horace Britt' cellist, together. This combination should prove a rare one; in fact, Mr. MacFayden is greatly to be congratulated upon the selection of his artists so far.

BETTY.

Maude Fay Sings at Symphony Concert.

Miss Maude Fay, dramatic soprano of the Munich Opera, sang at last week's concert of the San Francisco Symphony before the largest audience that has ever attended one of the organization's regular concerts. Not even Madame Schumann-Heink drew so large a crowd. But the artistic event of the program was the rendition of the Brahms' Third Symphony under the direction of Conductor Hertz, who gave a notable interpretation. The weirdly wonderful Dukas "Apprenti Sorcier" overture with all its profound symbolizing passion, and poignant, appeals, appealed to the audience, and was rapturously applauded. Miss Fay was naturally in the hearts of her audience, and strengthened her position by her singing of "Dich Theure Halle" from Tannhauser, and Heza's aria, "Ocean, Thou Mighty Mother," from Weber's Oberon. Into her voice she put all the compelling powers of an enraptured prima donna—and this striking attitude appealed strongest to her many friends, as they wished to see her in her operatic mood rather than in concert expression. Her success impressed her friends that she had "arrived" at the goal of her ambitions. Her voice is warm and distinctly agreeable, and is flexible with emotional persuasiveness. Her friends were enthusiastically fervent in their expressions of delight.

Maude Fay's Rise to Fame.

The musical talents of gifted Maude Fay were discovered first by Baroness von Meyerinck, of San Francisco, while the Baroness was teaching music at the Girls' High School. Miss Fay's wonderful voice attracted attention at once, even before any training. After seven years' instruction by Baroness von Meyerinck, who introduced her to Gadski, Maude Fay went to Europe with a letter from Gadski to the latter's manager, who heard her sing and took an interest in her. Before long she was singing in Grand Opera in Munich, and was fairly launched on her brilliant musical career. Many others of Baroness von Meyerinck's pupils have won fame in the musical world. One of the features of her instruction is quick sight reading of music.

ADVANCE ANNOUNCEMENTS

Big Hit of Sumurung at the Orpheum.—Next week will positively be the last of Gertrude Hoffman and her company in the colossal production of "Sumurun," which is proving the greatest theatrical sensations San Francisco has ever known. All the other acts on the programme, with one exception, will be entirely new. The Mirano Brothers, who style themselves "The Flying Torpedoes," will appear in their feats of daring. They perform the most sensational and daring gymnastic stunts ever witnessed by an audience. Their apparatus is constructed to resemble the famous Eiffel Tower, and their perch is its apex. Lamberti, the famous musical impersonator, will present living portraits of Liszt, Hollman, Joachim, Strauss, Gounod, etc. He also gives an artistic rendition on the instrument most favored by the composer he depicts. As Liszt he plays the piano; as Hollman the cello; as Joachim the violin, etc. Moore, O'Brien & Cormack, who announce themselves as "Speed Boys from Songland and Comedyville," dispense melody and comedy with lightning-like velocity. Winsome Grace De Mar will introduce a cycle of new songs which tell interesting stories to catchy melodies. The Langdons will present their laughable skit, "Kidding and Skidding in Johnny's New Car." The ninth installment of the famous Uncle Sam at Work motion picture, entitled "Bureau of Weights and Measures," will be shown.

(Continued to Page 20)

In the Wake of the Indoor Yacht Club

The Fete in Fairyland at Civic Auditorium

As seen by A. S. Macleod

Little Talks on House Decorating

By Judd Shirley

Indirect Lighting. Its Effect Upon the Room.

The lighting of a room is of the utmost importance, first and foremost, of course, because of eye comfort; but the direct bearing it has upon the interior decorating is not to be lost sight of, or your plight may be akin to that of small Belinda of our great-grandmother's own book of short stories and long morals.

Belinda of the pantalettes and poke bonnet went a-shopping. A glass vase of a glorious purple shade proved her undoing, and all the pennies in her quaint little bead bag went to the buying of it. Alas, on the way home all the beautiful color leaked out thro' an imperceptible crack, and great-grandmother's tale pointed the obvious moral unctiously: Belinda should have consulted a competent authority—her accompanying mamma; or have seen to it herself that the royal purple was dyed-in-the-glass and not poured in by an unscrupulous vender.

Even so, you may have achieved at considerable expense and a lot of bother, a color scheme that is the pride of your heart and the delight of your eye until the lights in your amber-tinted globes come up at eventide and reveal to your amazed sight the lovely heliotrope brocades as empty of your favorite tint as Belinda's vase. So, it wouldn't be a bad idea if you're not up in the theory of color, to let some one who is make a few suggestions in regard to your house lighting.

To be pleasing a room should have some shadow, or be in the predicament of pathetic little Peter Pan, who lost his, and was very unhappy over it. It is through shadow that the eye rests itself in gauging both size and distance. On the other hand, too much shadow is not desirable. Side lights produce spots of strong light, with, of course, corresponding areas of deep shadow. The lighting experts tell us that eye-strain is produced by the constant adjusting of the eye from light to dark. However, if one has young, strong eyes, or strong, old eyes that are able to jump nimbly from light to darkness and feel no evil effect, side lights need not be tabooed; certainly they are the most decorative of lights, that every play of light and shadow lends interest to the room.

Fixture for side light of metal with insert of enamel

* * *

The ideal light is an indefinite quantity; because it should, quite as much as the decorations be planned for the needs and desires of its occupants. You might as well lay down a hard and fast rule as to how many cups of coffee they should be allowed at breakfast and how many lumps of sugar to each cup!

Of course, a large, formal room, say a drawing-room or ballroom planned for the pleasure of the many rather than the use of the few, should have a good, generally diffused light which can only be obtained by one, or several, overhead lights, depending upon the size of the room.

For the average room, the best all around lighting effect for both eye and room is produced by a soft general light—an indirect ceiling light gives this—which affords the seeing area of the eye a steady adjustment; with a few shaded side lights to lend mellowness and interest to the room.

For actual, practical use, reading or close work of any kind it is imperative that there shall be a light falling directly upon the object used, not upon the eye. This is afforded by the desk, table, or the adjustable light. The reading lamp should be so constructed that the angle of the lamp shade shall be in direct ratio to the height of the base; that is, the higher the body of the lamp the steeper the shade; the more squat the base, the more flaring the shade, else the rays of light will be imprisoned within the lamp shade, and and of little benefit to the reader or worker.

The most becoming light is the amber light, which is soft and mellow. That is one reason why the light of the candle remains a permanent favorite; the other reasons being its intrinsic beauty and the compelling hold it has upon the imaginations of those who love to hark back to the charm of a by-gone time.

It was this same amber light that shed such a fairy glamour over the Exposition Grounds, and happily, is soon to glow upon our main thoroughfare.

Of Egyptian design, made for a Berkeley residence by a Sutter street shop

Reading lamp—Chinese base.

Lamps and Fixtures

that harmonize with their surroundings Made of the new Metal Tapestry, as softly colored as a fabric.

Indestructible

Especially charming in English chintz pattern or in Oriental design.

THE PALMER SHOP
1345 Sutter Street

Here, There and Personally

With the reports of the four large packing companies in this country, a fair idea of the prosperity of the year 1915 is revealed. The complete turnover for the year amounted to about $1,500,000,000, or at the rate of $125,000,000 a month. The increase in gross sales for the four companies was: Swift, $75,000,000; Armour, $50,000,000; Morris, $10,000,000; and Cudahy, $7,040,706. Net increase was: Swift, $4,637,500; Armour, $3,590,000; Morris, $115,742; and Cudahy showing a decrease of $127,665.

* * *

Conservation forces are lining up for a fight at Washington on the water power bills as they now stand in the Senate. The chief fight is to be made on the Shields bill for the disposal of water power sites on navigable streams, but some conservationists also are making an attack on the Senate amendments to the Ferris bill for leasing water power sites on the public domain.

* * *

Major-General George W. Goethals, governor of the Panama Canal zone, arrived in New York recently on the steamship Calamares on his way to Washington to appear before the congressional committee on canal appropriations. General Goethals said he was unable to fix any definite date as to when the canal would be opened, but was confident there would be no more slides. Brigadier-General Clarence R. Edwards, commanding the military force in the zone, also arrived on the Calamares, and both he and General Goethals stoutly denied that serious difference of an official nature existed between them, as previously reported in cable messages.

* * *

During the last 60 days more than 1,000,000 employees of industrial establishments and transportation lines in the United States have been notified of advances in wages, the great majority of these advances being made voluntarily by the employers by reason of profitable business.

The successive discoveries of worth or value in natural products makes an interesting tale, as one by one, common and uncommon objects are found to be useful, and then are marketed because of their utility. To illustrate: the present shortage of dyes in the United States is bringing manufacturers back to the vegetable realm for supplies. In the Osage orange, or bodoc, which at one time was so popular as a hedge shrub, they are finding yellows considered equal to those derived from the fustic woods of South and Central America. As it was once shown that no other wood-made wagon wheel fellies equal those made of bodoc, so now Oklahoma and Texan owners of ranges that are overgrown with the shrub are finding that there are sources of quick fortune making in their territories other than oil wells and fertile soil.

* * *

San Francisco has kept green the memory of '49ers by actually using gold coin in common business transactions. It is the last surviving "gold money" city in the country. The distinction seems likely to disappear in a very short time now that the Federal officials have begun to weigh the coins and discount for abrasions. The common use of the coins was a waste and an anachronism; but it is rather remarkable that sentiment and European custom in his regard have been so generally overcome in this country.

—On a date soon to be announced, San Franciscans will be able to enjoy ice skating in a rink offering nearly 16,000 feet of ice surface. That location will be that now occupied by the Arcadia Dancing Pavilion at the corner of Eddy and Jones streets. The men behind this enterprise are some of the owners of Techau Tavern, and their plans embrace many attractions and novelties, such as those which have made the Tavern famous. Professional skaters will soon arrive from New York to fill engagements at the new rink, the opening of which will be a gala affair. The public will be given skating lessons every morning. Spectators will be provided with adequate seating accommodations.

Rates REDUCED Within Reach of Everybody

BROWN TAXI SERVICE

INCLUDES (AMONG OTHER THINGS)

Before All Else SAFETY

Sufficient stands with starters in attendance so conveniently located, that when supplemented by our complete and efficient inter-locking telephone system, we are able to supply BROWN TAXIS at any summoned point with an irreducible minimum of delay.

Cabs kept always at top notch mechanically, in appearance and in luxury of equipment.

Cabs hygienically cleaned every day.

A competent and complete mechanical department which, together with constant and close inspection, has rendered certain that BROWN TAXIS will reach their destination without delay, as danger from break-down or mechanical trouble has been practically eliminated.

Charge Accounts.

Calling at any point within the City limit without charge for the empty trip.

TAXICAB COMPANY OF CALIFORNIA

"ORGANIZED RESPONSIBILITY"

Music hath evidently lost some of its charms to soothe the savage breast. The symphony concerts attest the musical enthusiasm of this city by the Western sea, but only those who have suffered can give testimony of the inharmonies that surge through the discontented, while from the musicians on the stage come the magical notes of the composers.

Have you observed the lady to the center left? Perhaps you fancy that she looks so pained because she did not understand that last bit of Deboussey. She apparently has no patience with those restless souls, the beating of whose wings is making the new art. Something of this sort you say, after the concert to your neighbor, and friend-neighbor promptly rips your deductions—zip! they go, like a single thread seam.

Neither the lady to the centre left; nor the girl to the centre right; nor any of the others, to left or to right, behind you or before you, square up right to your theory about their petulance.

They are too occupied with a private grief to give themselves up wholly to enjoyment or criticism of the music.

But it is not the sort of grief that has any element of the nobility of discontent. It is an almost unbelievable personal consciousness of self-importance. If you don't believe it, ask any of the subscribers who have been mixed up in the petty war for aisle seats which has shattered the peace and quiet of the managers of the symphonies.

Aisle Seatis, the new disease which broke out in the beginning of the season, for awhile threatened to disrupt the organization that puts up the financial deficit of the concerts. Mrs. So-and-So wanted to know if the money her husband contributes is not as good as the money of the "favorites," who got aisle seats; Mrs. Somebody-Rother demanded to know what "influence" was exerted against her; Mrs. Never-Giveup insisted that a "nobody" on the aisle be ousted in her favor—and so it went, this silly clamor for aisle seats, and managers tore their hair and weak women gave up their aisle seats to their stronger sisters, and now the dove of peace dares flap one burnished wing, anyway around the premises. But for a time it looked as though the feeling that boiled over the brim would ferment into discord, the vibrations of which would spoil that accord in an audience necessary to put the players en rapport. It took a firm hand and a steady head to put things to rights, for there were those who dragged race and religion into the controversy, and one woman actually went so far as to say that it was her avowed sympathy for Germany which had prevented her from getting aisle seats!

Of such is the true kingdom of music lovers not made up!

Society is wondering whether Mrs. Hannah Neil Hobart set sail to the Orient to decide in the calm of an ocean journey whether she could find happiness in the affection of the artist-suitor who has wooed her so admirably all season that friends do not see how he could have failed to make a dent in her armour.

They have both had unsuccessful matrimonial ventures, and he has adventured much since his divorce in playing knight to fair ladies in the smart set, but not until Mrs. Hobart returned from the East to introduce her young daughter to society did he really get down to the serious business of proving that a painter can be steadfast in the fine art of love.

However, Mrs. Hobart is the farthest star in all the heavens to which any man could tie the tail of his kite. She has fore-sworn matrimony, and her resolves are not blurred as lightly as many another's. So her capture will be an announcement that the suitor, whoever he be, has a vested interest in persistency.

And while the matchmakers have been stalking this romance, little Miss Hannah Hobart has been having a lovely time with twice the number of beaux that usually falls to the allotment of any one debutante. The other day her name was added to the list of victims of the whooping cough, and she has had to cancel all social engagements, many of them, like the affair in her honor last Friday night, falling far short of the usual notch of merriment, all the young guests deploring the enforced absence of the motif of the occasion.

The Peninsula set has been singularly beset with childish diseases this season. Many of the oldsters have had chicken-pox, measles, whooping cough, or some other infantile malady, and many are the neat quips that the wags have tossed off apropos of this. The latest is accredited to Willis Polk, who recounted the number who have had chicken pox and then sagely remarked: "There is nothing like living in the country to keep a man young."

The San Francisco friends of Addison Mizner, who have been wondering whether there was anything in the rumor that he is to wed Mrs. Belmont, can put a period after their conjectures. Mrs. Belmont is not going to marry Addison Mizner. I have it on the word, the written black face, stub pen word, of her closest friend in the suffrage work, that she is not going to marry Mizner, or any other man.

Addison Mizner helped Mrs. Belmont in the production of the musical comedy which she is financing and will send around the country for the benefit of the suffrage fund. The reporters spelled a romance into the situation, but it was a very free method of spelling! According to my friend, Mrs. Belmont has very pronounced views on the disadvantages of marriage, but as she arrived at them via the Vanderbilt millions and the Belmont fortune, she can hardly expect to discourage the average girl who is unwilling to take her experiences vicariously. However, the group of young women who are her immediate cohorts must take heed of her warning or be banished. The road to the altar is not allowed to meander through the Belmont preserves.

So "Addie" Mizner is still in the bachelor's running.

The coming Fashion Show will demonstrate the difference between the professional model and the society girl. We have had fashion shows here during the Exposition, with the professional models bidding for the favor of the audience, and now we shall see the beauties of the smart set displaying the latest whims of the humorous Jade of Fashion. It will be a magnificent opportunity to discover whether the shop girl has the best of it when it comes to carrying off clothes, or whether the society maidens put it all over the professionals. Perhaps no one is so interested as the models themselves, who cannot wait to see their smart customers at their jobs.

After the fashion Show, dansants innumerable, and then the Mardi Gras, and criss-crossing all these events the weekly stunts which the smart hotels are giving. Conspicuous among these, the concerts at the Palace, which are attracting large numbers of the music lovers who enjoy a quiet hour of music as an antidote to the speeding up events of this crowded life.

For the fourth of the Tuesday Morning Musicales at the Hotel Oakland, Mr. MacFayden presented Mme. Lorna Lachmund and Mons. George Mascas. Mme. Lachmund has appeared in leading opera houses in Europe, taking leading soprano roles, with such artists as Battistini and Boklanoff, two of the foremost baritones of the day. Her one appearance in San Francisco brought forth unlimited praise and demand for another hearing. She was soloist with the Loring Club at their last concert. George Mascas, considered by many to be the leading lyric baritone, sang in opera in Europe, and came to this country several years ago. He is remembered by his remarkable performances as Herod in Massenet's Herodiade. He toured the country with Tetrizzini in concert, and later joined the Chicago Opera Company, where he sang leading baritone roles with Mary Garden. The next Morning Musicale will be given on Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock, February 29th, and the closing concert on March 7th, at 11 o'clock.

Not
Gray
Hairs
but tired
Eyes
Make us look older than we are.
Old age
and Dull
Eyes—
tell-tale.

Don't Tell
Your age

After the Movies
go home
and Murine
your Eyes.
Two
Drops
will rest,
refresh
and cleanse.
Have it
handy.

Murine Eye Remedy Company, Chicago, Sends Book of the Eye upon request.

Revue des Modes Will Strike New Note.

The gowns to be worn by the society maids and matrons who are taking part in the Revue des Modes, to be given at Scottish Rite Auditorium next Wednesday and Thursday evenings and Friday afternoon, for the benefit of the Free Kitchens for Nursing Mothers in France and the California Ward in the American Hospital in Paris, promise to express an original note in the newest of modes. All of the pictures will be posed by women of unusual grace and beauty, and the gowns have been fashioned in color and line to suit each model.

Mrs. Morgan Gunst, who is a stately, bewitching blonde, has chosen an ash pink faille exquisitely embroidered in silver. The coat to match the frock is of the same material, heavily embroidered in silver and trimmed in ash pink ostrich tips. Mrs. James C. Eaves, who is another of the smart set's most beautiful young matrons, will take the part of the bride. Her gown will be of white, shimmering satin, trimmed in silver and old lace. The veil is to be of a rare old pattern of point d'Alencon. Her attendants will be Misses Lloyd Meiere and Coralie Mejia, and they will be gowned in dawn pink, silver and orchid.

Other models who will wear beautiful costumes are Mesdames Edgar Sinzheimer, Willard Drown, E. Clinton L. Montagne, Alanson Weeks, Abe Stern, Edgar Peixotto, Earl Cummings, Misses Phyllis de Young, Ruth Perkins, Gertrude Hopkins, Leonore Mejia, Helen Hamilton, Dorothy Churchill, Marie Hathaway, Kate Crocker, and Jean Wheeler.

Mardi Gras Costumes and Prizes

Mrs. Charles Templeton Crocker, whose gowns on all occasions may always be depended upon to excite thrills of envy in the souls of less fortunate women, will surpass all of her former bounds of sumptuousness and originality in the costume which she is to wear as queen of the Mardi Gras, which is to take place at the Palace Hotel, Tuesday evening, March 7th, for the benefit of the Children's Hospital.

It is to represent a pink-tipped lotus lily sparkling in the midnight dew. The skirt will be a lotus lily from which Mrs. Crocker will emerge in a resplendent bodice of tulle, lotus petals and iridescent jewels imitative of dew drops. The skirt will also be sprinkled with the jewels. When she enters with her court, drawn upon a Buddha throne of golden lotus, the lights will be dimmed, and the moonlight will glimmer through fruit boughs and deodars upon the gown, which will glisten like a thousand stars. In the court will be eight of the most charming young women of the smart set. Mrs. Samuel Hopkins will be gowned as a larkspur, Mrs. Talbot Walker as a nasturtium, Miss Marian Newhall as a daisy, Mrs. Arthur Chesebrough as a snowball, Miss Gertrude Hopkins as a fuchsia, Miss Marian Zeile as a jonquil, Mrs. J. Cheever Cowdin as a rambler rose, Mrs. Rudolph Schilling as a bluebell.

The courtiers, ruled over by Stanford Gwin, who will impersonate King Dragon Fly, will be Geo. Bowles, Frederick Tillmann, Jr., Nion Tucker, who will be green grasshoppers, Heine von Schroeder, William Leib as ants, Robin Y. Hayne, K. Kollock of Los Angeles as black beetles, and Kenneth Moore and Walter Hush as yellow jackets. The two pages will be two dainty lady-bugs, to be taken by two little girls.

The prizes will be an exquisite gold vanity case, donated by Shreve, Treat & Eacret, for the handsomest costume worn by a woman. The second woman's prize will be a crystal and pearl hatpin set. Mother of pearl and pearl cuff links and vest set will be awarded to the man's most striking costume, and the second prize for the men will be a gold pencil.

The Tea Dansant to be given next Tuesday, February 29th, in the ballroom of the Fairmont Hotel, will be in the form of a leap year party. The affair gives every sign of being one of the largest and most enjoyable dansants this season. Already most of the tables have been reserved, and each day brings in more names for reservations. The Army and Navy will be strongly in evidence, and a great many of the younger set will take part in the dances. The ladies in charge of the tea are: Mrs. William Seson, chairman; Mrs. Squire V. Mooney, Mrs. D. C. Heger, Mrs. Ella M. Sexton, and a long list of patronesses prominent in society around the bay. Mrs. Squire Varrick Mooney, who has charge of table reservations, reports a large advance sale. The popular price of $1 for admission, including refreshments, insures a large attendance. Table reservations are $1 extra for the hostess only.

Mrs. C. Curtis, who is giving a series of five lectures in the Rose Reception Room at the Hotel Oakland, used for her subject on Monday morning, "Thoughts of Things," her discourse being taken from Ibsen's "Master Builder."

Events in the Paul Elder Gallery.—Eugen Neuhaus will lecture in the Paul Elder Gallery, 239 Grant avenue, San Francisco, on Tuesday afternoon, February 29th, at 3 o'clock, on "Rythm as Found in Nature and in Pictures." This lecture was postponed from the preceding week, owing to the holiday of Washington's birthday. Leo Cooper will start a new course of interpretative readings from the modern drama on Wednesday forenoons at 10:30 o'clock. One of the attractive features is the class meeting before the regular reading of the day begins, when those so inclined may discuss the play read at the preceding meeting.

—University of California, in conjunction with the Y. M. C. A., will give an interesting course of lectures on "The City Man's Chances in Agriculture." The course will be given at the Y. M. C. A. Auditorium, on Golden Gate avenue and Leavenworth street. The schedule: March 7th, Poultry Industry; March 14, Dairy Industry; March 21, Swine Industry; March 28th, Alfalfa; April 4, Almond and Walnut Production; April 11th, Apple and Pear Production; April 18th, Stone Fruit Production; April 25th, Orchard Protection; and May 2d, Social Relations.

MISS HAMLIN'S SCHOOL FOR GIRLS

2230 PACIFIC AVENUE
2117 } BROADWAY
2123 } SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Boarding and Day Pupils. "Accredited" by all accrediting institutions, both in California and in Eastern States.

TELEPHONE WEST 546

DELINQUENT SALE NOTICE.
Natural Soda Products Company.

Location of principal place of business—San Francisco, California. Location of Works—Keeler, Inyo County, California.
NOTICE.—There are delinquent upon the following described stock, on account of assessment (No. 2), levied on the 29th day of December, 1915, the several amounts set opposite the names of the respective shareholders as follows:

COMMON STOCK
Names—	No. of Certificate	No. of Shares	Amount
Mrs. W. Landsburger	38	15	$15.00
R. G. Paddock	64	5	5.00
R. G. Paddock	80	50	50.00
Paul C. Paddock	95	575	575.00
P. J. O'Dea	4	10	10.00
P. J. O'Dea	32	30	30.00
P. J. O'Dea	34	70	70.00
P. J. O'Dea	50	100	100.00
George M. Lowrey	55	450	450.00
Eleanor Godfrey	54	100	100.00
H. M. O'Malley	103	100	100.00
H. M. O'Malley	104	200	200.00
H. M. O'Malley	105	50	50.00
PREFERRED STOCK
P. J. O'Dea	92	25	25.00
P. J. O'Dea	115	10	10.00
P. J. O'Dea	136	15	15.00
P. J. O'Dea	166	17	17.00
Noah Wrinkle	123	11	11.00
E. R. Elhasson	111	100	100.00
Katherine Scripps	117	100	100.00
Martha Z. Bennett	4	100	100.00
Martha Z. Bennett	160	25	25.00
Martha Z. Bennett	161	25	25.00
George Watson	21	3	3.00
Edwin Scheeline	21	25	25.00
H. W. Hobbs	60	25	25.00
Arla J. Joyner	67	10	10.00
Julla Hochheimer	146	30	30.00
Thomas Finnegan		14	14.00
J. H. Handlon	71	12	12.00
Mattie Brock	145	20	20.00
Beth Young	135	25	25.00
Dr. E. Restford	182	25	25.00
John Gropper	41	25	25.00
H. M. O'Malley	189	100	100.00
H. M. O'Malley	190	200	200.00
H. M. O'Malley	191	50	50.00
A. L. Friedman	192	100	100.00

And in accordance with law and order of the Board of Directors on the 29th day of December, 1915, so many shares of common stock as may be necessary will be sold at public auction for the benefit of the Natural Soda Products Company, No. 613 Market Street, San Francisco, California, on MONDAY, the 6TH DAY OF MARCH, 1916, at 11 o'clock A. M. at the office of said day, to pay said delinquent assessments, together with the cost of advertising and expenses of the sale.

NOAH W. WRINKLE, S.

Office—613 Market Street, San Francisco, California.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES

BY OUTSIDER

"Outsiders see most of the game."—Old Saw.

Polo at Del Monte

The defeat of the San Mateo Polo team by Del Monte last Sunday, 6 $\frac{3}{4}$ goals to 6, was somewhat unexpected, as on paper the peninsular team was much the stronger, Walter Hobart and Will Tevis having more goals in their rating than all of their opponents combined. However, the match was very close, and gave the spectators plenty of thrills. Will Tevis, until he was hurt, and George Parsons, were the outstanding players for their respective sides. Incidentally, a daily paper relates that a "pair of fouls" were scored up against Robin Hayne in the final chukker (sic). I did not know that this kind of foul came in pairs; presumably more than two in quick succession would be called a flock.

* * *

Teams and Score

San Mateo (color white)—No. 1, Robin Y. Hayne; No. 2, Ray Splivalo; No. 3, William Tevis, Jr.; back, Walter S. Hobart.

Del Monte (color red and yellow)—No. 1, George Parsons; No. 2, Captain McNally; No. 3, Lieutenant Brown; back, Harry Hastings.

Goals—By San Mateo, Tevis 3, Hayne 3, Splivalo 2. By Del Monte, Hastings 3, Brown 2, Captain McNally 1, George Parsons 1.

Safeties—Hobart 2, Hastings 1.

Fouls—Splivalo 1, Haynes 2.

Del Monte won, 6 $\frac{3}{4}$ to 6.

* * *

On Washington's birthday, San Mateo, with Harry Hastings substituted for Will Tevis, beat First Cavalry of Monterey in a handicap match by 8 $\frac{1}{2}$ goals to 6 $\frac{3}{4}$, the latter receiving an allowance of 5 goals. Walter Hobart showed signs of coming to life, and was easily the star of the afternoon's play, while Ray Splivalo also was seen to better advantage. For Presidio, Captain McNally outshone his less experienced team mates, although Lieutenant Howell gave evidence of promise which will fructify if he plays more in good company and becomes imbued with the idea of team play as opposed to personal polo. As usual the army was outclassed in ponies. This is an unfortunate condition with Uncle Sam's hired men, and is most discouraging to the players.

Teams and Score

San Mateo (color red)—No. 1, Robin Y. Hayne; No. 2, Ray Splivalo; No. 3, Harry Hastings; No. 4, Walter S. Hobart.

First Cavalry (color white)—No. 1, Lieutenant Howell; No. 2, Lieutenant Roscoe; No. 3, Captain McNally; No. 4, Lieutenant Thompson.

San Mateo won, 8 $\frac{1}{2}$ against First Cavalry 6 $\frac{3}{4}$.

Goals—By First Cavalry: Captain McNally 1, Lieutenant Howell 2. By handicap 5. San Mateo—Hobart 5, Splivalo 2, Hayne 2.

Fouls—Roscoe 1, Thompson 1, Splivalo 1.

Safety—Thompson.

George Parsons, referee.

* * *

A New Champion

The defeat of J. Neville by Douglas Grant, 9 and 7, in the Washington's birthday golf tournament at Del Monte, would be more significant if the former player had not fallen back in his game. However, Grant's 71 in the morning round, even if not made in the face of severe competition, together with the general average of his play since arrival, quite confirms the English estimate of his powers, and the regard in which he was held before circumstances induced him to adopt an English residence. His entry in the Western Golf championships at Del Monte in July will, in consequence, be followed with much more than the ordinary interest. The I-told-you-sos are having a great season, anyway, congratulating themselves on their appraisal of Grant's ability "if he would only take the game seriously."

The Heavy Weight Champion of Christianity

Jess Willard, champion heavyweight boxer and author, and one of Mr. Hearst's assistants, says that he asked for the postponement of his match with Moran because the date, March 8th, fell on Ash Wednesday, and many would not attend, as it was "a day that is held in great respect by the Christian world." Now I ask you could anything be mere naive than to postpone a prizefight to accommodate followers of the One who commanded us to turn the other cheek. Whatever may be said of athletes of the pre-signed article era, at least they were not hypocrites.

* * *

National Lawn Tennis Dates

The United States National Lawn Tennis Association has announced the dates for two of the national championship tournaments. The all-comers tournament in singles and doubles will begin on the turf courts of the Westside Club at Forest Hill, L. I., Monday, August 28th. The clay court championships will be started at the Lakewood Tennis Club at Cleveland, O., Monday, June 26th. This latter date will permit the all-Eastern team to play in the tournament on its way to the Pacific Coast for the first half of the annual East vs. West matches.

* * *

Racing Not Dead Yet

A total of $2,853,037 was distributed in stakes and purses on the American turf last season. The racing days numbered 839, and the number of races reached 5,454. These figures give an idea of the magnitude of the sport, but they do not compare favorably with the years of 1906 and 1907, when racing was in its heyday. In 1906, $5,420,381 was distributed as a reward to the speed of thoroughbreds. This was the high water mark when races were being conducted extensively in many States of the Union. Over $5,000,000 was also set up the following year. Along about 1910 the game was conducted at its lowest standard when adverse legislation had been put through in New York and in California, and it looked as if the sport was on its last legs. The coming season especially looks like a banner one, for New Orleans is running in full blast, and Kentucky, New York and Maryland are planning extensive and rich programs.

—Country School Teacher—You notice that boy who stands at the foot of his class? Well, last summer he was the brightest boy in school. Committeeman—He is now. I notice the foot of the class is nearest the stove.—Puck.

Feed Your Baby Regularly

Regularity in feeding, sleeping, bathing and airing are of utmost importance at the beginning of your baby's life. It means so much to you in managing your household duties. It means so much to the little one in health and happiness.

Your baby should sleep well at night. If he does not the trouble is often with his food. If you are nursing the baby and your milk does not agree with him try the time-tried substitute that is made from clean, pure cows' milk—

Gail Borden

EAGLE

BRAND

CONDENSED MILK

THE ORIGINAL

Three generations of careful mothers would tell you that they use "Eagle Brand," because it is pure, clean, uniform, easily digested, quickly prepared.

If you have never used "Eagle Brand" in cooking you have a happy surprise in store. It gives a delicious, rich flavor to your most delicate cookery. Use it as you would fresh milk and sugar.

Send coupon today.
Borden's Condensed Milk Co.
"Leaders of Quality"
Est. 1857 New York

N. L. 2-16

Borden's Condensed Milk Co.
108 Hudson St., New York.

Please send me "Baby's Welfare" Also "Baby's Biography" as well as "Borden's Recipes."

Name _____

Address _____

INSURANCE

A meeting of the Life Underwriters' Association of San Francisco was called for Thursday evening, February 24th, for the transaction of routine business and the discussion of resolutions on rebating and twisting recently passed by the Life Underwriters' Association of New York, and which it is the desire of Vice-President Priddy of the National Association to have endorsed by the different local associations throughout the country in order that a report may be submitted on these matters at the mid-year meeting of the National Executive Committee, which is to be held in Washington, D. C., February 24th, 25th and 26th. Vice-President Priddy states that a committee of the New York Association has talked this over with the officers of some half-dozen of the leading companies, and they have suggested an endorsement of this program by all of the life underwriters associations of this country. Should such endorsement be secured, the companies promise that the entire matter will be considered by a committee representing the companies. The resolution referred to are to the effect that every life insurance company shall refuse to grant a policy of insurance to any person who has been shown by satisfactory evidence to have refused to accept a policy of life insurance because a rebate was not granted, and that the companies be requested to enter into such a compact among themselves as will make it impossible for any of them, upon due notice, to insure such person. The second part of the resolution adopted recommends to all life insurance companies that they incorporate in their application blanks and in the blank used by the medical examiner substantially these questions:

"When and for what company were you last examined for insurance?"

"Will any insurance now in force or application now pending elsewhere be discontinued if the policy thereby applied for is issued? Except (here carefully note exceptions.)"

"If the facts brought out through these questions should indicate that the insurance applied for is taken for the purpose of discontinuing a policy then in force, it is suggested that all the facts shall be communicated to the other companies, and give them a chance to save their business, if they can properly do so. It is believed that if the companies will put themselves to the trouble of securing these facts the lapse ratio of the companies will be greatly benefited. At the meeting Thursday night the members participated in the usual dinner, and Frank J. Wallace, chairman of the committee on organization of the Insurance Federation of California, spoke on the necessity for the federation. The place of meeting was the Palace Hotel.

* * *

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Western States Life, President Warren R. Porter, in the course of his remarks, said: "The large increase in paid-for insurance in force at the close of last year attests the low lapse rate, and this is the severest test to which the value of the business in force can be put. The growth of our insurance business in force since the organization of our company has been most satisfactory and consistent. The record of last year is the best of our business history." At this meeting, directors were elected as follows: Alden Anderson, Charles M. Belshaw, Jas. H. Bishop, J. F. Carleston, George E. Crothers, M. E. Dailey, George W. Dickey, Robert E. Easton, J. E. Fishburn, Marshall C. Harris, C. F. Hunt, D. A. Madeira, George N. Merritt, L. Michels, Richard O'Connor, George M. Perine, Warren R. Porter, president; H. J. Saunders, vice-president and manager; Otto Irving Wise, vice-president and general counsel; W. W. Watterson and A. G. Wishon.

* * *

It may be authoritatively stated that unless some definite action is taken, legislatively or otherwise, to correct the growing abuse of underwriters' annexes, the Fireman's Fund will follow the example of the Home of New York and other conservative companies, and seek protection by organizing an underwriters' annex of its own. At a conference between the board of directors and the company's field men, held last week, such action was favorably considered.

* * *

Sam B. Stoy, manager of the London & Lancashire, has gone to Honolulu with Mrs. Stoy for a month's visit.

The attention of Insurance Commissioner Phelps has been called to the operations of the National Adjusters' Credit Indemnity Company, which has been operating in San Francisco without the authority of law. The method of the concern is to guarantee subscribers against loss from bad debts, and for this an annual premium is charged, which in the opinion of the California Commissioner, brings it under the provisions of the insurance code.

* * *

The Civil Service Commission of California, beginning today, will hold a series of civil service examinations for assistant actuaries of the State fund at San Francisco, Sacramento and Los Angeles. There are several of these positions to be filled.

* * *

President Warren R. Porter and Vice-President H. J. Saunders are making the rounds of their Pacific Coast agencies in connection with the company's "One-hundred-and-fifty-star contest," which has been under way since the beginning of the year. They left Saturday for Portland, and will in the order given visit Boise, Salt Lake, Los Angeles, Fresno, returning for the banquet at San Francisco on the evening of February 28th.

* * *

H. T. Ungewitter has just been appointed assistant manager of Pacific Department of the North River Insurance Company, Merchants' Fire Assurance Corporation, The Williamsburgh City Fire Insurance Company, The New Brunswick Fire Insurance Company, United States Fire Insurance Company, New Jersey Fire Insurance Company.

* * *

About one hundred representatives of the Equitable's agency and office force, including invited guests, were present at a banquet given by Manager Shields of San Francisco at the Hotel Oakland, on the evening of February 16th, in honor of Manager B. F. Shapro of the Oakland office.

—Pessimist—It he prosperous, do you think? Optimist—Is he? Why, he owes twice what he owns.—Judge.

SECURITY AND SERVICE

That's What You Get When You

Bond Your Employees

With

Pacific Coast Casualty Company

Of San Francisco, Cal.

A California Insurance Company

$250,000.00 on Deposit with State Treasurer as a Guarantee to Policy Holders
Agents in Every California City

1863

1916

FIFTY-THIRD ANNIVERSARY

Fireman's Fund Insurance Co.

Capital $1,500,000

Assets, $11,326,205

FIRE

MARINE

AUTOMOBILE

California and Sansome Streets, San Francisco, California.

The Connecticut Fire Ins. Co.

OF HARTFORD

CHARTERED 1850

PACIFIC DEPARTMENT

The Insurance Exchange, San Francisco

Benjamin J. Smith, Manager

The Home Insurance Company

Organized 1853

Cash Capital, $6,000,000

Insurance on personal effects of tourists and temporary sojourners anywhere in United States, Canada and Mexico. Insurance against loss by fire. Automobile Insurance. Indemnity for loss of rental income by fire. H. L. ROFF, General Agent. J. J. SHEAHAN, Ass't General Agent

333 California Street.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL ITEMS

ENGAGEMENTS

- CHADWICK-BROWN.—Mrs. J. Parker Whitney announces the engagement of her niece, Miss Beryl Chadwick, and Roy H. Brown, of Knoxville, Tenn. Miss Chadwick is a young woman of striking beauty and is well known in San Francisco, having spent several seasons here with Mrs. Whitney. No date has been set for the wedding.
- DIAMOND-SLACK.—The engagement of Miss Florence Deborah Diamond, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Diamond, to Walter Slack, is announced.
- RAVIT-BECKER.—Mr. and Mrs. G. Ravit announce the engagement of their daughter, Tressa, to Howard H. Becker.
- SEGURSON-HADER.—Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Segurson announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Blanche Ellen Segurson, to Carl A. Hader.
- WRAMPELMEIER-POWELL.—The engagement of Miss Ethel Wrampelmeier to William A. Powell of Oakland, is announced. Miss Wrampelmeier is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Wrampelmeier of Oakland. Mr. Powell, who is an honor graduate of the University of California, is an attorney of Oakland.
- ZACHARIAS-MAYER.—Mr. and Mrs. Z. Zacharias announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Violet Zacharias, to Mr. Emil Mayer of this city.

WEDDING ANNOUNCEMENTS.

- JOHNS-HUNT.—Miss Luella Johns and Charles Warren Hunt, Jr., will be married the middle of May, but the precise date is not determined. The ceremony is to take place at St. Luke's Church, with a reception afterwards.

WEDDINGS.

- GYLE-MAZOR.—Two well known Oakland families were joined Sunday when an elaborate wedding ceremony was performed in the Hotel Oakland, uniting Morris Mazor and Miss Beatrice Gyle. The service was read before an altar of orange blossoms by A. Eisenberg, cantor of the First Hebrew Congregation. The couple left for a honeymoon in the south. The bride is the daughter of Louis A. Gyle, 2311 Harrison street, and Mazor is the son of Mrs. S. Noah, 339 Warwick avenue.
- JENNINGS-RICHARDSON.—Miss Alice P. Jennings and G. T. Richardson, both of this city, were married Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock, at St. James Church. Rev. James O'Connell was the officiating clergyman. After a honeymoon trip to Honolulu, Mr. and Mrs. Richardson will make their home in the Richmond district.
- METCALFE-VAN CARTMELL.—Friends of Miss Edith Metcalfe received word telling of her marriage to John Van Cartmell, in Los Angeles, Sunday. It was a simple ceremony, with only a few friends and relatives present. The bride is a daughter of the late Capt. John Metcalfe of San Francisco. Mr. Van Cartmell comes of a family distinguished for its achievements in literature. Mr. and Mrs. Van Cartmell will reside in Los Angeles.
- THOMAS-BOCQUERAZ.—The marriage of Miss Gertrude Thomas and Roger Bocqueraz took place Wednesday afternoon in the ballroom of the Fairmont Hotel, at 4 o'clock. The Reverend Father Charles Ramm, of St. Mary's Cathedral, read the ceremony before an altar improvised of flowers. After the ceremony there was a reception to greet Mr. and Mrs. Bocqueraz. The repast was served in Laurel Court. There were about three hundred guests or more, including members of most of the well known society families. Mr. and Mrs. Bocqueraz will reside in San Rafael.

LUNCHEONS.

- BOWEN.—Miss Gladys Bowen was hostess Tuesday at a luncheon at her home in Clay street.
- LENT.—Mrs. Eugene Lent will extend her hospitality at luncheon on Thursday afternoon, March 2d. The affair will take place at her new home on Pacific avenue.
- LOW.—Miss Flora Low was hostess recently at a luncheon in honor of Mrs. William Howard of Boston and her daughter, Mrs. Frederick Whitwell.
- MILLER.—Mr. and Mrs. C. O. G. Miller were hosts Sunday at a luncheon which they gave at the Burlingame Club.
- OTIS.—A score of friends will enjoy the hospitality of Mrs. James Otis at luncheon next Tuesday afternoon. M. Joachim Marlant will be the honored guest. The affair will take place at the hostess' home on Broadway.
- SEAL.—Spring flowers of several varieties in tones of white and pink adorned the luncheon table over which Mrs. Henry Seal presided recently in compliment to Mrs. John McMulla.
- WOODRUFF.—A group of friends will enjoy the hospitality of Mrs. Chas. A. Woodruff, wife of General Woodruff, United States Army, at a luncheon to be given on the afternoon of March 1st.

DINNERS.

- BELL.—Major-General and Mrs. J. Franklin Bell presided at a charming dinner Monday evening at Fort Mason, when they entertained some Eastern visitors to this city.
- BOWERS.—Miss Madge Wilson and her fiance, Dr. Chester Smith, were complimented at a dinner given Saturday evening at the Palace Hotel by W. S. Bowers.
- FRIER.—Colonel James Frier, U. S. A., and Mrs. Frier gave a dinner Wednesday evening at their home at the Presidio in compliment to their daughter, Miss Lloyd Frier. Later the party attended the hop at the Officers' Club given as a farewell to the Twenty-fourth Infantry.

- EYRE.—Miss Elena Eyre was hostess Friday evening at a dinner given at her home in Broadway.
- GIBBS.—Mrs. George W. Gibbs was hostess Wednesday night at an informal dinner at her home in honor of Miss Johnson and her fiance, Arthur Saxe.
- HOTALING.—Mrs. A. P. Hotaling was hostess at a dinner given at her home recently in honor of the twenty-first birthday of her son, George H. Hotaling.
- JURS.—Mr. and Mrs. Peter Jurs will give a large dinner party on Saturday, March 1th, on the night of the Fashion Show and dance.
- LAW.—Mr. and Mrs. Harold Law will give a dinner at their home before the Mardi Gras ball at the Palace on March 7th.
- LONG.—"The Elms," the home of General and Mrs. Oscar Fitzalan Long, was the setting recently for a delightful dinner.
- MARTIN.—Mr. and Mrs. J. Downey Harvey, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Cooper and Baron Heine von Schroeder, enjoyed the hospitality of Mrs. Eleanor Martin at dinner Monday evening at her home on Broadway.
- MCCORMICK.—A dozen guests accepted the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest McCormick at dinner Saturday evening at their home on Washington street.
- PARKER.—Mrs. James Parker will be guest of honor at a dinner dance this evening at the Burlingame Country Club, with Prescott Scott as the host.
- SMITH.—Among the delightful affairs of Tuesday was the dinner given by Lieutenant and Mrs. Emery T. Smith in their attractive home on Filbert street.

TEAS.

- KELP.—The Misses Gertrude and Gretchen Kelp presided at a tea given on Wednesday afternoon in honor of Miss Anna McKay Brown of Portland, Oregon.
- VAN WINKLE.—Miss Evelyn Van Winkle will preside at a tea to be given at her home, February 29th.
- VAN WYCK.—Wednesday afternoon, Mrs. Sydney M. Van Wyck, Jr., gave a tea as a courtesy to Mrs. William H. Hunt of Washington, D. C., and her daughter, Mrs. Barnaby Conrad.

CARDS.

- BELL.—Mrs. J. Franklin Bell has asked a number of friends to a bridge party which she will give on the afternoon of March 2d at Fort Mason.
- BREEDEN.—Mrs. Henry Clarence Breeden entertained a number of friends Saturday afternoon at a bridge party and tea which she gave at her home in Burlingame.
- GRAU.—On Thursday afternoon, Mrs. Otto Grau gave a large bridge tea at her home.
- JOYCE.—Mrs. Kenyon A. Joyce gave a bridge party Tuesday at the Presidio.

DANCES.

- NEIGHBORHOOD DANCING CLUB.—The Neighborhood Dancing Club entertains its members and their friends at Century Club to-night.
- SEXTON.—The Sequoia Club was the scene of a most enjoyable dance on Saturday night, about a hundred and fifty or so participating in the subscription dance in which series of dances Mrs. E. M. Sexton has been giving at this place this winter.
- WHEELER.—Miss Jean Wheeler has issued invitations for a dinner dance at which she will preside Saturday evening, March 1th, at her residence on Washington street. Miss Elena Eyre will be the complimented guest.

RECEPTIONS.

- CAROLAN.—Miss Emily Timlow of Philadelphia, granddaughter of Mrs. James Carolan, was formally presented to San Francisco society at a reception given Wednesday evening by her grandmother at the Century Club.

MUSICALES.

- CROTHERS.—Mrs. Thomas G. Crothers will give a musicale at her home this evening, at which Miss Maud Godella (Mrs. de Los Mages) will give the programme.

THE HOTEL PLAZA

overlooking the beautiful Plaza of Union Square, the Hotel of refinement and service, is offering special rates to permanent guests.

Hotel Plaza Company

ARRIVALS

CROCKER—Mrs. Win H. Crocker returned Sunday from New York, where she went late in January. She left the Misses Ethel and Helen Crocker ensconced in a luxurious flat in the metropolis. Miss Ethel will continue her voice culture, and Miss Helen will study in other lines.

HARVEY—Mrs. J. Downey Harvey has returned from New York, where she has been enjoying a visit of several weeks.

HOBART—Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Hobart arrived home Tuesday from New York, where they have spent the last month.

RUTHERFORD—Mrs. Alexander Rutherford returned Saturday from New York, where she has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Smythe, for the past two months. With Mr. Rutherford she will leave shortly for her ranch at Pleyto.

WHITNEY—Mrs. William F. Whitney of Boston arrived recently for an extended visit with the family of her late sister, Mrs. J. M. Littleale, at their home on Pacific avenue.

DEPARTURES

AKED—Mrs. Charles F. Aked left Thursday afternoon for New York, thence to sail for Europe to join Dr. Aked.

BOND—Miss Ruby Bond left Wednesday for New York, where she will be a bridesmaid at the marriage of her cousin, Miss Oroville Wooster, and Walter L. Richard.

CHASE—Mrs. Lewis Chase, who was the guest of Mrs. M. A. Huntington for several weeks, has gone East to continue her series of lectures in behalf of "Brittany and the Bretons."

EISENBERG—Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Eisenberg have gone to New York, to be away several weeks. Mrs. Eisenberg was a Miss Dreyfuss of New York, and this is their first visit to her relatives since their marriage a few months ago.

HILL—Mr. and Mrs. Horace Hill, Jr., have gone to Southern California, where they will enjoy a two weeks' outing.

HOBART—Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Lilley and Mrs. Hannah Neal Hobart left recently for Southern California.

KITTREDGE—Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin F. Kittredge, who have been visiting in San Francisco from their home in New York, left recently for the East. They were guests at the Fairmont Hotel.

MACDERMOTT—Mrs. Louis M. MacDermott left recently for Boston to visit her parents, and will also be in New York for a visit with friends. Mrs. MacDermott will probably be away two months.

PARROTT—John Parrott, Jr., left this week for Coronado to recuperate from his long illness. He will be away several weeks.

TUBBS—Mrs. William B. Tubbs and her daughter, Miss Emily Tubbs, have closed their house on Jackson street and have gone to Santa Barbara, where they will spend the remainder of the winter.

INTIMATIONS

BAYNE—Mr. and Mrs. Richard Bayne are enjoying a visit in Santa Barbara, and will not return for several weeks.

COWDIN—Mr. and Mrs. J. Cheever Cowdin, who have been passing the greater part of their time since their marriage at San Mateo, have decided to enjoy the summer in Menlo Park this year. They plan to go there about the first of May.

DETRICK—A group of the younger set will be guests of Mrs. Bowie Detrick at the dansant to be given this afternoon at the Fairmont for the benefit of the war sufferers of Poland.

HUNTINGTON—A kitchen shower was the delightful surprise given recently to Miss Madge Wilson, whose marriage to Dr. Chester Moore will be an event of next month. Miss Marian Huntington was the hostess, her guests assembling in her attractive home on Maple street.

RATHBONE—Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Rathbone will rent their home at Burlingame to Mr. and Mrs. John Drum, and will spend the entire summer at Webber Lake.

SCOTT—Mr. and Mrs. Harry Scott have returned to their home on Pacific avenue, after a visit of several days in Burlingame as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Henry T. Scott.

VERDIER—Lieutenant Paul Verdier, who arrived in New York Tuesday from France, and is on his way to San Francisco, will be made much of by local society. Added to his popularity in the local business and social world, is his distinguished career in the army of France to make him most welcome to his friends.

WELCH—Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Welch and their children, Misses Marie and Florence Welch, who have been passing the winter at the St. Francis Hotel, will leave soon for San Mateo. Their home there has been undergoing extensive renovations.

WILLCUTT—Dr. and Mrs. George Willcutt are at Del Monte. Upon their return they will occupy the flat which Dr. Willcutt has furnished for his bride at Broderick and Jackson streets.

See Yourself
As You Should Look
free from facial blemishes and with a clear, soft, pearly-white appearance that will be the envy of your friends.

Gouraud's
Oriental Cream

11 does this for you instantly. Its effect is so subtle that its use cannot be detected. Non-greasy — 68 years in use.

Send 10c. for trial size
FERD. T. HOPKINS & SON, New York

Ornamental Trees and Plants

Special! Orange, Lemon and Grape
Fruit Trees Assorted
7 for $10.00

Lawn Seed Bedding Plants and Fruit Trees, always on hand

Bay Counties Seed Company
404 Market Street, San Francisco

MILTON TONINI, Mgr.

Phone Garfield 1625

TAKE YOUR CHOICE

EIGHT
TRAINS
EVERY DAY

To---

Los Angeles

YOU CAN LEAVE San Francisco (Ferry Station) at 4:20 P. M. on the "San Joaquin Valley Flyer;" or at 6 P. M. on the "Owl Limited"—

DINNER IS SERVED in Dining Car (also breakfast next morning) and you arrive in Los Angeles before 9 o'clock—

OR, IF YOU PREFER, you can dine leisurely at home and take the "Lark" at 8 P. M. from (Third Street Station)—

AFTER BREAKFAST in Dining Car next morning, you reach Los Angeles at 9:45, with a full day before you for business or pleasure.

IN ADDITION, there are five other daily trains, including the "Shore Line Limited"—"Down the Coast by Daylight."

Phone Kearny 2842

Cosgrove's Hair Store

Established 20 Years

239 Powell Street
San Francisco

W. D. Fennimore J. W. Davis A. R. Fennimore

Better Glasses for less Money

Now that the new "Caltex Onepieces" Bifocals have met with such universal satisfaction and demand, it is very safe to say that thousands who have never worn them, will do so in the coming year. The "Caltex Onepiece" double vision glasses reduce the cost of glasses as only one pair are needed for both reading and distance corrections are ground in one single piece of perfect optical glass and have the appearance of regular glasses.

181 Post Street } San Francisco
2508 Mission St. }
1221 Broadway, Oakland

AUSTRALIA and NEW ZEALAND

BANK OF NEW SOUTH WALES

(ESTABLISHED 1817)

Paid-up Capital	-	$17,500,000.00
Reserve Fund	-	12,750,000.00
Reserve Liability of Proprietors	-	17,500,000.00
Aggregate Assets 31st March 1915	-	$267,918,826.00

J. RUSSELL FRENCH, General Manager

346 BRANCHES and AGENCIES in the Australian States, New Zealand, Fiji, Papua, (New Guinea), and London. The Bank transacts every description of Australian Banking Business. Wool and other Produce Credits Arranged.

Head Office: GEORGE STREET, SYDNEY London Office: 29 THREADNEEDLE STREET, E. C.

The German Savings & Loan Society (THE GERMAN BANK)

Savings Incorporated 1868 Commercial

526 California Street San Francisco, Cal.

(Member of the Associated Savings Banks of San Francisco)

The following Branches for Receipt and Payment of Deposits only:

MISSION BRANCH, S. E. Corner Mission and 21st Streets
RICHMOND DIST. BRANCH, S.W. Cor. Clement and 7th Ave.
HAIGHT ST. BRANCH, S. W. Cor. Haight and Belvedere

DECEMBER 31st, 1915:

Assets	$61,849,662.02
Deposits	58,840,699.38
Capital actually paid up in Cash	1,000,000.00
Reserve and Contingent Funds	2,008,962.64
Employees' Pension Fund	211,238.93
Number of Depositors	67,406

Office Hours: 10 o'clock A. M. to 3 o'clock P. M., except Saturdays to 12 o'clock M. and Saturday evenings from 6 o'clock P. M. to 8 o'clock P. M. for receipt of deposits only.

For the 6 months ending December 31st, 1915, a dividend to depositors of 4 per cent per annum was declared.

The Anglo & London Paris National Bank SAN FRANCISCO

Paid-Up Capital	$4,000,000
Surplus and Undivided Profits	$2,010,869
Total Resources	$47,155,235

OFFICERS:

SIO GREENBAUM	Chairman of the Board
HERBERT FLEISHHACKER	President
WASHINGTON DODGE	Vice-President
J. FRIEDLANDER	Vice-President
C. F. HUNT	Vice-President
C. R. PARKER	Cashier
WM. H. HIGH	Assistant Cashier
H. CHYNSKI	Assistant Cashier
G. R. BURDICK	Assistant Cashier
J. W. LILIENTHAL, Jr.	Assistant Cashier
A. L. LANGERMAN	Secretary

THE CANADIAN BANK OF COMMERCE

HEAD OFFICE, TORONTO ESTABLISHED 1867

SIR EDMUND WALKER C.V.O., LL.D., D.C.L. President Paid-up Capital $15,000,000

JOHN AIRD General Manager Reserve Fund 13,500,000

H. V. F. JONES Assistant General Manager Aggregate Resource 250,000,400

London Office, 2 Lombard Street, E. C.
 New York Office, 16 Exchange Place

Branches in all parts of Canada, including Yukon Territory and at Seattle, Wash., Portland, Ore., and Mexico City

All Kinds of Commercial Banking Transacted

SAN FRANCISCO BRANCH--450 CALIFORNIA STREET
 Bruce Heathcote, Manager
 A. A. Wilson, Assistant Manager

BRUSHES

623 Sacramento Street, between Kearny and Montgomery Streets.

With full line of brushes, Brooms and Feather Dusters, on hand and made to order. Janitor supplies of all kinds. Ladders, Buckets, Chamois. Metal Polish and Cleaning Powders. Hardware. Wood and Willow Ware.

Call, write or telephone Keary 5787
WM. BUCHANAN

The Background of the War Zone

A standing army of 250,000 men cannot be recruited in this country in peace times, according to the adjutant-general's experience, unless soldier's wages are increased. If Mr. Gompers' idea of an army could be carried out, the army thus created might go on strike for higher pay every presidential year, and in that case, would the army's demands be submitted to arbitration like those of the railroad employees? These are problems in preparedness for the war college.

* * *

Records for 11 months ending December 1st indicate that more than $800,000,000 worth of food left American shores during the year 1915, nearly three times as much as in 1913, the year before the war began.

* * *

It is announced in all seriousness from Washington that Col. E. M. House, who is making a tour abroad as the personal representative of the President of the United States, "is drawing no pay and gets only his expenses." We fail to see why Col. House, or any other person, should be expected to contribute his service free of charge to a nation that thinks nothing of expending more than a billion annually on administration.

* * *

Former Secretary of State Richard Olney so infrequently shares in discussion of the external policy of the United States that, when he goes on record, what he says counts for more than it would coming from a persistent player in the limelight of publicity. His article, "The United States—a South American Power," forces upon his countrymen some rather searching questions involved in the logic of the Monroe Doctrine, a national policy which he, as it were, annotated, when he was in President Cleveland's Cabinet. The inference from his queries will be that he is not quite so certain now as he was then that the United States always serves its own best interests when it attempts to say what a South American republic may or may not do in making concessions to a non-American power. If the inference is correct, the change of viewpoint is very significant.

* * *

A special committee appointed by the British Board of Agriculture is about to report in favor of purchase of land by the government for the establishment of colonies of small holders, the development of co-operative buying and marketing, and of farm credit banks. This is the committee's plan for providing work for the discharged soldiers and for increasing the supply of farm products. The war has given the people further training in the idea and practice of co-operation, and this new venture, if it is undertaken, seems likely to begin under particularly favorable conditions. The experiment will be watched with interest by back-to-the-land students and authorities over here.

* * *

If the submarine is none too well fitted for preying on commerce, what of the Zeppelin? The ship destroyed at anchor by an airship returning from England appears to have been a naval collier, and therefore a legitimate mark, but since it was dark the commander of the Zeppelin presumably only knew that the light seen belonged to a ship. If it had been a cargo boat the act would have been of much the same sort as the attack upon non-combatants from which the war balloon was returning, but the transfer of these methods from belligerent territory to the high seas would be a matter of grave concern. Even less than the submarine is the airship fitted for providing for the safety of non-combatants. Should its defects give it a license to perpetrate forbidden acts of savagery, or constrain it to keep to the work for which it is fit? That is a question which civilization and not kultur alone will have to settle.

* * *

Sir William Robertson served ten years in the British army as a private before getting a commission. Every private has a chance to become commander of the army, just as every American boy has a chance to become president, but the handicaps of custom are greater. That Sir William is even "mentioned" for the virtual succession to Lord Kitchener is evidence of a remarkable career, rather than of the democracy of the British army.

While such well known men as Sir Arthur Conan Doyle are carried away by passion, it is good to see the Manchester Guardian still the keeper of England's conscience. "We can see no real argument of expediency," it says, "which would excuse us in stooping to the baseness which Germans have already reached." It is quite right in thinking that to kill innocent people in German cities would not deter the Germans from Zeppelin raids. The very worst punishment that England can inflict is to win the war by clean methods."

* * *

Ten per cent of the British officers who have died in the war were in the pages of "Debrett's Peerage, Baronetage, Knightage, and Companionship," and in the issue for 1916, just published, the war roll of honor of the dead comprises 800 names. In it appear one member of the Royal Family—Prince Maurice of Battenberg; 6 peers, 16 baronets, 6 knights, and 7 members of Parliament; 164 companions of the orders of chivalry, 95 sons of peers, 82 sons of baronets, and 84 sons of knights. Two successive heirs to the earldom of Loudoun fell, and the death of Lord Worsley affected the succession to three separate peerages—the earldom of Yarborough and the baronies of Fauconberg and Conyers. Succession has been unduly precipitated or the normal descent changed in over 1,200 instances by the casualties of the war."

* * *

"Mesopotamia—the great valleys of the Euphrates and the Tigris—may well be one of the great prizes of the great war," says the New Republic. "There lies the fabled Garden of Eden, the cradle of the race, the store house of the ancient world; there lie still the ruins of Babylon on the Euphrates, due south of Bagdad on the Tigris; there rise still the minarets of Bagdad, the city of Haroun al Raschid; further down the Tigris the British fought at Ctesiphon, for many hundred years the capital of Persia, the dwelling place of the Great King; further north near Mosul, itself a seat of Saracen Empire, the ruins of Nineveh still exist."

* * *

Mr. Asquith has pledged himself to the Labor members, spontaneously and unequivocally, both against any application of compulsion to married men during the war and against any continuation of compulsion after the war, according to the New Statesman. He pointed out that he naturally could not foresee what the future might seem to require, or a subsequent Parliament might demand. But if any extension of compulsory military service was thus called for, he would be no party to it. Those who then wanted it, he declared, must take his place. At the same time he gave very definite assurances, which he repeated less explicitly to the House of Commons, that the government would make no attempt to use compulsion to get men for industrial purposes, whether in munition works or other necessary industries, for private employers or for national factories."

—Observant Kiddy—Oh, look at that funny man, mother. He's sitting on the sidewalk talking to a banana peel."—Judge.

Los Angeles Pasadena Oakland
Fred Hartsook
 PHOTOGRAPHS
 41 GRANT AVENUE
 San Jose Sacramento San Francisco

The New
Poodle Dog
 Hotel and Restaurant
 At Corner
Polk and Post
 STREETS
 San Francisco
 Phone:
 Franklin 2960

San Francisco's Leading French Restaurant
 MUSIC
 French Dinner Every Evening, 75 Cents
 Sunday, $1.00
NEW DELMONICO'S
 362 Geary Street
 Above Hotel St. Francis Telephone Sutter 1572

BLANCO'S O'Farrell and Larkin Streets
 PHONE FRANKLIN 9
 No visitor should leave the city without seeing the finest cafe in America

J. B. Poo J. Bergez C. Mailhebau C. Lalanne L. Cootard
BERGEZ-FRANK'S
Old POODLE DOG Co.
 HOTEL AND RESTAURANT
 MUSIC AND ENTERTAINMENT EVERY EVENING
 415-421 Bush St., San Francisco (Above Kearny) Exchange, Douglas 2411

Tel. Kearny 1461 Private Exchange Connecting all Warehouses
SAN FRANCISCO WAREHOUSE CO.
 Warehousemen Forwarding Agents Distributors Public Weighers
 Spur Track Connection with all Railroads
 Main Office—625-647 Third St., San Francisco, Cal.

Travel on the Big Ships
 "Congress," "Governor," "President," "Queen"
 to
 LOS ANGELES SAN DIEGO SEATTLE TACOMA
 VICTORIA VANCOUVER
Berth and Meals Included at Sea
 Tickets to all Points East by Rail and Water
PACIFIC COAST STEAMSHIP CO.
 653 MARKET STREET (Palace Hotel) PHONE KEARNY 492

MELLOW AS MOONLIGHT
CASCADE
 For your HI-BALL today
 The finest, purest and mellowest whisky that brains and money can produce, cost to you no more than inferior grades; so why not ask for and insist on getting CASCADE.
 Instead of saying whisky, just say CASCADE, you will enjoy it and feel much better.
 Special enjoyable drink recipes for the asking by writing J. H. Norton, care San Francisco News Letter

GOODYEAR RUBBER CO.
HIPPO
 TRADE MARK
 The best and strongest Garden Hose Guaranteed to stand 700 lbs. Pressure
 Try it and Be Convinced
 San Francisco
 GOODYEAR RUBBER COMPANY
 R. H. PEASE, President 589-591-593 Market Street

ADVANCE ANNOUNCEMENTS

(Continued from Page 9)

Seventh Concert of Symphony Orchestra.—The San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, Alfred Hertz, conductor, with Horace Britt, violoncellist, as soloist, will give the seventh Sunday concert of the current season at the Cort to-morrow at 2:30 p. m. sharp. The public will be glad to learn that commencing with to-morrow's concert, all remaining concerts of this season will be given at the nominal prices of 50c., 75c., $1., with $1.50 for the seats in the boxes and loges.

To-morrow's Program—Overture to "Anacreon," Cherubini. "Lied" for Violoncello, Vincent d'Indy, Horace Britt. From Suite, "Ballet Scenes," Op. 54, Alex Glazounow; (a) Oriental Dance; (b) Marionettes. Prelude, "The Afternoon of a Faun," Debussy. Symphony No. 1, B flat major, op. 28, R. Schumann.

At the Cort Theatre on Friday afternoon, March 10th, and Sunday afternoon, March 12th, the orchestra will give the last pair of concerts but two of the present season. Nothing that this season may enjoy in opera or concert can surpass in excellence the program that Mr. Hertz has arranged for the eighth pair of concerts. The symphony will be the No. 4 of Beethoven, and is the happiest and most serene of all the great composer's symphonies. With the exception of the introduction, which bears traces of anxious uncertainty, if not of sadness, there is scarcely a measure in the symphony which is not bright, peaceful and happy; "it lies like a gleam of sunlight between the heroic Third and the majestic Fifth." The overture to a comedy of Shakespeare of P. Scheinpflug is new to the concerts of the orchestra. The lyric suite, opus 54, of Edvard Hagerup Greig, the great Norwegian composer, also has not been played before at concerts of the orchestra. The dramatic overture, "Husitska," op. 67, of Anton Dvorak, which closes the program for the eighth pair of concerts, was written in celebration of the opening of the New Bohemian theatre at Prague. It is possible that Dvorak had in mind, when he wrote his work, the picturesque figure of Johann Ziska, of Trocznow, who led the Hussites to glorious victories against the legions of Sigismund, Emperor of Germany.

* * *

Big Vaudeville Show at Pantages.—"The Office Girls," tabbed as "a commercial comedy with six dashing musical stenographers," is the star attraction on the new bill which opens at the Pantages on Sunday. William Craig, Dixie Harris and Belle Montrose, have the principal roles in the production, which has a slender plot, but contains a series of jolly song and dance numbers. Rucker and Winnifred, a twain of ebony hued entertainers, have a character specialty which has been one of the real hits of the show. "Before the Mast," a nautical travesty, will be presented by Ed. Gallagher and Bob Carlin, two well known comedians, who have been seen here in several of the big Broadway musical comedies. Bobby Harris and Harriet Nolin use two grand pianos for the introduction of some smart chatter and popular ballads. Bessie Harvey, the singing equestrienne, who renders operatic selections while seated on a beautiful white horse; Keegan and Ellsworth, in pert patter and novel dancing steps, and the eleventh episode of "The Red Circle," round out the rest of the program.

—A fair young girl of sixteen can say: "All my life!" in a more impressive way than can an old man of eighty.—Puck.

Pantages' Theatre

Market Street Opposite Mason

HIGH-CLASS VAUDEVILLE

"THE OFFICE GIRLS," "A Commercial Comedy with Several Winning Maids," Starring WILL CRAIG, DIXIE HARRIS and BELLE MONTROSE; RICKER AND WINNIFRED, "THE EBONY HUED ENTERTAINERS," ED. GALLAGHER & BOB CARLIN, "BEFORE THE MAST," A Jolly Nautical Travesty; SEVERAL OTHER PANTAGES FEATURES INCLUDING THE 11th Episode of "THE RED CIRCLE."

OrpheumO'Farrell Street Bet. Stockton and Powell
Phone Douglas 70

Week Beginning THIS SUNDAY AFTERNOON. MATINEE EVERY DAY.
Last Week

GERTRUDE HOFFMANN

and Company of 60 Artists in Her Glorious Triumph

"SUMURUN"

In Conjunction with

A NEW SHOW

MIRANO BROTHERS The Flying Torpedoes; LAMBERTI, The Master Musician; MOORE, O'BRIEN & GORMACK Speed Boys From Songland and Comedyville; Winsome GRACE DE MAR With New Songs and Dainty Gowns; THE LANGDONS "In Johnny's New Car;" BUREAU OF WEIGHTS AND MEASURES Ninth Installment of the Great Motion Picture.

Prices, 10c., 25c., 50c., 75c. Box seats, $1.

STANDARD OIL CUTS BIG STOCK MELON.

One of the biggest melons in corporation history is to be cut by the Standard Oil Company of California when it issues a 50 per cent stock dividend on its outstanding capital stock. The application of the Standard Oil Company to issue $25,000,000 in shares as a stock dividend out of the accumulated net surplus profits of the concern was granted this week by H. L. Carnahan, State Commissioner of Corporations. This dividend is said to be the first of its kind declared by Standard Oil in this State. It means that every holder of stock will receive one share for every two he owns. In addition to this, a cash dividend of $2.50 a share has been declared, payable on March 15, 1916. The outstanding stock of the Standard Oil Company of California is at present $49,686,055 out of $100,000,000 authorized, and is quoted at about $375. The corresponding price under the 50 per cent increase should be $250, which makes the actual value of the melon, in round numbers, $62,500,000.

—Frank B. Anderson, president of the Bank of California, returned from the East this week, and states that the financial reorganization of General Petroleum is progressing favorably. The financial report of California Wine Association for 1915 shows assets of $75,959,308. The chief liabilities are: Reserve for depreciation, $783,046; bonded debt, 5's, $1,233,000; 6's, $2,799,000; total, $4,032,000. Floating liabilities, including all subsidiaries, $3,104,767. Preferred stock dividend, 1916, $85,575. During 1915 the sales fell off 39 per cent as compared with 1914. The rigid economy practiced during the year cut down the floating debt $929,242, and the bonded debt $235,000.

—Honolulu Sugar Plantation has declared an increased dividend of 45 cents per share, payable March 10th. Notice is given that this increase from 35 cents will be maintained. On the announcement, the price of the stock advanced from 43 bid to 46½ asked. With the old tariff clause on imports of sugar restored, the sugar makers of California and Hawaii have a rosy and profitable era opening for them.

—The earnings of Tonopah Belmont for the seven months, June-December, totaled $500,239. The earnings for December totaled $80,135, showing a $16,000 advance over the November output.

—The output of the Tonopah mines for the week ending February 19th totaled an estimated value of $181,860.

—The Rochester mines have been listed in the Salt Lake Mining Exchange. This completes the circuit between New York and San Francisco.

—Tonopah Ex. has declared a 10 cent dividend.

—General Agent George H. Tyson is this year celebrating his 25th anniversary, and points with pride to the fact that the premium income in his department has, during that time, increased from a little over $100,000 to nearly $1,500,000. He also enjoys the distinction of being the only general agent in San Francisco in business at the present time who has represented his company for twenty-five consecutive years.

E. F. HUTTON & CO. BANKERS

Members—New York Stock Exchange; New York Cotton Exchange, New York Coffee Exchange; New Orleans Cotton Exchange; Liverpool Cotton Association; Chicago Board of Trade.

Private Wire—New York, Chicago to San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Branch Offices—San Francisco, 190 California St., and Hotel St. Francis; Los Angeles, 118 Fourth Street, I. W. Hellman Building.

PIONEER HOUSE OF THE PACIFIC COAST

Don't Dim Your Headlights

It's Dangerous to Drive With Less Light. Equip Your Automobile With

Double Lens Non-Glare HEADLIGHT GLASSES

Increase the Light; Comply With the Law; Easily Put In; Beautify the Car.

Not a new idea, but the same glasses used in theater spotlights to prevent blinding actors and artists.

PRICES: 85 Cents to $4 Per Pair

WESTERN INDUSTRY

Is not surpassed elsewhere is evidenced by Eastern factories shipping auto trucks to Pacific Coast without bodies as Western prices are equally low and material better.

WESTERN BODY COMPANY, Inc.

BUILD---Truck Bodies, Touring Bodies, Limousine Bodies, Landalet Bodies, Roadster Bodies, Tops, Wheels, Fenders, Hoods, and Glass Fronts.

REPAIR---Bodies, Tops, Glass Fronts and Wheels.

Painting A Specialty

All Styles of Ford Delivery Bodies in Stock or Built to Order and Guaranteed

WESTERN BODY CO., Inc.

Phone Franklin 4557 1116 POST STREET San Francisco, Cal.

A Beautiful Gift Book

California as a Health Resort

Its History, Climate, Missions, Industries, Places of Interest, Educational Advantages, and Mineral Springs.

Told In A New Way

300 Pages 80 Full Page Pictures

Publishers: Bolte & Braden Co.
San Francisco
Price Two Dollars

Dewar Scotch Whisky

Awarded Gold Medal
At Panama-Pacific International Exposition
San Francisco

Sherwood & Sherwood

Pacific Coast Agents
San Francisco Los Angeles San Diego

FOR SALE BY THE TRADE

To CHICAGO, KANSAS CITY and ST. LOUIS

2 Daily Trains via Los Angeles, Tucson and El Paso

"Golden State Limited"
Through Standard and Tourist Pullman cars from San Francisco, Ferry Station, 6:00 p. m. and 10:40 a. m., respectively.

"The Californian"
Standard Pullman and Tourist car connection to Kansas City, from San Francisco, Ferry Station, 9:00 p. m.
BEST DINING CAR IN AMERICA
For Tickets and Berths Ask Agents of

Southern Pacific
Palace Hotel Third St. Station
Flood Building Ferry Station

El Paso & Southwestern
Rock Island Lines
691 Market Street

Wedding Presents.—The choicest variety to select from at Marsh's, who is now permanently located at Post and Powell streets.

"Letters from America."

Rupert Brooke's "Letters from America" have the added interest of a preface by Henry James. If one only possessed Mr. James's sense of the oblique and the exquisite, it would be a pleasant pastime to dilate on how the "Letters" did not precisely need this richly burnished foil; how, on the other hand, they are somehow set off by it, and how both the "Letters" and the preface gain mutually from the contact. Mr. James's preface, in bald English—or at least relatively bad English—is a richly appreciative and allusive essay on the part young Brooke—one almost falls into Mr. James's habit of calling him Rupert—found it his privilege to play in the drama of life before the isles of Greece called him "for consecration of the final romance."

"Our unspeakably fortunate young poet." It is the theme of Brooke's environment, and Brooke's relation to it, on which Mr. James elects chiefly to dwell. The "unspeakably fortunate young poet," Mr. James tells us, "took for his own the whole of the poetic consciousness he was born to, and moved about in it as a stripped young swimmer might have kept slashing through blue water and coming up at any point that friendliness and fancy, with every prejudice shed, might determine. Rupert expressed us all, at the highest tide of our actuality, and was the creature of freedom restricted only by that condition of his blinding youth, which we accept on the whole with gratitude and relief—given that I qualify the condition as dazzling even to himself.

Price, $1.50. Published by Scribner's.

A new work by Samuel P. Orth, Professor of Political Science at Cornell, announced for publication within the next few weeks, is "The Imperial Impulse," a series of character studies of five of the European nations now at war, England, France, Russia, Germany and Belgium. The author believes that in the procession of grim events we are apt to forget the political, economic and ethnic backgrounds of the cultures now at each others' throats, neglecting the significance of the drama in our interest in the action. His aim is to recall some of the conflicting national traits, prejudices, habits and beliefs that lie behind the world commotion.

Published by the Century Company.

Masefield's New Book.

John Masefield's new play, "Good Friday," is a dramatic poem of the Crucifixion, introducing as characters Pilate, Pilate's wife, Herod, Joseph of Ramah, a Madman, a centurion, citizens and soldiers. The scene is a court outside the Roman citadel in Jerusalem. In dialogue that ranges from the harsh, severe demands of the rabble, insisting upon Christ's death, through beautifully phrased lines from Procula, Pilate's wife, telling of her presentiment of evil and disaster, and begging for Christ's release, to the exquisite lyrics of the Madman who sings of peace and truth and lilies and happiness, Mr. Masefield has painted vividly the events leading up to and immediately following Christ's Crucifixion. The theme is a tremendous one which could only be handled by a skilled artist. Mr. Masefield has made much of it; in fact, it is perhaps as notable a bit of writing in the dramatic form as he has yet produced. The latter half of the volume contains some fifty or sixty sonnets, together with a few short poems. These sonnets, it is maintained by some, will, in the years to come, rank with the best in the English language.

Published by the Macmillan Company, New York.

"A Study of Michelangelo."

Romain Rolland, whom the world has come to know for "Jean Christophe," was a cosmopolite before he was a novelist. France at least knows and honors him for three great biographies concerned with men of as many nationalities and artistic achievements—Beethoven, Tolstoi and Michelangelo. The last-named work subsequently became the subject of a study in the series "Les Maitres de l'Art," and this monograph, a work entirely distinct from its predecessor, is now translated into English for the first time by Frederick Street. Somewhat confined as he was by the limitations of the series to a consideration of Michelangelo's work as painter and sculptor, M. Rolland has none the less made his treatise an exposition of the whole man. He ingeniously interprets the poet, however, in terms of the sculptor. "The sonnet form cramped him and characteristically he loved that form because of its difficulty. . . . Most of his poems have remained in the condition of blocked-out torsos."

Price, $2.50. Published by Duffield & Co.

"The Life and Times of Tennyson."

If proof were needed of the fact, the last work of Professor Lounsbury would prove that this eminent professor of English had the bookman's rather than the pedant's instinct. The work, which is unfinished, bears the title of "The Life and Times of Tennyson." It has an appreciative introduction by Prof. Wilbur L. Cross, editor of the Yale Review. He tells us that Prof. Lounsbury never expected to cover the poet's entire career, but hoped to bring his work down to the "Idyls of the King." As it was, he got only as far as "In Memoriam," and the later chapters of the work of 660 pages that has just come from the Yale University press were completed by Prof. Cross.

Price $2.50. Yale University Press, New Haven.

The March Scribner begins with an article by Colonel Roosevelt giving an account of a visit he made last summer to the great "Bird Refuges of Louisiana." These government reserves, on the initiative of the Audubon societies, were started when Colonel Roosevelt was president. He writes with a naturalist's knowledge plus the vein of sentiment that from Thoreau's day to the present has made nature study so wide in its appeal. There are many most interesting descriptions of the great colonies of sea-birds on these islands—terns, gulls, skimmers, pelicans and the wonderful frigate-bird.

TRAVEL EAST IN LUXURY.

Sunset Limited to New Orleans through balmy skies. Thence through historic scenes of days of war, now alive with southern life and industry. The Sunset Limited and its connection at New Orleans with the New York and New Orleans Limited makes an ideal winter trip East. Service the best. Stop-over at points of much interest. For booklets and information apply Washington Sunset Route, 874 Market St., San Francisco, Cal.

LOST.—Savings Pass Book, No. 21376, with Union Trust Company. Finder will please return to the Bank, Market street and Grant avenue.

City Index and Purchasers' Guide

CHIROPODISTS.

Dr. R. T. Leaner, Surgeon Chiropodist, formerly of 6 Geary street removes corns entirely whole—painless—without knife. Bunions and in growing nails cured by a special and painless treatment. 212-214 West bank Bldg., 830 Market St. Tel. Kearny 3578.

NOTARY PUBLIC.

Martin Aronsohn, Notary Public and Pension Attorney. All legal papers drawn up accurately. 217 Montgomery St., above Bush, San Francisco, Cal. Phone Douglas 601.

ATTORNEYS-AT-LAW

Samuel M. Shortridge, Attorney-at-Law, Chronicle Building, San Francisco. Tel. Sutter 36.

Marcus Lorne Samuels, Attorney-at-Law, Pacific Building, Market St. at Fourth, San Francisco, Cal. Tel. Douglas 304

VISIT CAPITOL CITY of your STATE

A Day's Trip—Well Spent

Visit beautiful Capitol Grounds—Capitol Building—Sutter's Fort—Crocker Art Gallery—Riverside Drive, etc.
$3.35 Round Trip Saturdays and Sundays, with return limit Monday.

OAKLAND, ANTIOCH & EASTERN RAILWAY

TYPICAL OF CALIFORNIA

PALACE HOTEL

Since 1875 the Historic Hotel of San Francisco
NEW MANAGEMENT NEW POLICY
European Plan Only. Rates from $2 per day upward.

FAIRMONT HOTEL
The Most Superbly Situated Hotel in the World.
Under Same Management.

Hotel St. Francis Announces the Club Room Special
A Busy Man's Luncheon
Beginning January 10, 1916
50 Cents
Service From 11:30 to 2:00

HOTEL OAKLAND OAKLAND, CALIFORNIA
Overlooking Lake Merritt and the Mountains

The most picturesque location in America, commanding views of a salt water lake in the heart of the city, the mountains in the background, and the Bay. An ideal home for refined permanent guests.
European Plan: From $1.50 a day up American Plan: From $3.50 a day up
Write for our extraordinarily low permanent rates. Carl Sword, Manager

Novelties for "Welcoming" and "Bon Voyage" Packages Flowers Delivered to Any Part of the World

SEND YOUR HOSTESS A DISTINCTIVE BOX OF FLOWERS
FROM JOSEPH'S FLORISTS
GRANT AVENUE, NEAR SUTTER STREET

NEW PARISIAN FRENCH LAUNDRY

Mme. C. La FON

First Class Work at Reasonable Prices
Laces and Lace Curtains a Specialty
Club, Restaurant and Hotel Service

991 OAK STREET Phone Park 4962
SAN FRANCISCO

PILLSBURY'S PICTURES, INC
VIEWS OF CALIFORNIA

KODAK finishing done by EXPERTS. We will send for your films.

219 POWELL STREET Phone Kearny 3841

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of FREDERICK T. FEISEL, sometimes known as Fredrick T. Feisel, sometimes known as F. T. Feisel and sometimes known as F. T. Feisel, Deceased.

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned administrators of the estate of Frederick T. Feisel, deceased, to the creditors of and all persons having claims against the said decedent, to file them with the necessary vouchers within ten (10) months after the first publication of this notice, in the office of the Clerk of the Superior Court of the State of California, in and for the City and County of San Francisco, or to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers within ten (10) months after the first publication of this notice to the said administrators at the office of J. J. Lermen, Room 504, Balboa Building, 593 Market St., San Francisco, Cal., which said office the undersigned select as their place of business in all matters connected with said estate of Frederick T. Feisel, deceased.

EDWIN J. FEISEL and EMMA J. SCHWARZ, administrators of the estate of Frederick T. Feisel, deceased.

Dated, San Francisco, February 12th, 1916.
J. J. LERMEIN, Attorney for Administrators, 504 Balboa Building, San Francisco, California.

Dr. Byron Haines, Dentist, has resumed practice at his office in Gunst Building, S. W. corner Geary and Powell streets.

Price Beginning March 1, $1450 Detroit---Until Midnight February 29, $1350 Detroit

Quality First

S P U N K

The Six-40 Chalmers makes a Gallon of Gas deliver 16 miles of easy, sparkling flight

The day of the racing car is done. This is the age of the road car.

It isn't a question any longer of mile-a-minute speed. Nobody but a college sophomore or a Ralph Mulford wants that kind of a car.

But there is a quiet, growing, insistent demand for a car of spunk, that picks itself up neatly and gets itself under way with a spirit—the same kind of spirit that responds in a lively, high-nerved horse to the light touch of a whip.

This is the kind of a car that rolls up to the opera quickly, quietly, without groan or complaint, and rolls away again into the night with a grace and smartness and a liveliness that the traffic cop notes and admires.

For he is, after all, a good judge of things automobile. He knows the sluggish cars from the peppery ones, the "light-footed" from the "heavy-footed," and the gear-changing kind from the always-on-high variety, and he mentally salutes the lively.

Spunk in a car is needed most not at 70 or 75 miles an hour, but 5 and 10 and 15 and 20 and 35 miles an hour.

It comes in handy when you want to go out and go by the man ahead, when the cop's whistle blows, when you are taking the other man's dust, every time that you turn a corner, every time you hit a grade, every time you wind your way up a hill.

And the men who are driving this kind of a car express it in the lines of their faces—a certain ease of control, a peculiar note of confidence, the absence of fret, the feeling of having something secure and sure beneath the right foot.

Watch for them. You will find them driving Chalmers Six-40s. Hang on to one of them in traffic or in open country. It takes a good car to roll along with one. This is because a minimum of fuel is translated into a maximum of power through the valve-in-the-head overhead cam-shaft type of engine.

You will observe there is no tire-burning speed, no roar of gears, no pell-mell driving.

Just a keep-a-going pace, wonderful acceleration, an arrow-like direction, always four wheels on the ground, no sidesway—and a peck of pep if you try to tickle the speedometer needle up to 60.

Few can pass her. If you want more speed than that, the Chalmers Six-40 cannot give it to you.

You had better go buy a Rolls-Royce. Pay the price.

But don't buy a low-priced racing animal. Get a thoroughbred. It's an interesting kind of a car to own.

And for day-in and day-out use get one of these Chalmers Six-40s. It's got room—124 inch of wheelbase; French finish upholstery; nice clutch action; good braking properties; every button and dial within finger's reach.

And a name on the radiator that has always stood for quality.

The newest Six-40 has just arrived. There are some twenty rotatable developments, hidden from the eye, in pistons, connecting rods, gas chambers and so on. All serving to speed up acceleration.

Bring your wife. She will make discoveries you never knew existed in a car before.

Also bring your check-book. Because the price goes up March 1st to $1450 Detroit. Now, and until March 1st, you pay $1350 Detroit for your Six-40. So come prepared.

L. H. Rose Chalmers Co.

Distributors

1230-36 Van Ness Avenue, San Francisco

The Development of the Motor Truck

That the motor truck until recently has not kept pace in improvement with the pleasure vehicle has been due largely to the fact that the market for the latter has been so far from exhausted that the required capital has not been available for the commercial car. In other words, the manufacturers were too busy reaching for the trade of the passenger cars that they did not have either the time or the money to look out for the other. Now it is different, and the recent New York show has demonstrated that there has been more improvement in the last year in the trucks than the pleasure cars have shown in three, for the simple reason that the latter developed so much earlier.

The motor truck industry in America has had a year unprecedented in its history. From the standpoint of production and sales, as well as from the standpoint of vehicles more adapted to the use of the truck owner, the past season has been one of greater activity than could have been expected. To a great extent this activity in the commercial vehicle industry has been due to the conditions brought about by the European war. War orders has been a source of profit mechanically as well as financially to builders of trucks and indirectly have been a source of profit to the American truck buyer.

This rather anomalous situation is due to the fact that makers of business vehicles in America, whether they have actually had their product in service on the European battlefields, or whether they have confined their selling activities to America, have taken advantage of the lessons learned on the battlefield and on the rutted roads behind the lines to make the vehicles better able to withstand the abuses and extraordinary conditions of which European service is the supreme test of their ability to withstand such use.

The necessity for a quantity production of trucks to meet the needs of the warring nations in Europe has developed better manufacturing processes in American factories which make for a better truck without increasing price, and has developed conditions by which the vehicles may be produced at a lower cost to the consumer. To such an extent is this true that even in spite of the rather severe increase in the price of materials which has been a concomitant of the European conflict there has been a distinct drop in the price of trucks for 1916. The average price of commercial vehicles listed on the American market for the new year is nearly $100 less than that of a year ago, dropping from $2,500 as an average list of the 1915 models to $2,413 as the price of the 1916 car. Some of the one-ton vehicles now list under $1,000, but the greatest reduction has been in the light delivery class and trucks with a capacity of 1,500 pounds.

Had it not been for a rather definite improvement in the new models as compared with those of the past season, it is to be expected that there would have been an even greater reduction in first cost. As an instance of this improvement in design might be mentioned the general dropping of the chain drive in favor of shaft drive and also a similar increase in the proportion of worm-driven vehicles, and also a considerable increase in the double reduction types.

The showing that trucks have made in the European war has been such that it has increased the respect of the American business man for the commercial vehicle. It has given him newer insight into the reliability and adaptability of the motor driven business wagon. With the coming of the prosperous season which is looked for, it is to be expected there will be a very great increase in demand for commercial vehicles in all sections of this country.

So far as the number of truck manufacturers is concerned there has been a very general expansion, the total amounting to 248 manufacturers, forty-six of which are new, although eleven have dropped out. This makes a net increase of thirty-five in the number of truck builders. A production of 75,000 motor trucks is expected for 1916. During 1916, fifty thousand were built for domestic use and about half as many were exported.

TRUCK STATISTICS

There were 50,369 motor trucks sold in the United States during 1915, valued at $125,922,500.

Estimated value of motor trucks exported during 1915, $63,000,000, an increase of 600 per cent over the previous year. England was our best customer, taking for the year ending June 30th, some 5,306 trucks.

There were 257 commercial vehicle manufacturers in the country at the close of the year.

§ § §

TRUCK CLUB TALKS ABOUT PREPAREDNESS

"What Truck Owners Can Do for Preparedness" was discussed by the Motor Truck Club of America, at its February meeting, held in New York City February 16th, at the Automobile Club of America. A number of speakers were secured, including S. Stanwood Menken, president of the National Security League; Major Allan L. Reagan, N. G. N. Y.; Captain T. H. Shanton, quartermaster corps, N. G. N. Y.; Capt. Kenneth Gardner, 7th Infantry, N. G. N. Y.; and George H. Pride. Various plans for placing the privately-owned motor trucks at the disposal of the army were considered.

§ § §

CRACK NEW YORK REGIMENT ADOPTS MOTOR TRUCK TRAIN

The Seventh Infantry is the first unit in the State of New York to purchase its own motor combat train. This truck is of standard construction, except for the body, which is designed to meet the special requirements for an army truck. On the dash within reach of the driver is mounted a machine gun. The chassis is composed of standard units so that quick replacements can be made in case of damage. This is a necessary feature of trucks used for war purposes. A unit of the train will consist of one of these trucks hauling an army wagon as a trailer. This train is the first of six which will be added to the equipment as fast as they can be secured.

The Life of War Trucks Shortened by Collisions and Hard Usage

Shells Not the Only Menace

Paris, Jan. 20—The most obvious defect of motor trucks put into military service is the lack of protection against collisions and as a result about 50 per cent of the truck casualties are caused by trucks bumping into the machine ahead, when operating in convoy formation. Usually the officer in charge precedes the convoy in a light touring car, and unless he is a really experienced man, he will set too fast a pace. Each driver tries to keep as close as possible to the man ahead, with the result that when a sudden stop has to be made, radiators are smashed in and sometimes damage is done as far back as the third cylinder.

It is not every officer who is capable of handling a big convoy in a satisfactory manner—maintaining a reasonable average, insisting on the regulation space between each truck, and at the same time being prepared if any man falls out owing to mechanical trouble. The officer who knows his business puts a skilled driver on No. 1 truck—a man who can differentiate between 12 and 14 miles an hour—and a good mechanic on the last unit of the convoy. As each driver is forbidden to pass the truck ahead, the correct average can be relied on whether the officer remains in front or falls behind; if there is a break-down, the last man is often able to give assistance, which will save hours, in a few minutes.

Solid Tires Short Lived

Generally solid tires on trucks working in the north of France do not average more than 5,000 miles. This figure is obtained from records of trucks using tires of a size considered adequate in civilian service. The shorter life is due to the more strenuous conditions under which the trucks have to operate. No matter how good the service, there is always a certain amount of speeding; English drivers are as great sinners in this respect as the French. In the northern parts of France most of the roads are granite paved, with a macadam or dirt strip at each side. When traffic is heavy the right-hand wheels are constantly slipping from the paved portion to the dirt strip, and back again, this series of jumps causing the tires to chip away laterally. Sections of the tire also loosen from the rim, and when there has been a loosening up in two or three places, the whole tire is liable to come away. This appears to be due to bouncing of the wheel on the road; when driving fast, the wheel strikes the ground at intervals with considerable force, and these repeated blows loosen the rubber from the base. It is found that this is more common with front than with rear wheels.

Another source of tire trouble, which was known to users before the war, but has become more accentuated since, is due to arched roads. It is obvious that with a truck running on one side of a highly crowned road the full width of the tread cannot be in contact with the road surface, and the wider the tire the smaller the proportion in contact. This throws an excessive load on one portion of the tire, or on the inner tire when duals are used, and causes rapid wear. The evil is lessened on those trucks having chain drive with slightly toed in wheels, as is common with the front wheels of passenger cars. The evil has been recognized for a long time, and attempts have been made to construct a type of transmission allowing the wheels to accommodate themselves to the arch of the road. Also the latest road engineering practice is to make road surfaces as flat as possible consistent with drainage. The war has only served to emphasize the need for attention to this matter. Where worm, bevel and chain drive trucks are working together it has been possible to make interesting comparisons on this question of tire wear.

The war is proving more strenuous than the severe tests to which some of the manufacturers submit their trucks at home. As an instance, a high-grade American worm-drive truck is giving trouble owing to the breakage of differential housings. This is a good truck, which before being put on the market was given a very thorough try-out in the Middle West and the West, without any defects being revealed. However, the roughly paved roads of Northern France, together doubtless with some overloading and some speeding, are causing the housings to crack, and the maker is replacing them free of cost. Closely examined, this is found to be a case of faulty design, but is a fault which American dirt roads and cross-country conditions could not reveal. There have been some other cases of axle housings failing, but these have been traced to a heavy load shifting to the right-hand side of the truck. Loads of shells are particularly liable to slip in this way, and as the right-hand side gets much more pounding than the left, it is not surprising that axles sometimes fail.

Weak Parts are Supplied

Manufacturers all over the world who had old models or units in stock have been tempted to get rid of them in the various armies. These cases are now coming to light. One high-class firm used a certain number of touring car crankcase in order to finish a series. These were too weak for truck service, with the result that all the front hangers snapped, and the French repair shops have had to fit these trucks with a steel member forming a brace under the front end of the crankcase. The policy of this company cannot be considered a wise one. Had it been a French company of equal standing, there would have been plenty of people to excuse or explain away the incident—some French firms have so many interested boosters that the knockers are never heard. But being an American firm the bare statement goes round that X crankcase hangers break off. There is nobody to explain, and X, who makes one of the best trucks in America, is apt to be rated with the firm making one of the worst.

All American manufacturers are at a disadvantage, owing to the absence of a really skilled man, or men with lengthy experience of their particular make. At home real service is given users, and every manufacturer is interested in seeing that the user of his truck is getting the best out of them. In the war zone there can be no real service, and even if the service man were on the spot he would not be allowed to follow up his own trucks.

One case with which I am acquainted is interesting. A well known American manufacturer has about thirty 5-ton trucks in armored service in Northern France. This is the most strenuous service on the front, for half the cars are overloaded all the time, and all of them have to operate very close to the German trenches. This battery is in charge of an officer who knows all there is to be known about the trucks and who gives them all the attention that could be obtained from a service man at home. The result is that at the end of six months' active service in France preceded by several months' service in England, not a single order has been sent in to the perma-ment store department. The only consumable stores that have been used are brake liners (lock washers, carbureter floats and needles, rear lamps, etc.) Two men, one of whom is only a driver, are sufficient to attend to all the repair work. In the same battery ten mechanics are required to keep the officers' touring cars and the dispatch riders' motorcycles in proper order. In other sections of the army, operating in the same district, constant reports are being received of burned out bearings on the same trucks. Inquiry has shown that in every case this is due to the use of unsuitable—not poor quality—lubricating oil for this type of motor.

Carbureter settings found right in America are very rarely satisfactory here, owing to the different grade of gasoline used and changed climatic conditions. If the trucks pass through the hands of a tester in Europe, this trouble is considerably diminished; yet there are hundreds of American trucks running extravagantly in Europe, owing to lack of carbureter adjustment. As a general rule, American trucks have bigger motors and will do a lot more top gear work than those of European construction, but much of this advantage is lost, owing to indifferent carbureter settings.

One important repair depot finds that magnetos cannot be relied on for more than 6 months' average under war conditions. At the end of that time they have lost much of their magnetism and various screws have begun to work loose. The repair depot in question finds it necessary to remove and carefully examine all truck magnetos every 6 months. The same trouble has been observed at various times on visits to touring car repair depots, but this case of the trucks is the only one on which really reliable data has been obtainable. There is an unusual wear of carbureter needles, attributed to the presence of very fine sand in the gasoline. The complaint is heard that differential locks are not sufficiently used; under present conditions they are more than a luxury.

Self-starters are not appreciated. They are to be found on one make of truck used by the French, but they are very rarely in a condition to be used. More often than not the batteries are requisitioned to light a dug-out, or some under officer takes them to light his own quarters. Some of the mechanical transport sections use enormous quantities of dry batteries, but the current is used for lighting the men's quarters and dug-outs and not for exploding charges in the cylinders. Muscular energy is a rather cheap commodity.

As army regulations call for two drivers on each truck, a self-starter is certainly a luxury. Controls should be simplified for military service. With two ignitions, spark and throttle levers, extra air levers, electric light, electric self-starter, and gasoline and lubricating oil gauges, there is enough to keep the average green driver worried for at least 12 months. At least one truck has the whole of this equipment. The ideal is fixed ignition, with magneto only, and accelerator pedal. A lever on the dash should regulate minimum throttle opening and cut off the ignition when fully closed. The use of a motor governor is preferable; European manufacturers had little use for the governor before the war, but they have changed their views since.

♫ ♫ ♫

ORGANIZE TRUCK EXCHANGE

Owners of heavy duty motor trucks of Los Angeles have organized the Truck Owners' Exchange. Dealers selling heavy duty and dump trucks as well as representatives of the larger tire concerns were present at the meeting of the truck owners and assured the operators of their hearty support. The object of the organization is to bring the owners, dealers and contractors into closer relationship. The exchange is to be operated along the lines of any retail dealers' association, and is to join the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association.

Many owners of dump trucks have worked on State and county highways and have not as yet been paid for work completed more than two months ago. The engineers have not put through the vouchers and the owners have now organized to handle this and other important matters and to be able to meet other issues in this territory. There are almost $1,000,000 worth of dump trucks operated in and around Los Angeles, and this organization will play a prominent part in the truck industry is the general belief —It is estimated that motor trucks are now being used by over 4,000 American farmers. This is about four per cent of the total number of trucks sold in the United States. These vehicles nearly all have been bought within the last two or three years, indicating a swiftly proved economic success, a supposition strengthened by a careful canvass recently made by the Kissel Motor Car Co., Hartford.

♫ ♫ ♫

♫ ♫ ♫

—The Motor Truck Club of New Jersey, Newark, has decided to engage legal counsel on an annual salary to look after the interests of motor truck owners in State and local legislation. The lawyer will act as chairman of the legislative committee of the club.

ARMY TRUCKS ON THE MEXICAN BORDER

In his annual report to the Secretary of War, the quartermaster general of the army states that general use has been made by the quartermaster corps of motor trucks and motor cars. A record has been kept of the operations of all motor vehicles in the service of the quartermaster corps, and all trucks and motor cars have been carefully observed and reported upon with a view to determining their relative efficiency, durability and economical operation.

A great deal of experience has been obtained during the fiscal year with this class of transportation in connection with the transportation of supplies between base depots and outlying camps on the Texas border, and from reports received it would appear that this class of transportation is entirely dependable, even over difficult roads.

The report says that during the fiscal year some slight changes have been made in the specifications for motor trucks, so as to provide a truck that will meet all conditions of field service, and which is found suited to the commercial requirements of the community. A truck of 1½ tons capacity is considered the most suitable for field service. A reduction in animal drawn transportation has been made wherever motor trucks have been supplied. The report says it is believed that current experience indicates that motor trucks are practicable in the division supply and ammunition trains.

Tests are now being conducted with trailers in connection with motor trucks. Reports received to date indicate that the use of trailers with motor trucks and tractors is economical when road conditions are entirely favorable. However, unless very favorable road conditions exist, the strain on the truck is so great as to render the use of the trailer with the motor truck of doubtful economy. The trailer, however, will be found of very great value when operated in connection with a specially constructed tractor. The quartermaster corps is conducting experiments with trailers and tractors with the object in view of encouraging the development of a tractor that will operate with a train of trailers over the ordinary country roads of this continent. Several manufacturers have exhibited an interest in this development. Experiments with trailers converted from escort wagons and ambulances have not so far proven satisfactory.

♫ ♫ ♫

—Pour melting resin in tubes, and they may be bent without kinking.

TRIUMPH OF LIGHT DELIVERY TRUCKS

While the efficiency of the gasoline truck has been long acknowledged in heavy work, its possibilities, in the form of light delivery wagons, have been slower of recognition. The following account of what the merchants in Champaign are doing will be of interest to both dealers and potential users.

Perhaps in no city of the West has a greater measure of success been achieved in the co-operative delivery system with gasoline powered trucks than in Champaign. The system has been proven to be an economic triumph, and every patron is an enthusiastic booster. No matter where the Champaign housewife buys her groceries or meats, the same service delivers her packages to her door.

It has long been recognized that one of the big wastes of the retail business is the delivery of goods to the homes of the purchasers. The average housewife no longer goes to market with her basket and carries home her purchases. She buys here and she buys there, possibly selecting the products for her dinner at different stores and orders her purchases delivered to her home. It costs real money to deliver goods under any circumstances, and, when this cost is multiplied by sending a number of different wagons over the same route, or possibly to the same house, it becomes sheer waste.

Champaign dealers have eliminated the horse and wagon and substituted motor cars, and they also have adopted a co-operative system by which one organization delivers the goods for all. Last spring, about twenty of the dealers of Champaign organized the Champaign Delivery Company. Others were quick to appreciate the advantages of such co-operation, and now there are forty members with the likelihood that every dealer in the city will become affiliated in a short time. All of the leading stores are allied, although the larger do not have any advantages over the smaller. The organization is permanent. It is not going to fall to pieces should a few members, because of jealousy, become dissatisfied. The organization of this delivery system meant something more than a mere getting together of the dealers.

The Champaign Delivery Co. is incorporated. It has property valued at $20,000, including grounds, buildings and motor wagons. The dealers are the stockholders, but the delivery company is, nevertheless, an independent concern doing business upon its own account. If it makes money beyond the needs of the business, it will pay dividends to the stockholders. All of the dealers, who joined the new company, turned in their old delivery equipment. There was more than twice as much as needed in the co-operative system. All were given a valuation by appraisers, and the owners were given credit for what they had turned in. The horses and wagons were disposed of, the motor trucks retained and new cars purchased. All of the cars are now of the same tint and the old names replaced by the co-operative. Ground was bought and a building erected for a central delivery station, convenient to the business district. It has something of the appearance of a railroad freight house. The station force comprises a manager, a young woman clerk, and a man to look after the vehicles. There are twenty drivers. Five deliveries are made daily, all upon a definite schedule. The housewife can have her oven hot, knowing that the meat she ordered will arrive at a certain time.

The cars leave the various stores, after picking up packages, approximately at 7:30 a. m.; 9:15 a. m.; 11 a. m.; 2:30 p. m., and 4:30 p. m., excepting on Saturdays, when the last delivery starts at 5:30 p. m. Each wagon goes to the distributing depot, leaves the packages tied up, and takes those for its particular district. The loading and unloading with the sorting occupies 30 minutes. When the distribution has been completed and each wagon is loaded with the packages for its district, a signal is given and all start off together. Some take districts 2 miles distant.

Boxes are used to contain the packages instead of baskets. The latter are fragile while the boxes are durable and also stack to better advantage in the car, enabling a larger load. The boxes belong to the dealers and all are properly marked.

The charge for delivery is 3½ cents an order when less than 100 pounds. Above 100 pounds a proportionate advance is made. While a dealer is charged just as much for the delivery of a small order as a large one, and he naturally seeks to make the sale as large as possible, he is now in a position to figure just how much the expense of delivery aggregates. Under the old system, he lost money just the same when a trifling order was delivered, yet he never stopped to estimate the cost and did not know how much he was out. The new system has a tendency to eliminate the 5-cent customer. An exception is made in favor of meat market men where all the packages are small, but 2½ cents are charged for such packages.

The delivery company does a strictly cash basis. Tags are sold to the dealers in advance in 1,000 lots. A tag is attached to each package when prepared at the store. There are occasional C. O. D. orders on which drivers must report.

~ ~ ~

HORSES AND TRUCKS COMPARED

Compare, now, some of the results of machinery with those of muscle—these are taken at random: With a team of horses costing, say, $500, one man can plough one hundred acres at a cost of $250; with a $3,000 tractor the cost is $100, or a saving of one dollar an acre, equal to a million dollars a day on American farms. The government report goes on further to say that a farm horse will average about three and one-half hours per day and tires out in six. We must assume, therefore, that the tractor is as powerful as twenty-five horses, and is as enduring as one hundred. Yet it costs only as much as ten horses.

A three-ton motor truck hauled 40 tons of stone in wagons; this would have required at least 40 horses over the same roads. It costs as much to carry wheat ten miles by horse as it does 2,300 miles by steamer. This is a day of large units wherever mechanical forces are used. A modern freight car has a capacity of 40 tons of steel, and an iron ore steamer can load ten thousand tons in 89 minutes, unloading in four hours. An Atlantic liner would require seventy thousand horses for its propulsion. All the horses and mules in the United States could not move the 90,000,000 tons of steel produced in Pittsburg alone. And we are now all familiar with the immense use to which motor vehicles have been put in the war. But why multiply instances? Why pile Ossa upon Pelion?

It is by the use of machines that we have been able to reduce the working day to eight hours, and will be able to reduce it much further as machines are improved, their capacity increased, and they come into greater use. In fact, were we to depend on mere muscular power the high cost of living, about which we hear so much nowadays, would not trouble so many people. There would not be so many of them living. Why, then, continue the horse for transportation, ploughing, reaping or mowing, when these can be done much better and cheaper by the motor?

Why pay ten dollars for a hat when you can get it for five?—From "The Greatest Grafters on Earth," by H. McDonald Spencer.

EUROPEAN BREVITIES

The roads in Russia were practically impassable until the German invasion. Now they have been improved to permit their passage by the war automobiles and ambulances.

To date the destruction of automobiles in the great European conflict has been enormous. Figures prove that the average life of a motor car in war service is but thirty days.

Pierce-Arrow armored trucks are being used by the British army on the west front for the transportation of food and ammunition.

American built ambulances have transported 74,000 wounded from the battlefields to Paris hospitals. Many of these ambulances are Hartford-equipped, a precaution of vital necessity because of the poor condition of the roads due to constant heavy traffic.

Even if conscription is near at hand for the male population of the British Empire, the women have long ago come bravely to the fore. Shop girls in London have volunteered in great numbers for ambulance and hospital service, and after work hours devote their time to preparation for these arduous tasks. Incidentally, they participate in drills for fire fighting.

In the recent French victory in the Champagne district the guns captured were brought to the courtyard of the Invalides, in Paris, for exhibition. They were transported to the suburbs of Paris by train and thence conveyed to the historic French museum upon sturdy Jeffery Quads.

Many French automobile factories are giving less attention to the manufacture of cars and more to the production of war munitions.

Motor kitchens are common sights in all the warring armies of Europe. Now ice machine cars follow most of the motor ambulance corps.

England has bought more American built cars than any other nation for the past nine months, 5,120 cars in all, valued at $28,648,749.

There are many German automobiles used by French officers that were built for German use only, and there are, too, many French cars that afford transportation for officers of the Kaiser's army. This is the result of capture.

☺ ☺ ☺

—“Say, you’ve been tinkering with this thing two hours. I thought you understood it so well you could take it to pieces any time.” “Well, so I can. But I didn’t say I could put them back, did I?”—Wisconsin State Journal.

OUR SUNSHINE CLUB

The “carload lots” smile of E. Linn Mathewson, local distributor of the Chevrolet cars and the Vim motor trucks

Yes LET’S LAUGH.
 And BE GAY.
 For WHY WORRY!
 Too SHORT IS LIFE.
 And THE SUNSHINE SURVIVES
 The CLOUDY WEATHER.
 So IN THIS WORLD
 Let’s GIVE JOY TO
 The POOR UNFORTUNATE
 Being WHO IS SURROUNDED
 Always BY EVERLASTING GLOOM.
 I APOLOGIZE.

—E. LINN MATHEWSON.

TRUCK PLANT FOR CHICAGO

Chicago, Feb. 22.—A factory to cost more than $100,000 is being built here and will be completed within 90 days by the Smith Form-A-Truck Co., manufacturer of the attachment to make a 1½-ton truck of a Ford car. The factory will be erected at Sixty-third street and Fifty-sixth avenue. When completed the production capacity will be increased to 300 attachments a day, or in the neighborhood of 70,000 a year. The plant at 411 North Clermont avenue, the present manufacturing home of the company, will not be abandoned until production has been started at the new location.

☺ ☺ ☺

—She—Did you ever lose control of your car? He—Yes, from the moment our cook took a fancy to it. That’s why I’m afoot to-day.—Ex.

NEW TIRE COMPANY FORMED

The organization of the McLean Tire and Rubber Co. was completed at Cleveland, O., last month by the election of the following officers: President, J. C. McLean; vice-president, W. B. Davis; secretary, G. W. Stewart; treasurer and general manager, T. J. Holmden. Most of the men interested in the new company are connected with the M. & M. Co., wholesale and retail dealers in accessories.

The old Morgan & Marshall Tire and Rubber Co.’s plant at East Liverpool, O., was purchased some time ago by the new company.

☺ ☺ ☺

—Mrs. Nurich was telling of her recent motor trip. “How about the topography of the country?” she was asked. “Mostly Republican, but a few Bull Moose.”—Buffalo Express.

The New

Buick

Valve-in-Head

COMMERCIAL CAR

MODEL D-4

Top, Storm Curtains; Special High Duty Type Delco Lighting, Starting and Ignition System; 35x5 Tires on Demountable Rims; Automatic Spark Advance and Shaft Drive.

CAPACITY 1500 TO 2000 POUNDS

Speed, With Full Load, 25 Miles Per Hour

Express Body $1375 { ^{at} San Francisco } Chassis $1275

The Buick Truck is exactly suited for merchants and manufacturers, also for municipal, state and public uses. It costs less to maintain than a team and will do four times as much work. This truck has ample loading space, and embodies all the time-tried and proven Buick Engineering successes.

HOWARD AUTO COMPANY

Phone Prospect 4000

VAN NESS AT CALIFORNIA

San Francisco

OAKLAND

LOS ANGELES

PORTLAND

SNOWBALLING IN SAN FRANCISCO

HOW A BUICK TRUCK MADE HISTORY

Snow, real cold white snow that melts and runs down your neck when you have been hit in the ear with a ball of it, and plenty to make thousands and thousands of balls, that was the sight that greeted those who happened to be in the vicinity of Lotta's Fountain one day in the latter part of January. Few people who saw the snow knew where it came from, and the general supposition was that it had come in from the high Sierras. This supposition was entirely wrong, and probably not six people among the thousands who enjoyed the real "down East" snow ball fight knew or even guessed that the snow they were having so much sport with had been shoveled from its original resting place into the Buick truck less than four hours before.

The novelty of snow balling on Market street appealed to the Howard Auto Co., Pacific Coast distributors of Buick pleasure cars and trucks, who are always on the look-out for new things that will interest the public. Late one afternoon, the company received word from their San Jose representative that there was more than two feet of snow on Mt. Hamilton, 25 miles east of San Jose. Mt. Hamilton is the highest peak in the range of mountains separating the Santa Clara and San Joaquin Valleys, and at its very top is the Lick Observatory, one of the best equipped observatories in the world. As soon as word was received that there was a plentiful supply of snow close at hand, it was decided to bring a truck load of the cold, white flakes to San Francisco. With this idea in view, Fred Gross and C. A. McGee left San Francisco early the following morning in one of the new Buick one-ton trucks, and their outfit of fur coats and robes would have been a credit to a polar expedition. In describing the trip itself, McGee has the following to say:

"When we left the city it was intensely cold, and we were certainly thankful that the truck was equipped with a top and glass front. By putting on the side curtains we were fairly comfortable, and made the run to San Jose in just two hours. The run from San Jose to Smith's Creek was made in fast time, and the temperature had been so cold for several days that all the mud holes were frozen over solid. The actual climb up the mountain begins at Smith's Creek, and a couple of miles up the grades from that place was where our troubles began. The night had been very cold, and the snow which had melted the day before had

Starting from Mt. Hamilton with a truckload of snow

The truck arrives at Lotta's Fountain, San Francisco

-On the way up

frozen so hard that even with heavy chains on the rear wheels it was almost impossible to secure traction. Using the utmost care not to slide over the edge of the grade on the ice, we proceeded slowly to the summit, where we arrived just at sun-up. Two hours were consumed in loading and making photographs, and at 9 o'clock the truck, loaded with more than a ton of snow, started for San Francisco. If the trip up was difficult, the descent with the heavy load was doubly so, and the wonder is that anything ever built could stand the strain that the Buick

Returning to the city was subjected to. In places the ice on the grade offered practically no resistance to the wheels, even when locked by the brakes, and in a short distance the truck, with its heavy load, would gather a speed that was really dangerous, and in some instances it was necessary to head it into the bank to avoid an accident. This, of course, threw a very heavy strain on the entire truck and especially on the wheels and axles.

"That no damage was done by this extraordinary abuse is proved by the fact that the run from San Jose to the Chronicle Building was made in just two hours, and the time from snow line to San Francisco was less than three hours." In speaking of the truck's performance, R. F. Thompson, general manager of the Howard Automobile Company, Pacific Coast distributors of the Buick cars, said:

"We always knew that the Buick truck would stand an unlimited amount of hard

Loading up at the Observatory use, but the wonderful performance of the truck on this snow trip was certainly a surprise to me, and not the least of this surprise is the fact that the Buick, with more than a ton load was able to maintain a speed of thirty miles per hour between San Jose and San Francisco."

ø ø ø

—A piece of wire from a near-by fence may help you out of trouble. It may be used as a towing rope, or may be wrapped around the channel of the rim to protect it while going home "on the rim." It may be wound around the leaves of a broken spring, or take the place of a lost bolt.

ø ø ø

—The drive chains on trucks should be adjusted carefully. If too tight the chain will wear rapidly, and if too slack the jerks of starting will be apt to break the chain prematurely.

Reserve Truck Tires by Not Overloading

Motor truck operators interested in getting increased mileage from solid tires, and thereby effecting a lowering of operating cost, will do well to heed the remarks of C. E. Cook, Coast manager of B. F. Goodrich Rubber Co. He says: "The cause of most premature failures of the solid motor truck tires can be traced back to one big cause—momentary overloading. By the exercise of a little care and forethought, a good share of this trouble can be ended and operators will not only secure increased mileage, but will reduce the number of lay-ups for changes of tires, and avoid controversies over adjustments.

Rubber is a substance with possibilities too vast to enumerate, but as with any other good thing, it has its limitations. For example, a rubber band can be stretched repeatedly, be used over and over again, and still retain its elasticity and strength. But if, even once, you stretch that rubber band beyond its limits of elongation, it snaps. This illustrates the principle of getting service from solid tires. Motor truck tires are built in load capacity per wheel.

Running Risks

If you overload your machine beyond that point, or shift your load so that undue weight rests upon one wheel, you are running risks. The rubber in the tire, as the load weight increases, becomes displaced to both the left and the right. Up to a certain point the tire will endure this and spring back into normal shape as soon as the weight on that spot is removed—as when a motor truck is

Upper—Specially built Packard Combination Fire Truck, recently purchased by the Alameda Fire Department, equipped with Goodrich Solid Truck Tires
Lower—Pierce-Arrow Truck with Goodrich Pressed-on Tires. Tires averaged twelve thousand to eighteen thousand miles without troubles. One to five trailers hauled each trip besides ordinary load.

running. This condition is comparable to the same use of a rubber band. This resiliency in the rubber absorbs shocks and jars, making riding easier and sparing the truck mechanism.

But cause too heavy a load to rest upon the tire and the rubber is distorted beyond its power of recovery. Figuratively speaking, it snaps. It has lost some of its spring just as heat draws the temper of a steel spring. This momentary overload might have occurred just at one spot in the whole tire, as when a loaded wheel hits a bump or obstruction which resists passage of the tire until the force exerted (which is equivalent to weight) is sufficient to shove the tire over the obstacle.

Tire Easily Cut

In this event the internal rupture of the rubber might not be immediately apparent. But the rubber structure, having been broken down, its elasticity sapped and its ability to hold together lost, would easily be cut by rough objects along the road, or would separate slightly around the base. Such a cut or separation would have a tendency to spread gradually throughout the tire, rendering it unserviceable before it had delivered its mileage. If the overload is constant—as when a tire runs along under excessive weight—the entire tire is affected and trouble will develop much sooner.

It is difficult for motor truck users to appreciate these facts. The natural presumption when a tire fails is to blame the tire-maker. Especially is this so when the man operating his first machine, and who knows little of the care or proper use of tires. In such a case the vehicle will be overloaded without thinking, the load will not be evenly placed, and the driver will not be careful to avoid obstructions and rough spots in the road. A common error is for a man to take the number of tons carried for the day, divide it by the number of trips, and find that his average load was capacity or less. The law of average does not here hold good, however, for if only one of his loads unduly exceeded capacity, that single load would be sufficient to snap the endurance of the rubber in his tires.

Disastrous Effect

Another common experience results from the use of small dual tires, such as the 2½, 3 and 3½ inch sizes. Running on a crowned road, the inner duals must bear more weight than the outer duals. This effects an overload with consequences such as enumerated above. Furthermore, striking bad spots in the road frequently causes one dual to bear the brunt of the entire load on that wheel, the other dual being for an instant relieved of pressure.

This crushing weight upon the small unit has a most disastrous effect. Goodrich engineers have given much study to these conditions. Our first recommendations are simply a case of evident commonsense, and are: Avoid overloading as a whole wherever possible, and strive to place the load so that one wheel must bear approximately the same weight as the other. Instruct drivers to select the best roads possible and the smoothest part of the pavements, steering clear of ruts, obstacles, bumps, sharp objects, car tracks, etc. Over speeding often causes momentary overloads even though the motor truck be not loaded to capacity, as striking a bump with considerable force exerts pressure upon the tire at that point, which has the same effect as abnormal weight.

Large Single Tires

Our second recommendation is to use large single tires in preference to small duals. If duals always equally divided the shocks and overloads, this would not hold good. But we know that first one unit and then the other is bearing the strains alone which the two units together are intended to withstand. By combining this divided endurance into a single unit, the greatest factor of safety is self-evident, up to a certain tire width. We do not recommend, however the use of single tires wider than seven inches, nor duals smaller than four inches. Single tires of excessive width have not yet reached the point of perfection.

De Luxe Tires

Our third recommendation is the high tread type of tire to be had in our "De Luxe," in sizes five and six inches. The six inch De Luxe tread is 44 per cent higher than a six inch regular, and consequently far more resilient. The added factory of safety per tire is 500 pounds. A six-inch De Luxe used in place of 3½ inch duals, will make the possibility of overloading remote, because a De Luxe tire, having more rubber in it, can compress farther without injury. Five and six inch De Luxe tires used as duals in place of regular sized tires afford one thousand pounds more safety per wheel. These features are in addition to the increased mileage possible from the added quantity of rubber itself. Oversizing may be accomplished without rebuilding wheels, a time and money saving advantage."

OPERATE ON DISTILLATE

At a time when fuel prices are high and automobile owners are looking for means of reducing the running expenses of their cars, it is noteworthy that something like 2,500 trucks are in use on the Pacific Coast burning distillate, which is only a little better grade of fuel than kerosene, according to A. B. Waton, sales manager of the Master Carbureter Corp., of Detroit. He says in part:

"These trucks have been in operation for three or four years, using the well known Continental motor and Master carbureter, and their success is beyond question of a doubt. It is just a question of truck users becoming familiar with this system when they will burn 7 or 8 cent fuel here in the East the same as they do in parts of Indiana and California."

☺ ☺ ☺

THE WEST GOOD FIELD FOR FARM TRACTORS

Mr. H. C. McCartney, General Sales Manager of the Bull Tractor Company, is making an extended tour of the Pacific Coast sizing up the tractor prospects for the coming season. He is at present conferring with Hughson & Merton, Inc., the Pacific Coast distributors and their agents, who report that the outlook for business is even better than last year. Mr. McCartney says that the Big Bull tractor is by far the most popular small tractor in the Middle West, and from the way in which the Western farmers have taken to it last year, is going to be the most popular tractor on the Pacific Coast this year. He is very well pleased with the way it has been received, and with the energetic manner in which Mr. J. J. Brown, of Hughson & Merton, has gone after the business.

☺ ☺ ☺

BROWN TAXIS MAKE LOWER RATES

The Taxicab Company of California, which operates the "Brown Taxi's," has recently made a drastic reduction in its rates after thorough investigation of the taxicab tariffs in force in the leading Eastern cities. The Brown Taxi rates are now low or lower than the rates prevailing in any city in the country of the first class for similar service and equipment. This company is the oldest, as well as the best equipped Taxicab company on the Pacific Coast, and one of the first five organized in the country. The company looks to an increased patronage to offset the reduction in revenue because of its change in rates. An innovation in this connection will be a memorandum of fare which will be given patrons at the end of each trip by the driver, with the request that the passenger compare it with the meter. This will effectually do away with all chance of overcharges. These memoranda will enable anyone leaving anything in a Brown Taxi to identify both the cab and its driver.

☺ ☺ ☺

FIGHT GASOLINE DOPERS

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 23.—Motorists of Los Angeles have been relieved of the fuel doper by a system of municipal gasoline inspection. The city department of oil inspection has conducted a vigorous campaign against unscrupulous garage operators and supply stations. The work of the department has been extended outside the realm of the passenger car. Distillate and oil has also undergone the inspection of the city's experts.

Los Angeles is the first American city to enforce a system of fuel inspection. In and around the city there are more than 46,000 motor cars in operation. These cars use 101,200 gallons of gasoline per day, at an average of 13 miles to the gallon. Certain garagemen, realizing that they could make an extra ½ cent per gallon, mixed cheap distillate with the gasoline, selling the combination at regular gasoline prices. Many carbureter ills in Los Angeles were due to the cheap fuel.

The oil companies suggested that the city take the matter in hand. As a result an ordinance was adopted early in 1915 providing a standard for the fuel and making it unlawful to sell any fuel in Los Angeles unless said fuel came up to the specifications of the city, the violation of this ordinance making the garageman liable to a revocation of his license.

In Los Angeles, 65 per cent of the gasoline is sold to motorists at corner supply stations. There are now 300 of these in the city. The rest of the gasoline is sold from the city's 350 garages, and a number of portable tanks operated by stores. The city's system of inspection is extended to the oil wagons, tanks and refineries and to cover 1,600 grocery stores and something like 1,100 drug stores.

In the first two months that the department was in operation, four deliberate cases of gasoline adulteration were discovered. This adulteration consisted of a half and half mixture. To date, almost 100 dealers have been notified that they were selling fuel that did not come up to the standard set by the department, and warned to sell only gasoline that met the requirements of the law. Two refineries were instructed to improve the grade of gasoline put on the market.

☺ ☺ ☺

—"Sue and her new husband have started on their bridal trip in a veritable ecstasy." "Is that one of the new makes?"—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Stewart

Quality Trucks

OPENING ANNOUNCEMENT

STEWART MOTOR CORPORATION
BUFFALO, NEW YORK

1000 lb.
$695

3/4 Ton
$1290

1 1/4 Ton
$1390

F. O. B. Buffalo

Quality Trucks at Quantity Prices Now Here — On Display

New Salesroom

Service Station

Stock Department

List of Satisfied Owners

- The Bell Telephone Co. now have a fleet of. 27 Stewarts
- The Boston Clearing House Parcel Delivery Co. 20 Stewarts
- Buffalo Evening News, Buffalo 15 Stewarts
- Buffalo Times, Buffalo 7 Stewarts
- Wagner Pastry Co., Newark, N. J. 8 Stewarts
- Coca-Cola Company 5 Stewarts
- Iten Biscuit Co., Omaha, Neb. 5 Stewarts
- Peerless Laundry, Los Angeles, Cal. 5 Stewarts
- Bonwit-Teller & Co., New York City 4 Stewarts
- Brunswick Laundry, Jersey City, N. J. 4 Stewarts
- Sibley-Lindsay & Curr, Dept. Store, Rochester. 4 Stewarts

and 500 Others

Coast Motor Co., Inc., Van Ness Ave. Phone Prospect 540
at Turk

Open Territory We have an exceptional proposition and discounts for Live Dealers

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT TESTS
MOTOR TRUCKS

Postoffice Official Tells of Their Advantage

Washington, D. C., Feb. 15.—The utility of the motor truck and service wagon continues to be made the subject of exhaustive tests by various of the federal government departments, these tests in every instance, so far, resulting in conclusive proof of the adaptability and economy of such motor units. The latest and most impressive instance of the faith which the government officers have in the motor vehicle for commercial and industrial purposes is afforded in testimony submitted by Otto Praeger, second assistant postmaster general, to the House committee on post offices and post roads. Mr. Praeger dwelt upon the advantage of the use to the government of government-owned motor vehicles in lieu of screen wagon and city collection and delivery service by horse drawn vehicles and private contract in the cities of Washington, Detroit, St. Louis, Philadelphia and Chicago.

Representative Martin B. Madden, Chicago, had contended that motor trucks, suitable for postal service, cannot make more than 1.6 miles per hour in the down-town sections of Chicago, and therefore that the substitution of government owned motor cars for horse-drawn contract service does not expedite the mails. Mr. Praeger in reply cited the results of the tests of the Chicago motor service made December 27th last, which showed that even in the more congested or "loop district," in that city the trucks do 5.7 miles per hour. Mr. Praeger emphasized the advantage of government owned service in providing more rapid and more frequent deliveries, despatches and collections of mail with large savings in cost.

Mr. Praeger submitted general figures as to relative costs in the five cities where motor vehicles now are used, and said Indianapolis would have similar service soon. His figures are shown in the tabulation just below.

Mr. Norman Cowan

Mr. Norman Cowan, secretary and sales manager of Hughson & Merton, Inc., has just returned from his annual trip East to the automobile shows at New York and Chicago, where he spent some five weeks investigating automobile accessory conditions for the coming year.

According to Mr. Cowan, buying automobile accessories this year will not be a question of price, but a question of actually being able to secure same, as every factory in the East is working on a twenty-four hour shift, paying advanced prices for material and labor, and back orders on file for months ahead.

The advanced cost of brass, metal, asbestos, in fact material of every kind, is simply an indication of a scarcity of raw material which even extends to lubricating oils, especially of a Pennsylvania crude.

Mr. Cowan, however, has been fortunate to secure for his company, the Hughson & Merson Co., Inc., a number of new lines, which are practically unknown on the coast, among which are Bailey Gearless Differential, Sioux High Compression Piston Ring, Premier Elec. Vulcanizer, The Wonder Worker Line of Chemical Goods, "X" Radiator Compound, Croxford Auto Rim Tools, United Engineering and Manufacturing Co.'s Line, of Hanover, Pa., all of which it expects to exploit in its usual vigorous manner through the four branch offices on the Pacific Coast.

City—	Cost per annum of service superceded	Cost per annum of combined service	Saving per annum
Chicago	$ 706,260.48	$548,270.12	$157,990.36
Detroit	147,600.40	100,323.64	47,276.76
Philadelphia	235,839.43	132,904.09	102,935.34
St. Louis	195,258.93	110,530.63	84,728.30
Washington	55,730.46	18,501.08	37,229.38
	<hr/>	<hr/>	<hr/>
	$1,340,689.70	$910,529.56	$430,160.14

Note—This estimate does not include any saving resulting from the elimination of clerks and carriers whose services were utilized to fill vacancies in other sections of the respective offices.

ELECTRIC TRUCKS GAIN IN ENGLAND

Six hundred and sixty electric trucks are now in use in England, as compared with 150 one year ago, according to recent information. For some time it has been known that one result of the commandeering of private vehicles for military purposes and the enforced inactivity of British truck builders had been to stimulate the market for electrics, but up to now no figures have been available to indicate how strong the movement for electrification of motor traction had become. Among other large users of transportation now employing electrics is Messrs. Harrods, Ltd., the big London department store, which has recently received a shipment of 18 half-ton electric delivery wagons, making a total of 73 electrics now operated in this fleet alone. In other instances as well, large installations are being converted into electrical of gasoline machines. American electric trucks are well represented.

NEW CHAIRMAN APPOINTED.

The governing council of the Society of Automobile Engineers has appointed A. L. Clayden, engineering editor of The Automobile, New York, as chairman of the Standards committee to succeed K. W. Zimmerschied, metallurgist of the General Motors, who occupied this position during the past year. Mr. Clayden has been in this country but 1 year, but was connected with engineering work in Europe since the inception of the motor car.

The Dimmer Problem

Solved

The Eclipse Dimmer does the business. Dims perfectly—yet leaves driving light. Does not disfigure the lamp—Inexpensive. Sold only by

B. I. BILL

543 GOLDEN GATE AVE.

Specialist in electric equipment for automobiles. Mazda bulbs all sizes, voltages and cases.

RAJAH SPARK PLUGS

Fourteen years of successful manufacture, continuing the original design and workmanship proving that the

RAJAH PLUGS

cannot be improved upon.

For Sale by All Dealers

PACIFIC COAST DISTRIBUTORS

Hughson & Merton, Inc.

530 Golden Gate Avenue

San Francisco

Facts That Mean More Money for You

The Big Bull Tractor

Will Plow and Harrow seven to eight acres in ten hours—

Do more and better Plowing than seven horses—

Work twenty-four hours if necessary—

Run in the Furrow, subsoiling and self-steering at the same time—

Run 7" centrifugal pump; your baler or thresher; saw wood.

Are You Interested?

The Bull with the Pull $645 F. O. B. Minneapolis, Minn.

GUARANTEED

7 H. P. at Draw Bar 20 H. P. at Pulley
Few Parts Low Upkeep Economical

HUGHSON AND MERTON, Inc.

San Francisco, Cal. Los Angeles, Cal. Portland, Ore. Seattle, Wash. Spokane, Wash.
530 Golden Gate Ave. 1229 S. Olive St. 329 Ankeny St. 803 E. Pike St. 823 Railroad Ave.

Date

Hughson & Merton, Inc.
(Address Nearest Office)

Gentlemen:
Please send me a copy of your Free Tractor Book, A. H.

Name

Address

SOMETHING NEW

DUNDON PNEUMATIC WHEEL FOR TRUCKS HAS SOLID TREAD

The Dundon pneumatic wheel, consisting of a solid rubber tread underneath, which is a pneumatic tire, is being offered by the Universal Engineering Co., 320 Market street, San Francisco, Cal. Side plates of metal and a band of fabric and rubber inside the plates, together with the solid tread, are said to protect the pneumatic tire from dust and oil. The side plates are of steel and are held on by nuts, the plates being sunk around the bolt ends to allow the nuts to be flush with the plates. The fabric casing of the pneumatic tire has extra wide beads that bear slightly on the side plates, with the idea of making a tight joint. Beneath the beads is a fabric and rubber dust guard making another joint with the side plates, and allowing an up and down motion. A light steel tire on the felloe of the wheel forms a base for the dust guard, inner tube and casing.

The road shocks upon the solid tire are transmitted to the pneumatic tire, the side plates being free to slide up and down. A rotary motion of the wheel on the frame is prevented by one pair of locks and keys on each wheel. The solid tread has vacuum pockets to prevent skidding.

☺ ☺ ☺

CHASE HAS NEW WORM DRIVE

The Chase Motor Truck Co., Syracuse, N. Y., has a new 1-ton worm driven truck known as the Model A, and listing at $1,650, which employs a four-cylinder, L-head motor with a 3½ inch bore and a 5½ inch stroke.

The carbureter is a Holley, and the ignition is by Bosh magneto. The gearset is a Brown-Lipe, offering three speeds forward and one reverse, the gearset case being attached to the flywheel housing. The clutch is a dry plate and the drive is through a worm of the David Brown type in connection with a Sheldon rear axle.

The steering gear is of the worm and nut type, and the wheelbase is 140 inches. Front tires are 36 by 3½ inch, single, solid Firestones, and the rear 36 by 5 single, solid. Springs are semi-elliptic, front and rear. The tread is 56 inches, and the weight on the rear axle is said to be 53 per cent. The fuel tank holds 18 gallons, and the oil tank 1¾ gallons. The loading space back of the driver's seat is 8½ feet.

Speed is regulated by an automatic governor, entirely inclosed and sealed. Electric lighting and starting equipment, and rear fenders, are furnished, but are not included in the price of $1,650. Where the cab and seats are not wanted, a reduction of $40 is made from the list price.

☺ ☺ ☺

STEVENS VISE CAN BE ATTACHED TO THE RUNNING BOARD

Many a motorist makes use of the running board of the car as a work-bench, when forced to make repairs while on the road, but unfortunately such a bench is not equipped with the tools found at home, and that are so necessary for making a satisfactory repair. One of the tools most frequently missed on such occasions is the vise. It is no longer necessary for the motorist to put up with the last inconvenience, however, for the Stevens combination hand vise, offered by Stevens &

PHONE MARKET 2110

NIGHT PHONE PARK 1378
EMERGENCY WEST 4304

PEERLESS MOTOR DRAYAGE CO., INC.

PROMPT AND EFFICIENT SERVICE
150 VALENCIA STREET

San Francisco, Cal., December 17, 1916

The B. F. Goodrich Rubber Co.,
401 Mission St.,
San Francisco, Calif.

Gentlemen:

In reply to yours of recent date, it gives us pleasure to advise you of the splendid service we are getting on our Goodrich De Luxe Wireless Tires.

We began using these in the Spring of this year and the first ones put on have run over 12,000 miles and are not yet worn out. This is more remarkable to us on account of the hard service to which they have been subjected.

We operate, as you know, twenty Peerless Dump Trucks equipped with five yard bodies, handling an average of six and one-half tons each load. The De Luxe Tires carry the loads better than any we have ever used and give far better mileage. We find that we also get increased mileage per gallon of gas by the use of these Tires, and that our trucks have better traction. This service has pleased us so much that we have ordered the last five trucks which we bought to come with Goodrich De Luxe Tires as original equipment, and have changed over most of our wheels to the same. In fact we now have 74 De Luxe out of 120 tires on our trucks and hope to have the entire fleet equipped with them as soon as our present equipment becomes unserviceable.

You are at liberty to use this information or refer any skeptical customers to us.

Very truly yours,

PEERLESS MOTOR DRAYAGE CO., INC.

By Ralph Brown

"Increased Mileage per gallon of gasoline on GOODRICH DE LUXE WIRELESS TRUCK TIRES and better traction for truck"

Hauling crushed rock—averaging 6½ tons a load—and getting mileages such as "12,000 miles and not yet worn out"—explains why The Peerless Motor Drayage Co. is equipping its entire fleet of 20 Peerless Dump trucks with Goodrich De Luxe tires.

Because of greater volume of wear-resisting and capacity load-supporting tread rubber, Goodrich De Luxe tires are the one perfect tire to withstand the most extreme conditions in the contracting field.

The Peerless Motor Drayage Co. knows from experience that Goodrich De Luxe are best. Write to them. Convince yourself that they are the tires for you!

Write for "Decreasing Truck Vibration."

The B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company, Akron, Ohio

Makers of the Celebrated Goodrich Automobile Tires—
"Best in the Long Run."

Service Stations and Branches in All Principal Cities.

Co., 375 Broadway, New York City, can be clamped to the running board by means of a special removable clamp.

The vise itself lists at 75 cents, and the clamp at 25 cents, bringing the price of the complete outfit to $1. It is made of forged steel, and measures 4 inches overall. The jaws are hardened, and measure 1 1/8 inches wide, and open to 1 5/8 inches. Tension of the jaws is automatically maintained by a small flat spring concealed in the handle. A large wing nut permits of setting the work up tight with little effort. The running board clamp can easily be detached, permitting the tool to be used as an ordinary hand vise.

8 8 8

PETELER JACK HAS MANY NOVEL DESIGN ADVANTAGES

Simplicity of design combined with efficient operation has been obtained in the Peteler jack being offered by Moreau & Pratt, inc., 1834 Broadway, New York City. Power is transmitted from the handle directly to the lifting bar of the jack, thus avoiding a multiplicity of parts. The pawls are of hardened steel and as the lifting bar turns freely, wear on the step is distributed.

When a jack is removed from under the car after the tire has been inflated, the lifting bar is usually too high for use next time a blowout is experienced, because the flat tire reduces the distance between the axle and the ground. For this reason it is usually necessary to lower the lifting bar considerably the next time the jack is used, and in the average jack this necessitates working the handle up and down until the desired height is reached. A feature of the Peteler jack is that the lifting bar automatically drops to its lowest position the minute the weight of the car is removed from the jack. An automatic drop bar makes it so that the pressing of a button on the side of the jack gives instant reverse.

Sometimes trouble is experienced with the jack handle striking parts of the car directly over it. To avoid this difficulty the fulcrum of the jack has been placed lower than usual, yet the handle does not pass the horizontal and consequently does not endanger the operator's knuckles hitting the ground.

The list price of the jack is $3.50 and a special head or low hung step for cars with low hung axles may be obtained for 50 cents additional. Pressed and hardened steel is used, no cast iron entering into the manufacture of the jack, and no screws or cotter pins are used in the working parts. The jack is finished in baked black enamel and nickel. It has attracted considerable attention.

TELEPHONE FRANKLIN 1836

The White Star Line

AUTO TOURING COMPANY

Touring Car, Limousine or Taxi-Car

TARIFF: 7 Passenger Touring Cars
$2.00 per hour
 in San Francisco
 7 Passenger Closed Cars
$2.50 per hour
 in San Francisco

SPECIAL RATES FOR COUNTRY TRIPS

TAXICAB RATES FOR SHORT TRIPS to THEATRE or CAFE
 Day and Night Service

Our Taxicab service is the best in San Francisco. We use seven passenger cars for this service, and operate under the "Zone" rate, the charge being at a flat rate, regardless of the number of passengers. Whether 1 or 6 persons occupy the car, the rate is the same. While other companies have reduced their rates of fare, in the face of an increased operating expense, we have maintained the same low rate since starting business, and will continue to do so. We earnestly solicit your Taxicab business, and will guarantee that the rate is positively the lowest in San Francisco, the service and equipment the best.

Telephone Franklin 1836

LARKINS & COMPANY

CARRIAGE AND AUTOMOBILE BODY BUILDERS

Established in 1865

1610-1612-1614 VAN NESS AVENUE

Between California and Sacramento Sts. Phone Prospect 30
 Where their entire attention will be devoted to the prompt delivery of the best work that a modern plant, high-class mechanics and materials can produce.

Tips to Automobilists

(CUT THIS OUT.)

The News Letter recommends the following garages, hotels and supply houses. Tourists will do well to cut this list out and keep it as a guide:

PALO ALTO.—LARKIN'S CAFE—just opened. The only strictly first-class cafe on the Wishbone Route devoted to the patronage of automobile owners and their families. Corner of University avenue and The Circle

SAN JOSE.—LAMOLLE GRILL, 36-38 North First street. The best French dinner in California, 75 cents, or a la carte. Automobile parties given particular attention.

PALO ALTO.—PALO ALTO GARAGE, 443 Emerson St. Tel., P. A. 333. Auto livery at all hours. Tires and sundries in stock. Gasoline, oil, repainting, lathework, vulcanizing. Open day and night.

WHERE SERVICE MEANS SERVICE
M & H GARAGE

819-835 ELLIS ST. Between Polk and Van Ness Avenue

WHERE THE PRIVATE OWNER FEELS AT HOME

FIRE PROOF BUILDING Phones—Park 8386, Park 5138

20---MARSHALL SQUARE---20
GARAGE

EXPERT AUTOMOBILE REPAIRING and MACHINE WORK
 AUTO SUPPLIES

NO. 20 MARSHALL SQUARE
 Opp. 8th and Market Sts. San Francisco

AUTOISTS

SHOULD NEVER BE WITHOUT THEM
 =

Your Grocer Sells 'Em

The Six of Sixteen

Osen McFarland Co.

Golden Gate Avenue

London and Lancashire Fire Insurance Company

Orient Insurance Company

332 PINE STREET SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
 Sam B. Stoy, Mgr. G.O. Smith, Agency Supt. W. B. Hopkins, Local Sec.

Automobile Department W. M. KLINGER, General Agent

FOR SALE---STEVENS DUYREA COUPE---FOR SALE

A1 CONDITION PRICE REASONABLE

H. F. SCHAEFER, 680 ELLIS STREET

SAN FRANCISCO

Prince Paul Troubetzkoy, famous sculptor, and his wife, Princess Troubetzkoy, in their Chalmers Six-40 touring car.

KENNEDY KITS

The Kennedy Mfg. Co., 14 East Jackson Boulevard, Chicago, makes a specialty of tool kits of all sizes, a feature of which is that they are made of prepared steel, but are no heavier than other grips and tool kits, their range in weight being from 5 to 11 pounds. These kits are finished in three coated baked enamel to represent leather, either brown or black. The finish is said not to scratch, rub or chip off easily. In appearance these kits look like leather grips, and they are finished with either Yale or Corbin locks. They come at various prices, according to dimensions. Several styles are made.

☪ ☪ ☪

"X" IS PUT IN RADIATOR WATER TO STOP LEAKS

To stop radiator leaks without the necessity of removing the radiator in order to solder it, is the not unfamiliar idea of a compound called "X," offered by the "X" Laboratories, 630 Washington street, Boston, Mass. "X" being a liquid, when poured into the radiator, at once mixes with the water, which carries it to all parts of the system. As the solution is harmless, it may be left in the radiator, so that any further leaks that might occur will be sealed up. The use of non-freezing compounds such as alcohol in the radiator, does not interfere with the use of this leak preventer. The solution comes in cans, listing at $1.50.

Hughson & Merton, Inc., are the local distributors.

☪ ☪ ☪

—The various States of the Union expended $172,683,000 for good roads in 1915, as compared with $167,334,000 in 1914.

☪ ☪ ☪

—With 700,000 cars produced and sold there was a shortage of at least 300,000 cars last year.

CHICAGO POST OFFICE ADDS TRUCKS

Chicago, Feb. 21.—Fifty-eight new motor trucks were put in service this morning by the Chicago postoffice to replace the horse-drawn vehicles used between the depots and the postoffice and its branches. The new addition makes a total of ninety-six trucks now in use in the local postal service. The first trucks were used to transfer mail from main office to branches.

☪ ☪ ☪

—Cleats on the garage floor to compel close formation of car storage are better than numbers on the wall at the rear. The cleats should be made of strips two inches square and fourteen feet long.

☪ ☪ ☪

—When a tube becomes deflated as a result of puncture, or an imperfect patch, the creeping of the tube tends to tear the valve stem loose and destroy the tube.

☪ ☪ ☪

—It is estimated that $3,000,000 was spent for gasoline in Los Angeles during 1915.

☪ ☪ ☪

—The Cadillac Auto Truck Co., of Cadillac, Mich., will within a short time bring out a new three-quarter ton model truck in addition to the two-ton model now being produced. The new model will be large in its dimensions, and will sell at a very reasonable price.

☪ ☪ ☪

A FIRST-CLASS GARAGE

There are many garages in town, and the motorist is often in a quandary as to where to go, especially for permanent service. There are very few who give you the QUALITY of service of Dow & Green, in Taylor street, between O'Farrel and Geary. Here your car will receive something more than the "once over," and the prices are moderate.

Automobile Starting and Lighting Systems

Give Satisfactory Results when given Proper Attention

We specialize on electrical equipment, storage batteries, etc., and guarantee satisfaction.

Guarantee Battery Co.

Brand & Cushman
Phone Prospect 741

639 Van Ness Ave., San Francisco

ENGINE DRIVEN

KELLOGG

TIRE PUMP

Complete with attachments, rubber tubing and gauge. All metal construction. No oil spray in the air.

$15.00

Easily installed on all cars.

Inquire of your dealer.

Kellogg Electric Motor Driven Garage Pumps

(Many Styles and Sizes)

Hand Pumps, Gauges, Grease Guns and other accessories. The very best made. Insist upon the Kellogg Line.

A. H. COATES

444 MARKET ST.

Direct Factory Representative for Denver, Colo. and West United States

KELLOGG MANUFACTURING COMPANY

ROCHESTER, NEW YORK

San Francisco Chicago Boston New York Detroit

CLASS "A" GARAGE

INCORPORATED

Strictly Fireproof Building

STORAGE SUPPLIES REPAIRS

Best Service Assured

735-751 Post St., San Francisco

Telephone Prospect 2280

T. H. ELKINGTON

VULCANIZING

1135 VAN NESS AVENUE

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Phone Market 6370

Established July 30, 1866

SAN FRANCISCO NEWS LETTER

California Advertiser.

Devoted to the Leading Interests of California and the Pacific Coast.

Vol. XCI

San Francisco, Cal., Saturday, March 4, 1916

No. 10

The SAN FRANCISCO NEWS LETTER AND CALIFORNIA ADVERTISER is printed and published every Saturday by the Proprietor, Frederick Marriott, 21 Sutter street, San Francisco, Cal. Tel. Kearny 3594 Entered at San Francisco, Cal., Post-office as second-class mail matter.

Chicago Office—Geo. Hische, 1310 Westminster, Westminster Building, Chicago.

London Office—George Street & Co., 30 Cornhill, E. C., England. Matter intended for publication in the current number of the SAN FRANCISCO NEWS LETTER AND CALIFORNIA ADVERTISER should be sent to the office not later than 5 p. m. Wednesday.

Subscription Rates (Including postage)—1 year, $4.00; 6 months, $2.25; Foreign—1 year, $6.00; 6 months, $3.25.

—Funny how gasoline and dividends jump together.

—Two men sentenced to one hundred and fifty days in jail for killing deer out of season. Dead sport.

—"Short dresses upheld by club" is newspaper headline. It would be a scandal if they were upheld much higher.

—There's only one redeeming feature in the high price of gasoline—it may drive the jitney men out of business.

—It is a good thing that the Miskinoffs have settled their trouble out of court. The case was becoming just about unfit for publication.

—Castor oil has gone up in price from seventy-five cents to two dollars and a quarter a gallon. The more it goes up the less of it will go down.

—Bakersfield turned down three "dry" propositions at an election last week. Let us hope that that is a forerunner of the State's vote in November.

—General Gloom, given a funeral at sea, has floated back to shore. There are so many of his kin here that he was lonesome away from them.

—The women, in club convention, have decided that the poll tax should be restored—for men only. All right; let's go back to votes for men only.

—The city is talking of buying the United Railroads lines west of Twin Peaks. The corporation may consider it lucky if the city doesn't confiscate them.

—The authorities in Germany have advised the people to kill all mongrel dogs. This news will not inspire any enthusiasm for imported frankfurters.

—Congress, having been properly spanked by the President, has given up its whining over the armed ship controversy and gone back to its usual muddling.

—Dr. David Starr Jordan, in his latest book on the undesirability of war, classifies peace into three varieties. The world would be well satisfied with one variety.

—Charlie Chaplin gets $670,000 a year for capering before a movie camera and allowing his face to be mussed up by custard pies hurled by fellow-comedians. No use talking—you can't suppress brains.

—One hundred society people and fourteen beagles had a wild and exciting hunt at Burlingame Sunday, and captured one jackrabbit. The poor jack will go down in kennel history as a martyr to faddism.

—San Francisco judges are giving stiff sentences to automobile thieves and violators of the drug law. When they so far reform as to realize that murder also is a crime, we will have real cause for self-congratulation.

—The people who are fussing so over whether to retain Twin Peaks' name or give it some other designation are of the squash-minded variety that are always employing their limited brains in mulling over non-essentials.

—The State Prison Board declares that the probation system is a success. Policemen who are shot by paroled men, and citizens whom they have slugged and robbed, may be pardoned for not feeling quite the same way about it.

—Johnson not only acknowledges but defends his practice of rewarding complaisant legislators by giving them fat jobs in the State service. One of the principal counts against Johnson is that he cannot see anything wrong about such actions.

—A veteran bay pilot died last week, and several reporters wrote about the event without saying that he had crossed the bar. Such restraint is encouraging. Soon we will have an account of an actor's death without a reference to the final curtain.

—Governor Hiram W. Johnson is out for the presidency. While a certain amount of interest attaches to this condition of affairs, it would take an awful stretch of the imagination to picture it as having any appreciable effect on what happens at Chicago.

—It is proposed now to have miniature fish hatcheries in the public schools. Fine. It would be a great help to a youth going up against the hard world in search of a job to be able to say that his education included the knowledge of how long it took a salmon egg to incubate.

—While all sorts of discussion is going on as to whether women are wearing their dresses too short, many a harassed husband is reminded by his aggrieved wife that she has not only worn her dress but her bonnet and her shoes so long that she is just ashamed to be seen in them.

—The United States has shipped more than $250,000,000 worth of munitions to Europe, and is still keeping it up at the rate of $2,000,000 daily. So we can hardly expect munition makers to join in peace prayer. It would be unjust, perhaps, to say that the munition makers are praying that the war may keep on—but it is a safe bet that they are not joining in any peace prayers.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

ATTACKING THE RISING PRICE OF GASOLINE.

The extraordinary, rapidly rising prices in gasoline has suddenly developed into a serious problem throughout the country, and has become national in aspect by reason of the recent introduction in Congress of a bill demanding that the government shall engage in the refining of gasoline and sell it at cost to consumers. Throughout the country there has arisen a general protest against the present arbitrary rise in the price of gasoline. The Motor Car Dealers' Association of this city and the State Automobile Association have joined vigorously in this protest on the ground that this rising price seriously threatens the expansion of automobile sales. The local association is launching a campaign to mobilize the automobile interests of this country for the purpose of inducing the big distributing oil concerns that control the output of gasoline to enter into an equitable understanding of the situation. The widespread influence of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce and the Automobile Association of America and other allied concerns connected with this great, thriving industry will be urged to enlist in the movement. Special efforts will be made to get automobile owners to join in the issue, so that the protest will be general and of popular weight.

This juggling with the price of gasoline is almost as old as the first strike of petroleum at Oil Creek, Pennsylvania. The wrangles over it have been constant and vehement. The big refining and marketing companies have been able to "put over" their higher prices simply because there was no competent, influential and well organized body of consumers to oppose them. Heretofore these protests were the sporadic outburst of the ununited "people be damned." That day is passed, if the automobile dealers of the country organize and launch a campaign for a "square deal." For some time past the Federal probe of investigation has been tapping this source of extraordinary, big profits. The reports of various commissions led the government into experimenting in gasoline refining, and expert chemists in the Washington laboratories have discovered new and cheaper ways for its manufacture. In the light of this discovery, Representatives Charles S. Randall of California, a man who understands the temper of the people, introduced the bill mentioned above, requesting that the government engage in the refining business and sell gasoline at cost. The request will naturally be strongly opposed on socialistic grounds, but the action will shove this big contest into the national limelight where the solons cannot dodge it.

A year or so ago a Federal Commission was appointed to inquire into these old and persistent kicks regarding the gouging prices of gasoline. The small refiners of California tried their hardest to get the commission to come to California and rip open the rotten situation here, but the commission was badly buried by the extensive and boggy "gasoline price problem" in the fields east of the Mississippi. The small refiners of California have been a persistent and courageous bunch that have struggled at all hours to make their small plants pay. In the last two years they have largely been eliminated from the map by the big companies underselling them in order to monopolize business here. The result is that four big companies now control the refining situation on the Pacific Coast—Standard Oil, Associated, Union and Shell Company, a Dutch corporation. Of these, Standard Oil, which has just declared a dividend capital in stock of $24,843,300, par value, and almost triple that amount in market value, is the king-pin, and sets the price of crude and refined oils in this State, which means the Pacific Coast, as was testified by experts in a hearing before the State Railroad Commission.

BROTH FOR A SICK MAN.

—De Ball in the Chicago Post.

For years past, complaints have been made against the California oil monopoly by individual producers, by competing companies buying and transporting crude oil, small oil refiners and jobbers, and by retailers and consumers. Small producers have been complaining for years of the unduly low prices offered for their crude oil, and that the pipe line companies controlled the situation and were a monopoly in a position to extort profits from small producers. On the showing revealed by the Federal Trade Commission, the big oil refining organizations of the country, the middlemen, get a double profit by skinning both the small producers of oil and the consumers, the gasoline users being among the latter. Organization, a clear and thorough knowledge of the methods of the refiner and marketer, and a resolute determination to get a square deal will create a combination that will flatten out this old-time reckless bogey stuffed with "higher" gasoline prices.

—Man working on the Sutter County road was stung by a mosquito and laid up for a month. Now he is suing the county for $500 under the employers' Liability Act. He will have a hard time proving that it was a Sutter County mosquito and not one that strayed from an adjoining community.

Signs continue to multiply that Colonel Roosevelt will lead the Republican host to the polls in the presidential election this fall. Eastern leaders in heavy voting States like Massachusetts are coming out for him. In that State there is already a Republican ticket of four delegates-at-large to the Republican convention this fall. This move of the Rooseveltians sent a screech shell into the camp of Senator Weeks, who has been an active candidate, and has badly flattened out the latter's boom. Meanwhile the Colonel is placidly enjoying a summer sail around the Antilles in gentle and receptive spirit. This means, of course, that though the Colonel is calmness itself, his henchmen are out working tooth and toe nail to round up revamped Progressive and Republican delegates for him. The reports of these lieutenants will give Roosevelt, on his return, an excellent angle on the situation.

Another straw, indicative of the Colonel's active candidacy, and he is a hustler in campaigning when he dives into the wilds, is the kindly and unaffected way in which prominent Progressive periodicals, which actively pumped political "dope" for him in the last presidential campaign, are now recalling and publishing the many good things Roosevelt has done for the country. Radical Republicans continue to regard him as striving to slip back into camp by carelessly wearing a lamb wool overcoat. The old guard of true-blue Republicanism steadfastly insist on a high protective tariff reform, indestructible preparedness, and the effacement of the new law taxing personal incomes. Luckily for the several groups in the Republican field of review, there are very few candidates who are willing to take the chance of heading the ticket. The few prominent Republicans left in the party flatly refuse to accept the nomination, and the uncertain honor is left for second and third raters—and Roosevelt. Obviously this is the reason the file of the party is regarding the political outlook so listlessly. Roosevelt will likely be able to put some picturesque moving picture thrills into the campaign should he be selected as the party candidate, but he will find himself sorely handicapped in that respect, this year, by reason of the large number of war pictures being published. Roosevelt should carefully figure on such political handicap while making up the "scare" heads for his campaign in the Republican newspapers.

Johnson's present activity throughout California to shepherd twenty-six delegates to the Republican convention at Chicago has the hand-prints of a thinly disguised masked movement to "plant" twenty-six votes for Roosevelt when the crucial moment comes to swing delegations into line for the Colonel. Those two past masters in the game of politics, one in the East and one in the West, can be relied upon jointly to make several very adroit tactical moves in the present skirmishing for the votes of delegations to the convention.

It is enlivening to learn that the laborers working on the construction of the new U. S. Government railroad in Alaska have gone on strike and are demanding 50 cents an hour; the present rate is $37\frac{1}{2}$ cents per hour for men employed in track-laying gangs. This demand of 50 cents per hour covers all employees in common labor. Such forthright proceeding knocks into a cocked hat the old declaration advanced in argument for government ownership of the railroads that such ownership would be a standing preventative against labor troubles and strikes on the lines. European experience in socialism, which is very much in advance of socialism in America, is to the contrary, as has been illustrated in France and Belgium. In this recent Alaskan case, only 35 miles of the track were completed when the construction gangs demanded a raise. Strikes in Alaska are serious events to the employer, as there is no floating labor there, except when it is loudly called for, and in cases such as the present one, the contractors must send to the coast and hunt hard. According to infiltrating news, the men organized a labor union 600 strong and then called a strike. The situation has developed a rather awkward position for the government, as it is pledged to build the road for the purpose of opening up the rich coal and copper mine territory in the interior. Private capital volunteered to tap the interior of the county with railroads, but private capital in Alaska has been accused of charging exorbitant rates, both passenger and freight. That was the government's chief excuse for building the present line into the interior, in an effort to open up the country for the exploitation of its natural resources.

Alaska has heretofore proved to be a rarely difficult place for strikers to succeed, as was developed at the time of the strike in the Treadwell mine. Other strikes in that lonely region have fared as disastrously. The big mining and commercial interests there occupy an autocratic position; they have the insistent habit of importing the best brand of gun-fighters and strike-breakers to be had. It is a lonely land, cut off in a large measure from the outside world, and the big corporations, although they treat their employees well in times of peace, are no niggards in shelling out punishment when a strike is on. The Alaskan laborer has been educated into this line of policy, and strikes are accordingly as rare there as an equatorial day. Had some of the Alaskan barons owned the right of way and begun construction, there would have been no strike. Uncle Sam is regarded as an easy mark, hence the present strike. The outcome will be watched with keen delight by capitalists.

RAISING A WAR CHEST FOR PREPAREDNESS.

The big fund of $500,000,000 to defray the cost of Preparedness, now being planned by Congress, is causing many of its supporters some sleepless nights. The problem is to raise the money by taxation, of course, but such funds must be raised in an adroit way, so that the burden shall not fall so heavily as to arouse the wrath and antipathy of the business men and the labor element of the country. Heavy taxation is the mother of grouches that seek relief by double-crossing the party in power at the polls. Some of the astute solons believe they have found a remedy to save the situation in a bill recently introduced by Congressman A. J. Sabath of Illinois. It is known as inheritance tax bill No. 8929, and has been referred to the committee on ways and means. According to the clauses of this bill, which promises unusually large returns, the squeeze is placed on big estates passing through probate; small estates get off lightly. The Congressional Industrial Commission has been strongly endorsing this method of taxation for some time as a remedy for poverty and the unequal distribution of wealth. The United States Supreme Court passed affirmatively on the bill's legality when the question arose of providing funds to conduct the war against Spain. The stream of estates passing through probate are of open record and appraisal; there is no possibility of concealment, as in the personal income tax. Estates, therefore, are compelled to yield every penny that the proposed tax demands. Experts figure that an income from this source is one of the richest and most permanent in sight, and that the Preparedness fund can be increased by many millions of dollars annually from that source. At the same time, this contribution would greatly relieve the business men and big corporations of part of the taxes that may be imposed upon them, if by any means the new Sabath bill fails of passage.

TOWN CRIER

—Happy and hopeful Blingum initiated the sport of hunting agile hares with a pack of beagles, this week, and the count of captured hares at the close of the afternoon's resolute chase showed—not a hair of a hare. This does not mean that it is a closed season for hares in San Mateo County, or that a well trained and enterprising beagle cannot find a well dressed hare at any poulterer's shop thereabouts, if so minded. The beagle pack of the Blingum club is an unusually fine trained and aristocratic pedigree bunch, and disdainfully trotted past the coiffeur parlors in the village, thereby indicating that they are up to snuff regarding the prime distinction between hair and hare. This intelligent distinction was again illustrated in the boggy hunting field when a real, not a "movie," hare was started by the master of hounds unpreparedly toppling over him. Instantly, or rather as instantly as a footman could find the bugle buried in the wraps, a lusty "So-ho, tally ho, tra, la, la, la, they're off," was blown very injudiciously. We feel sure that the bugler would not have blown that clarion call had he known that that sole hare had sought the balmy climate of Blingum to recuperate from a case of nervous prostration. He was lean and long and lank, as is the ribbed sea sand, and his joints squeaked during the first few bounds as he tried to get into his stride. Once off, he couldn't stop till he caught up with the vociferously barking beagles, who welcomed him joyously. He proved to be an old friend of the pack, and after licking him over joyously with genuine canine affection, they conducted him to the nearby brush and told him to nap out the afternoon while they led the gaily dressed hunters and sporting Dianas up hill and down dale, and into the loveliest bog spots in that locality. Hours later the hunters emerged besplashed in mud, but radiant and happy with a real live thirst. As a display of flamboyant hunting togs the initial beagle hunt was an enthusiastic success. The acme of the day's joy was reached when the mud-bespattered members plumped into their seats at the club house tables and fell soulfully upon the chilled glass refreshment. It was informally suggested during the "rest" that as the hare of the day had proven such a success, it might be well to employ him for the season's hunts. Motion tabled till the glasses were rechilled.

—Former United States Senator Root expresses the opinion that there is ground for hope that from the horrors of violated international law, a "stronger law may come." Very likely a stronger law will come, but on its heels will come the inevitable iconoclastic genius that will make ducks and drakes of it. The game of war is very much like the game of the bank robber when it comes to intelligent regulation to win out. As fast as the banks develop new mechanical contrivances and other safeguards to protect their treasure, the intelligent and resourceful crook devises some instrument or method whereby he continues to make successful periodical raids on the cash deposits. War geniuses go further, and when they find that their plans are barred by international laws, customs or network of human protests, they cut straight through them, on the principle of the "people be damned." Alexander the Great exemplified that spirit when he cut the Gordian knot. Ghenisy Khan, Napoleon and all the world conquerors have exhibited strongly the same spirit. Man-made laws will never restrain ambitious, natural-born conquerors, any more than they will natural-born criminals.

—For some time past, many owners of fine bred dogs in the bay cities have wondered how and why their pets have disappeared so mysteriously. James C. Keyer, Tom Woodruff, Mrs. "Jimmy" McCormick, Miss Helen Bentley, Dr. A. C. Allen, Harry Prior and scores of other fanciers of high-bred canines have worried over the matter without reaching any definite information. Policeman John F. Lazanby, who has a catholic taste for pedigreed animals, lost a prize setter last summer, and being in the sleuth business, he kept on the trail till he ran down the mystery in the research laboratory at the Affiliated Colleges of the University of California in this city. He discovered that his dog had been vivisected there; so had hundreds of other dogs, high and low bred; any healthy dog led to that door is exchanged for $1 flat. Pedigree counts for nothing. No man knows how many dogs valued at over $100 have been stolen and shoved into science for $1 net. Between sixty and seventy dogs are kept in the laboratory there on tap for science to probe into. If a dog does not die under the "research vivisection," he is bandaged up and carefully kept in readiness for further experiment. In this wise some dogs are lucky enough to do a vivisection marathon lasting as long as three years. The unlucky ones moan out their life under ether on the first experiment. The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals has taken a hand with a view to saving the dogs part of the long drawn out butchery. Had Policeman Lazanby not uncovered this charnel house of painless experiment by science, the University by this time might have been doing a thriving business next door by transforming the canines that succumbed into beautiful sausages in rainbow colors. Peace to the professors, for they have more troubles in the vivisection press just now than the dogs.

—It is rather painful to sterling Americans inspired by American principles and American aspirations to learn that the editors of the leading German papers in this country have formed an organization to show their hostility to certain candidates mentioned as being in the race for the presidency of the Republic. At their first meeting they denounced the present administration at Washington because it insists on being strictly neutral, and will not yield to German pressure. The keynote of this new foreign organization in this country is said to be "Hang together in affairs of business and State," meaning of course the support of their birth country, Germany. Such sentiments on the part of foreigners who are cordially invited to America to become an integral part of the nation, dividend receivers in its material advancement, and inheritors of American principles, are the trying burdens that loyal Americans pay for the efforts they are making for true democracy. The nation has suffered this disease in a more or less virulent form since the Tory days of 1776. Since then, thank God, the country has been big enough to swallow this breed of "trouble" makers. The indications are that the nation will continue to absorb them till the stamp of the real American, permeated through the generations with American principles, dominates a nation of one fibre and faith.

—The alleged insane patient in the Stockton asylum who insisted that the sane people were inside the asylum walls and the insane were without, seems to have hit within a reasonable distance of the truth. A lady of large understanding, healthy avoirdupois and eight children recently annexed in marriage a biped in Oregon, a year or so ago. Lately she had the effrontery to demand a divorce and a change of name because she had recently discovered that her husband was insane, as somewhere, somehow, he had transformed his name from Gardiner to Bumgardener. What can a poor man do when even the awful name of Bumgardener will not save him from the persistent attack on a 210 pound widow and eight bawling children.

BINGHAM'S DIAGNOSIS

CHARLES A. CHAMBERS.

Hiram Renfro was so busy that it was impossible to take a summer vacation. When the holiday season arrived, however, he planned to have his wife escape the heat of the interior by sending her to some cool scenic spot on the Pacific Coast, where the ozone and environments for enjoyment were ideal.

The Renfros were in moderate circumstances; therefore, these annual trips were not on an elaborate scale, for it was necessary to economize in order to make income fit finances.

A month before Mrs. Renfro planned her outing, all sorts of advertisements were studied to find out where the most pleasure and accommodation could be secured for the least outlay of mazuma. The seaside and mountain resort ads were read as vividly as one would read an Irving Cobb travesty.

"Plenty of butter, eggs, chickens and milk at eight dollars per," seemed to fit the treasury of the Renfros, and it was usually all to one of these cheap feeding emporiums that Mrs. Renfro would hike.

On her last vacation she chose Beelzebub Beach, a small resort on the California coast, not from absolute preference, but for economy's sake.

It seems that a denomination known as the "Holy Smokers" made their headquarters at Beelzebub, and during the summer months they put in their time singing and dancing around bonfires, pretty much after the same manner as the Indian snake dancers.

On account of the influx of these faddists, living was cheap by pre-arrangement. In addition to the cheap accommodations afforded, by simply signing your name to a yellow printed slip of paper, reduced trip railway rates were effected, and this yellow slip also identified the holders entitling them to special low terms at the food foundry.

The capers of the Holy Smokers, otherwise known as Jumping Joys, afforded amusement to the ordinary layman, which caused curiosity seekers to flock to 'Bub Beach.

Mrs. Renfro was more interested in the cool zephyrs and reasonable accommodations than she was in the Holy Smokers.

Before leaving home and husband, Mrs. Renfro made every preparation to have him comfortable during her absence. As they could not afford a servant, it necessitated Mr. Renfro taking up the duties of cook, bed-maker and grass-sprinkler.

Before her departure she supplied the sleeping room with a sufficient number of sheets, pillow slips and bed spreads for changes of linen, and she taught him also how to make up the bed and how to perform other household stunts.

He understood it all right, he assured his wife, and the novelty made him somewhat enthusiastic, for there are always times when the general routine of existence bores, and, in this instance, our friend Hiram was tickled with the chance to experiment with being all to himself.

All household matters and instructions settled, Mrs. Renfro bade her hubby a fond good-bye and departed for Beelzebub.

A particularly hot spell visited the home town, and with it came an unexpected increase of office duties.

Between trying to keep up with his office work and attending to his household routine, Hiram was as busy as a Spanish bean cook in Mexico feeding soldiers.

At night Renfro was so tired and the weather was so hot that he did not even take the trouble to turn down the bed clothes. He simply undressed, took a cold bath, and planted himself on top of the bed-spread without even donning a night gown.

Mrs. Renfro remained away for six weeks. All the while Hiram used the same towel. The bed remained as she had left it; that is, the same bed spread was used as a sheet continuously.

"Too much trouble to spar around with household junk," Renfro would remark.

After occupying the bed every night for three weeks, Renfro was annoyed with a terrible itching of the skin. He could not account for it.

This itching became so violent that he became alarmed, and called in a Dr. Bingham. The doctor examined his cuticle closely and was startled.

Nothing like these symptoms had he ever observed in his practice.

Hiram's hide was corrugated, honeycombed and fluted. It looked as if he had been stamped all over with a set of waffle irons. Dr. Bingham became more perplexed as he continued his diagnosis. He could not imagine what caused the peculiar indentures, and what puzzled him more was the uniformity of the eruptions.

The man's skin was, in fact, ornamental, more so than any tattoo artist could have made it.

Aside from the terrible itching experienced by the patient, the latter was in perfect health, appetite ravenous, slept well, and he was as active as a Rocky Mountain goat.

Dr. Bingham was no skin specialist. He was, in fact, one of those all-around plug practitioners who could pull teeth, doctor a horse, cure chills and fever, amputate a wart and had an intimate knowledge of quinine and epsom salts.

This corrugated condition of Hiram's surface perplexed Dr. Bingham. There were no other doctors within a radius of fifty miles whom he might call in for consultation. He searched his pharmaceutical library to solve the case, but to no avail. He examined treatises on mange, itch, hives and prickly heat.

Dr. Bingham sought fame, and here was a chance to herald to the medical world a new disease. Long years ago it was inflammation of the bowels until some modern medico new-named the complaint appendicitis. Ordinary diabetes, in another instance, was given the fashionable name of Bright's Disease. The swelling of a human ear, a trouble prevalent among pugilists, was pronounced cauliflower ear. In each instance the namer of the new disease and its discoverer became instantaneously famous, so why not Roscoe Bingham, M. D.?

Dr. Bingham got busy on the spot, and he informed Renfro that he was affected with a new disease known as "Tripe Disease," in other words he informed his patient that he was surely and slowly turning into tripe.

The formation of the skin, with its mysterious indentures, such as appeared on the cuticle of Renfro, resembled tripe more than anything else, so a new discovery known as "Bingham's Tripe Disease" was announced to the medical profession, and this new disease was Associated-Pressed east and west, north and south.

Dr. Bingham wrote to a specialist in the East announcing his discovery, and the latter became so interested that he boarded the first train West to pay the doctor and patient a visit.

The specialist arrived, and after making a microscopical examination of Renfro's pelt, was unable to detect any diseased tissue, nor the presence of either microbe or insect.

The specialist was nonplussed. He thought what on earth could have produced this condition?

It was given up.

Hiram's better-half arrived home, at last, and to her amazement the house was topsy-turvy.

She commenced to abuse Renfro for his neglect of the premises, and particularly because he had been using the same bed-spread for a sheet during her absence, never once turning the bed covers down when retiring.

It later developed that instead of Hiram's skin turning into tripe, as Bingham would have it, the skin indentures, making the waffle-like surface, was caused by the pressure of Hiram's body against the ornamental design of the bed-spread or bed cover.

TRADE MARK

BOORD'S
LONDON, ENG., GINS

DRY
OLD TOM
TWILIGHT

CHARLES MEINECKE & Co.
AGENTS PACIFIC COAST 314 SACRAMENTO ST., S. F.

It is not enough to knit for the Belgians. One must be able to talk of its art and literature in order to qualify for the intellectual set of the Monday Night Club. The Monday Night Club includes some hundred men and women who foregather once a month to listen to the message of the celebrated wayfarers to these parts. They have trained lion catchers who keep tab on the movements of distinguished travelers, and very few of them escape.

For example, there was Dr. Hibben, President of Princeton University, who spoke not long ago before this very select gathering. He likewise asked questions about suffrage and the feminist movement, and he made a card index of his answers, and sprung some of them at a big public meeting in Los Angeles. It was just a common, ordinary affair, with men and women present who represented the aristocracy of brains—nothing like the exclusiveness of the Monday Night Club here! Dr. Hibbard quoted some information a Monday Nighter had given him about suffrage, and a Los Angeles woman (P. H. D. Cornell) informed him that the lady who had made that statement must be a "very ignorant person indeed!" And now the story has traveled this way, and the Monday Nighter, who is a product of one of the most expensive finishing schools in New York and is considered very "high brow" by the dancing set, is peeved about the affair.

But to return to our knitting, via Belgian literature. The other day I saw two young women, of the intellectual type, and the smart set cut, go suddenly mad in a book shop. One of them asked the clerk for translations of what sounded like a dangerous combination of vowels with a nasal affliction. Her friend looked calmly on, both of them wearing most intelligent expressions the while. Finally, one of them produced some typewritten lists, gave one to the clerk, and asked him to find out whether any translations in English are in existence.

As she went out she said: "Well, anyway, now that we know the names of the authors by heart, we can discuss them if another Belgian intellectual should come this way!"

So I asked the clerk to let me see the list. Courrouble, Eekhoud, Lemonnier, Rodenbach, Demolder. There are no English translations. However, I, too, have memorized the list, and like those brilliant young women who believe in preparedness, I am ready to discuss Belgian literature with all comers.

Society is not cooling its heels waiting for an ice rink to open. Instead, the first set in the Kingdom of Energy is putting in the mornings learning to feel at home on the ice skates. Every morning one finds a group of young women at one of the cafes skimming over the miniature pond with the professionals, who are the forerunners of the tribe that is sure to migrate here as soon as the fad is established. Mesdames Walter Martin, George Cameron, Gene Murphy, Templeton Crocker, Fred McNear, Will Taylor and several others were clever enough to engage most of the time of this couple, so that they will be in the proficient class when the big rink opens and the novices are falling headlong over each other.

Roller skating is so very different from ice skating that those who were most proficient on rollers find it more difficult than the others to adjust the law of balance to the idiosyncracies of ice skates. For a week or two it looked as though Mrs. Fred McNear had met her Waterloo. Of course, her friends were secretly pleased to find that at one sport at least she was not going to set the pace. But just as they were beginning to lose control of their commiserations and show their pleasure in her defeat, she got the hang of ice skating, and is now giving them all a race for first place.

One of the reasons that the sport is sure to be popular here is that so few of the people have had much experience that competition as well as pleasure enters into it.

As intimated before, it is awfully good form to be very high brow just now—at least some time must be spent in intellectual pursuits in order to qualify. A hostess who was making up a dinner list for a distinguished visitor called in the services of one of our best known lawyers, whose wife does the social game to go over the list with her. The lawyer and the visitor were fraternity brothers at Harvard, and the hostess knew that he would be a help in making up the list of guests.

She came to the name of a man who is very much in demand at dinners. "It is a pity that he cannot think, or that he cannot be silent," said the lawyer of this conversationalist, and the story leaked out and the lawyer is thinking unkind things of the hostess, and says "Never again," and the conversationalist is saying unkind things of the lawyer, and the wives are none of them speaking, and the rest of that little world is smiling.

Mrs. Alma de Brettville Spreckels naturally cannot instruct every member of her committee in matters of art. It happened that the other day a man wandered into headquarters where the Tombola things are on display. He bought some tickets, and then asked one of the volunteers standing around who had painted a certain picture that pleased his fancy.

The lady looked uncertain for a moment, and then in a very accurate manner announced: "Oh, that is by Mater Doloroso!"

It was too good to keep, and the chap rushed over to the Bohemian Club, where he found some of the fellows interested in art, and presented them with this choice bit.

At this writing it is too late to speak of the Fashion Show in the past tense, but by the end of the week every one ought to know just where the waistline is locating for the season—that is always the most important thing to know about the styles!

On Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, the affair for the Benefit of the Free Kitchens for Nursing Mothers will claim the good will and interest of society, and on Saturday a Fashion Show will be staged at the Palace Hotel for the benefit of local charities.

SALE OF EXPOSITION VIEWS AT 40% DISCOUNT

*We have a large selection of P. P. I. E. views, both plain and colored, in oil colors, framed and unframed.
Will close them out at the above discount, which is the exact cost of many of them.
Come early while the line contains all the best subjects.*

RABJOHN & MORCOM, 240 Post St.

Dinner and box parties for the Mardi Gras on Tuesday night of next week are crowding the calendars of all those who help to make this annual pageant a financial as well as an artistic success. The costumers are working day and night for the ball, and many of the masquers are carrying out the request of the management and will come as flowers, or tiny creatures that live in flowerland. Mrs. Templeton Crocker's gown is finished, and those who have seen it say that it is really spectacular in its loveliness. It was feared that a flower scheme might put a premium on the commonplace, and for a time Queen Helene demurred at the idea. But finally Edgar Walter showed her what could be done with the lotus, and the costumers have carried out the design so superlatively well that the queen is delighted.

The costumes for the court will be finished on Monday, when there will be a dress rehearsal, and then all is ready for the magic wand to convert the sun court of the Palace into a fairyland for the flowers.

Navy League Dansant at Fairmont.

Leap Year traditions marked the trend of the dance given Tuesday by members of the Woman's Section of the Navy League of America at the Fairmont Hotel. Attractive young society girls dressed in nurses' uniform of the army and navy acted as ushers and floor directors of the well appointed society event. It was well attended by representatives from the army and navy, society, clubdom and philanthropic organizations. Officers from the Presidio, Alcatraz, Yerba Buena Island were guests of the Navy League. Affiliated with similar leagues throughout America, the membership enrollment of the San Francisco branch made a splendid record in the Leap Year diversion, the object of which was to replenish the league's treasury for future work.

The Civic League of Improvement Clubs and Associations will give a popular civic banquet at the Palace Hotel, Thursday, March 9th, at 6:30 p. m., in honor of the Mayor and officials of the city and county of San Francisco. Governor Johnson and other prominent dignitaries of the State and the city will be present to add luster, distinction and speech-making to the occasion. The capacity of the banquet room is six hundred, and the price $1 per plate. Naturally, the early birds will get nearest the tables heaped with abundance. Joy will be present and unconfined, as the gathering will be a golden celebration in civic sociability.

SUDDEN PASSING OF LT.-GOVERNOR ESHLEMAN.

The sudden demise of Lieutenant-Governor John M. Eshleman, this week, proved a painful shock to his throngs of staunch and sympathetic friends. Few men in the State have enjoyed such a wide and hearty acquaintance as the former president of the State Railroad Commission. Most of his life was spent in a desperate struggle against tuberculosis, which ended in a hemorrhage of the lungs while returning to his home in Indio from Washington, D. C. He was born on a farm at Villa Ridge, Ill., 39 years ago. When 19, he located at Colton, San Bernardino County, for the benefit of his health. He worked as a railroad section hand, and found means to carry him through the University of California, where his character and keen mental equipment early won distinction. In 1894 he was appointed a deputy labor commissioner, and two years later represented Alameda County in the State Legislature. His health gave way, and with his wife he settled in the warm climate of Indio, where he was made district attorney. When the State Railroad Commission was organized in 1911, he was made a member, and later its president. Under his office that body became recognized as one of the most efficient in the country. His obsequies were attended by many of the leading public men of the State. His demise is a distinct loss to the political and industrial movement in the West. He leaves a widow, formerly Miss Elizabeth Leggett of Sacramento, and three children, Katherine, Jane and John Morton, Jr.

—Franz L. Heim, a well known business man of this city and a native of Erbach, Germany, passed away at his home in this city, aged 75 years. He was a members of the Germania Lodge No. 116, I. O. O. F., and of the San Francisco Turn Verein. Five children, Mrs. F. W. Le Ballister, Mrs. E. H. Noemand and Johanna, Herman M., and William C. Heim, survive him, besides a wide host of staunch friends.

Mrs. A. B. Spreckels' Noble Work for Relief of the Belgians

On Saturday, March 11 next, widespread public interest in this city will be centered in the big Tombola, drawing of prizes, which will crown the extraordinary and big-hearted endeavors of Mrs. A. B. Spreckels and a large board of prominent society women in raising a large fund for the relief of the Belgians in that lonely corner of the country where the intrepid royal family and what is left of the Belgium army are making their last desperate stand.

Ever since the victims of the war, France and Belgium began to implore the world for relief in their utter desolation and want, Mrs. Alma de Brettville Spreckels has been indefatigable in her endeavors to alleviate their wretched distress. Very early she began her ministrations by personally helping the widows and orphans of artists, writers and sculptors, victims in Paris of the war. Later, in this country, she organized influential, capable and sympathetic people to raise funds, clothing, ambulance equipment, medicines and other necessities for the myriads of helpless sufferers. A few among her many endeavors and enterprises were the sale of the famous Black Pearl, presented by Percy Marks of Australia; performances of La Loie Fuller and her dancing nymphs, and countless benefits, entertainments, musical and social. Later she sent La Loie Fuller on a tour of the United States and Canada to raise additional funds for Belgian war victims. Both Mrs. Spreckels and La Loie Fuller are now working in unison in this country and Canada. The field of endeavor is in consequence continent-wide, and the labor of heroic proportions, and would be impossible of the present success were it not for the heartfelt and zealous contributing assistance of the big hearted and determined women who have volunteered their services to Mrs. Spreckels. The work of this noble group of women are specially endorsed by Ambassador Jusseraud, representing France at Washington; President Wilson, Governor Johnson, Mayor Rolph, Archbishop E. J. Hanna, Bishop W. F. Nichols, Rabbi Martin Meyer, ex-President Taft, Madame Currie of France, Pierre Loti, Mme. Flammarion, Lady Eileen Gray, Countess Van Deb Steen, Anatole France, Commandant Dellancy, Mayor Nathan of Rome, Mrs. Clara Darling, Mrs. Merrill and others.

In the big Tombola drawing, beginning Saturday, March 11, every ticket will receive a prize, and the holder will have the added satisfaction that he is directly helping the starving Belgians. Among the more than 20,000 prizes are a high-bred race horse, a player piano, $10,000 worth of valuable paintings by famous artists, a $350 upright piano, $5,000 worth of valuable statuary, beautiful French tapestries, high-priced victrolas, beautiful jewelry, rich fur sets, automobiles and hundreds of other unique and beautiful gifts contributed by sympathizers of this rarely appealing cause. Many of these gifts are now on exhibition at 457 Powell street.

Mrs. Spreckels has just received an autographed portrait of King Albert of Belgium, accompanied by a letter from Adjutant-General W. Jungbluth, chief of the military establishment of the King. The King sends his portrait in recognition of the sympathy expressed so eloquently in the noble work of relief for the Belgian people in their darkest hour of trial, and he recalls his visit to this country in 1898. He dwells on the warm and heartfelt reception accorded him and the strong and intimate feeling it engendered in him for the United States.

—Plants for your garden, just arrived from Holland, in best of condition: Roses, hydrangeas, azaleas, evergreens, boxwood, etc. Passed State authorities' inspection. Wholesale prices. 84-86 Second street, near Market.

Lamps and Fixtures

that harmonize with their surroundings
Made of the new Metal Tapestry,
as softly colored as a fabric.

Indestructible

Especially charming in English chintz
pattern or in Oriental design.

THE PALMER SHOP
1345 Sutter Street

SPORTS AND PASTIMES

BY OUTSIDER

"Outsiders see most of the game."—Old Saw.

The Foot-Beagles Meet

The first meet of the Beagle Club took place last Sunday afternoon, when the hounds were thrown off at The Oaks, Mrs. Kohl's residence at Easton, and were followed by a hundred enthusiastic members. At first the pace was too fast for the field, and the beagles had to be recalled several times by the huntsman. A hot scent was picked up late in the afternoon, and the worry took place in Prince Poniatowski's grounds on the western edge of Hillsborough. While on the whole the sport was rather slim, yet it has been proved to the satisfaction of the foot-beaglers that the Californian hare, or jack-rabbit, will double and ultimately come back to the chase. Besides the huntsman, the officials of the club are: Mrs. Fred Kohl, M. F. B. (Mistress of Foot Beagles); Frank Carolan, Cheever Cowdin, Templeton Crocker, and Harry Hastings, whippers-in. There are ten couples in the cry and about one hundred and twenty members of the club.

* * *

Lakeside Country Club

The recently organized Lakeside Country Club will have, when completed, a course unsurpassed in the West, if not indeed in the entire country.

The new club has taken a long term lease on 185 acres of ideal golfing country, between Lake Merced and the Pacific, and has purchased outright some four acres as a site for the clubhouse, which will be erected at a cost of approximately $50,000. The membership is to be exclusively for men, and is the first club on the Pacific Coast to establish this rule.

The provision that the members are to be men only is of great interest, as our country clubs, like our culture, have become largely feminized. Take, for example, the Burlingame and Menlo Clubs; although these have but a scant half dozen or so women members in their own right, yet such is the influence of the ladies that to all practical purposes the men might be deemed to constitute a mere annex to a woman's club. All of which is apropos of a story that is told of a well known member of Burlingame, and who has done more for golf in California than any one man. He returned to the club after a long absence, and observing two tees at one of the holes, remarked: "What is that back tee?" "It is a man's tee," was the answer. "Then what is a man's tee doing in a woman's club?"

The officials and board of directors of the Lakeside Club are well known in golfing circles. James S. Webster, president; Harold L. Mack, vice-president; John H. Robertson, secretary-treasurer, are the officers, and besides these the following make up the directory: John Lawson, William S. Rheem, Elmer H. Cox and C. F. Hunt.

* * *

President Woodward's Ultimatum

The golfers are still wrestling with the amateur rules, and President Frank L. Woodward, of the U. S. G. A., comes out with the following:

There are two and only two classes of occupations that golfers are permitted to engage in for pay and still retain their amateur standing. One is literary work. The only restriction placed upon this form of activity is that a player's name may not be attached to an article of which he is not in part the author. The other line of effort for which an amateur golfer may receive pay is work in the direction of what is known as golf architecture—the laying out, remodeling or construction of golf courses."

According to this, a golfer may not be a banker or a real estate agent or an automobile salesman, or any of the other ordinary occupations of the day. To retain amateur standing, a player may only be a literary man, like Chick Evans or Jess Willard, a golf course architect, or else possessed of independent means of his own or married to a rich wife. Of course, Mr. Woodward does not mean anything of the kind, although the assertion is part of a formal, signed statement. He really means that there are only two classes of occupation connected with golf that a golfer may engage in and be a simon pure amateur; but is it no wonder that rules are subject to so much misconception when they are worded so carelessly. Even one of the signed-article writers on golf might have done better.

* * *

Gotch refuses to wrestle in San Francisco because, forsooth, the dailies accused him of running out on his match with Santell. Well, we should worry, but it is somewhat ungrateful of a matman to be against the newspapers, in view of the fact that the interest in the game is purely factitious, and the wrestling hippodromes would not be possible if an artificial stimulus were not created by the press.

* * *

Jess Willard, the champion heavyweight sporting writer of the world, wired from New York that he enjoyed his rub-down last Monday. Sports' copy must be hard to pick up in the East when even the longest leased wire is used for this kind of guff.

Wedding Presents.—The choicest variety to select from at Marsh's, who is now permanently located at Post and Powell streets.

MELLOW AS MOONLIGHT
CASCADE
For your HI-BALL today

The finest, purest and mellowest whisky that brains and money can produce, cost to you no more than inferior grades; so why not ask for and insist on getting CASCADY.

Instead of saying whisky, just say CASCADY, you will enjoy it and feel much better.

Special enjoyable drink recipes for the asking by writing
J. H. Norton, care San Francisco News Letter

PAINTINGS

BY W. A. COULTER

NOW ON EXHIBITION IN THE

Merchants Exchange Building

477 CALIFORNIA ST. OPEN DAILY FROM 10 TO 5

Will be Sold at

PUBLIC AUCTION

ON TUESDAY

MARCH 7th, AT 12:30

AT

Merchants Exchange Building

EDW. CURTIS, Auctioneer

PLEASURE'S WAND

"Obey no wand but Pleasure's."—Tom Moore.

"Sumurun" a Dazzling Spectacle at Orpheum.

Even in revised form, "Sumurun" is wonderful. All thanks to Gertrude Hoffman for her courage and enterprise in placing this offering on the vaudeville stage. Her production of a year or so ago was most pretentious and on a scale of lavish extravagance. This time she gives us something which fairly takes our breath away. It is just a mad riot of color and movement, a swirling panorama of kaleidoscopic effects, in which the action never lags for a moment. Being done in pantomime makes it all the greater. So lucid and comprehensive is the story in outline that one follows it clearly and easily. The musical accompaniment is, moreover, most effective. There are eight scenes, the most ambitious production yet seen on our vaudeville stage. As a whole, the settings are splendidly managed, and the color schemes show the work of an artist who fully understood his subject. The costuming is faithful and vivid in color combinations. Max Reinhardt, who is responsible for "Sumurun," accomplished a great work with this pantomime. He has resurrected the art of pantomime, and given it the niche it should occupy in the world of drama. As the slave girl, Miss Hoffman makes the character stand out like a wonderful bas-relief. She has marked magnetism, and besides is a true artist. A fine acting organization is assigned the various important roles. Particularly good is the work of Hammed Shriff as the hunchback. Excellent acting is done by Kenneth Harlan as the Sheikh's son, and Charles Henderson as the Sheikh is an imposing figure. Enrico Muris as Nur-al-din shows dramatic strength. Hortense Zaro as "Sumurun" is pretty and forceful, and a large number of other roles are all well acted. In fact, I have rarely noted such all round excellence in anything which assumed the ambitious proportions of this production. The action moves like some well oiled machinery. When the curtain descends on the tragic finale, it leaves one gasping. All we can remember becomes a jumbled mass of color and swift movement, in which several of the prominent figures gradually emerge from this mental chaos, and we grasp some idea of what we have witnessed.

The Orpheum is crowded these days, and seats are hard to secure. Besides this feast, there are five regular numbers of Orpheum calibre. Surely enough to satisfy the appetite of the most ardent vaudevillian.

PAUL GERSON.

Pantages Bill Shot Full of Gayety and Laughter.

Pantages presents a rattling good high class bill this week, punctuated with sparkling comedy, excellent music numbers and several eccentric turns that explode spontaneous laughter. The program is led by "The Office Girls," a breezy sextette of colorful, flirting, skipping daintiness full of ginger and electricity that furnish the background for comedian William Craig, aided and abetted by Dixie Harris and Belle Montrose. Miss Montrose does a capital imitation of a stage struck girl, and puts over snappy retorts with gatling gun rapidity. This whirlwind bunch have something going with a bang every moment. Rucker and Winnifred, as a Chinaman and a coon, rock the house with guffaws in the efforts of the heathen to collect a twenty-five cent wash bill from his customer. They have a method all their own in tickling funnybones. Two girls, Harris and Nolin, also possess originality in uncorking laughs; the robustly "plump" one is viciously guyed as "fat" by the singer, and their sparring in jabbing sentences, singing and patter, is given with blithe artistic finish. Ed. Gallagher and Bob Carlin furnish a new idea in a travesty entitled "Before the Mast." With a background of the towering drop of a super-dreadnaught behind them, they banter each other with fusillades of jokes on navy life and other targets. They are old hands at the game, and put over the laughs faster than the audience can handle them. Every vaudeville fan is hypnotized by music when well played, and those "violin fiends," Georgie Howard and Viola Vercler, assisted by George Prince, with George Gould at the piano, fairly blaze their way into the hearts of the audience by their fervor and the happy selections of classical and ragtime airs. Keegan and Ellesworth are a classy couple with a neat and finished air in patter, singing and dancing; they are thoroughly up-to-date entertainers. Bessie Harvey introduced the show with a unique act, a combined equestrienne, singing, posing and trained pigeon act, prettily handled. The reel of the evening furnished another chapter in that diverting melodramatic serial of the "Red Circle."

Dorothy Jardon, the beautiful Broadway star, next week at the Orpheum.

ADVANCE ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Vivian Grant in Exposition of Wagnerian Operas.—Vivian Grant, of Berkeley, the young Wagnerian exponent, will present a spring series of her Operas in Miniature, beginning with Das Rheingold, March 15th; Die Walkure, March 18th; Siegfried, March 22d; and Gotterdammerung, March 25th. Miss Grant is well known through her original exposition of the great Wagnerian operas in music and pictures. In Parsifal, Tannhauser and the Flying Dutchman Miss Grant utilizes piano, violin and organ in her arrangements for orchestral effect.

Tuesday of this week, at a benefit affair given by Mrs. J. E. Grant at the Grant home in North Berkeley, Miss Grant appeared as the "Spirit of Music." In her delineations of the styles of music of composers of various countries, Miss Grant played on the violin excerpts from famous violin concertos. In addition to this, Miss Grant, who is also a pianist, played Liszt's 12th Hungarian Rhapsody and the Polonaise op. 53 (Chopin.) Recently at several musical receptions of the same character, spectacular and educational, Miss Grant played a different program each day, presenting during the series music of composers of all nations. Books collected at these affairs were sent to the various children's hospitals.

Vivian Grant, who plays the violin, piano and organ in delineating styles of music and in expositions of Wagner's operas.

* * *

Dorothy Jardon, Creator of "Madame Sherry" at Orpheum.—

The Orpheum announces for next week a splendid new bill which will have as joint headliners Dorothy Jardon, the beautiful Broadway star, and "The Passion Play of Washington Square." Miss Jardon is not only one of the best prima donnas in vaudeville, but also a beautiful woman, who gowns in exquisite taste. She created quite a furore in "Madame Sherry," and also achieved great success in a number of Winter Garden shows. She will contribute a number of character songs which have already made her as popular in vaudeville as she is in musical comedy. "The Passion Play of Washington Square" is a remarkable one-act play containing a genuine surprise. It is perfectly staged and interpreted by a surprisingly fine cast. Elsa Ruegger, the world's greatest woman 'cellist, will present a delightful program with the assistance of the celebrated conductor, Edmund Lichtenstein. Something novel in ventriloquial acts will be offered by Hugh McCormack and Grace Wallace, who are wonderful ventriloquists. Herbert Germaine Trio call themselves Thrilling Comedy Gymnasts. James H. Cullen, the Man from the West, and Moore, O'Brien and Cormack in diverting ditties and witticisms, are also among the attractions. The tenth installment of the famous Uncle Sam at Work motion pictures, entitled "Preparedness," will be an interesting incident of the bill. A special extra attraction will be George Whiting and Sadie Burt in their "Songsayings."

* * *

Monday Morning Musicales at St. Francis.—The final concert of the unusually successful Monday Morning musicales at the St. Francis Hotel will close with the gathering on Monday next. The program will begin at 4 p. m. sharp, as many of the patrons find it more convenient to attend at that hour.

The program of last Monday was particularly attractive and induced keen and appreciative delight. Horace Britt, a finished 'cello performer, offered a splendid interpretation of Saint-Saens' "Concerto" in A minor, and Popper's "Arlequin," besides his duo work with Miss Sassoli. He plays with wholesomeness, in addition to displaying a poetic faculty, which is never overdone. The soloists were accompanied by Frederick Maurer. Miss Sassoli has a vivid artistic technique. She played Bach and Rubinstein and Debussy, besides numerous other composers who observe less complexity. The Bach was a marvel of brilliance and musical loquacity, and Debussy correspondingly so, according to his school.

Next Monday's final program will introduce Mme. Argiewicz-Bem, a violinist of unusual charm, and Mme. Betty Drews, dramatic soprano, and Georges Mascal, baritone.

* * *

Big Musical Act at Pantages Theatre.—Gus Elmore and "His Cannibal Maids," a romantic musical extravaganza of the South Seas, is the topping feature on the new eight act program which starts at the Pantages next Sunday. There are four principals in the production, who are backed up by eight shapely chorus girls, who trot in and out of the act, never showing the same costumes. The scenic effects are above the usual, and the antics of Elmore as the comedy cannibal chief are a succession of laughs. Frank Bush, who created one of the biggest hits ever registered by a single entertainer over the Pantages circuit last year, will return for a special week's engagement. Bush lives up to this typing of the "world's greatest story teller," and his dialect yarns are immense. Football a-wheel is one of the specialties introduced in the act of the six Imperial Bicyclists, who also do fancy, trick and eccentric "bike" riding. Grace McCormack, who has appeared here in concert, will render popular and classical selections on the violin. Rice and Newton have a bright little skit with new dances and song numbers. The Steiner Trio, garbed as two clowns, have a lively acrobatic offering. Jay Hanna and Company will present "The Prodigal Daughter," a stirring comedy-dramalet, and the twelfth episode of "The Red Circle" will round out the bill.

* * *

Program of the Next Symphony Concert.—There will be no concerts this week of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra. On Friday afternoon, March 10th, at 3 o'clock and Sunday afternoon, March 12th, at 2:30 o'clock, the last pair of concerts, but two, of the current season will be given. The symphony will be the Symphony No. 4 in B flat, Opus 60, of Beethoven, a glorious work too long absent from the programs of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra. Standing "like a gleam of sunlight between the heroic Third and the majestic Fifth," it is the happiest and most serene of all the Beethoven symphonies. Mr. Hertz is authority for the fact that there is scarcely a measure in the entire symphony which is not bright, peaceful and happy. In addition to the first performance of the Beethoven Symphony No. 4, at concerts of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Hertz has also programmed for the first time Paul Scheinplflug's Overture to a Comedy by Shakespeare, Opus 15, and Edvard Greig's "Lyric Suite," from Opus 54. Scheinplflug, born September 10, 1875, at Loschwitz, cultivated an abiding affection for music at an early age. The gift of a cheap violin, presented to him at Christmas, filled him, as a boy, with longings and ambitions that later found realization. Scheinplflug's Overture has been heard in many German cities.

The Lyric Suite, from Opus 54 of Edvard Greig, which bear the titles (a) Shepherd Boy; (b) Norwegian Rustic March; (c) Nocturne; (d) March of the Dwarfs, are transparently simple in structure and are permeated with that strong Norwegian coloring which has made Greig's music famous.

Mr. Hertz has chosen the Liszt Symphonic Poem No. 3, "Les Preludes," to close his remarkable program. Few works have greater orchestral values and few works call forth any warmer expressions of approval. "Les Preludes" is based upon a poem of the same name by Alphonse Lamartine.

Seats for the eighth pair of concerts are on sale at the usual places, and every music-lover who can find a place in the Cort Theatre should be present.

* * *

Paul Jordan Smith to Lecture at St. Francis.—Professor Paul Jordan Smith, of the English Department of the University of California, is to give a course of lectures on "Literature and the Larger Life," in Parlor One of the Hotel St. Francis on consecutive Sunday evenings in March, at 8 o'clock. The subject of the first lecture to be given on March 5th will be "The Secret of Great Books."

The Background of the War Zone

Unofficial estimates published recently place the total expenditures of all belligerents since the beginning of hostilities at about $40,000,000,000. Of this sum, Germany is believed to have spent about $8,500,000,000; England, $8,200,000,000; and France, about $7,500,000,000. Italy's expenditures in December were estimated at more than $600,000,000.

* * *

Holland holds Java and her other outlying possessions, and maintains an important overseas trade, with a navy of very moderate dimensions that ranks perhaps twelfth among the nations. She has some submarines, and will increase the number of her torpedoes and smaller protective craft. She has also an efficient army, based upon the principle of conscription or compulsory service. The ordinary field force of the Netherlands army amounts to about 150,000 men, while in the various reserves there are perhaps 300,000 more. Holland has six million people, as against our one hundred million, and is not a warlike or militarized nation. But she could put 400,000 men into active service more readily than we could mobilize one-fourth as many, utilizing our National Guard and other possible sources of supply.

* * *

Has President Wilson become a belligerent person, and is he now recreant to the cause that the pacifists have at heart? There are, indeed, those assuming to represent the "friends of peace," that speak of the President as a renegade who has gone over to the evil cause of the militarists and the lovers of war. Altogether too much respect has been accorded to the people who have been making such attacks upon the President. Most of them are not sound thinkers, and a good many of them are either lacking in sincerity or else are slow to understand what the country is talking about.

* * *

During the autumn weeks of 1914, when Turkey stood wavering on the brink, we heard a great deal about the "Holy War." Much of this talk was very alarmist in character. Nothing short of an immediate and simultaneous rising of the whole Mohammedan world was predicted. Well, Turkey did take the plunge, the Holy War was duly proclaimed—but no general rising of Islam occurred. Thereupon comment veered round from pessimistic alarm to scoffing optimism, and we were told either that there was no pan-Islamic solidarity at all, or that, even if some such sentiment did exist, the Mohammedan world at large regarded the Turks as traitors to Islam. In short, Turkey's action had no perceptible effect upon other Moslem lands.

CAPITAL CHANCE TO SECURE FINE MARINE PAINTINGS.

W. A. Coulter, who has the reputation of being the best painter of marines on the Pacific Coast, has prepared a sale of many of his most notable paintings at public auction, Tuesday, March 7th, at 12:30 p. m., at the Merchants' Exchange Building on California street, below Montgomery street. The paintings are now on exhibition there, and those artistically inclined, who love the spell of old ocean in its myriad transient moods, should not neglect this unusual opportunity to acquire paintings of unusual merit and fidelity to nature.

For over a decade past, Mr. Coulter's marines have been the standard of that branch of art in the West. Such recognition was publicly made when the Merchants' Exchange selected him to depict the heroic series of wall panel paintings which now decorate the large assembly room of that institution, with scenes of the Golden Gate and other striking views of marine life about San Francisco Bay and on the rolling Pacific Ocean. These paintings are recognized as the acme of marine painting so far developed in the West.

The paintings on sale cover 42 canvases ranging through a variety of sea scenes depicting the turmoil of old ocean and a number of stream and lake settings with tropic and temperate zone backgrounds. Lack of space forbids setting forth their sterling merits. Among them are "Taking on the Pilot," "In the Lee of the Cross," "Golden Gate," "Under Cross Reefed Top Sails," "The Wreck," "Off Diamond Head," Ship "William P. Frye," and a number of attractive sympathetic canvases depicting moonlight and fog scenes.

—From Los Angeles comes the report that a battle for proxies is now in progress between the Garrigues and Stewart forces of the Union Oil Company. It is an acrimonious contest and stout efforts are being made to make a dent in the Stewart combination.

—Plants for your garden, just arrived from Holland, in best of condition: Roses, hydrangeas, azaleas, evergreens, boxwood, etc. Passed State authorities' inspection. Wholesale prices. 84-86 Second street, near Market.

W. D. Fennimore J. W. Davis A. R. Fennimore

California Optical Co.
Makers of Good Glasses

How Long Will Your Eyes Last?

This is a supremely important question, the answer to which depends largely on the glasses you wear — proper glasses unquestionably preserve the sight. The most eminent optical authorities are of the unanimous opinion that the new lens called "Caltex" marks the ultimate achievement in glasses for both far and near seeing. There are certain advantages in the "Caltex" lens which contribute to the physical, mental and eye comfort of the wearer not to be had in any other type of bilocal glasses.

181 Post Street } San Francisco
2508 Mission St. }
1221 Broadway, Oakland

Pantages' Theatre

Market Street Opposite Mason

Commencing Sunday, March 5th

A GOOD SHOW

GIE'S ELMORE and His Cannibal Maids, A Tropical Musical Extravaganza; FRANK BUSIL, World's Greatest Story Teller.

8 GREAT FEATURE ATTRACTIONS

Orpheum

O'Farrell Street Bet. Stockton and Powell
Phone Douglas 70

Week Beginning THIS SUNDAY AFTERNOON. MATINEE EVERY DAY

A WONDERFUL NEW SHOW

DOROTHY JARDON, The Beautiful Broadway Star in Character Songs, "THE PASSION PLAY OF WASHINGTON SQUARE" (A Comedy of the Tragic) by Sidney M'Traton Hirsch with Mary Servoss and A Company of Players; ELSA RUEGGER, The World's Greatest Cellist; MEG ORMEAU & WALLACE in "The Theatrical Agent"; HERBERT GERMAINE TRIO, Thrilling Comedy Gypsies; JAMES H. CULLEN; MOORE, O'BRIEN & CORMACK; "PREPAREDNESS" Tenth Installment of the Great Motion Picture Serial "Excelsu rely for the Orpheum Circuit"; GEORGE WHITING & SADIE BURT "Songs and Songs." Evenings Prices 10c, 25c, 50c, 75c. Matinee Prices (Except Sundays and Holidays) 10c, 25c, 50c.

Gouraud's Oriental Cream

A greaseless preparation for beautifying the complexion that will not cause the growth of hair.

AT DRUGGISTS AND DEPARTMENT STORES

Little Talks on House Decorating

By Judd Shirley

Mantel of Dark Marble—Library.

A house without a fireplace is about as cheerless and lacking as a home without a mother. Even a poor, mean little dwelling gains a welcoming friendliness through its hearth. In planning the interior of your house, think first of the fireplace of your living room, and see that the embellishment of the room, and the fireplace are in harmony. Consider it the core of the room, for it is. Should your architect or builder tell you, as the street urchin did little Johnny: "There ain't a-goin' to be no core," or words to that effect, invite him to "Go to!" and plan the most delightful fireplace suitable to your room and purse.

If your house or flat is large, and your decorator has carte blanche as to furnishings, one of the "period" styles will quite likely be followed, or an adaptation thereof. Should the period be the seventeenth or eighteenth century, the fireplace in the room of your intimate family life will be classic and simple in line and decoration. If your taste harks back to the fifteenth or sixteenth century, it will be large, perhaps of stone—hooded; or of wood and heavily carved, showing Gothic feeling, Tudor, or early Jacobean.

By no means does it follow that because a fireplace is attractive it must necessarily be expensive. One of the most delightful that the writer ever warmed her toes before was a huge one of rough stone, reaching full to the ceiling. The stone of which it was constructed had been found, all of it, within a few hundred yards, and the chimney and hearth built by unskilled, cheap labor under the personal supervision of its owner. The charm lay in its simple lines and appropriateness to its surroundings. The summer cottage, of which it formed a harmonizing part, was of a very primitive and simple character, built high upon the mountain side. And there you have the whole secret of successful decorating—its suitability to the object to be ornamented, room, building, or whatever it happens to be.

Brick Fireplace with Raised Hearth and Brick Mantel-Shelf

For the average house, especially if it be of the cottage or bungalow type, tile or brick facing is generally used, supplemented with a wood mantel of simple lines. In a certain type of room the mantel-shelf itself, as well as the frame, is sometimes of brick, giving a substantial, quaint, old-time aspect to the room, very pleasing if well planned.

Even if the peg-on-the-wall, from which depends your hat, is a part of the furnishing of a crevice or cranny in the big city structure called an Apartment House, and your own special crevice boasts only a few, perhaps but a couple of rooms, it does not follow that you need lack either hearth or home. The latter is a matter of individual atmosphere, and is packed about with the rest of your belongings; and the hearth can be built—and packed about, too. Oh, yes, it can be done, I've seen it!—packed upon a van (gas log and all) and carted to the next few square yards of fumed oak wainscoting you will pay rent for, for a brief season. For this purpose—the setting up of a fire-side in a wee apartment, a corner of your room may be utilized. Never mind violating all known canons of harmonious line formation: you are bent upon economizing space; it is to be regretted, of course, but forgiven. Anything is, to one who struggles to make cozy and possible a twelve by thirteen roomette, loaded to the frieze with personal belongings that nothing short of an earthquake or fire would, or could, separate one from.

The Mantel and "Things" Thereon.

Neither our mantel shelves, nor our dinner tables are nowadays usually laden down at one and the same time with all the good things the market affords. There is much to be thankful for in that! The modern mantel shows the ever-desirable candlestick, a pair of them, probably; a clock, perhaps, of very special loveliness; a choice bit of bronze—all, giving to the shelf an air of elegance and distinction; the absence of a clutter of dissimilar objects imparts that restful feeling that it is the mission of hearth to bestow, and no business of the mantel-shelf to disturb.

Portable fireplace for small apartment

While we've not freed ourselves from what a clever man once

Not Gray Hairs but tired Eyes Make us look older than we are. Old age and Dull Eyes—tell-tale.

Don't Tell Your age

After the Movies go home and Murine your Eyes. Two Drops will rest, refresh and cleanse. Have it handy.

Murine Eye Remedy Company, Chicago, Sends Book of the Eye upon request.

called "the tyranny of things," we have grown to be a little more discriminating in our selection of the "things." And instead of strewing them wholesale over the tops of any articles of furniture (not made to be sat or lain upon) that offer sufficient flat surface to give standing room only to a bit of bric-a-brac, we bring them together—the curios and objets d'art—grouping them in a cabinet, and making of our varied treasures a harmonious unit.

Where they grew.

Surely, the days of gilded and be-ribboned atrocities, of "throws" and "tidies," of pink Roger-Williamsses, of cat-tails and crazy-quilts are gone for good and all, in spite of the saw that everything comes "in style again" once in seven years. But, speaking of cat-tails, in a window, not so long ago, I don't say it was a San Francisco window, bristled some gorgeous spiky vegetation, not altogether unlike cat-tails that had elected to carry arms and follows the colors. The colors, in this case, were scarlet—the brightest vermillion!

"Where," queried the would-be funny man, "do you reckon those things grew?"

"On the banks of the Red Sea, of course," came his companion's response, quick as a flash.

The Mardi Gras Ball Already an Assured Success

The Mardi Gras ball, to be given for the benefit of the Children's Hospital next Tuesday evening at the Palace Hotel, promises to surpass any of the brilliant costume events that have taken place here for some time.

Under the comprehensive management of Edgar Walter, the sculptor, the court and the pageantry will be a bit of fairyland. Under the supervision of Miss Worn the boxes and galleries will be draped in a riot of color and flower festoons. The court of the Lotus Queen, who is to be impersonated by Mrs. Charles Templeton Crocker, will be a tangled summer garden with canopy of fruit boughs and flower garlands. The queen's attendants, Mesdames Talbot Walker, Rudolph Schilling, Samuel Hopkins, Arthur Chesebrough, J. Cheever Cowdin, Misses Marian Zeile, Marian Newhall and Gertrude Hopkins, will be gowned in fascinating examples of the costumer's art. The courtiers, Messrs. George Bowles, Fred Tillmann, Nion Tucker, Robin Y. Hayne, Karl Kollock of Los Angeles, Heine von Schroeder, William Leib, Kenneth Moore and Walter Hush, will wear quaint costumes representing cicadas, ants, beetles and yellow-jackets. Little Misses Francesca Deering and Gertrude Murphy, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Deering and Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Muphy, will be clad as dainty ladybugs and will be the queen's pages.

The prizes for the handsomest costumes are unusually attractive this year. The prize for the women's handsomest costume is a gold vanity case, donated by Shreve, Treat & Eacret. The second prize for the women is a crystal and pearl hatpin set. The man wearing the handsomest costume will receive a mother-of-pearl inlaid with pearl cuff and vest link set. The man's second prize is a gold pencil.

All the Peninsula set have taken boxes; so have the prominent leaders in society across the bay. These reservations already assures a big social success. Tickets are on sale at Sherman & Clay's, Kearny and Sutter streets.

Dr. Byron Haines, Dentist, has resumed practice at his office in Gunst Building, S. W. corner Geary and Powell streets.

The German Government is Reported to Have Decreed as a Measure of Economy that the Material Used in Women's Skirts Shall be Limited!

Re-Actions by A. S. Macleod

ANNUAL REPORT OF NATOMAS COMPANY.

Natomas Company of California reports earnings for the year 1915 as follows: Net earnings from all sources, $1,675,076; interest on notes and bonds, $833,767; net income $841,309; depreciation and land exhaustion, $831,592; surplus, $9,717. The company reduced the amount of underlying bonds outstanding from $743,000 to $622,000, and the amount of land mortgages from $442,452 to $206,219. Since the last of the year, the underlying bonds have been reduced another $45,000 and land mortgages have been reduced $96,219.

—At the annual meeting of stockholders of California Wine Association at Winehaven, the following directors for the year were elected: W. A. Bissell, H. E. Bothin, M. J. Fontana, J. Frowenfeld, L. E. Hanchett, C. O. Hooker, B. R. Kittredge, C. O. G. Miller, E. S. Pillsbury, R. D. Rossi, Louis S. Wetmore. The directors later elected B. R. Kittredge, president; E. S. Pillsbury, first vice-president Louis S. Wetmore, second vice-president and general manager; J. Frowenfeld, third vice-president and treasurer; John A. O. Covick, secretary and assistant treasurer; H. R. Kage and R. Sciaroni, assistant secretaries, and A. R. Morrow, general superintendent. The new directors are Bissell, Pillsbury and Rossi, who supplant J. J. Jacobi, Henry Rosenfeld and F. W. Van Sicklen, resigned. The only change among the officers was the substitution of Pillsbury for C. O. G. Miller as first vice-president.

Before the State Railroad Commission, Standard Oil Company set forth that the new issue of $24,843,300 as a stock dividend would be one-half a share for each share held by stockholders. This dividend represents part of the surplus accumulated during the past fifteen years, a pure surplus in which depreciative reserve is not reflected. After this dividend stock is distributed there will remain a $19,000,000 cash balance in the treasury of Standard Oil of California.

—For the first time on record on the Exchange the price of Associated Oil has passed the price of Union Oil Company. The highest price ever reached by Union was $110. It is now selling around 70, while Association is selling around 73 in New York. There is more of an offset in Associated's present price, as it has an issue of 400,000 shares of capital stock on the market, while Union has out an issue of 350,000 shares.

—Onomea Sugar Company has reported for the year 1915, showing net profits of $813,870, equivalent to $10.85 a share. This is 54½ per cent on the par value of the stock—$20—and 20 per cent on the market value—54 bid. The manager's estimate of the 1916 crop is 18,780 tons.

—National City Bank estimates the New York exports for the week ended February 19, 1916, at $31,656,904, as compared with $26,267,195 in corresponding week in 1915.

—Tonopah Belmont has declared a dividend of 12½ cents per share, payable April 1st to stockholders of March 15. This means a distribution of $187,000 to shareholders, and a total in dividends to date of $8,018,022.

—The report of the Pacific Gas and Electric Company for January shows 1.22 per cent earned on the common stock, or 1.11 per cent exclusive of revenue in dispute, on account of rate litigation. These figures are equivalent to, respectively, 14.68 per cent and 13.32 per cent per annum.

—Tonopah Ex. shipped $59,000 in bullion for the week. The company has paid out $1,209,853 in dividends to date. The regular dividend was recently advanced from 7½ cents per share to 10 cents.

“General Gloom” Makes a Surprising “Come Back”

When the “Noc-No-More” Committee from Syracuse, New York, that brought the remains of “General Gloom” across the continent for burial in the protesting and indignant Pacific Ocean, they wot not what they did. Neither did the local “Noc-No-More” booster club of prominent Californians who gathered cheerfully in a mob about the remains and funerally helped in dumping the remains into eternity. Not one in the long-drawn funeral cortege that followed the remains so sympathetically dreamed of the catastrophe awaiting their carefully laid plans. A special steamer packed with blythe mourners saw the lid of the coffin screwed down on the saturnine phiz of “General Gloom,” together with the huge “knocker’s” hammer which represented his body. Many short speeches were made, the bands played everything allegretto from Beethoven’s Funeral March to the stimulating air of “There’ll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town To-night;” horns brayed by the score, and the rolling anthem, “Good-bye, Old Socks, Keep Sinking,” capped his brilliant dump into the waters of the Pacific.

Not one of the throngs of jubilant celebrants dreamed that “General Gloom” had a “come back.” Two days after the obsequies, one of the local pilot boats was slipping cautiously through a fog bank off Mile Rock when the look-out saw the ghastly grin of “General Gloom” mocking him from a floating coffin. The look-out gave a yell of terror, cut the jib loose in a frenzy, and the vessel shot north out of such flotsam danger, P. D. Q. The mock hammer, representing the body, was made of papier mache and acted as a life preserver. Somehow, somehow, the doped dopesters, who were somewhat over stimulated while attaching the proper weight to the coffin, tried to make too successful a job of it and boggled. Anyhow, two days later a lovely young damsel who was mooning alone on the Mendocino strand over an ideal love, suddenly bumped into a stranger she had never pictured—the saturnine phiz of General Gloom, hungry, sick and sore, and slumbering overtime in the gentle lap of the wavelets washing the shore. Two hours later a selected number of doughty volunteers of the “Noc-No-More” Club sneaked up on the slumbering General, carefully tapped a mine of four tons of dynamite in the sands near the coffin—Piff! bang! He will be soaring so high in the altitudinous skies that there’s no possible chance that he will ever hit this earth again with any kind of “come back.”

At the burial of the symbolic hammer, Samuel Shortridge, orator of the occasion, spoke as follows:

Let us rejoice and be exceeding glad. “General Gloom,” “unwept, unhonored and unsung,” who has poisoned many a cup of joy and planted a thorn in many a pillow, has reached the end of his pessimistic career. And we are here to bear witness that nothing so became his life as the leaving of it.

Before bidding him a long and happy farewell—for his departure gladdens the heart—let me recall some—a few only—of his many vices.

He was an incarnate spirit of evil.

He saw no beauty in the purple dawn; he took no pleasure in the jeweled night, to him morning was the beginning of trouble and evening the approach of miasmic vapors and horrid dreams.

He was an unwelcome and unbidden guest at every feast.

He entered the banquet hall, and, lo, the music ceased and the laughter died.

“Seldom he smiled, and smiled in such a sort as if he mocked himself and scorned his spirit that could be moved to smile at anything.”

Nor were these the only traits that made up a character so detestable.

He frustrated well-thought plans and embarrassed useful enterprise.

He entered the market place and took great joy in spreading distrust and discontent and lack of confidence.

To him no bank was solvent, no venture safe, no business destined to succeed.

He stood upon the wharf and predicted shipwreck, upon the farm and foretold drought, amid the orange grove and foresaw blight and frost.

To him, the present was without hope, the future full of dire disaster.

He was much given to bewailing the “good old times,” lamenting over “lost opportunities,” bemoaning the decay of “national character,” and the decline of “business integrity.”

Grim-visaged and hollow-cheeked, with scoff and sneer he mocked at youth’s ambition and age’s faith. Prone to dwell on the pain and pathos of life, he never saw a cradle but that it reminded him of a coffin. The joyous wedding march of love was not so sweet to him as the solemn dirge of death.

Above all else he took delight in calumny; held baseless rumor equivalent to truth, slander more praiseworthy than eulogy, and never failed to speak a discouraging word to him in need of help and sympathy.

Wherefore, since he is dead, we rejoice; the midwinter of our discontent is made glorious summer by his departure, and all the clouds that lowered on our house, in the deep bosom of the ocean buried.

National Road Bills Before Congress

To the Senate Committee on Post Offices and post roads finally has gone the Shackelford good roads measure passed in the House of Representatives by a vote of 281 to 81.

Opinion at the moment in Washington is divided as to whether this means as favorable a consideration of the bill as seemed to be assured at the hands of the Committee on Agriculture, to which the measure first was referred. Senator Gore of Oklahoma, in a bill of his own, is squarely on record for a comprehensive Federal policy in roads, and his fellow committeemen in great degree shared his views. Senator Sheppard of Texas has a draft which contains much of the House bill.

While Senator Bankhead of Alabama is a highways advocate of many years' standing, some of his associates on the Post-office and post roads committee are very much divided as to the plan which will logically concern the National Government and insure rightful co-operation between the Secretary of Agriculture and the highway departments of the several States.

Senator Bankhead has his own bill, which, like the House measure, obtains its fundamentals from the bill drafted by the American Association of State Highway Officials, and that proposition obtained the approval of the American Automobile Association and other bodies interested in roads progress throughout the country.

Senator Swanson of Virginia and Senator Bryan of Florida, both members of the post roads committee, have introduced bills which have been referred to their committee. The Swanson plan is not dissimilar to the Bankhead bill, but the Bryan proposition is a renewal of the so-called Bourne idea, wherein the Federal credit would be loaned to the several States, so that they could issue a half billion dollars worth of highway bonds. Opponents of this bill point out that many States do not want nor require this Federal backing, and furthermore, over a score of States would have to change their constitutions before they could participate in its provisions.

Urged against the House bill are arguments which represent two extremes. It is asserted by city spokesmen that Federal money would be employed on dirt and other practically unimproved roads to do work which should devolve upon township or county. It is also alleged that the purpose of the bill is to provide roads for touring.

Before a dollar is expended of the joint Federal and State money, the Secretary of Agriculture and a State highway department must agree on the roads which shall receive attention. Hence, it is set forth, this double check on the money means a minimum of extravagance and waste.

Any well traveled road serves the double purpose of getting the products of the market and the transportation of commodities and the carrying of mail to the man in the country. Of course, the touring motorist uses the roads, for which he contributes much of the cost, and then pays yearly a large part for maintenance. But in seeking first aid to the main arteries and the gradual working out of connected systems, he is finding that this commonsense and economical view has accumulated a multiplying support.

Good roads advocates are hopeful that the House bill will be reported favorably by the Senate Committee, though probably in a somewhat amended form and embracing some things contained in the Bankhead, Gore, Swanson and Sheppard measures. Highways, it is vigorously insisted, must be included in any effective war preparedness program.

Senator Shafroth, recognizing a growing tendency of men of means to give money for roads, has introduced legislation which provides for its acceptance by the States. For instance, in the building of the Columbia River Highway, well known citizens of Portland contributed quite liberally.

1915 Exports Increased in Value 300 Per Cent

Total exports of automobiles during 1915 numbered 63,951, and were valued at $94,879,738, with $16,300,401 worth more in parts, making the grand total $111,180,139, according to the official statistics. Compared with 1914, this represents an increase of over 100 per cent in the number of automobile exports, and over 300 per cent in their value.

The largest increase, naturally, is in the form of commercial trucks, which went abroad to the number of 22,082 during the year, valued at $59,834,246, as compared with 3,430 trucks, value $8,985,756, exported in 1914. This great increase is, of course, due to war orders, and is responsible for the fact that while exports were doubled in number, the value was trebled.

While the export of trucks increased by about seven times, exports of pleasure cars, always large, nearly doubled. During the year 41,869 pleasure cars, valued at $35,045,492, were exported, as compared to 22,335 pleasure cars, valued at $19,521,708, exported in 1914.

* * *

New York Has Busiest Crossing

Fifth avenue and 42d street, New York City, is the busiest crossing in the world, according to a count of the vehicle traffic made by the traffic committee of the Fifth Avenue Association. In one day between 3:30 and 4:30 in the afternoon, 1,149 vehicles passed this point going south on Fifth avenue. It was also brought out by the committee that 92 per cent of the vehicles on Fifth avenue are now motor propelled.

J. Bernstein, a traffic engineer who made the count under the direction of A. H. Ball, chairman of the Traffic Committee, says on the point:

"Between 3:30 and 4:30 in the afternoon we counted, going south, 1,149 vehicles, which for a street of the relative width of Fifth avenue, is a new world record. I have looked up the statistics. For London, 900 in the Strand is their top figure, and in Paris the record is 600 in an hour, along the Boulevard des Capucins."

* * *

Arizona Autos Load Up With Booze

Bootlegging has become one of the principal industries of Arizona since the State went dry on the first day of last year, and the motor car is the principal tool employed by the most successful importers of the forbidden liquor.

A young man named Reynolds and his wife owned a car, and little else when the prohibition law went into effect. For nearly a year they made regular trips between El Centro, Cal., and Phoenix, each time carrying a number of kegs and bottles that were retailed at great profit to the thirsty of Arizona's capital. Finally they were captured and Reynolds is now awaiting trial.

The officers at Clifton became suspicious of a young man who made frequent trips to Lordsburg, N. M., with his big Velie. They arrested him one night and examined the car. Beneath a false floor, which had been fitted in the tonneau, were 80 quarts of liquor.

Two Los Angeles youths made a business of stealing Fords in that city, loading them with liquor, driving over to Arizona and selling cars and cargoes. They sold the Fords so cheaply that suspicion was directed to them, and they were extradited to California to face trial for grand larceny.

* * *

In builders' terms, Class A means the very highest quality of construction, the kind that was used in the building of the Class A Garage at 735-751 Post street; also it is strictly fire proof; but it is on account of the service as well that this popular garage deserves its name. They do not merely give your car the once over, but a careful and conscientious attention which means increased mileage and efficiency. Class A Building with Class A Service, and repairs and supplies at moderate prices.

* * *

Women Drivers Careful

The Massachusetts highway commission has just issued some statistics that answer the question of whether or not women figure in more accidents than men. Because a bill was put in the legislature to prevent women driving cars of more than 30 horsepower, the highway commission was requested to furnish some facts and figures. These show that women drivers are not dangerous on the highways. The commission reported that out of 279 fatal accidents last year in which motor vehicles

"John Bogardus."

Geo. Chamberlain has certainly added to his reputation by this intensely interesting and brilliant exposition of the development of the character of John Bogardus. The panoramic setting is Europe, America, Africa and the seas between. The style is the author's swiftest, that whirls the reader along. And John Bogardus's love-story, or series of love-stories, is a beautiful, tender and extraordinarily illuminating record. Behind the rushing style, the astonishing fire of epigrams, the groups of memorable characters, and the stream of the alluring plot, the reader is gratefully conscious of a deep and rich background of seeing and thinking and feeling. Robbed of his youth, but supplied with a scholar's education by a splendid, young-hearted, over-ambitious father, John Bogardus breaks away from his university and goes tramping about the world. His youth he finds again, and adventure and romance, and wisdom as well.

Illustrated by W. T. Benda. Price $1.35 net. The Century Company, 353 Fourth avenue, New York.

The San Diego Exposition.

While the beauties of the San Francisco Exposition live only in memory, those of the San Diego Exposition are to be with us physically for another year. To record the unique features of the Panama-California International Exposition in a suitable manner, Paul Elder & Company, San Francisco, are preparing to publish two volumes that will be issued in a style uniform with their successful volumes on the San Francisco Exposition. The first volume will be published in March, and will be entitled "The San Diego Garden Fair." Personal impressions of the architecture, sculpture, horticulture, color scheme and other aesthetic aspects of the Panama-California International by Eugen Neuhaus. This book is to be illustrated with a series of thirty-two mounted duotone prints. The second book, to be published in April, will be entitled "The Architecture and the Gardens of the San Diego Exposition." The descriptions are by Carleton Monroe Winslow, resident architect for Mr. Goodhue, consulting supervising architect of the Exposition. This volume will be illustrated with a series of sixty-nine duotone prints reproduced from photographs by Harold Taylor, illustrating the dominant features of the buildings and the gardens.

Those of us who are interested in the drama will be glad to know that the two important books of Professor Brander Matthews, "Shakespeare as a Playwright," and "Moliere," will be published in March in a new and cheaper form—the University Edition—by Scribners.

The Soul of Woman.

"The Soul of Woman," an interpretation of the Philosophy of Feminism, by Paul Jordan Smith, of the University of California, is a synthesis of the various theories that the Feminists, during the past few years, have been advancing, a radical statement of the ideals of the modern woman. Mr. Smith's opinion is that woman's interest is almost wholly concerned with life rather than with forms. He declares: "It is found that women, even more than men, can show in the interest of life a great contempt for our immoral laws of marriage and divorce, our inane sputterings about illegitimacy, and our codified indifference to the spiritual welfare of the child." Woman's conservatism, he says, has been, and to a large extent still is, the main support for conventional morality. To this extent she is the enemy of the on-going life process and out of harmony with the spirit of mankind.

Mr. Smith is careful to differentiate here between the Feminist and the Suffragist, and declares that "The mere militant suffragist, who is apt to be a bit of an old maid and a Puritan, persists in this error, and joining hands with the clergy and other sexless Comstockians, loses no opportunity for making crusades against what she conceives to be of the flesh and the devil." The modern Feminist has changed all of this, observes Mr. Smith. "She is apt to have no great reverence for what to her is an effete and formal morality . . . because she believes in morality she is skeptical of ethics; because she believes in life she will make conventions decorative and not definitive."

A statement that will probably raise questions in the minds of the modern Feminists is made in the author's treatment of Maeterlinck's "Monna Vanna," where he declares that even truth is not respected by the Feminist when it stands in the way of life. "To lie for life in love is the highest truth. To lie for life's sake is not a lie; the force of such an indignity upon the human soul is the great lie." In the practical implications of the book, Mr. Smith declares that the new woman is concerned more with the raising of racial quality than with the increasing of mere racial quantity, and in this he is in hearty agreement with Miss Margaret Sanger, in that he believes that what we call race suicide is in reality race salvation; that the great work of woman should be to inspire the human race—to be the quickener of new intellectual conceptions, new spiritual dreams.

Price $1. Published by Paul Elder & Company, San Francisco, Cal.

CAPTAIN ROBERT DOLLAR NEW PRESIDENT OF THE Y. M. C. A.

The Young Men's Christian Association elected Captain Robert Dollar president for the coming year, succeeding James S. Webster. Other officers elected were: George B. Scott and George C. Holberton, vice-presidents; George C. Boardman, treasurer; Frank I. Turner, recording secretary; Thomas G. Crothers, attorney of the association. A committee was appointed to properly recognize the services of the retiring president, Mr. Webster. General Secretary Lyman L. Pierce was sent to represent the San Francisco Association at a conference of the International Committee to be held this week at Garden City, Long Island, where important issues affecting associations throughout North America are under discussion.

—Edith—Would you marry a man to reform him? Alice—Not if I could possibly get a man who didn't need reforming.—Boston Transcript.

To CHICAGO, KANSAS CITY and ST. LOUIS

2 Daily Trains

via

Los Angeles, Tucson and El Paso "Golden State Limited"

Through Standard and Tourist Pullman cars from San Francisco, Ferry Station, 6:00 p. m. and 10:40 a. m., respectively.

"The Californian"

Standard Pullman and Tourist car connection to Kansas City, from San Francisco, Ferry Station, 9:00 p. m.

BEST DINING CAR IN AMERICA

For Tickets and Berths Ask Agents of

Southern Pacific

Palace Hotel
Flood Building

Third St. Station
Ferry Station

El Paso & Southwestern Rock Island Lines

691 Market Street

INSURANCE

A meeting of the executive committee of the California State Association of Local Fire Insurance Agents was held at Los Angeles last Thursday, President Robbins presiding, at which the following resolution disapproving of underwriters' agencies was adopted:

"The executive committee heartily approves of the stand of the National Association in its opposition to underwriters' agencies, and calls on California agents to favor, wherever possible, those companies which operate solely under their own names, and which do not create a dual agency plant through the use of an underwriters agency."

Watchful waiting was recommended on the federation idea, and a suggestion was made that the committee keep in touch with prospective legislators. San Diego was suggested as the place for the next annual meeting. On Friday, the 25th, the Northern district meeting at San Francisco was presided over by Vice-President Barnett, when a full membership gathering of the committee concurred in the action taken by the Southern conference.

* * *

Claiming that certain compensation writing companies in California are evading the merit writing system, Commissioner Phelps has addressed the following letter to all companies: "Where the insured has more than one plant, one of which has been merit rated, have you covered any other than one specific plant at the rate applicable to that plant under the clause in your form which reads 'and elsewhere in the State of California?' In other words, have you taken advantage of this phraseology by giving the assured coverage at all locations under the lowest rate published?"

"If you have any such policy contracts in force, kindly supply the department with the name of the assured, the agent or broker supplying you with the line of business, the various locations and the rates published or prescribed by the manual."

* * *

That the parties who recently filed suit against the Union Pacific Life of Portland, Ore., for the return to the receivership of the defunct American Life and Accident of eighty thousand dollars of assets alleged to have been fraudulently transferred, not only are not stockholders in the shattered American Life, but that the action was instituted for the purpose of wrecking the Union Pacific Life, is alleged in an answer filed by the defendant company. The answer further alleges that information claimed to have been received by the receiver from the stockholders is false, and was given maliciously for the purpose of harassing defendants and putting the Union Pacific out of business.

* * *

Charles H. Coffin, for many years connected with the German-American Insurance Company, of New York, and recently elected President of the Niagara Fire Insurance Co., died suddenly at Lakehurst, N. J., on February 24th. Mr. Coffin was one of the best known insurance men in New York City. At the time of the San Francisco conflagration he spent some six months on this coast visiting General Agent George H. Tyson, and assisting him adjusting the conflagration losses of his company. He was favorably known to many of the Pacific Coast underwriters, and his sudden death will be a shock to his many friends.

* * *

Frank H. Hamilton, a mining engineer of Pasadena, Cal., has been arrested on the charge of having burned down his residence, upon which there was an insurance of thirty thousand dollars.

* * *

H. T. Ungewitter, who has for the past two years acted as chief assistant to W. W. Alverson, manager for the coast of the North River, New Jersey Fire, U. S. Fire, New Brunswick Merchants, and Williamsburg City, has been regularly appointed assistant manager for the Pacific Department of these companies.

* * *

The Norwich Union, under the coast management of J. L. Fuller, is another large agency that has found it advisable to come down to the ground floor, and will move into the premises at Sansome street, adjoining the Fire Association's new quarters.

The California Industrial Accident Commission has awarded Camile Boyd of Los Angeles, accrued weekly payments of $166, and $8 weekly for a period not to exceed 240 weeks for what medical experts declare to be "hysterical blindness," brought on from having been struck by a swinging door. The experts applied every known test, and all agree that while there was no injury to the eyes, the brain fails to bring the image into the intellectual center.

* * *

Insurance companies have filed suit against David Isaacs, asking that he be ordered to account for salvaged goods of the A. Bridge Company of Seattle, Wash. It developed in a legal action involving Isaacs and his partner, Harry Lenan, that $40,000 was realized by the sale of the salvaged merchandise. The insurance companies declare Isaacs was their agent, and that he has accounted for only $28,000 worth of goods.

* * *

Insurance Commissioner Phelps has ruled that hereafter all certificates issued by fraternal orders must be printed in the English language, and has notified several orders who have been offending in this respect.

* * *

The Pacific Mutual Life has purchased a plot of ground, 60x160 feet, adjoining its property in Los Angeles at the rear of its home office building, and will convert the same into a lawn.

* * *

The Idaho State Life has elected Secretary E. S. Chadwick to the presidency of the company. Former Cashier G. B. Wood has been advanced to the office of secretary, and A. L. Goff has been made cashier.

* * *

H. E. Parkhurst, for many years special agent for the Commercial Union and Palatine in Oregon, has been appointed general surveyor for the company's Pacific Coast department. J. C. Conant, of Portland, has been appointed special agent in place of Parkhurst.

* * *

Fifteen fires burning merrily in the saloon of August Schneider, at San Jose, occasioned his arrest on the charge of arson. Schneider had his stock insured for $1,800.

SECURITY AND SERVICE

That's What You Get When You

Bond Your Employees

With

Pacific Coast Casualty Company

Of San Francisco, Cal.

A California Insurance Company

$250,000.00 on Deposit with State Treasurer as a Guarantee to Policy Holders
Agents in Every California City

1863

1916

FIFTY-THIRD ANNIVERSARY

Fireman's Fund Insurance Co.

Capital $1,500,000

Assets, $11,326,205

FIRE

MARINE

AUTOMOBILE

California and Sansome Streets, San Francisco, California.

The Connecticut Fire Ins. Co.

OF HARTFORD

CHARTERED 1850

PACIFIC DEPARTMENT

The Insurance Exchange, San Francisco

Benjamin J. Smith, Manager

The Home Insurance Company

Organized 1853

Cash Capital, $6,000,000

Insurance on personal effects of tourists and temporary sojourners any where in United States, Canada and Mexico. Insurance against loss by fire. Automobile Insurance. Indemnity for loss of rental income by fire.

H. L. ROFF, General Agent. J. J. SHEAHAN, Ass't General Agent

333 California Street.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL ITEMS

ENGAGEMENTS

HINCKLEY-BOWMAN.—The engagement has been announced of Miss Helen Hinckley and Melville Bowman. The bride-to-be is the daughter of Mrs. Mary Grayson Hinckley and Harry Hinckley. She has been among the popular and active participants in many of the social functions. Bowman is the son of the late Mrs. George M. Bowman and a brother of Mrs. Charles Kuhn. He is a member of the Bohemian and the University Clubs. The wedding will take place in the spring.

HOLZBERG-WOLFE.—Mr. and Mrs. David Holzberg announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Sadie Holzberg, to Sanford S. Wolfe of Seattle. They will be married the early part of this month.

RAUCH-TAYLOR.—Mrs. Caroline Rauch announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Nell Rauch, and William A. Taylor, son of Matthias Taylor, a steel magnate of Albany, N. Y. Miss Rauch lives with her mother and brother in Broadway, where the wedding will in all probability take place shortly after Easter. Taylor has been here several years, and is popular in the business world as well as socially. The betrothal was made known by means of notes and 'phone messages sent by Mrs. Rauch.

TYSON-KALES.—Miss Marie W. Tyson announced her engagement this week to Franklin A. Kales, thereby confirming a suspicion entertained for nearly a year by the friends of the young people. Miss Tyson is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Tyson, of Alameda, and the sister of Mrs. Harry A. Weihe. The family has spent several seasons at the Fairmont, and is as well known on this side of the bay as in Alameda County. Frank Kales is a son of Mrs. Martin Kales and a brother of Arthur and Spencer Kales, Mrs. James Brendan Brady and Mrs. Thomas Knowles. No date has been set for the wedding.

WEDDING ANNOUNCEMENTS

JOHNS-HUNT.—One of the notable weddings of the year will occur on May 16th, when Miss Lucille Johns will become the bride of Charles Hunt. The ceremony will take place in the evening in St. Luke's Episcopal Church, Reverend Edward Morgan officiating, and will be followed by a large reception.

WEDDINGS

DEVOL-BRETT.—Cards have been received announcing the wedding of Miss Mary Adelaide Devol and Lieutenant George Howard Brett, U. S. A. It took place on Wednesday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sydney B. Williamson in Denver.

LUNCHEONS

BUCKLEY.—An informal luncheon was enjoyed by a group of friends of Miss Grace Buckley Monday afternoon, the party later attending the musicale given at the St. Francis Hotel under the direction of Ralph McFadyen.

CROCKER.—The Burlingame Club was the gayest it has been in months Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. C. Templeton Crocker gave a luncheon party, having Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Chesebrough, Miss Marian Newhall and Mrs. James Parker, and several others.

McMULLIN.—A group of friends will enjoy the hospitality of Mrs. John McMullin at luncheon Monday at the St. Francis.

MONSERRAT.—Mrs. Jane Wilder was the honored guest at a luncheon given Friday by Mrs. Samuel Monserrat at her home on Broderick street.

OTIS.—A luncheon of note was presided over by Mrs. James Otis, when she entertained Tuesday in compliment to M. and Mme. Joachim Merlant. It was given at the hostess' home on Broadway.

POND.—Mrs. Samuel Pond was hostess at a luncheon given recently at her home in Scott street. Twelve guests were included in the party.

WALLACE.—Mr. and Mrs. William Henry Pool are visiting the latter's mother, Mrs. Richard Sprague, at her home in Menlo Park, and were the incentive for a handsomely appointed luncheon at which Bradley Wallace entertained Saturday afternoon. His guests assembled at the St. Francis Hotel.

WALKER.—One of the pleasurable affairs of Sunday was the luncheon given by Mr. and Mrs. Tabbot Walker at the Burlingame Country Club.

DINNERS

BELL.—Mrs. J. Franklin Bell was hostess Sunday evening at a dinner which was given in honor of her cousin, Mrs. R. R. Cable of Chicago who is visiting here for a few days.

CROCKER.—Miss Kate Crocker was hostess at a dinner Tuesday evening at the Crocker home at Laguna and Washington streets.

FLOOD.—Mr. and Mrs. James L. Flood entertained some of their friends at a dinner party at their home Wednesday night.

HEYNEMANN.—Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Heynemann will give a dinner party on March 18th at their home in compliment to Miss Helen Johnson and Arthur Saxe.

McCORMICK.—Mr. and Mrs. E. O. McCormick have asked a group of friends to share their hospitality at a dinner to be given this evening in their home on Broadway.

SPROULE.—His Grace Archbishop Edward J. Hanna was the honored guest at an elaborate dinner given Tuesday evening by Mr. and Mrs. William Sproule at their home on Pacific Avenue.

TEAS

CHASE.—Miss Ysabel Chase was hostess Saturday afternoon at an Informal tea which she gave at her home in Easton.

CLIFTON.—Complimenting Miss Madge Wilson and Miss Helen Johnson. Mr. and Mrs. Horace Bradford Clifton will give a tea Sunday afternoon at their residence on Tenth avenue.

JOHNS.—A few friends enjoyed the hospitality of Miss Lucille Johns at an informal tea Tuesday afternoon at her apartment on California street. They were invited to meet Mrs. Louis Gordon of New York, who has come west with her husband to reside in San Francisco for the next six months.

MID-DAY REST ROOMS.—Mrs. Roy Somers gave the use of her home, 3536 Jackson street, for a Leap Year tea, Tuesday, for the benefit of Branch No. 1 of the Midday Rest Rooms for Business Women.

SHEA.—Mrs. William Shea, wife of Lieutenant Shea of the United States Medical Corps, poured tea at the bridge party given Tuesday afternoon by Mrs. Howard C. Holmes at her residence on Buchanan street.

VAN WINKLE.—Two engaged girls, Misses Lucille Johns, fiancée of Charles Warren Hunt, Jr., and Helen Johnson, recently betrothed to Arthur Saxe, were the guests of honor at a tea over which Miss Evelyn Van Winkle presided at her home in Sacramento street on Monday.

WOOLSEY.—One of the interesting affairs of this week was the tea given Friday by Mrs. Chester Woolsey in honor of her sister, Miss Alice Chambers, who will leave shortly for the East, to be gone some two months or more.

CARDS

BELL.—Mrs. J. Franklin Bell was hostess Thursday at a bridge party given at her home at Fort Mason.

BUTTE.—Mrs. Paul Charles Butte was hostess Monday at an informal card party at her home, one of the series of afternoons which she has been given this spring. About twenty girls and young matrons were entertained.

FOULKES.—Mrs. Bruce Foulkes was hostess Wednesday at a bridge party at her home in West Clay Park.

YOUNG.—Mrs. Harry Young was hostess at a luncheon bridge given last week at her home.

DANCES

BISSINGER.—Fifty friends enjoyed the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Newton Bissinger at a dinner dance Friday evening in the ballroom of the St. Francis Hotel.

CHAPIN.—Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Chapin gave a dinner dance Monday evening at their home at Presidio Terrace, in compliment to Miss Cecilia Lawson of New York.

CANON KIP MISSION.—A tea dance will be given at the St. Francis Hotel on Easter Monday for the benefit of the Canon Kip Mission, one of the local institutions which rarely asks assistance of the public, and which conducts settlement work in all its forms. The Mission is at 246 Second street, and is the nucleus of many phases of philanthropy. The tea dance has the patronage of a large number of society women. Canon Kip was the grandson of Bishop Kip, the first Episcopal bishop of California, and the Mission is a memorial to his work.

EYRE.—The dance given at the Palace Hotel Friday evening by Miss Mary Eyre and Robert Eyre in honor of their niece, Miss Elena Eyre, engaged the attention of the debutantes, last year's belles and the young men of their set.

NEIGHBORS' DANCING CLUB.—A most enjoyable evening was passed Saturday by the members of the Neighbors' Dancing Club, which held its final dance for the season at the Century Club.

COWDIN.—Mr. and Mrs. J. Cheever Cowdin were hosts at a supper dance given recently at the Palace Hotel, when, in addition to members of the San Francisco smart set, they entertained several Eastern visitors.

THEATRE PARTIES

HUNTINGTON.—Miss Marlan Huntington was hostess Wednesday night at an Orpheum party and a supper party after at the Palace in compliment to Miss Madge Wilson and Dr. Chester Moore, who are to be married March 25th.

THE HOTEL PLAZA

overlooking the beautiful Plaza of Union Square, the Hotel of refinement and service, is offering special rates to permanent guests.

Hotel Plaza Company

BOX PARTY.

TAYLOR.—Mr. and Mrs. Latham McMullin and Mr. and Mrs. Julian Thorne enjoyed the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Taylor at a box party Wednesday evening at the opening performance of the Revue des Modes at Scottish Rite Auditorium.

MUSICALES.

BALL WIN.—An afternoon musicale will be given at the home of Mrs. A. Stuart Baldwin on March 14th. Miss Ada Clement will be the pianist of the afternoon, Miss May Muckle the cellist, and Lawrence Strans the vocalist.

CROTHERS.—Mrs. Thomas Graham Crothers was hostess Saturday evening at her home at a musicale given in honor of Mrs. de Los Magee, who has recently returned from Europe, where she has won laurels singing under the name of Madame Maide Godelia.

ARRIVALS.

CROSBY.—An interesting visitor who arrived this week from New York, to be a guest at the home of Miss Lena Gibbs in Washington street, is Miss Grace Crosby. Miss Crosby is a recognized authority in Bible history, and will conduct a series of Lenten classes.

D'VAL.—Mrs. Charles Raoul Duval has returned from a month's visit in New York, where she was a guest of Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr. She is again occupying her attractive home in San Mateo.

DEPARTURES.

BOWMAN.—Melville Bowman left Thursday for Boewawe, Nev., where he contemplates spending the next three weeks on the Hinckley ranch. Mr. Bowman's engagement to Miss Helen Hinckley has recently been announced. Their marriage will not take place until the autumn.

JOHNSON.—Dr. Millbank Johnson of Los Angeles has returned south after a visit of a week with friends in San Francisco.

KELLER.—Mrs. David Barr Keller and Miss Fanny Keller left recently for their home in New York. En route they will visit Los Angeles and New Orleans.

LOW.—Miss Flora Low and Miss Eleanor Morgan, who have been occupying Mrs. James Keeney's home on Buchanan street for the past two months, left Wednesday for Del Monte, where they will spend the spring and summer according to their custom.

MACDONALD.—Mrs. Graeme Macdonald and her small son left Monday for Kentucky, where they will spend part of the summer with Mrs. Macdonald's parents.

INTIMATIONS.

ANDREWS.—Mrs. Charles Frederick Andrews will leave next week for Fort D. A. Russell, Wyoming, where Captain Andrews has been transferred. Captain Andrews left last week with the Twenty-fourth Infantry. Mrs. Andrews is the guest of the Misses Gibbs at their home in Washington street.

CROCKER.—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Templeton Crocker entertained a number of friends over the week end at their home in San Mateo.

CUDAHY.—Mr. and Mrs. Edward Cudahy and their two children are expected to arrive in California to pass the spring. They will leave Chicago shortly for Santa Barbara, and after a brief stay in Southern California will come north to San Mateo, where they have taken a cottage.

FOLGER.—Mr. and Mrs. J. Athearn Folger and Miss Genevieve Cunningham will leave next month to open their country place at Woodside.

HAWKINS.—Captain Hawkins has come out from the East to spend several months in Southern California. He is at present a guest at the Hotel Potter in Santa Barbara.

HAYNE.—Mr. and Mrs. Robln Hayne will soon occupy their new home, which they are building in San Mateo on the property adjoining the beautiful home of Mr. Hayne's mother, Mrs. Grace Hayne.

HUSSEY.—It is good news indeed to the many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Hussey that they plan to make their home permanently in California. They arrived recently from the East, where they have lived since their marriage about three years ago, and have taken a house in San Mateo.

MACOMBER.—Mr. and Mrs. A. King Macomber, who have been at Palm Beach for several months, will return to their home at San Mateo about the middle of March.

McCORMICK.—Mr. and Mrs. Charles McCormick have decided to pass the summer at Menlo Park, and will take possession about April 1st of an attractive bungalow there.

MILLER.—Mr. and Mrs. H. M. A. Miller will entertain a group of friends this evening at the Palace Hotel, when they will occupy a box at the fashion show that is being given for the benefit of the San Francisco Maternity, the Home for Incurables, and the Doctor's Daughters.

STETSON.—Mr. and Mrs. Harry Stetson are contemplating leaving next week on a trip to Honolulu.

SMITH.—The friends of Bayard Hyde Smith will be delighted to hear that he and his attractive wife are contemplating coming here to reside. They will build a home down the peninsula.

WRIGHT.—Mr. and Mrs. Irving Wright of Berkeley have taken apartments at Van Ness avenue and Bush street, and will spend the spring and part of the summer in San Francisco.

WHEELER.—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wheeler, who were married at Santa Barbara last week, arrived in San Francisco Wednesday, and sailed Friday for the Orient on their honeymoon trip.

NEW SERIES OF SOCIAL DANCES.

Miss Clara Alexander announces that the first of her Studio Dances in the Cooney Building, 435 Powell street, will begin Saturday, March 4th. Miss Clara Alexander's dances, through the several seasons, have been unusually popular and very enjoyable, due to her rare experience and tact in management. Miss Alexander will be glad to furnish any information regarding this series of five consecutive Saturday evening dances.

CHANGE IN PLAZA MANAGEMENT.

R. M. Briare has been made active manager of the Plaza Hotel, following the resignation of John G. Barker, through a difference of management. No local hotel has been opened under happier auspices than the Plaza. The management made many strong friends all over the country. During the Exposition period, wire requests frequently came for 250 rooms. So great was the tourist demand for accommodations that the well-located Plaza, with its splendid up-to-date accommodations, smart service and tempting cuisine, took rank and patronage with the best hotels in the West. Overflows of arrivals were frequent, and the management was compelled to seek accommodations for guests in near-by hotels. During the whole period of the Exposition, the hotel was the center of activity of tourist travel. Hotel men generally regarded the success of the Plaza, under Barker's management, as something phenomenal. Now that Barker, for personal reasons, has voluntarily retired from the management and has been succeeded by R. M. Briare, a policy will likely be introduced in more conformity to the post-Exposition period. Briare is a well known, popular hotel manager, and has attained great success in all the hosteleries with which he has been connected. He will be a strong acquisition to the hotel, one of the structural monuments of the city, located, as it is, on Union Square, the heart of the hotel, theatre and shopping district of the thriving metropolis of the Pacific Coast.

—"What is your idea of ease with dignity?" "The attainment of a position," replied Senator Sorghum, "where people won't laugh if you talk about lecturing as if it were regular work."—Washington Star.

Pears'

There's a unique adaptability about Pears' Soap. It makes the child enjoy its bath helps the mother preserve her complexion and the man of the house finds nothing quite so good for shaving.

Have you used Pears Soap?

Pears' the soap for the whole family

Ornamental Trees and Plants

Special! Orange, Lemon and Grape
Fruit Trees Assorted
7 for $10.00

Lawn Seed Bedding Plants and Fruit Trees, always on hand

Bay Counties Seed Company
404 Market Street, San Francisco

MILTON TONINI, Mgr.

Phone Garfield 1625

were involved, women figured in 7, or 2 1-3 per cent.

There were 528 relatively serious accidents which were investigated and reported by the commission's examiners, and women operators were involved in only 13 of these, or 2½ per cent. Out of a total of 99,199 private operators in Massachusetts, women number 8,680. So they constitute 8¾ per cent, yet were involved in only 2½ per cent of accidents, a very fine showing.

There were 90,519 men licensed as private operators, and 34,736 professional chauffeurs, a total of 125,255 licensed men operators. These 125,255 men operators figured in 820 fatal accidents, or one fatal accident to every 432 licensed men.

* * *

Redwood Chamber of Commerce to Stop Vandallism

"If the people who travel down the peninsula on Sundays do not appreciate the beauty of the trees that help to make their day's outing one to be remembered, we propose to make them," said President Charles Landscheit, of the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce last week, as he drove his car along the highway and pointed out the hundreds of branches of fragrant acacia ruthlessly torn from the trees and then tossed aside. "Just as soon as we can frame a law covering this type of destruction we intend to make it warm for that type of personage who seems to think we of the peninsula are decorating our homes and our highways just to see trees that take years to cultivate torn up almost by the roots.

"It is my intention to call a meeting of every civic body down the peninsula and get them behind a law that will mean punishment, and not mere arrest. How long, do you suppose, a tree or garden destroyer would last in San Francisco? He would not get a block before a bluecoat would have him under arrest.

"This applies not only to autoists, but to foot passengers, and we propose to begin on our own residents, who seem to think they have a right to all the foliage within reach of their hands."

* * *

Mount Diablo Road Soon Ready

Motorists will be able to drive to the summit of Mount Diablo within two weeks, according to J. N. Curtis, directing the road construction on the mountain.

A crew of thirty men has been put to work clearing away the debris washed down by the heavy storms of the past two months.

The first of the mountain roads to be opened will be that leading out of Mount Diablo Park, at the head of Green Valley, three miles north of Danville. This is the old road, and while of heavier grade than the Ygnacio Valley highway, will be put in splendid shape. Three miles above the park it connects with the new boulevard, which has an average grade of 5 per cent.

Within three weeks the Mount Diablo scenic boulevard rising out of Ygnacio Valley on the western slopes of the mountain will be open to traffic. This highway was completed last fall, and is one of the notable mountain boulevards in the West. It has an average width of twenty-six feet, and is 11 miles in length.

With the completion of the work of reconstruction the Tunnel road from the tunnel to Walnut Creek, a direct route in to the Mount Diablo country, will be offered to motorists.

* * *

Condensed Figures of 1915

It is estimated conservatively that the retail value of cars sold in 1915 amounted to nearly $700,000,000, of which amount $575,000,000 went for passenger vehicles and $125,000,000 for motor trucks. Shipments of motor cars by railway during 1915 amounted to more than 200,000 freight car loads. The average price of American motor cars in 1915 was $672, as compared with an average in 1899 of $1,284 for steam runabouts. The average price of automobiles in 1907 touched the high water mark of $2,123.

* * *

July Overland Production Jumps

January production at the Willys-Overland Co., Toledo, O., was 12,393 cars, as compared with 4,613 in January, 1914. It is an increase of 7,760 cars, and represents a daily output of nearly 500 cars during 25 working days. The total production of Overland cars in 1915 was 94,437, or 45,969 more than in 1914, when the total production was 48,468.

Auto Repair Shops Follow Army

According to despatches sent out from Paris, there are at present about 60,000 motor vehicles, worth $60,000,000, in use on the fighting lines in France. The machines are having the hardest kind of use, and yet but 52 per cent are under repair. Each army now possesses a large repair camp. It is a novel feature of army organization. Up to two months ago machines needing repairs had to be sent to garages in the nearest large city. To avoid loss of time, regular factories equipped with machinery for motor car construction have been built behind each army. They consist of about a dozen enormous wooden sheds covered with waterproof canvas.

* * *

United States Has Over Two Million Miles of Roads

There are now 2,273,000 miles of public roads in the United States. In the improvement and extension of this road system we are annually spending more than $300,000,000. If Dario Resta in his speedy Peugeot or one of the mighty Stutz racers, were to start out to cover our entire highway system, driving steadily for 24 hours a day at the rate of 100 miles per hour, it would take him more than three years to complete his task.

* * *

Epsom Salts for Light Dimming

Five cents' worth of Epsom salts dissolved in a teacup full of water provides the neatest and most efficient "headlight dimmer" for automobiles so far proposed. The solution is used on the inside of the headlight glass, where it is allowed to evaporate. The result is a beautifully frosted lens, the frosting on which lasts for several months.—Scientific American.

* * *

Ten Story Garage

What will probably be the largest and best equipped garage in the country will be erected in Philadelphia, Pa., for the Pennsylvania Taximeter Company. It will be ten stories high, with a frontage of 89 feet and a depth of 150 feet.

* * *

Buick Distributer Sees Prosperity Ahead

The good times which the West has been experiencing recently are to continue, if present indications are to be relied upon. Never before has there been so many reasons for prosperity in the West. The abundance of snow in the mountains insures plenty of water for irrigation purposes. The European demand for foodstuff insures the top prices for every ounce the farmers can produce, and it has been a long-standing rule that when the farmer has money the country is prosperous. In speaking of this matter recently, C. S. Howard, head of the company of that name, Pacific Coast distributors of Buick cars, said: "I am in receipt of almost daily reports from my distributors, who are located in practically every city, town and village in the six Western States, and almost without exception these reports show a condition of prosperity which has never before been equaled."

* * *

A New Twelve on the Market

James P. Vane, the Western district manager for the Pathfinder Company, builders of the Pathfinder line of automobiles, has announced the appointment of Arnot & Presley, the present distributors of the Allen cars, as the Pathfinder representatives for Northern California, and states that a shipment of the new Pathfinder Twin Sixes, the new twelve-cylinder models, is now en route to San Francisco, where they are impatiently awaited.

At the New York and Chicago shows the Pathfinder Twelve was the center of attraction all through the shows, while its performance and the demonstrations of its ability made it one of the most commented upon cars on display.

B. F. Presley, who has recently returned from a trip to the shows, in commenting upon the new car, said: "At the Chicago show all the twelve-cylindered cars now on the market were on display, and I had a splendid opportunity to view them, and compare them critically detail by detail. I went into the matter exhaustively, and each comparison found the Pathfinder standing out more plainly than ever in a class by itself."

* * *

A self-respecting man respects his car, and he insures the painstaking attention to which every car is entitled by keeping it at Dow & Green's Garage in Taylor street, between O'Farrell and Geary. Service is the slogan of this deservedly popular garage.

Chalmers Cars Triumphs in Unique Test

With the fender and fender belt removed, the radiator sealed and the car locked in the high gear, a Chalmers Six-30, carrying four passengers, was driven to the Lick Observatory on the summit of Mount Hamilton a few days ago. The incident marked one of the severest high gear tests to which a modern automobile was ever put, and probably the first time in the history of the industry that a test of such uniqueness had ever been tried and carried through successfully.

Among the four passengers that made the trip in the Chalmers car to the top of Mount Hamilton, under the conditions described was I. Rancadore, a notary public of San Jose, who has since made an affidavit as to the performance of the car under the conditions named. In addition to subjecting the machine to the severe strain, Rancadore made a temperature test of the water in the radiator of the car immediately upon the arrival at the summit of the mountain by bathing his hands in a stream of water released by the petcock underneath the radiator. Rancadore attests to the fact that the water thus tested was only luke warm.

Every motorist in the San Francisco bay region who has done any extensive driving in this vicinity is familiar with the long climb to the top of Mount Hamilton; that the road is one of the crookedest in the country, and that it is made up largely of hundreds of sharp turns, more than one-half of which are of the hairpin variety. The average grade to the summit is in excess of seven per cent, and there are long stretches of grade which run between ten and fifteen per cent.

The fact that the Chalmers Six-30 test was carried out only a few days ago is further evidence of the power of the motor and its remarkable cooling features; in fact, the road is not yet completely dried out from the recent snow storms. In many places, after the snow has melted away, the road repairing crew found it necessary to build up and level many of the dangerous turns with loose rocks and dirt to depths running between three and six inches. Many of these fills were made on the sharpest turns of the road. Driving the car over these places furnished the most thrilling features of the unique test.

* * *

KisselKar Solves Many Problems

"From the days of Alexander the Great and his bejeweled, resplendent chariots, down to the present period of motor luxury for the plain citizen, coach building has employed the best thought and skill of artists and artisans," is the opening paragraph of a letter from William L. Hughson, president of the Pacific KisselKar branch, and now at the Kissel factory in Hartford, Wis.

Briefly, but in detail, Hughson traces the evolution of the desire for luxury and refinement from the earliest ages to the present time. Continuing, Hughson writes:

"As the centuries rolled on, carriages became less ornate and the art of the designer and craft of the builder was directed toward greater simplicity, grace of contour, riding quality and convenience, until to-day every one either owns or aspires to own a motor car. More than 2,000,000 power-driven carriages traverse the roads of the United States, with millions more to come.

"Thoughts of most of the owners centers on the appearance and comfort, not meaning that they disregard mechanical and structural efficiency, but that their cars must above all other conditions look well, ride well and serve all the requirements of ease and refinement at a reasonable cost.

"The development of the "All-Year" car by the Kissel Company was due to an appreciation of what was uppermost in the minds of most motorists. They desired to drive during the winter months, but felt that an investment in two cars—an open and a closed car—was excessive. But until the invention of the convertible car their only alternative was to garage their touring car during the cold and wet months. Thus the Kissel innovation, built in halves and retaining style, grace and refinement, found an immediate and keen market."

* * *

Mecco Portable Garages

The Moeschel-Edwards Corrugating Co., Covington, Ky., makes portable garages, the material entering into their construction being all metal. These garages are designed to be fire-proof, and therefore comply with the building codes of various cities. Prices range from $50 up.

Case Car Appears in Auto Row

Since the arrival of the new 1916 four-cylinder Case car it has been put through a series of tests that has shown its wonderful adaptability to California conditions. It is demonstrated that it is an ideal vehicle for the mountainous roads of the Pacific Coast.

The principal test was to study the power and its hill-climbing ability. In speaking of the result of these tests, J. H. Davis of Latham, Davis & Co., Inc., distributors for Northern California, says: "The new Case car has more power than can be demanded by even the most extreme driver. I have taken it up over the hills along the road with seven heavy passengers to test out its speed and ability. The car has also shown some splendid tests of flexibility. One does not expect the four-cylinder car to be as flexible as a six, eight or twelve, yet our demonstrations with the seven passengers shows that this car is as flexible as may be demanded by any owner."

* * *

The Ford Motor Company, Detroit, Mich., established a new one-day production record January 28th, when 2,100 cars were made.

TELEPHONE FRANKLIN 1836

The White Star Line

AUTO TOURING COMPANY

Touring Car, Limousine or Taxi-Car

TARIFF: 7 Passenger Touring Cars
$2.00 per hour
in San Francisco

7 Passenger Closed Cars
$2.50 per hour
in San Francisco

SPECIAL RATES FOR COUNTRY TRIPS

TAXICAB RATES FOR SHORT TRIPS to
THEATRE or CAFE

Day and Night Service

Our Taxicab service is the best in San Francisco. We use seven passenger cars for this service, and operate under the "Zone" rate, the charge being at a flat rate, regardless of the number of passengers. Whether 1 or 6 persons occupy the car, the rate is the same. While other companies have reduced their rates of fare, in the face of an increased operating expense, we have maintained the same low rate since starting business, and will continue to do so. We earnestly solicit your Taxicab business, and will guarantee that the rate is positively the lowest in San Francisco, the service and equipment the best.

Telephone Franklin 1836

FIRE PROOF BUILDING Phones—Park 826, Park 5124

20---MARSHALL SQUARE---20

G A R A G E

EXPERT AUTOMOBILE REPAIRING and MACHINE WORK
AUTO SUPPLIES

NO. 20 MARSHALL SQUARE
Opp. 8th and Market Sts. San Francisco

The Six of Sixteen

 Osen McFarland Co
Golden Gate Avenue

WHERE SERVICE MEANS SERVICE

M & H GARAGE

819-835 ELLIS ST. Between Polk and
Van Ness Avenue

WHERE THE PRIVATE OWNER FEELS AT HOME

Perrin 'No-Glare' Meets S. A. E. Recommendations

While the Perrin "No-Glare," made by the Perrin Manufacturing Company of Detroit, was developed some time ago to meet the demand for a device to prevent automobile headlight glare, it is rather interesting to note that this device meets the present recommendations of the Society of Automobile Engineers for non-glaring headlights, which are as follows:

"No rays from an automobile's electric headlight should be over 42 inches above the road at 75 feet. There should be 10 feet of side light, 10 feet in front of the car. Objects should be clearly discernible 150 feet in advance of car."

The device is made under the Myers patent, which has been upheld by a decision in the United States District Court for the Northern District of Ohio on January 14, 1916, which considered the Myers patent a basic one for light controllers of this nature.

* * *

Long Handle Jack Makes Operation Easy

With the Kimball jack offered by the F. W. Mann Co., Milford, Mass., it is not necessary for the operator to get down upon his knees to place it in position, in order to raise the car, as a long telescoping handle enables both operations to be done while standing. Great leverage is also obtained by the long handle of the jack, which lists at $5 complete.

Ball bearings are used in the interior mechanism and a ball joint is provided where the handle joins the body of the jack. Being permanently attached to the jack, the handle cannot be lost, or broken in the attempt to put it to some purpose for which it was not intended.

When the jack is to be used, it is placed under the car by means of the long handle and the knob on the handle is turned to the right. The screw is thus raised until it rests firmly against the car. Then by an elliptical sweep of the handle the ball is thrown out of the socket at the end of the handle, after which the operator may continue to lift the car. Steel points are incorporated in the top of the jack to prevent it slipping while the car is jacked up. Special models are offered for cars that have overhanging rear gasoline tanks.

* * *

Universal Hoods and Radiators

The Universal Specialty Co., Cleveland, O., makes a line of hoods and radiator shells for fitting to Ford cars. These hoods conform to the conventional streamline design and are die stamped and heavy enameled. The radiator shell is also enameled. Both the hoods and radiators are strongly constructed and are guaranteed not to loosen or rattle. The removal of the old hood and the attachment of the Universal is said to be a matter of only 20 minutes. While usually sold in all-black finish, the Universal also is made with nicked radiator shell. Its weight is about 25 pounds. Price, complete, ready to install, $17.50.

* * *

Twin Rim

The Twin Rim, made by the Twin Rim Co., Inc., Boston, Mass., is a device made for the motorist who uses clincher rims. A spare tire is mounted on the Twin Rim and inflated, and carried the same as a demountable rim, but in case of a puncture, or blowout, the Twin Rim with its inflated tire is clamped against the wheel with the damaged tire, with four clamps, which are furnished as part of the outfit. It is so constructed that it fits both the front and rear wheels and is easily attached in less than 5 minutes, according to the manufacturer, leaving the punctured tire on the wheel. This device is designed to give a clean and dependable method of getting out of tire trouble on the road, and the Ford owner can use his car as it was designed to run, with the 30 by 3½ tires in the rear and the 30 by 3 in front, and still have all the advantages of demountable rims. This device sells for $5.

MOTOROL

"It suits because it doesn't soot"

If you want to prolong the life of your engine
If you want to eliminate smoke and carbon
If you want to reduce your oil expense

Use MoToRoL

Hughson & Merton, Inc.

530 Golden Gate Avenue
San Francisco, Cal.

PANHARD OIL

FREE FROM CARBON

BERNARD I. BILL

543 GOLDEN GATE AVE. SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

CLASS "A" GARAGE, INC.

Strictly Fire Proof Building

STORAGE SUPPLIES REPAIRS

BEST SERVICE ASSURED

735-751 POST STREET SAN FRANCISCO
TELEPHONE PROSPECT 2280

Automobile Starting and Lighting Systems

Give Satisfactory Results When Given Proper Attention

We specialize on electrical equipment, storage batteries, etc.
and guarantee satisfaction.

GUARANTEE BATTERY COMPANY

639 Van Ness Ave. BRAND & CUSHMAN Phone Prospect 741

TIRES

VULCANIZING

TOM H. ELKINGTON

Long Mileage Tires and Second-Hand Tires

Everything Needed for the Bus

1135 VAN NESS AVE.—Near Geary Phone PROSPECT 1566

Tips to Automobilists

(CUT THIS OUT.)

The News Letter recommends the following garages, hotels and supply houses. Tourists will do well to cut this list out and keep it as a guide:

PALO ALTO.—LARKIN'S CAFE—Just opened. The only strictly first-class cafe on the Wishbone Route devoted to the patronage of automobile owners and their families. Corner of University avenue and The Circle.

SAN JOSE.—LANOLLE GRILL, 36-38 North First street. The best French dinner in California, 75 cents, or a la carte. Automobile parties given particular attention.

PALO ALTO.—PALO ALTO GARAGE, 443 Emmerson St., Tel., P. A. 333. Auto livery at all hours. Tires and sundries in stock. Gasoline, oil, repainting, lathework, vulcanizing. Open day and night.

LARKINS & COMPANY

CARRIAGE AND AUTOMOBILE BODY BUILDERS

Established in 1865

1610-1612-1614 VAN NESS AVENUE

Between California and Sacramento Sts. Phone Prospect 30
Where their entire attention will be devoted to the prompt delivery of the best work that a modern plant, high-class mechanics and materials can produce.

Pat. 1,172,000

USE LIKE AN ORDINARY TOWEL

AUTOISTS

SHOULD NEVER BE

WITHOUT

THEM

=

Your Grocer Sells 'Em

FASHION'S FADS AND FRILLS

Dame Fashion would not be the artist that she is were she not influenced more or less, by every passing fancy. The influence of the Russian ballet has been direct and noticeable. We may glimpse the Bakst note in the brightly colored jewelry, real and artificial, now so much the vogue; in the quaint, hand-made trimmings, quillings, pleatings, cordings and puffings which serve to trim so many of our summer frocks of silk and cotton.

The matinee for the Russian dancers given at the opera house in Paris, early in the year, was the first real important social event in France since the beginning of the war. The large house was crowded to the doors with a beautifully gowned, enthusiastic audience. When this same company appeared recently at the Century Theatre in New York, we were quite as enthusiastic, and they received an equally favorable reception. Night after night the house was crowded with gorgeously gowned women and men in evening dress. Our graceful little dancer, Florence Walton, was seen once or twice in the lobby, gowned in one of Lucile's fanciful evening frocks, causing, as one woman remarked, "everyone else to look tame." Ruth St. Dennis was seen on another evening, tall and distinguished looking, watching with professional interest every graceful movement of little Lopokova and her co-dancers.

While some of the fantasies were rather weird to our Western eyes, all were poetical, the very embodiment of romance, fascinating and inspiring.

La Slyphides and Papillons come nearer to the modern costume than the others; the costumes of the first are simple to a degree, of pure white tulle against a background of moonlit garden, so real that one can fairly hear the whispering of the trees as their branches intermingle, and the rippling of the water back of the small marble temple. The skirts are full and billowy, and the bodices tight and basque-like. The costumes of Papillons are of the early Victorian period; and they are directly responsible for the present vogue of hand-made trimmings.

For taffeta and the printed silks which are now so high in Fashion's favor, for the crisp organdies and daintily figured voiles and crepes, there is no more practical or effective trimming than cording, smocking or shirring.

Many of our dance frocks for summer will be of organdy or net; an unusually pretty imported frock of net, shown recently in one of our exclusive shops, was made with an extremely full skirt, gathered at the waist, equally wide top and bottom; the skirt was hung over a crinoline hip stiffening, and the entire dress was trimmed effectively with quaint, pleated ruffles. Another effective summer evening gown displayed at the same time was of white Georgette crepe beaded with opaque white beads. The bodice was cut in bolero effect, and the skirt was a charming contrast to the full skirt of the net dress, being pleated to fall straight and narrow-looking from waist to ankles. A narrow beaded girdle encircled the waist and caught up a straight panel in the back, to carry out the bolero effect.

Although our shops are overflowing with airy, summery-looking fabrics, hats and dresses, our Avenue presents, with the exception of a straw hat now and then, quite as wintry an appearance as it has for the last few weeks. The velvet suit, combined with faille or broadcloth, is a general favorite, and fur is still its trimming. The notion of combining cloth and silk or velvet is a practical and effective one; often, as in our illustration, the lower section of skirt is of broadcloth. This offers an unusually good idea for remodeling a skirt that has become slightly worn about the lower edge. A velvet dress or suit is quite apt to show a bit of wear near the end of the season, and such an addition will freshen it and make it serve the season out.

The second suit illustrated is fashioned of dark blue gabardine. It is a simple, youthful model which could easily be made at home. The high collar with turned-back revers, which may also be closed if preferred, is a new touch which is becoming and smart.

One of the most effective suits seen on the Avenue for some time was of dark blue velvet, with a knee-deep flounce, and chin collar, and muff cuffs of moleskin. A broadcloth or faille costume with flounce, cuffs and collar of velvet would also be effective and much less expensive.

Serge Suit with Novel Collar

TRAVEL EAST IN LUXURY.

Sunset Limited to New Orleans through balmy skies. Thence through historic scenes of days of war, now alive with southern life and industry. The Sunset Limited and its connection at New Orleans with the New York and New Orleans Limited makes an ideal winter trip East. Service the best. Stop-over at points of much interest. For booklets and information apply Washington Sunset Route, 874 Market St., San Francisco, Cal.

The New Umbrella Skirt

When Mother Needs Help

EVERY mother of twins who has enough milk for one baby only, faces a serious problem. It is advisable to give each baby three breast feedings daily, supplementing these with three bottle feedings—for a little mother's milk is better than none. Thousands of mothers who could not nurse their babies have brought them safely through the dangerous first year with

Gail Borden
EAGLE
BRAND
CONDENSED
MILK
THE ORIGINAL

For nearly sixty years "Eagle Brand" has been successfully used as a baby food. It received the only Grand Prize awarded on condensed milk at the recent San Francisco Exposition. Remember that "Eagle Brand" is pure, rich milk—not only a food for babies, but an everyday household necessity. Use it in cooking. Send the coupon today.

Borden's Condensed Milk Company
New York "Leaders of Quality" Est. 1857

Borden's Condensed Milk Co.,
100 Hudson Street, New York N. Y. 3-10
Please send me the booklets I have checked . . . "BABY'S WELL-BEING" . . . "BABY'S DIGESTION" . . . "MOTHER'S RECIPES"
Name
Address

LINCOLN

(This poem was written by Julia Ward Howe in her 90th year, and read by her in Symphony Hall, Boston, on the centenary of the martyred president's birthday, February 12, 1909.)

Through the dim pageant of the years
A wondrous tracery appears:
A cabin of the western wild
Shelters in sleep a new-born child.

Nor nurse nor parent dear can know
The way those infant feet must go,
And yet a nation's help and hope
Are sealed within that horoscope.

Beyond is toil for daily bread,
And the thought to noble issues led.
And courage, arming for the morn
For whose behest this man was born.

A man of homely, rustic ways,
Yet he achieves the forum's praise,
And soon earth's highest meed has won
The seat and sway of Washington.

No throne of honors and delights,
Distrustful days and sleepless nights,
To struggle, suffer and aspire,
Like Israel, led by cloud and fire.

A treacherous shot, a sob of rest,
A martyr's palm upon his breast,
A welcome from the glorious seat
Where blameless souls of heroes meet,

And thrilling, through unmeasured days,
A song of gratitude and praise,
A cry that all the earth shall heed,
To God, who gave him for our need.

The "Old Guard" Salute Raphael Weill

More than a score of the "old guard" of Bohemia gathered at a breakfast at the St. Francis Hotel, this week, to celebrate the 79th birthday of Raphael Weill, and bid him a hearty bon voyage on his annual trip to Paris. This time he goes more to sympathize with his beloved country, and to be with her in the hour of her present great contest for human liberty. Many eulogies were bestowed on the guest of the evening by the staunch and fervent friends gathered about the board. Justice of the Supreme Court Henry A. Melvin acted as toastmaster and kept the genial spirit of the occasion bubbling with delight and the sentiment of auld lang syne. Weill's American citizenship and heart-felt patriotism for his beloved France was portrayed felicitously and sympathetically by Judge W. W. Morrow and others. Numbers of congratulatory telegrams were received and read by Mr. Weill during the course of the breakfast, not the least of which was a heartfelt cornucopia of good wishes from fifty-two members of the Bohemian Club. Among those who attended the breakfast were: Raphael Weill, Dr. Benjamin R. Swan, John Landers, Charles Josselyn, Hugh M. Burke, Ralph C. Harrison, Dr. Edward R. Taylor, Justice Henry A. Melvin, Charles G. Yale, Edward H. Hamilton, Charles S. Wheeler, John McLaren, Judges J. V. Coffey, W. W. Morrow, Erskine M. Ross, William B. Gilbert, W. B. Davenport, Chas. J. Foster, Dr. Frank K. Ainsworth, Thomas Conroy, John Gallois, D. G. Davis, Jeremiah Lynch and Paul Fleury.

—The skating craze has reached San Francisco, and this city will soon have an ice rink as fine as any in the East. Some of the owners of Techau Tavern are behind the enterprise, and will soon open a mammoth rink at the corner of Eddy and Jones street, where the Arcadia Dancing Pavilion is now located. Professional ice skaters will be brought from New York and a corps of expert teachers will give lessons to the public every morning. Spectators will find ample accommodation. Announcement of the opening will appear in these columns.

MISS HARKER'S SCHOOL
PALO ALTO, CALIFORNIA

*Boarding and Day School for Girls,
College Preparatory,
Grammar and Primary Departments.*

Special Care Given to Younger Children.

HITCHCOCK MILITARY ACADEMY

Located one mile from San Rafael in the healthiest part of beautiful Marin County. School fully accredited. Highest rank accorded by U. S. War Dept. High morals and strict attention demanded. Special attention to Physical Culture and Athletics. Expert and experienced instructors. Separate room for each pupil. Juniors in separate building. Write for catalog.

ADDRESS
President Hitchcock Military Academy
SAN RAFAEL, CALIFORNIA

The Beringer Conservatory of Music

926 Pierce Street, near McAllister
PHONE FILLMORE 840 SAN FRANCISCO

Directors: Joseph Beringer (Concert Pianist)
Mme. Jos. Beringer (Concert Contralto)

Thorough education in Pianoforte Playing and Singing. Special departments for beginners, amateurs and professionals. Pupils prepared for the operatic and concert stage. Opportunities given to advanced piano and vocal students to join the well known Beringer Musical Club for public appearances.

MISS HAMLIN'S SCHOOL FOR GIRLS

2230 PACIFIC AVENUE
2117 } BROADWAY SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
2123 }

Boarding and Day Pupils. "Accredited" by all accrediting institutions, both in California and in Eastern States.

TELEPHONE WEST 546

ARRILLAGA MUSICAL COLLEGE
SAN FRANCISCO

MUSIC IN ALL ITS BRANCHES
Sight Reading, Ear Training, Theory,
Musical Form, Appreciation
TERMS ON REQUEST—CATALOG

2315 JACKSON STREET PHONE WEST 4737

A. W. BEST ALICE BEST

BEST'S ART SCHOOL
1625 CALIFORNIA STREET

Life Classes Day and Night

Illustrating
Sketching
Painting

Phone Kearny 2842

Cosgrove's Hair Store
Established 20 Years
239 Powell Street
San Francisco

"Photography as an Art."—Photography has developed to a stage where it entitled to be classified under the category of fine arts. Mr. Jesse Bamfield is the creator of the above photograph, which he has called "The Uth." It could be taken for a reproduction of some master canvas.

Copyrighted. Photo by Jesse T. Bamfield

Jesse T. Bamfield

SAN FRANCISCO
NEWS LETTER
California Advertiser.

Devoted to the Leading Interests of California and the Pacific Coast.

Vol. XCI

San Francisco, Cal., Saturday, March 11, 1916

No. 11

The SAN FRANCISCO NEWS LETTER AND CALIFORNIA ADVERTISER is printed and published every Saturday by the Proprietor, Frederick Marriott, 21 Sutter street, San Francisco, Cal. Tel. Kearny 3594 Entered at San Francisco, Cal., Post-office as second-class mail matter. Chicago Office—Geo. Hische, 1310 Westminster, Westminster Building, Chicago.

London Office—George Street & Co., 30 Cornhill, E. C., England. Matter intended for publication in the current number of the SAN FRANCISCO NEWS LETTER AND CALIFORNIA ADVERTISER should be sent to the office not later than 5 p. m. Wednesday.

Subscription Rates (including postage)—1 year, $4.00; 6 months, $2.25; Foreign—1 year, $6.00; 6 months, $3.25.

—The vicinity of Verdun will be another fertile spot for years to come.

—A futurist pianist is coming to town. The farther in the future the better.

—It is taking Congress a long time to learn that Wilson is really president.

—Two murderers were hanged in California last week. Well, that helps some.

—Art Smith has sued for a divorce because his wife was too much of a high-flier.

—For a long time to come, Death will smack his lips over the delectable memory of Verdun.

—Chicago church gives away one thousand loaves as an advertisement. Why not fishes, too?

—The time seems not far distant when a motor car will be given as a premium with gasoline.

—The local Mint coined more than five million dollars in twenty dollar pieces in January. Who in thunder is getting it all?

—Cheer up! Cherries are not ripe, but the trees are in bloom, if you will take the trouble to go afield and look for them.

—Congress is full of so-called patriots who are willing to risk their country's welfare for the sake of a little cheap applause.

—Roosevelt is now on the Island of Trinidad. How some of the Republicans would like to make it the Island of Elba for him!

—The world takes its hat off to the Moewe and her gallant commander. They have furnished one of the best pirate stories of a generation.

—The young woman who broke a leg the other night while dancing the fox trot too fast, will probably confine herself to the tortoise trot when she recovers.

—Local clubman has made a bet that he can walk from here to San Jose in ninety-six hours. One should be able to do that and come home to rest every night.

—The lotteries are creeping back. They are not paying prizes, yet they can find gulls who will buy tickets just to satisfy their inordinate desire to be buncoed.

—Now that the anti-tipping law has been killed in Iowa, we may expect many more Iowans to move to tipless Los Angeles, where every man is his own waiter.

—Down the Peninsula there are three classes—society people, beagles and jack-rabbits. We have not named the three classes in the order of their intelligence.

—The Chief of Police has got the suspicion into his head that there is crookedness in police court juries. He is to be congratulated not only on his acumen but his originality.

—The anti-tipping law that the Iowans passed has been declared unconstitutional. Let a lot of cheap reformers take a tip from this, and cease their attempts at personal regulation.

—Man sues for divorce because his wife insists on keeping chickens in the house. Reverse of the usual complaint, where the husband is accused of keeping a chicken or two away from the house.

—There is more than one foreign diplomat in Washington who wonders if it wouldn't be worth while to risk arrest for burglary to get hold of the report that Colonel House brought the president from Europe.

—Some seven thousand individuals and firms in San Francisco have been trying to dodge the income tax. And thousands and thousands of others are unable to make income enough to make them taxable.

—Each faction of the Republican party in California wanted to keep the kernel and give the other the shell. They have finished up by getting only the shell between them, and the Democrats are joyfully munching the kernel.

—A vice committee has been investigating in Sacramento and has found that the city is full of wickedness. A town that can endure an invasion of legislators periodically should be able to stand for anything between times without complaining.

—Bryan says that standing on one's dignity would be preferable to fighting. That would be all right until the enemy began to shoot our dignity out from under us with seventy-five centimeter guns, and left us nothing to stand on. Even Bryan must admit that dignity cannot stand long against gunpowder.

—Governor Johnson, who worked so hard to have party lines abolished, finds himself embarrassingly minus a party just now—merely a candidate with no organization to back him. The Republicans will not take him under their wing, and there aren't enough Progressives left to furnish a refuge for a troubled political spirit.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

FALSE DEMAND OF TRAINMEN
To GET $100,000,000
ANNUALLY OUT OF THE PUBLIC.

The American public is notoriously slow in expressing judgment on the great vital questions of the day. Just now, however, this public consciousness is being awakened by reason of the alarming business depression which will certainly prevail throughout this country should the contemplated railroad strike for higher wages be carried out as planned by the four large organizations of railway employees of this country. About 300,000 men are involved on a trackage in this country and Canada of some 280,000 miles. Their demands for increased wages amount to $100,000,000 annually, an increase of 25 per cent over the payroll of 1914, when a total of $400,000,000 was reached by the pay roll. Already the officers of the Brotherhood have declared that they will not submit their demands to arbitration, and that unless the increase is granted a general strike will be called.

Such an absolutely defiant stand against equity and fair play rightly rasps the public's sense of justice. If this threat of the strikers is realized and the railroads are forced to pay the $100,000,000 advance in wages, the plain people, as usual, in all successful strikes, must eventually pay the piper this $100,000,000 advance in wages annually in the shape of an increased cost in railroad tickets and advances in freight rates. Only by such increases in railroad charges can the railroads meet their new obligations. Fancy the broadcast distress and wretched times that will follow this threatened strike. It will tie up 280,000 miles of the most thriving railways on the continent. Business will be brought to a standstill—an intolerable condition. The ballot on the question to give powers to the chief executives and committees of the brotherhoods to negotiate with the officers of the railways for a favorable settlement is now being taken through the mails. The vote will be completed March 8th. Some 40,000 ballots have been received at this writing, and they indicate "an almost unanimous sentiment in favor of a strike."

The nub of the question at issue is the eight hour day. Thousands of train service employees now work less than eight hours for a day's pay, and those who work more receive pay, not only for all of the time they work, but for every mile they run. The proposed rules would simply change from a ten hour to an eight hour basis of computing wages, so that one hour's work shall be paid for as one-eighth rather than as one-tenth of a day's pay, or as 12½ miles instead of 10 miles. The officers of the brotherhood are artfully attempting to make the public believe they are really seeking to create "a real eight hour day." At the same time they have taken pains to reassure their brethren that no reduction in working hours is contemplated.

A REGULAR FELLOW.

—Williams in the Indianapolis News.

The vice-president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen sets forth the distinction in the hours as follows: "There is quite a difference," he says, "between the eight hour work day and the eight hour 'basic work' day. The eight hour 'basic work day' (the system we propose) contemplates that eight hours shall be the basis for a day's work, and any time in excess shall be paid for as overtime." Under such a system there is no limit to the hours that may be worked.

In the regular railway train service it is an axiom that a day's work cannot be arbitrarily fixed. The employees know this fact, and per consequence they have no intention of changing the character and hours of their working day. Their pretense and object is obvious to the initiated in railroading: they are wily asking only the enormous increase in wages which would result from changing the basis of payment so that they can earn money faster under this new pea-shell game in the proposed new basic eight hour day. By its usage the Brotherhood can flimflam $100,000,000 out of the pockets of what they consider is the "rube public." They will get it, too, unless the public stands steadfastly by its rights. The Brotherhood has artfully concealed its real purpose in a specious rigamarole. There is not a word in the proposals now being voted on by the trainmen that would make a man work as much as eight hours a day for a day's pay. It is specially provided that "100 miles or less, eight hours or less" shall constitute a day. Nor is there any provision for a reduction in the hours of work for any one who now works for more than eight hours a day.

What the men are really demanding is a reduction of 25 per cent in the number of hours they must work before they will begin to draw pay for overtime, this overtime to be at the rate of fifty per cent higher than the proposed regular hourly rate and 87½ per cent higher than the present overtime rate. Briefly, the controversy is not over a question of hours; it involves solely a one hundred million dollar increase in wages, which the public would be called on to pay annually.

Therein is the meat in the cocoanut. The public cannot save $100,000,000 more quickly than by stoutly opposing these specious demands of these trainmen.

The rising stock of gold in these United States continues unabated, with the result that Uncle Sam now has the largest gold surplus ever accumulated by any country in the history of the world, $2,100,000,000. This stream of gold is coming in from all parts of the commercial world at the rate of about $420,000,000 annually, the price of munitions just now being an active factor.

These accumulating millions are fortifying the financial positions of this country against the day of problems when the war shall end. It is generally understood that when that time comes the nations of Europe will be compelled to come to the United States to borrow the necessary gold to rehabilitate their depleted resources and to reconstruct the property destroyed in the present conflict. England alone has not been invaded, and she is making strenuous effort to continue to control the purse strings of the world, but the enormous expenditures she has made personally, aside from financing her allies when hard pressed for money, has shrunk her enormous income, tapping many undeveloped commercial nations. American financiers are exhibiting a keen interest in the flotation of the new $2,100,000,000 war loan which England proposes to make, and the influence it will have on the world's money rates. With the present extraordinarily large stock of gold in the United States to-day, money is regarded by bankers as being comparatively cheap. Big corporations are having no difficulty in borrowing large sums for long time purposes, and at very advantageous rates. Still, with all the improving prospects in business, commerce and finance, conservatism is in the air, and will remain there until a safe angle has been obtained regarding the definite turn affairs will take at the conclusion of the war. This is strongly reflected in the big corporations in this country, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem Steel, Standard Oil and a score of others, where a large margin of net earnings are being carried to surplus and stored away carefully against the day of uncertainty, a policy of hard horse-sense. Stockholders are doubly protected thereby, and have no cause to demand larger dividends. National team work of this kind is continuing to fortify the financial position of the United States in the present crisis, and will mean much when the nations of the world line up and disclose their bank resources when Peace walks down the ranks. England, of course, will bend every energy to maintain Thread-needle street as the money 'change of the world. Uncle Sam may challenge this claim with his enormous holding of gold. Then will come the moment for the financiers of this country to prove they are of the mettle and calibre to play the great international game of finance to successful results.

SOME "CHARITIES" AND FREE ADVERTISING.

In a recent editorial, the New York Sun vigorously shouted "Help! Help!" against the human tide of innumerable enterprises which, wearing the compelling uniform of charity, seek industriously to enlist the aid of publications in the perennial filling of their treasuries. There be charities and charities: some, like the local Associated Charities, which deserves loyal support for its integrity and widespread sympathetic ministrations in relieving distress. But there are others wearing the guise of charity and near-charity who make no bones in boldly holding up publications to announce their various activities in agile attempts to increase their treasury accounts. Practically every daily and weekly publication is beset by the importunate appeals of these banditti. "Just a column of publicity, please, for the Umpty Dump Frivols, next Saturday night; a benefit gotten up by the Ukalele charity for decrepit infants."

This greedy appetite for free advertising thrives by what it feeds on. A disposition to impose along this line grows daily. Why not? Radicals and hustlers among this clan admit that they pay 50 per cent and sometimes more, to their solicitors for selling tickets and soliciting contribution funds. Such actions sometimes smack of a hold-up. The attitude and pose of these gamesters in charity is particularly irritating, as nine editors out of ten are sensitively inclined to assist any worthy cause to the utmost—to discover later that the so-called charity was another bunk rasps a sorely worn temper.

The trouble arises probably from the fact that the papers, in their keen race for live news, pay little attention to making a proper inquiry into the moral character of such charities. Publication owners should come to an understanding regarding these pests, and switch them to the chute that leads to the junk pile.

THE PRESIDENTIAL TERM.

President Wilson's attitude regarding his renomination as expressed in the present preliminary political skirmishes leading up to the political election, next November, reflects more clearly than ever that public opinion is rapidly growing blind to that old demand that the presidential term should be of six years, with no thought of a renomination. Radical Republicans, seeking war material to fire at the Democratic party, are eager to protest that the plank in the Baltimore Democratic convention, declaring a single term of four years to be the limit of its candidates' tenure of office, is, ipse dixit, the bomb that should upset Wilson from his job. Wilson knows, and so do the Republicans, that the sense of the nation is set on the present system of two terms of four years each, if the occupant of the presidential chair is complimented by re-election through satisfactory public service rendered the country by his administration. Grant's attempt at the "third term" raised a high concert of protest and a higher concrete wall of tradition marking the limit of occupancy in the president's chair. This general conception throughout the country of the term of office will have an appreciable measure on Roosevelt's candidacy, should he be selected to run. Practically he was president for two terms. Elected vice-president of the McKinley administration, he became president on the assassination of McKinley some few months after the inauguration. Should Roosevelt be elected, practically he would have occupied the president's chair for three terms, with a break, of course, in the occupancy; thus violating a precedent of vital consequence to the people.

NEW NIPPERS BEING USED BY THE "DRYS."

The Prohibition movement in this country has reached a stage where there has developed a rivalry between two wings of that party in Congress, one party seeking to solve the problem through preventing interstate commerce in liquor, and the other by relying on a Federal constitutional amendment. This division in the attack through Congress offers no weakness of which the "wets" may take advantage, for under any inimical move by them the two "dry" wings would quickly move to support each other in the Congressional debate. Senator Sheppard of Texas is leading the movement for a constitutional amendment prohibiting the manufacture and sale of alcoholic liquors, while Senator Dillingham of Vermont, recognized as a shrewd and able lawyer, argues that a statute forbidding international commerce in liquors will have the same operative effect and become more quickly effective. As a lawyer he is familiar with the United States Supreme Court's decisions along similar lines, in which the powers of Congress under the commerce clause of the constitution were interpreted. His followers feel confident of his position, for it is of record that successful champions of State prohibition, a decade or so ago, discovered that much of their tactical success was virtually nullified by interstate traffic in beverages manufactured in non-prohibitory States. This is one of the chief reasons of the recent movement of Federal action to give the prohibition States the relief they ask.

TOWN CRIER

—And now a certain wing of the Republican party are loudly touting Root as a nominee on the forthcoming presidential ticket. The small business man of the country, the ranks of labor, and the masses of mercantile employees, have learned through thirty years of acquiring political information that Root is one of the lawyers that helped "Boss" Tweed, the most notorious wrecker that ever looted the city treasury of New York to escape from the net of the law that enmeshed him. Root also stands conspicuous as an attorney for great corporations of this country. In fact, his fortune and his success have been practically built on their fat fees. Root is a scholarly, graceful man, a man of affairs, and would make an ideal representative entertainer at the White House social gatherings. But in the present critical juncture of the world's affairs, voters this year will insist on a man who is competent to handle the situation, a man who has been tried out and found competent. President Wilson fills all requirements. Naturally, the Republicans must name some sort of a figure to head their ticket this year, and the choice lies between Root and Roosevelt, a corporation lawyer and a citizen-soldier. Both candidates are experienced in leading forlorn hopes, and in this respect are happily qualified to head the Republican ticket. Why not run both of them at the head of the ticket? This would afford a double attraction to the ticket and serve later as a double-header in the finale at Salt River.

—Mme. Ashe-Gillig-Gouraud Mishinoff has taken advantage of her late separation from Prince Alexandre Mishinoff to go on record that she is done with matrimonial adventuring, and that hereafter, with the aid of antitoxines in the shape of recollections, the Princess feels confident she will be perfectly immune against the biggest howitzers handled by the up-to-date Artillerist Cupid. More of the "Honey Darling" letters have come to light, throwing into the limelight some very interesting details regarding the "trial marriage" of the Princess's ward, Yvonne, and Prince Mishinoff. While the perfervid test was underway, the Princess suffered "agonies." These were later eased with poultices of relief when she discovered that Yvonne and the Prince were in a stalemate position in the game of love instead of a soul mate affair. An aureole of happy satisfaction has radiated from the face of the Princess since then. The why and the wherefore is variously interpreted, as the Prince is preparing to join the foreign legion in France. Since the love try-out at Edgemere, Long Island, which ended in a series of "Sapho" scenes between Yvonne and the Prince, the former has trailed dreamily into the background, and her foster-mother has taken to cold tea and reading the old love letters of the Prince. She insists that all is off. And so ends the "Honey Darling" series of what might have become serious.

—Wanted: a Solomon in judgment to determine the differences between the wildly scampering jitneys and the railroad companies of the State, including the United Railways Company. The State Railroad Commission and local Merchants' Associations are being implored by the transportation companies to drag off these pestiferous and persistent little parasites that are charged with sucking the life blood out of the profits of the big transportation companies which they parallel. "I'm only trying to make an honest living," squeaks the jitney. "Ter 'ell with yer," grunts the big passenger car, trying to ram the little dodger. The big railroad companies are making appalling lists of losses due to the competing jitney, and the jitney retorts that he has a right to live. There must be something in the jitney that provides a convenience to the public, or it would have been wiped off the business map many months ago. Some lawyers claim that the bonds of these jitney drivers are worthless in case of an accident, but even that charge has not manipulated them off the city street and the country road. As a large part of the public continue to patronize them, a square deal should be had, and a Solomon judgment given between the disputants. Both sides have recognizable rights that should be preserved.

—The black and the blue Republicans are having a rambunctious time in their by-plays to overreach each other in their palavers over peace. Each side is notoriously seeking to bury its snickersnee in the hide of the other. This kind of by-play of course evokes a mild rebuke from the kindly disposed Democrats, who cannot fail to see the acrimonious contest now underway in the Republican flat across the street. The black Republicans are saying some very nasty things about Guy Earl and his intrepid camp followers, things that naturally hurt supersensitive feelings of men who admire each other for their clean consciences and fruitless efforts in mad endeavors to keep their party on the political map. About the only tactics they have not employed is a heavy tip to the city street sweeping department to gather up the leaders of the black Republicans in committee conference and dump them in the limbo of "down and out" politicians. Each side of the sadly split Republican party in this State is developing into a political freak that is well worth preserving in the basement of the Park Museum. O, tempora; O, Mores! What a falling off there has been, my countrymen, since the highwayman tactics of that unconscionable Boss Mark Hanna corrupted Congress and everything else in sight, and wrecked whatever decency was left in the Republican party. Dissension and desertion naturally ran rampant through its ranks and plaster promises, and all the Keeselings, Fredericks, Earls, Boyntons, Lancasters, Metcalfs and "Sconchin" Maloneys will never be able to paste it together again. Its day is past. Thank Beelzebub!

—It is to laugh to hear the preachers froth against the clairvoyant "mystics" and fortune tellers of San Francisco, and thereby incite the placid and unavoidable policemen to ravage their haunts and rush them to prison. This is another damnable plot to cut off another bunch of those lucrative advertising profits of our conscientious and super-scrupulous morning paper. But that point lies somnolent. The papers affected will not realize for a fortnight at least what has really happened to their advertising columns. When they do awaken at that eventful moment they will set up a roar of protest that will upset the count Johnson is now taking of his probable majority in winning the race for the presidency this fall. To class these simple local clairvoyants as "bunks" simply because they took toll of a few gold dollar pieces from their victims is a slur and a nasty aspersion on many churchly deacons, Wall street brokers, physicians, trick dogs, lawyers, prestidigitateurs, porch climbers and multi-millionaires who have not made their junk collection of income paying property, bonds and funds in bank without resorting to the same practices for which these same clairvoyants, "mystics" and fortune-tellers were imprisoned.

—A despatch from Paris says that the great battle along twenty-five miles of front is being followed with interest by the public. How startling! We would never have suspected that such a thing could be possible.

San Francisco and Los Angeles Exchange Songs and Jokes With York

Our grandchildren will doubtless see nothing epoch making in a concert given jointly by one chorus in New York and another in Los Angeles and heard simultaneously by audiences in both cities. Yet that phenomenon impressed two such gatherings with a sense of the miraculous on February 9th, when the Mendelssohn Glee Club of New York introduced the world's first transcontinental concert as a feature of its golden anniversary dinner. This dinner was held in the ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria. There the members of the Mendelssohn Glee sang across the telephone wires to their colleagues, the members of the Ellis Club of Los Angeles, who reciprocated in like manner.

So quickly do Americans accept any world discovery as an established fact that the New York audience which at first marveled at the new experience, finally took it almost as a matter of course. In this demonstration the trans-continental line was used for the first time to carry the sound of a large number of voices across the continent. The Eastern end of the line was in the banquet room of the Waldorf, while the Western end was at the Gamut Club in Los Angeles, where the Ellis Club had assembled a gathering of 500. The wire distance between New York and Los Angeles is 3,875 miles. To send the voices across this great space a special telephone transmitter, about two feet in length, nine inches in diameter and highly sensitized, was used at the Waldorf. The demonstration at the eastern end was in charge of H. W. Casler of the New York Telephone Company, who directed the proceedings through a regular desk 'phone at the speakers' table. Mr. Mason had charge at the Gamut Club.

Mr. Casler first established connection with the successive cities on the line, as follows: Pittsburg, Chicago, Omaha, Denver, Salt Lake, San Francisco and Los Angeles. The first musical shot that was fired in this telephone skirmish was when Harvey W. Hindermeyer greeted Los Angeles with the Ziegfeld Follies hit, the "Hello, Frisco," which embodied the spirit of the occasion, even if it did not name the exact Western terminus of the line. Mr. Hindermeyer took his position a foot or so from the big transmitter, much as if he were making a talking machine record. Right back came the reply from Mr. Bemis of the Ellis Club:

"Hello, New York, hello!"

Although the New York diners could not tell how Mr. Hindermeyer's song sounded at the other end, they could form an idea of it from their own hearing of the reply. The effect was almost identical with that of a phonograph record, only farther away. For instance, there was the same reproduction of the vibration of the voice, and when the piano accompaniment was heard, here and there, at all this great distance, it had some of the sound of an instrument of which the strings were plucked similar to the reproduction which the talking machine frequently makes of the piano's tone. The voice came quite clearly across the wire from Los Angeles, and it was only the words which were now and then indistinct—that is, the song words. The remarks of the speakers in Los Angeles (which were made into an ordinary transmitter) floated into the Waldorf as distinctly as if they had been spoken no farther away than Montclair. It was the words sung into the big transmitter which did not come out so clearly. Evidently, then, this long distance concert idea will be even more practicable when the device for transmitting the song tone is farther perfected.

After a greeting between the two toastmasters, Frederick A. Stokes of the Mendelssohn, and Judge Walter Boardwell, of the Ellis Club, the Mendelssohn Glee members grouped themselves in front of the transmitter—many of them several feet away—and sang Bullard's "Stein Song" to the audience in Los Angeles. At the end there came back a protracted sound which resembled the patter of rain upon a roof.

Said Mr. Casler to his confere in Los Angeles: "How did that 'Stein Song' sound to you?" Replied Mr. Mason: "You could tell that we enjoyed it from our applause." This rain patter, then, was the applause.

In the solos, "Israfil" and "Two Grenadiers," the New York diners detected sometimes an alien sound across the wire, a duet with a soprano voice unexpectedly interpolated. Further solos were "The Drummer Boy," sung by Reed Miller with such stirring effect that it must have been reproduced tellingly in Los Angeles, and "Oh! Golden Sun," delivered by G. Hayden Jones of the Ellis Club.

Connections were also made with a receiver hung over the breakers dashing on the Cliff House rocks and the New York audience listened to the roar of the Pacific.

An understanding of the role played by distance in defining the gradations of voices over the phone was gleaned from the "good night" roll call of the cities along the route, in which the gathering heard, in rapid succession: "Good night, Mr. Casler, San Francisco. Good night, Mr. Casler, Salt Lake," and so forth, in a crescendo of tone power until New York was reached.

These telephone demonstrations lasted more than an hour.

Sweet Marie

BY GRANT WATSON.

Naka Yukishige Hayashi, self-christened Marie, had inherited her Chinese mother's looks and Japanese father's progressiveness. After acquiring a high school diploma, and several "cases," she decided what she really needed was genuine excitement. San Francisco is noted for alluring atmosphere. At times the cold-fingered fogs and too familiar winds play tricks on the unsuspecting Eastern tourist, but ah! there is always atmosphere.

Clad in a dainty Chinese costume, serving chocolates and peppermints at each table in a fashionable semi-Bohemian cafe, Marie radiated her delight in these congenial surroundings. The lights in her slanting, alluring eyes, and the patter of her tiny feet, contributed not a little to the inspiring atmosphere. Her job was steady; not so her aspirations, and thereby error crept in.

Threading her way among the picturesquely set tables, one afternoon, Marie experienced an unusual shock. Very quietly and primly she approached a table where a well groomed man and smartly gowned woman were chatting rather familiarly. They regarded her with welcoming smiles. "Pardon me, sir," she said, timidly, the flush of maidenly modesty suffusing her sensitive face—"pardon me, but a gentleman wishes to see you at the door. He pointed you out."

The man had barely turned his back, on the way to the door, when Marie whispered: "Madame, I beg you to drink nothing. Each day your friend comes with some new girl. They drink champagne, and he gazes devotedly into their eyes. I know, for I watch him. A taxi always waits for them. I beg you will be careful, for you look quite different from the rest, and—forgive my boldness."

As Marie stepped from the gaily lighted cafe after her day's work, she was joined by the cigarette boy. "Say, Marie," he grinned, "yer gettin' pretty nifty, ain't yer, these days, hobnobbing wid de swells. I didn't know you was acquainted wid de old Tinkle's wife."

"His what?"

"His wife! Didn't yer know that was his wife?"

"Gosh!" replied Marie, darting away.

WHITE HORSE SCOTCH

From

MACKIE & CO.
ISLAY, SCOTLAND

Never in Bulk

CHARLES MEINECKE & Co.

AGENTS PACIFIC COAST

314 SACRAMENTO ST., S. F.

The gay motley of the Mardi Gras is like some splendid mosaic set in the processional of the seasons. Each year the superlative in adjectives is called upon to do descriptive honor to the event, and fortunately the image of each event erases the last one sufficiently to envelop in truth the assertion that "never has there been such a beautiful ball."

And why shouldn't the last love be the best love of all? Certain it is that the flower pageant gave the costumiers an opportunity to thread their needles with the gossamer stuff with which fairies make the mantles for the flowers. There was never a garden in all the unlit world in which grew lovelier flowers than the Lotus Queen, with blue larkspur, the pink rambler rose, the flame nasturtium, the scarlet fuchsia, with its coronation of purple, the brown-eyed daisy, the bluebell with its silver bloom that hangs like a wisp of fog over every blossom, and the pristine snow ball, like a touch of winter in its merriest mood.

There was never a queen of all the long line of Royalty created by the divine right of the Mardi Gras committee, who chose lovelier attendants for her court. La Belle Helene can afford to be generous, and so she chose the most beautiful among her friends. The Misses Gertrude Hopkins, Marion Newhall, and Marion Zeile represented the unmarried set, and Mrs. Arthur Chesebrough, Rudolph Schilling, Talbot Walker, Samuel Hopkins and Cheever Cowdin upheld the pulchritude of the married set, with the Queen, of course, always the focal point of the group. King Dragon Fly, the grasshoppers, the ants, the beetles, and the wasps were the creatures of the air and field. They shimmered and shone, and in all the gorgeous raiment of insects as seen by a Cubist, and concealed the every-dayness of Stanford Gwin, George Bowles, Nion Tucker, Dean Witter, Robin Hayne, William Leib, Heinrich von Schroeder, Kenneth Moore and Walter Hush.

The men liked the idea of those costumes much better than the usual court stuff and the committee found it much less difficult than usual to impress into service the necessary complement of masculinity. When Mrs. Gus Taylor first suggested to Nion Tucker the idea of having the men go as insects, he answered: "I think the fellows will all be bugs over the idea" And they were.

San Francisco has always been famous for its picturesque characters, and one of the most famous of the unsung ones is the high priestess who presides over the destiny of the costumiers where for three score years and ten San Francisco society betakes itself when it wants to prepare for the masque.

Every one in the smart set calls her by her first name, and though her hair has grown gray in the service of her employers, her heart still sings, and her voice lilts with rapture when she is called into consultation for a design for one of her favorites. If "Nellie" were to leave town, the Mardi Gras ball would be like cold suet pudding.

Stories about "Nellie" are thick as the leaves of Vallambrosa, but few of them have ever blown into print. There is the one in which Ned Greenway struts as the hero. The black satin knickers that came with his costume were several sizes too small. It was after shop hours, but he managed to get Nellie on the telephone. "I'll come right down and put in a gusset," said she. Ned didn't know just what a gusset was, but he did know that it was something that the rules of the club would forbid, providing the scissors were personally conducted by a member of the fair sex.

"I'll wear some long trowsers that I have here!" he finally announced to her.

"No, no," she commanded, "you mustn't—what would a Mardi Gras ball be if you didn't show those lovely legs of yours! Send the knickers out here to me by a messenger, and I'll get them back to you in time."

It was too good a story to keep, and it went the rounds of clubdom.

Then there is the story of the society woman who went about saying that her daughter would have "landed" the eligible of the season if "Nellie" hadn't taken a hand in the game and made the rival girl a much prettier costume for a certain fancy dress ball. And there is a yarn about a wife who tried to find out what a certain fair dame had ordered for the Mardi Gras ball because she suspected that husband had more interest than he should have in the fair lady, and the tale goes that "Nellie" convinced the wife that she was losing husband through her unreasonable jealousy—and so on the tales run, and always will so long as we weave bits from fancy dress costumes into the patch quilt of life.

Oakland sends its contingent each year to the Mardi Gras ball. This year the party hostessed by the William Henshaws and that entertained by the Frank Proctors, vied with the most picturesque of the boxes, the women from the other side of the bay wearing gowns and jewels that were comparable with the best display of San Francisco. One of the noticeably clever conceits was the fruit basket costume worn by Mrs. Willard Williamson, who was one of Mrs. Proctor's guests.

Mrs. Daniel Jackling (Virginia Jolliffe) enhanced her costume by wearing some of the emeralds in her husband's famous collection, and they were much admired by the discriminating. Mrs. Jackling has the most marvelous gems of any woman in San Francisco society, but she seldom wears anything but the single strand of pearls which was one of her husband's wedding gifts to her. Her famous remark about hating to see a woman look like the Tower of Jewels is a neat expression of her antipathy to excess baggage of gems. Mrs. Jackling was one of the most beautiful figures in that scene through which moved women of every kind, from the modest flowers of the field to those in the chiffon allure of the seraglio.

It cannot be truthfully recorded that the prohibition wave struck the Mardi Gras with an impact that could be heard. As some one said: "It sounded more like a crowd falling off the water wagon." The annual frolic in masque is always more or less of a champagne lark, and this year was attuned to the same merry popping of corks. Even those who have been keeping their fingers persistently crossed all season decided to unbend for this one occasion, and the result was surprisingly free from disaster, considering the fluidity of the affair.

To be sure, there was the young matron, one of the favorites in the Burlingame set, who overreached her thirst at the dinner party which she attended with her husband before the ball, and in consequence she went to bed at the hotel for three hours before joining the revelers at the ball. She was most nonchalant when she did appear, and agreed with all the experts with whom she discussed the affair that it was because she had refrained absolutely for five months that the little that she drank as compared with her previous record bowled her over.

Towards morning there were a number of the young men who looked about ready to serve as "awful examples," but there were no exhibits in the feminine line that were repellant—which has not always been the story of the Mardi Grass balls. In the elder days the early morning casualties that could be counted against the champagne record made one wonder whether at such a cost providing for helpless children could be reckoned in terms of good or evil. But this year there is no need to quibble on the subject.

On the subject of decoration of the ball there is no need to be evasive about past splendors. It is customary to pull out all

Fashion's Choice

A soft, refined, pearly-white appearance, the choice of Ladies of Society, is readily obtained by the use of

Gouraud's¹²
Oriental Cream

Refreshing and healing to the skin. The perfect, non-greasy liquid face cream. Use it on the hands. Removes discolorations. Send 10c. for trial size.
FERD. T. HOPKINS & SON, New York City

the dykes in one's vocabulary and loosen a flood of exaggeration on this phase of the ball. As a matter of fact the committee never spends much money on the decorations, and the clever artists and decorators are much out to it to create proper effects. But for this particular court scene they were not hampered in any way. For this is the season of spring flowers, and all the wonderful gardens and hothouses down the peninsula way are just bursting with bloom—or rather were bursting with bloom, for they were practically denuded for the ball, each one vying with the other in the quantities donated. The Templeton Crocker gardens in themselves furnished some of the loveliest flowers that were ever used to enhance a scene.

On the subject of the decorations, this was the universal opinion of the smart set. With perhaps the possible exception of the ball, which Mrs. Sharon gave last season there have never been such wonderful flowers seen at any affair in this flower laden spot by the Western sea. And that is a pretty fine bouquet to hang on the ball.

The smart-set—even those who were not at the dinner—are talking about the dinner which Mrs. Andrew Welch gave to about twenty friends at the St. Francis Hotel, preceding the ball. It was a real carnival affair with all the trappings of a carnival, and the result was that the guests at this dinner came trooping into the ball in such merry mood that they began where most people left off.

Mrs. Welch had all sorts of surprises and noise-making contraptions for her dinner guests, which put them in perfect accord with the spirit of the evening, and now other hostesses are asking each other why they did not think of making of the dinner a carnival fest instead of a formal affair.

On Friday, Mrs. Wm. C. Corlett entertained the members of the bridge Club of Berkeley ladies with a luncheon at the Hotel Oakland. Mrs. J. M. Brothers, of Richmond was hostess at a luncheon at the Hotel Oakland on Thursday. The invited guests were Madames H. F. Hulin, V. A. Fenner, E. G. Griffin, C. E. Neidecker, W. S. Lucas, E. W. O'Brien, C. B. Fredenburg, H. C. Adair, A. M. Irwin, S. N. DeLuna. On Monday, March 13th, Mrs Lillian Eastman will entertain her bridge club at the Hotel Oakland with a luncheon. The fashion show, under the auspices of the Ladies' Relief Society, promises to be a great success. Already table reservations are being made for the supper which is to follow the show. Mrs. Williard Williamson is in charge of the arrangements.

The announcement that Mr. Jerome B. Landfield will shortly give a series of lectures on Russian literature has been received with keen enthusiasm in the literary and social world of the bay cities. The lectures will be held in the rooms of the Sorosis Club in Sutter street, which has become identified with Mr. Landfield during the past year through his Wednesday morning talks on current topics. The discourses on Russian literature have been planned for Thursday mornings during the coming six weeks. The first lecture will be given at 10:45 a. m., Thursday, March 16th.

On January 21st, the California Peace Preparedness Chapter of the Woman's Section of the Navy League, of the United States, was formed, with headquarters in San Francisco. The charter has been secured from Washington, D. C., from Mrs. Vylla Poe Wilson, national organizing secretary. The following officers have been elected: Regent, Mrs. Charles Fremont Pond; vice-regent, Mrs. F. W. Clampett; recording secretary, Mrs. Eduard Wm. Reynolds; corresponding secretary, Mrs. James Bull; treasurer, Mrs. Jessie Bowie-Detrick; auditor, Mrs. Harry M. Maxwell; chairman of executive committee, Mrs. I. Lowenberg; chairman of Legislative Committee, Mrs. Andrew S. Rowan; chairman of Membership Committee, Mrs. George J. Bucknall; chairman of Press Committee, Mrs. Virginia A. Beede.

WAR.

The dregs of man's desire,
 Burning on life's pyre,
 Transmuting low to higher,
 Fine to re-fined, part to the Entire.

—Gertrude Capen Whitney in March Nautilus.

"A DRESSCESSIONAL."

Girl of the Future, feared of all,
 Chasing the far-flung Fashion line,
 What awful things may yet appal,
 Hung on your human form divine!
 Girl of To-day, stay with us yet,
 Lest we regret! Lest we regret!

The tunic and the peplum dies,
 The plaiting and the flare depart;
 Oh, what must we next sacrifice
 To future of a fearful art?
 Girl of To-day, stay with us all,
 Lest worse befall! Lest worse befall!

The blouse and bodice melt away,
 For ever fades the silhouette;
 Lo! all the mode of yesterday
 Is one with puff and pantalette.
 Girl of To-day, stay with us, do!
 Lest worse ensue! Lest worse ensue!

If drunk with mad designs we loose
 Wild styles that hold no art in awe—
 Such clothing as the Fijis use,
 Or lesser breeds without the law—
 Girl of To-day, stay here with we,
 Lest worse may be! Lest worse may be!

For foolish maid who puts her trust
 In French tailleur or smart modiste,
 In valiant men of mien august,
 Without discernment in the least—
 For frantic fads of Fashion's whirl,
 Have mercy on us, Future Girl!

—Caroline Wells in Harper's Magazine for March.

—"Why all these toots as you pass that village?" inquired the fireman. "Toots is my wife's pet name," explained the engineer.—Kansas City Journal.

The Palace Hotel

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Refinement

Quality

Service

Cuisine

*The Palace Hotel Has Stood for
 All That Is Best and Latest
 In Hotels for Over
 Forty Years*

Little Talks on House Decorating

By Judd Shirley

The Living Room.

Will the 1830 hoopskirt that Fashion is fast rolling in upon us, be followed by the 1830 parlor, now happily replaced in the average home by the cozy and sensible living room? Let us hope not, for, though its forbear was the mediæval great hall of our ancestors, it is the gage of our modern life—human and unifying.

Of course, it is the most difficult problem the decorator has to face, but what of that? The fun of a problem lies in its successful solving. It is a difficult problem because it must be kept neutral and unassertive, and yet express the sum total of the personalities for whom it exists. It must be restful, yet stimulating; be unobtrusive, yet subtly speak of warmth and cheer and peace.

In creating a satisfying living room there are a few necessary essentials. To begin with, it goes without saying that it must have an open fireplace; otherwise it would not be a living but a dead room. And—books, though the house should boast a general library and a study; for favorite books should not be many footsteps away, but close at hand; books, too, are the most sociable, the most friendly things we can have about us; besides, they "furnish," as the phrase goes, as nothing else, short of the fireplace, can; their varied bindings give just the necessary touch of contrasting color combination in the scheme of the room, presumably done in neutral tones.

The bungalow living-room, divided by fireplace.

The furniture should be simple in line and very substantial; the treatment of the walls, and the floor covering, unobtrusive. Elaborately carved furniture and highly decorated wall effects are desirable, even delightful, if appropriately placed, but one tires of the ornate, day-in, day-out; it actually wearies the eyes, and through them, the brain. Besides, and this is not to be lost sight of, the keen enjoyment that beautiful and elaborate furnishings give, is lost through a cloying familiarity; and the living-room of the average American family is lived in—not visited. In the matter of hangings, a departure from the neutral tints employed may be made; they may be gayer in tone with good effect, giving life and snap to the room. If your living-room has that most undesirable exposure for a living room—a northern one—try introducing a note of yellow, by preference, in the curtains. It will flood the room with simulated sunshine, even in fog and rainy weather. Red, a bright red, is too stimulating for a room so constantly occupied; red is a strong nerve-excitant; violet, also, with many highly organized, nervous folk. One of the tests of initiation in certain Oriental religious sects, is flooding the spot where the novice awaits his ordeal with strong, violet light. If not adequately prepared, madness is apt to ensue.

Of course, the treatment of the living-room in a country house occupied but a few weeks at a time, or months, at most, may be radically different from that of the room constantly used; lighter, brighter, gayer, more frivolous in treatment; it can subtly sound the "vacation" note. Painted furniture is exceedingly attractive in a country house, especially if used with unfigured hangings, plain or two-toned; though many like the design of the chintz draperies echoed in the decoration of the furniture.

Care, however, should be exercised in this; it is easy to over-ornament and produce a regular Christmas-tree effect; and while a Christmas-tree is joyous and cheering at Yule-tide, even the most marvelous one would be rather difficult to live with many days at a time. Too much of a good thing is less to be desired than its entire lack. It ceases to have any meaning; it's like the experience of the grocer's small son. The grocer settled the sugar question once and for all with his offspring.

He opened a big, new barrel of it. "Go to it!" he said; "eat all you want." In a little while, son strolled listlessly to the front of the shop. "Ate it all up?" jocosely inquired the grocer. "No," was the reply, "but I've et all that's good." And the question of overdoing a good thing is as true of ornament as of sugar, perhaps truer.

Warum?

TRAVEL EAST IN LUXURY.

Sunset Limited to New Orleans through balmy skies. Thence through historic scenes of days of war, now alive with southern life and industry. The Sunset Limited and its connection at New Orleans with the New York and New Orleans Limited makes an ideal winter trip East. Service the best. Stop-over at points of much interest. For booklets and information apply Washington Sunset Route, 874 Market St., San Francisco, Cal.

Lamps and Fixtures

that harmonize with their surroundings
Made of the new Metal Tapestry,
as softly colored as a fabric.

Indestructible

Especially charming in English chintz
pattern or in Oriental design.

THE PALMER SHOP
1345 Sutter Street

PLEASURE'S WAND

"Obey no wand but Pleasure's."—Tom Moore.

By HENRY McDONALD SPENCER

Orpheum Performers Keep Behind the Footlights This Week

We were all glad the Orpheum recovered from its temporary attack of hoffmania this week and returned to straight vaudeville, at least the performers kept to their own side of the footlights. It is curious how every now and then the czars of the circuit engage high-priced attractions which properly belong in a museum—la Hoffman belonged in a museum of anatomy. Not that I have any small town prejudices against the nearly nude, but that should not be the appeal. Distinctly not. But there is no doubt that the dyed-in-the-wool vaudevillian likes his show undiluted with freaks. However, we are talking about this week's bill, of which Dorothy Jardon is the headliner. Dorothy is an extremely handsome young woman, and that goes both ways, coming and going, for her back is only equalled on the stage by that of the lovely Kitty Gordon, which the press agents tell us is insured for $50,000. In addition to her pulchritude, Miss Jardon is the possessor of a fine voice, which she gives in song freely and gladly, as if she really enjoyed herself, and that spirit gets over to the audience. Her costumes and stage setting show the conscientious producer's touch, and, incidentally, her pianist got a hand on his own account when the fair Dorothy was changing into a new and wonderful gown.

The Passion Play of Washington Square has the most unexpected denouement of any play presented of recent years, and is in every way an acceptable offering. The leading lady, Miss Mary Servoss, is a little cutey, and the performance is only slightly marred by an occasional tendency to middle western accents on the part of some of the performers. The San Franciscan speaks the purest—that is, with the least accent—of any one in America, and his ear is sensitive to the rolling "r" of the prairies—and Southern California. This piece also is well staged, but it would not be fair to give a synopsis of the plot, as so much depends on the element of surprise.

A lady 'cellist, Miss Elsa Ruegger, was given three recalls on Tuesday night, two of which she took. Personally, I think that the 'cello belongs in the orchestra, but the audience evidently thought otherwise, as her number was the most popular single performer's act. George Whiting and Sadie Burt fluttered around the stage agreeably in song and dance and patter stuff, followed by the Herbert Germaine Trio, who do remarkable things on the horizontal bar. Probably there were trick gymnasts to while away the long journey in Noah's ark, but these do not seem to lose their popularity, although there cannot be anything new in that line except the setting. James H. Cullen gives comic songs in a funny, high-pitched voice, and a pair of ventriloquists and a singing trio make up the bill along with the usual movies.

Pantages Has Well Balanced Bill

At Pantages this week there was a fairly well balanced programme from a vaudeville fan's viewpoint. A serious playlet, a musical comedy skit, and a comedy bicycle troupe were the features, interspersed with the usual acts in "one," to give time for changing sets. Gus Elmore and his cannibal maids supplied the musical comedy. This was a rather unusual act, in which a Hebrew of the clothing store type is shipwrecked on an island in the South Seas—at least the scenery would indicate that location. There were plenty of good-looking girls who made numerous quick changes and festooned the stage agreeably, while the principals, Gus Elmore, Miss Ethel Hamlin, Miss Hazel Wood as Rose, a castaway on the island, and Ben Harrison as the Hebrew, told the story.

Umberto Sacchetti, the celebrated grand opera tenor next week at the Orpheum.

The playlet, "The Prodigal Daughter," is of the sob variety, and recited the old story of the obdurate hayseed father who will not forgive his daughter, in spite of the mother's protests, for a "mistake"; the mistake in this instance consisted in having been tricked into a sham marriage. Surely this did not involve very serious moral turpitude on the part of the young lady. The keynote of the play was the reminder by the son that the standard used for men should apply to the wayfarings of a woman, and that a prodigal daughter should be treated with the same leniency as the prodigal son of Scripture. The

Not Gray Hairs but tired Eyes Make us look older than we are. Old age and Dull Eyes—tell-tale.

Don't Tell Your age

After the Movies go home and Murine your Eyes. Two Drops will rest, refresh and cleanse. Have it handy.

Murine Eye Remedy Company, Chicago. Sends Book of the Eye upon request.

characters were well taken and a clean-cut performance given by Jay Hanna as the son, and Frank Earl as the father, while Ethel Martel and Leah Hatch played opposite. Incidentally, however, I would suggest that Mr. Hanna cut that business of pulling a picture from his hip pocket with the speech that he always keeps the picture next to his heart. This is not funny enough to warrant the suggestion conveyed.

A number of stunning girls on bicycles in trick riding and winding up with a really exciting game of basketball on wheels supplied an excellent number. Frank Bush, billed as the world's greatest story teller, has the genuine comedy touch, and his method is so simple and natural that it suggests a high degree of art. Rice and Newton, a fresh looking young flapper, and her partner—I don't know which is Rice and which is Newton—gave a smooth act of song and dance, although they should get some new gags.; Grace McCormack, a violinist, and the Steiner trio on the horizontal bars, completed the show, aside from the movie serial which has a different episode each performance.

* * *

Close of the First Set of Monday Musicales.

The unusually popular Monday Musicales at the St. Francis Hotel closed their series, this week, with the offerings of three finished musicians, Mme. Betty Drews, Madame Aeglewicz-Bem and Georges Mascal, three of the prime favorites of the series of six concerts. Mascal's voice was in unusually fine form in Goublier's "Les Semailles," which had to be repeated on enthusiastic encores. He proved even more successful with Saint-Saens aria from "Henry VIII." when he was called back on three encores and was urged to attempt a fourth. Mme. Bem repeated her success of a few weeks ago, and in the Wieniawski "Concerto" in D minor emphasized her sterling position as an unusual artist gifted with excellent technique. The "lieder" songs offered by Mme. Betty Drews continued a rare delight for the crowded audience. In exquisite mood she rendered Schubert's "Du Bist die Ruh," Cornelius "Kom wie Wandelin," and several songs from Strauss. Mrs. Robert M. Hughes acted as accompanist. A suggestion has been made that the musicales be resumed later this month during the Lenten season.

* * *

ADVANCE ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Big Stars in Vaudeville at Orpheum Next Week.—Ivan Bankoff and Lola Girlie, who are among the most successful modern classic dancers and are responsible for many new terpsichorean ideas, will introduce Mr. Bankoff's own conception of classic, Russian and cake walk dancing. Bankoff is a Russian; Miss Girlie an American. Umberto Sacchetti, the celebrated grand opera tenor who has been successfully associated with the Metropolitan and Boston Grand Opera Companies, will make his first appearance in this city in vaudeville. Julie Ring, who is closely following in the footsteps of her sister, Blanche Ring, will present a playlet written for her by John B. Hymer, entitled "Twice a Week," in which she has scored a great hit. The Mirano Brothers, who style themselves "The Flying Torpedoes," will appear in their feats of daring. Their apparatus is constructed to resemble the famous Eiffel Tower; their perch is its apex. Lillian Fitzgerald, an unusually clever, captivating and versatile comedienne, and Henry I. Marshall, a successful composer of popular songs, contribute a most enjoyable act. The eleventh installment of the famous Uncle Sam at Work Motion Picture, entitled "To Arms," will be shown. "The Passion Play of Washington Square," interpreted by Mary Servoss and company, and George Whiting and Sadie Burt will conclude their engagements with this program. The gifted young prima donna, Dorothy Jardon, will also be heard in new songs.

* * *

Programme of Ninth Symphony Concert.—The San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, Alfred Hertz conductor, will give the ninth Sunday concert of the current season at the Cort Theatre to-morrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock sharp. The program, one of the best given this season, is exactly the same as given Friday afternoon at prices ranging from 75 cents to $2. The patrons of Sunday's concert will hear the concert at exactly one-half the prices asked for the Friday concert—50 cents, 75 cents, $1. Seats will be on sale at the Cort Theatre box office after 10 a. m. Sunday. The program for the ninth pair of concerts, which will be given Friday afternoon, March 24th, and Sunday afternoon, March 26th, embraces the Symphony No. 13, G major of Haydn; "The Pied Piper," Symphonic Poem of Frederic Jacobi (first performance anywhere); and the Symphony No. 7, C major of F. Schubert. The attention of the public is called to the fact that program books containing the program notes and music themes of the works to be performed, will be ready for distribution by Thursday of next week at the box offices at Sherman, Clay & Company and Kohler & Chase. These program books are the same as those distributed at the concerts of the orchestra, and are written by Philip Hale and Felix Borowski, writers of great literary and musical ability. Tickets will be on sale Monday at the box offices of Sherman, Clay & Co. and Kohler & Chase. The prices for Friday are $2, $1.50, $1, 75c., with $3 for box and loge seats. The prices for Sunday are $1, $75c., 50c., with $1.50 for box and loge seats.

* * *

Miss Charlotte Ibscher, pianist, who will take part in the thirty-fifth recital of the Beringer Musical Club next week at Century Club Hall.

* * *

Big Show at Pantages.—Grace Cameron, the vivacious singing comedienne, Norine Carmen's minstrels, and Bett's Seals, are a trio of strong attractions which will top the new eight-act show opening at the Pantages next Sunday. Besides these three headliners there will be several other splendid features, including the next to last episode of "The Red Circle." Grace Cameron is one of the recognized musical comedy stars of latter day spectacular productions. She is a bundle of magnetic vivacity, and sings her character ballads with a recklessness that fairly sweep an audience into a tumult of applause. In Norine Carmen's minstrels there is dainty Miss Carmen as the lone female in a gathering of six stalwart singers of old-time melodies and plantation dancers. The sextette, with Miss Carmen as the winsome interlocutor, have been a big hit over the circuit. Bett's seals are put through a novelty routine which their trainer styles "A Happy Family." In addition to the wonderful tricks performed by the slippery denizens of the seas there are a number of trained roosters, a bear and a couple of mischievous monkeys. Andy Lewis, who was last seen here as the star in "The Queen of Sheba," has another splendid character part in his own sketch, "The Duke." Lewis is assisted by Vera George and Jack Martin. Other good numbers will be presented by Ruth and Kittie Henry, two dainty maids; the Flying Howards, daring gymnasts; Francis and Keating, and the thirteenth installment of "The Red Circle."

PERSONIFIED FLOWERS BLOOM RAD

Striking Costumes of Leading Society People Who Took Prominent

No. 18. Group of the Lotus Queen and her court of flowers: Left to right (upper row) Kenneth Moore, a Yellow Jacket; Walter Heine von Schroder, an Ant; George Bowles, a Grasshopper; Dean Witter, a Beetle. From left to right (lower row) are: Miss Gertrude Mrs. Charles Templeton Crocker, Queen of the Lotus; Stanford Gwin, King of the Dragon Fly; Miss Marion Newhall, Daisy; Mrs. Arthur Parrot. 6. Mrs. Templeton Crocker (Queen), a Lotus Flower. 7. Mr. Stanford Gwin (King), a Dragon Fly. 8. Mrs. George Cameron, a Marguerite. 13. James Paramor, Turkish Pasha. 14. Ashfield Stow, Clown. 15. Harold Ward Law (2d prize), Billie. 20. Mrs. Gus Taylor, Skating Costume. 21. Mr. W. W. Hamilton, Pierrot. 22. Mrs. Lawrence Irving Scott, Springtime. 23. Mrs. Lat in the Delightful Mask Ball Given for Charity at the Palace Hotel

Yellow Jacket; Miss Barbara Eubanks, the Lotus Dancer; Nion Tucker, Grasshopper; Fred Tillmann, an Ant; Robin Hayne, a Beetle; Mrs. Samuel Hopkins, the Larkspur; Mrs. Rudolph Schilling, the Bluebell; Mrs. Cheever Cowdin, the Rambler Rose; Mrs. Talbot Walker, the Nasturtium; Miss Marion Zeile, the Jonquil; Edgar Walter, the Gardener. The pages (2d prize), Butterfly. 3. Mrs. Frank Judge, Green Parrott. 4. Mrs. Walter S. Martin, a Green Parrot. 5. Mrs. Daniel C. Jackling, a Green Parrot. 9. Mrs. Frederick Kohl, a Cherry. 10. Wakefield Baker, Pierrot. 11. Miss Einnim McNear, Lady of the 1830 Period. 12. Miss E. 16. Mr. Harry McAfee, A Futurist. 17. Mrs. Harry McAfee, A Futurist. 19. Mrs. Fred McNear, Oriental Dancing Girl. 24. Mrs. H. C. Breeden, an East Indian Princess. 25. Mrs. M. J. Pollok, Vanity.

Beringer Musical Club Concert.—The Beringer Musical Club, under the direction of Professor and Mme. Joseph Beringer, has issued invitations for its thirty-fifth piano and vocal recital to be given Thursday evening, March 16th, at Century Club Hall, corner Franklin and Sutter streets. An excellent program, including piano compositions by Beethoven, Rubinstein, Chopin, Mendelssohn and Liszt, varied with well chosen vocal numbers of the best composers, will be presented. Miss Charlotte Ibscher of Santa Clara will make her debut with the club as a pianiste. Others on the program will be: Miss Anna Dabelich, Miss Emily Muller, Miss Eleanor Alberti, Miss Louise Cameron, Helen McKinlay, Miss Myrtle Dow, Miss Monica Heffeman, Miss Flora Flynn and Miss Genevieve Holmberg. Joseph Beringer will, as usual preside at the piano.

* * *

Alice Gentle to Sing at People's Philharmonic Concert.—The People's Philharmonic Orchestra with Nikolia Sokoloff as conductor, will render one of its best programs at Dreamland Rink, this Saturday, March 11th, at 8:30 p. m. Alice Gentle, dramatic soprano, will be the soloist of the occasion.

Here, There and Personally

Governor Whitman repeated in Albany, N. Y., recently, his belief that Justice Charles E. Hughes would be the strongest Republican candidate for President, and denied at the same time that he had been active in promoting the Hughes candidacy or had been associated with Frank H. Hitchcock in the interest of any presidential aspirant.

* * *

About two-thirds of the members of the present Congress have received college or legal education. To be more specific, 68 per cent of the members of the Senate have been to a college or a law school, and 62 per cent of the members of the House have had this training.

* * *

Mr. Schwab's proud boast that his Bethlehem plant was already 50 per cent larger than the celebrated Krupp works in Germany may relieve the fears of the timid, but Mr. Schwab's plant is not a place where munitions alone are manufactured.

* * *

Speaker Clark issued a statement at Washington recently characterizing as nonsense talk of ousting Representative Kitchin from the House majority leadership because of his opposition to the preparedness program and other administration plans. He said he expected to leave the speaker's chair whenever he felt it necessary to oppose or support any measure, but would do so without any intent to supplant Representative Kitchin or any other committee chairman or leader.

* * *

Mr. Garrison is said to have tendered his resignation four times in less than three years, and it must be true that he was not the easiest man to get on with. The stories now being told about his insistence on his own views remind one of Secretary Edwin M. Stanton in Civil War days. President Lincoln halfhumorously tolerated Stanton as if he were the real government of the United States, while the president was merely a figure-head. It will not be easy to find a first class successor to Mr. Garrison at this time. Perhaps President Wilson's best move would be to transfer Franklin K. Lane from the interior department to the war department.

* * *

Income tax was first imposed in England by Pitt, as a war tax, in 1799. It was a temporary imposition, and was graduated on all incomes from $250 to $1,000 a year, with a tax of 10 per cent on all incomes over $1,000. Addington reimposed the tax when the war with France broke out in 1803, and the rate was fixed at 5 per cent on incomes of $750 a year and over. On his return to power in 1803, Pitt continued the tax, and it was gradually increased until 1815, when it was abrogated. Peel revived it, however, for purely fiscal reasons in 1842, and although his original intention was to impose it only for three years, it has continued ever since.

Pantages' Theatre

Market Street Opposite Mason

Commencing Sunday matinee, March 12th.

EXTRAORDINARY VAUDEVILLE

GRACE CAMERON, offering her own original song characterizations. NORINE CARMEN'S MINSTRELS, "The Acme of Minstrelsy." BETT'S SEALS, "A Happy Family." "ANDY LEWIS & CO., "The Duke." Next to concluding episode of "The Red Circle."

Orpheum

O'Farrell Street

Bet. Stockton and Powell

Phone Douglas 70

Week beginning THIS SUNDAY AFTERNOON. MATINEE EVERY DAY.

BIG STARS IN VAUDEVILLE

IVAN BANKOFF & LOLA GIRLIE in Classic, Russian and Cake Walk Dances; UMBERTO SACCHETTI Formerly Tenor of the Metropolitan and Boston Opera Companies; JULIE RING & CO, assisted by James Norval in John B. Hymer's Oddity "Twice A Week;" MIRANO BROTHERS in Sensational Feats of Daring; LILLIAN FITZGERALD Comedienne and HENRY L. MARSHALL Composer: "THE PASSION PLAY OF WASHINGTON SQUARE" with Mary Scryss and Company; GEORGE WHITING & SADIE BURT "Song-sayings;" "TO ARMS" Eleventh installment of the famous Uncle Sam at Work Motion Picture. Last Week The Beautiful Broadway Star DOROTHY JARDON New Character Songs.

Evening Prices, 10c., 25c., 50c., 75c. Matinee Prices (except Sun- except Sundays and holidays), 10c., 25c., 50c. Phone Douglas 70.

S. F. Symphony Orchestra

ALFRED HERTZ CONDUCTOR

NINTH SUNDAY CONCERT CORT-TO-MORROW 2:30 P. M.

NINTH PAIR OF SYMPHONY CONCERTS CORT THEATRE

Friday Afternoon, March 11, 3 P. M., Sunday Afternoon, March 26, 2:30 P. M. Program: Symphony No. 13, G major, Haydn; "The Pied Piper," Symphonie Poem, Frederic Jacobi, (First Performance Anywhere); Symphony No. 7, C major, F. Schubert.

PRICES: Friday, $2, $1.50, $1, 75c; box and loge seats $3; Sunday, $1, 75c, 50c; box and loge seats, $1.50. Tickets on sale Monday at Sherman, Clay and Kohler & Chase.

Dreamland Rink

SATURDAY, MARCH 11, 8:30 P. M.

THE PEOPLE'S PHILHARMONIC ORCHESTRA (NIKOLIA SOKOLOFF, Conductor)

Soloist: ALICE GENTLE, Dramatic Soprano.

How Many Seconds to Your Telephone?

How long does it take you to answer your telephone bell?

Our records show thirty seconds as the average time consumed from the time you place a call to the time it is answered by the party called, and that most of this time is necessary in getting a response after the bell has been rung.

The Telephone Operator has no authority to compel an answer to her summons. She simply forwards to your telephone a mechanical signal, which interpreted, means, "Some one desires to speak with you." It remains with you, the person called, to recognize this request by responding promptly.

Remember—delay on your part means the inconvenience of another.

THE PACIFIC TELEPHONE AND TELEGRAPH COMPANY

W. D. Fennimore A. R. Fennimore
 J. W. Davis

California Optical Co.
 Makers of Good Glasses

181 Post Street } San Francisco
 2508 Mission St. }
 1221 Broadway, Oakland

WHAT WOULD YOU GIVE TO BE YOUNG AGAIN?

Of course, you can never be younger, but your eyes can be made to serve you as they did in the days which have gone forever. A new lens has been invented which corrects the sight for both far and near seeing, thus rendering double service for the reason that only one pair of glasses is necessary. They are entirely free from distortion—an advantage not to be had with any other kind of bifocals. The name of this marvelous lens is "Caltex."

MISS HARKER'S SCHOOL
 PALO ALTO, CALIFORNIA

*Boarding and Day School for Girls,
 College Preparatory,
 Grammar and Primary Departments.*

Special Care Given to Younger Children.

HITCHCOCK MILITARY ACADEMY

Located one mile from San Rafael in the healthiest part of beautiful Marin County. School fully accredited. Highest rank accorded by U. S. War Dept. High morals and strict attention demanded. Special attention to Physical Culture and Athletics. Expert and experienced instructors. Separate room for each pupil. Juniors in separate building. Write for catalog.

ADDRESS
President Hitchcock Military Academy
 SAN RAFAEL, CALIFORNIA

The Beringer Conservatory of Music
 926 Pierce Street, near McAllister
 PHONE FILLMORE 840 SAN FRANCISCO

Directors: Joseph Beringer (Concert Pianist)
 Mme. Jos. Beringer (Concert Contralto)

Thorough education in Pianoforte Playing and Singing. Special departments for beginners, amateurs and professionals. Pupils prepared for the operatic and concert stage. Opportunities given to advanced piano and vocal students to join the well known Beringer Musical Club for public appearances.

MISS HAMLIN'S SCHOOL FOR GIRLS

2230 PACIFIC AVENUE
 2117 } BROADWAY SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
 2123 }

Boarding and Day Pupils. "Accredited" by all accrediting institutions, both in California and in Eastern States.

TELEPHONE WEST 546

A. W. BEST ALICE BEST

BEST'S ART SCHOOL
 1625 CALIFORNIA STREET

Life Classes Illustrating
 Day and Night Sketching
 Painting

SPORTS AND PASTIMES

BY OUTSIDER

"Outsiders see most of the game."—Old Saw.

Beagle Hunting and the Parochial Press

There is a story told of a Sussex villager who saw a stranger passing through the parish.
 " 'Oo's that, Bill?' said the chawbacon.
 " 'E's a stranger,' replied Bill.
 " 'Eave 'arf a brick at 'im.'
 Being apropos of the attitude of our parochial press towards anything new to it, especially in the way of sport.

When polo first was introduced here, there was an impression fostered by the papers, and accepted by the public, that the game was a sort of tiddledewinks played on rocking horses. Tom Corbett, brother of Jim, and himself a poolroom proprietor, was induced by a sporting editor to attend the "dude" game. (Dude was the great word of reproach in those days). So impressed, however, was the doughty bookmaker with the skill, resource and daring displayed by the poloists, that he brought down a carload of his hard-bitten sporting friends to the next event. Similarly, wrist watches worn by men are regarded as tokens of effeminacy; whereas they were used first by English shooting men, subsequently by horsemen, in timing trials, and now universally by officers and by many of the men in all of the warring armies. Take the list: shooting men, horsemen, soldiers—what names are there more nearly synonymous of red-blooded virility?

Just now the shafts of box-factory wit and rubber stamp ridicule are being hurled at the sport of beagle hunting, introduced on the peninsula by Mrs. Fred Kohl, and being followed by the polo players, golfers and others of the country club set. To be sure, heaving verbal bricks at anything new and "smart" is the obvious thing to do, and therefore it is to be expected of obvious minds; furthermore, it appeals to a proletariat whose chief sport consists in watching the epileptic antics of Charlie Chaplin. The proletariat, as the word implies, is the majority—the root is the same as in prolific—and therefore to be pandered to by a venal press. It might be remarked, however, that even here the world is changing, and the parish pump views are getting to be old stuff. By the way, it would be interesting to see what would happen to some of the paragraphers if they tried to keep up with the huntsman of a "cry" of beagles.

* * *

Polo at Hillsborough

With the ring of the polo players' mallets on the turf of El Cerrito field and the baying of the beagles in the nearby foothills, Hillsborough came into its own last Sunday, and made a brave showing of smartly garbed men and women. The polo match was between San Mateo and Del Monte, and was won by the latter with a score of 6 to 5³/₄. This was a return match for the one played at Del Monte three weeks ago, which was won by Del Monte. The personnel of the teams, with the exception of Reese Howell of the Army, who substituted for George Parsons on the visiting side, was the same.

Society was out en masse to welcome the return of polo, which has languished this year hitherto, and although the game had to share honors with the beagle hunt, yet the clubhouse verandas were well filled. The gay crowd accepted the game nonchalantly, until the match evened up, and the club four was striving for a goal to put it in the lead.

The match was fast and exciting, in spite of the slow field, which had been softened by the rains. Del Monte, with only two mounts to a man, played a plucky game. With the lead seesawing from one side to the other, it was anybody's until the call of time.

San Mateo started with a spurt and two goals by Hobart and

ARRILLAGA MUSICAL COLLEGE
 SAN FRANCISCO

MUSIC IN ALL ITS BRANCHES
 Sight Reading, Ear Training, Theory,
 Musical Form, Appreciation

TERMS ON REQUEST—CATALOG

2315 JACKSON STREET PHONE WEST 4737

one by Tevis on a beautiful backhander gave the local team a lead of three goals. Del Monte braced, and tried team work instead of personal polo. Brown, Hastings and Howell scored, making honors even at the beginning of the fourth.

The lead then passed from one side to the other, Hayne scoring with a drive for San Mateo, Hastings poking one over from the ruck for the visitors, San Mateo tackling again on Hobart's midfield drive, and Del Monte evening when McNally rode over a clean pass from Howell.

The score 5 to 5 the teams fought in the sixth, without a score. Early in the seventh, San Mateo broke into the lead, when Tevis pulled one out of a jump in front of the goal posts. Del Monte quickly evened, when the team tooted the ball up to Brown, who scored.

Here Del Monte put up a strong tack, and, to stem a rush toward his goal, Hobart was forced to safety. The loss of one-quarter point cost San Mateo the game. Splivalo, Tevis, Hayne and Hobart made a desperate effort to get over a deciding tally, but Del Monte kept the play near the boards and did not allow their goal to be once threatened.

Teams and Score

Del Monte—No. 1, Lieut. Reese Howell, 1 goal; No. 2, Capt. R. E. McNally, 1 goal; No. 3, Lieut. Louis Brown, 2 goals; Back, Harry Hastings, 2 goals. Score, 6 goals.

San Mateo—No. 1, R. B. Splivalo, 0 goal; No. 2, Will Tevis, Jr., 2 goals; No. 3, Robin Hayne, 1 goal; Back, Walter Hobart, 3 goals. Goals, 6. Penalty for safety, 1/4. Score 5 3/4. Referee T. A. Driscoll. Player at El Cerrito field. Ground slow.

* * *

The request of the Western Golf Association that the California Golf Association withdrew the invitation, which was accepted by the former, of a special train to transport intending participants to the Del Monte tournament is, mildly speaking, in wretched taste. I wonder if the W. G. A. realizes that there are certain things which aren't done, and that even if they have made a break, it is up to them to see it through.

Hit by an Explosive Fake

Local curio experts are still guffawing over the clever way in which a wily Chinese put over that capital "curio" fake on the Examiner. The method was as shrewdly heathen as anything attempted by the guileless Ah Sin of Bret Harte fame. Recently that enthusiastic purveyor of near-facts, the Examiner, published a two-column illustrated article describing in detail a "Morgan twin vase on exhibition here in a Chinese curio shop, price $50,000." "Easy Money" Morgan was credited by the paper with paying $28,000 for a 7 inch copy of this famous original. At this rate of lineal measure in rare antiques, Morgan had a chance to buy the local curio for $124,000. The Chinese merchant was readily willing to let the famous treasure go for a song. Real genuine ecstatic guff was splashed all over the two columns' description of the "plum blossoms and gay colored birds that lived in a blue-black glaze, now unfortunately a lost art." The Examiner will be pained to learn that the "artists who have enthusiastically studied this exquisite piece of art craftsmanship of any age," have come out of their ravings. However they still froth at the mouth when any one mentions to them "the gems of ceramic art that adorned the reign of Kung Hsi."

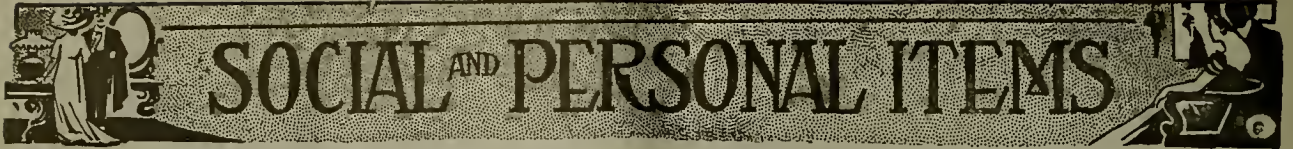

Naturally the local curio experts of the city were eager to view this $50,000 gem of the reign of Kung Hsi. They reverentially tiptoed into the shop, took one glance at the gem of ancient China, burst into guffaws, and fled. The fake was as mildewed as that of the famous amber necklace of Napoleon. Wong Sun, the curio dealer, is the only one connected with the fake that remains childlike and bland. He heap no savee newspaper man.

—One evening, in the cardroom of a certain club, a man was caught cheating and exposed before the whole company, whereupon the indignant members rose in a body and kicked him from the top of the stairs to the bottom. Rising painfully, and full of wrath, he hobbled away to the residence of the president of the club, and there complained of the treatment he had received. "What would you do in my place?" he asked. "Well," said the president, "I should play on the ground floor in future—it's safer."—Ex.

When the Ice-Skating Craze Reaches San Francisco

As Projected by A. S. MacLeod

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL ITEMS

ENGAGEMENTS

McCORKLE-DAVIDSON.—Mrs. James H. McCorkle, 47 Alvarado road, announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Claire Louise McCorkle, to Edmund Gerald G. Davidson of South Africa. Miss McCorkle recently entertained fifteen of her intimate friends at a charming luncheon. Davidson is a mining engineer in South Africa.

WEDDING ANNOUNCEMENTS.

BLOCK-CARPENTER.—Miss Metha Block has set March 25th as the date of her marriage to Louis Grant Carpenter. It will take place in the evening, and will be witnessed only by members of the immediate families. The bride will be attended by her sister, Mrs. George Pressley, as matron of honor. After their honeymoon the bride and bridegroom will make their home in Hollywood.

DINNERS.

BREEDEN.—Mr. and Mrs. Henry Clarence Breeden gave a handsome dinner party at their home on Saturday night.

CROCKER.—One of the largest dinners of the evening was that at which Mr. and Mrs. Charles Templeton Crocker were hosts Tuesday evening. It took place at the Palace Hotel.

CROCKER.—Mr. and Mrs. William H. Crocker were hosts at dinner Saturday evening when they entertained at the Palace Hotel.

DIBBLEE.—Mr. and Mrs. Albert J. Dibblee were dinner hosts at the Palace Hotel on Tuesday evening.

GRANT.—Miss Edith Grant entertained a number of her young friends recently at a dinner which she gave at the home on Broadway of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Grant.

HAVENS.—One of the pleasurable affairs of Saturday evening was the dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Wickham Havens, who brought a party of friends from Piedmont to take part in the dinner dance at the Palace Hotel.

JUDGE.—A dinner at their home on Pacific avenue was given Sunday evening for a group of friends of Mr. and Mrs. J. Frank Judge.

MARTIN.—Madame Melba was the honored guest at a dinner given Monday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Martin, the affair taking place at their home in Burlingame.

McBEAN.—Mr. and Mrs. Atholl McBean entertained a number of friends Tuesday evening at a dinner which they gave at their home in Washington street preceding the Mardi Gras ball.

McCORMICK.—Mr. and Mrs. E. O. McCormick presided at an informal dinner Saturday evening at their home on Broadway, when they entertained Mr. and Mrs. Willis Walker of Minneapolis, Miss Laura McKinstry and Robert Henderson.

MICHELIS.—Mr. and Mrs. Leopold Michels will entertain two score of guests at an elaborate dinner to be given this evening in the Italian room of the St. Francis.

O'BRIEN.—Mr. and Mrs. Edward O'Brien, of Canada, gave an elaborate dinner at the Palace Hotel, and afterwards entertained their guests in their box at the Mardi Gras ball.

PHELAN.—The Russian Ambassador and Mrs. George Bakmeteff were the honored guests at a dinner given last week by Senator James D. Phelan at his home in Washington, D. C. Miss Mary Phelan assisted in receiving the guests.

PILLSBURY.—Mr. and Mrs. Horace Davis Pillsbury entertained at dinner Thursday evening at their home on Pacific avenue.

SPRECKELS.—Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Spreckels gave an elaborate dinner Tuesday evening at their home on Pacific avenue. Mr. and Mrs. Spreckels later entertained their guests in their box at the Mardi Gras.

SPOULE.—Mr. and Mrs. William Sproule entertained some friends at a dinner at their home recently in honor of Archbishop Edward J. Hanna.

LUNCHEONS.

BEAN.—Mrs. Barton Bean was hostess Wednesday at a luncheon given at her home in Chestnut street in honor of Mrs. Charles Peter Weeks.

KIERSTED.—Mr. and Mrs. Henry Kiersted were among the hosts at luncheon Sunday at the Burlingame Country Club, where they entertained half a dozen guests.

MICHELIS.—A farewell luncheon was given for Raphael Weil Saturday afternoon by Mr. and Mrs. Leopold Michels at the St. Francis Hotel. The guest of honor will leave the 10th of this month for Europe.

TEAS.

CLIFTON.—Mrs. Horace Bradford Clifton was hostess at a tea given at her home Sunday for Miss Madge Wilson and Miss Helen Johnson.

COLEMAN.—Miss Janet Coleman was hostess at tea Saturday afternoon at the Palace Hotel.

COOK.—Mrs. William Hoff Cook has issued invitations for a tea at which she will entertain on the afternoon of March 23d at her home on Commonwealth avenue.

ELLIS.—Captain and Mrs. Rowland Ellis were hosts at tea Sunday afternoon in their home at Alcatraz, when they entertained in honor of Mrs. Leila Ellis. The affair was in the nature of a farewell, as Mrs. Ellis is leaving in the near future for her home in New York.

HENSHAW.—Mrs. Tyler Henshaw gave a tea recently at her home in Oakland for Mrs. William G. Henshaw and Mrs. Alla Henshaw Chickering, which was attended by a number from this side of the bay.

LEONORE.—A charming tea party, given as one of the series in aid of the Belgian relief fund, was held one day last week at the home of Misses Elvira, Leonore and Coralie Mejia on Vallejo street.

MUSTO.—Mrs. Guido Musto will give a tea on March 17th in honor of Mrs. Harry Rice Bostwick, who is leaving soon for the Orient.

RECEPTIONS.

GRANT.—Mrs. Joseph D. Grant presented her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Douglas Grant, to her many friends on Tuesday afternoon at a large and handsome reception at the Grant home.

DINNER DANCES.

FARQUHARSON.—One of the pleasurable events of Monday evening was the dinner dance given at the Palace Hotel by Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Farquharson.

ARRIVALS.

WELLS.—Buckley Wells has arrived from New York and contemplates spending the next two weeks here. He is a guest at the Hotel St. Francis.

DEPARTURES.

CROCKER.—Mrs. William H. Crocker was suddenly called East by the illness of her daughter, Miss Helen, who has the measles. Mrs. Crocker left on Tuesday afternoon for New York, to be away indefinitely.

DE GUIGNE.—Christian de Gulgne, Sr., left a few days ago for France. His son, Christian de Gulgne, Jr., went to New York to see him off.

HULEN.—Dr. and Mrs. Vard H. Hulen left Saturday evening for a trip to Texas and St. Louis. They plan to be away about a month.

LEWIS.—Mr. and Mrs. De Lancy Lewis have gone to New York, where they expect to remain a month or so.

McNEAR.—Mr. and Mrs. George W. McNear, Miss Elnim McNear and Miss Marion Baker left Thursday for Santa Barbara. Mr. and Mrs. McNear will take their motor with them, and will enjoy a month's tour of the South.

RAND.—Major and Mrs. I. W. Rand, social favorites at the Presidio, sailed Monday on the transport Sherman for Honolulu. They will be accompanied by Mrs. Rand's sister, Miss Grace Wedckind.

INTIMATIONS.

BOURN.—Mr. and Mrs. William Bowers Bourn will leave next month for London, where they will visit their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Rose Vinecut.

BROOKE.—Mrs. Reginald Brooke and Mrs. Allan Messer spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Henry T. Scott at Burlingame.

FILER.—Mr. and Mrs. Walter Filer have taken the George Armsby house in Burlingame. Mr. and Mrs. Filer and their attractive little daughter, Lawton, have been spending the winter at Stanford Court.

GOVE.—Rear Admiral Charles Gove, U. S. N., and Mrs. Gove, will leave shortly for Coronado, where they will join Rear Admiral William F. Fullam, U. S. N., Mrs. Fullam and Miss Rhoda Fullam. They expect to be at the southern port for the next two months.

HAMMON.—Mr. and Mrs. Wendell B. Hammon, who have been in Honolulu for several weeks, have returned to their home on Washington street.

HATHAWAY.—Mrs. Hathaway and her daughter, Miss Marle Hathaway, will leave during the first week of May for their attractive country seat near Pebble Beach Lodge, and William Hathaway will join them over the week ends.

HERBERT.—Sir Francis and Lady Herbert are spending the month at Del Monte. They entertained Dr. and Mrs. David Starr Jordan as their guests for the recent week-end.

HEARST.—Mrs. Phoebe A. Hearst, accompanied by two of her grandchildren, William Randolph, Jr., and John Randolph Hearst, arrived last Friday from New York, and left Saturday for the Hacienda at Pleasanton.

HENDERSON.—Mr. and Mrs. Robert Henderson, who spent the winter and spring at Pomona, have taken a house at Menlo Park for the summer. Mrs. Henderson will come north the first of April to take possession of the home. Mr. Henderson has already preceded her.

MARTIN.—Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Martin, who had planned to accompany Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Jackling to South America, have reluctantly given up the trip, owing to business necessity that will oblige Mr. Martin to be here.

THE HOTEL PLAZA

overlooking the beautiful Plaza of Union Square, the Hotel of refinement and service, is offering special rates to permanent guests.

Hotel Plaza Company

McCORMICK.—Mr. and Mrs. Charles McCormick have taken a house in Menlo Park for the summer. They will close their house in town and move down the peninsula about the first of April.

MEYERFELD.—Mrs. Morris Meyerfeld, who is recuperating from an injury that fractured a bone in her foot, is leaving shortly for Coronado. Her daughter, Mrs. Leon Roos, will accompany her to Del Monte and later on may join her mother in the South.

MOORE.—Mrs. Charles C. Moore is spending a fortnight at Paso Robles, resting up from a strenuous winter.

MORBIO.—Mrs. P. A. Morbio, Miss Marguerite Morbio and Miss Morbio, are leaving on April 15th for Paris. Shortly after their arrival Miss Marguerite Morbio and the Count Anselmo de Chalon-Praisson will be married.

NEWHALL.—Mr. and Mrs. William Mayo Newhall, Jr., will not return to their ranch at Santa Barbara, as they expected to do when they came north a few weeks ago. Instead, they have taken an apartment in town, and will be here the balance of the spring and well into the summer.

PALMER.—Mrs. Silas Palmer has returned to her home in Van Ness avenue after a stay of several weeks in Southern California.

PERRY.—Mrs. Frederick Perry has decided to go to Honolulu. She will accompany her son, Lieutenant William Jewett, U. S. A., when he sails for the islands April 5th.

SEARS.—The friends of Miss Eleanor Sears are looking forward with great pleasure to her arrival here within the next two weeks.

SHIPP.—Lieutenant Earl Shipp is expected to arrive in, a few days from San Diego, his ship, the Annapolis, having been ordered north. He will join Mrs. Shipp and their little daughter, Betty Shipp, in their apartment at Vallejo street and Van Ness avenue.

STOTT.—Mrs. Relda Ford Stott has returned from San Mateo, where she has been the house guest of Mrs. Christian de Guigne.

STRUKLER.—Miss Katherine Strukler is visiting Miss Katherine Meigs at her home in Coronado.

WEBB.—Mrs. Seward Webb of New York is visiting her relatives, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Vanderbilt, at Santa Barbara.

WELLER.—Mrs. Charles Weller is enjoying a visit of several weeks as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Seymour at their ranch near Santa

THE LIMIT OF DEVOTION.

Dear Heart, I'll dance with you all night,
From eight to—any hour you please,
But this I swear with all my might,
I will not go to Dancing Teas!

To trip with you is pure delight,
You float like milkweed on the breeze,
But though I love to trot, all right,
I will not go to Dancing Teas!

Pale, slender youths whose brains are slight
Can trot all afternoon with ease,
But I don't class with them—not quite.
I will not go to Dancing Teas!

At night-time, when the lights are bright,
I'll one-step till I strain my knees;
By day, I've too much work in sight,
I will not go to Dancing Teas!

—Berton Braley in Harper's Magazine.

—At a dinner given to Mr. Henry Eickhoff at Techau Tavern, Saturday, March 4th, the following guests were present: Messrs. Isaac Frohman, F. S. Brittain, M. J. Kast, N. H. Frank, E. F. Delger, A. M. Bender, Adolph Koshland, Rudolph Mohr, E. C. Priber, Dr. Max Magnus and Max Kuhl, former Commissioner of Police. The Techau Tavern Ice Palace will be opened in the near future at the corner of Eddy and Jones streets. Ice dramas of the high class staged at the Hippodrome in New York will be presented by a large corps of expert skaters especially engaged in the East. There will be ample room for the public to enjoy this exhilarating sport, the ice surface being 115 by 115 feet. Lessons will be given to the public, and ample accommodation will be provided for spectators.

—"Excuse me, sir," said the panhandler, shuffling up to Dubbleigh's side, "but you couldn't let me have $15, could you?" "Fifteen dollars?" echoed Dubbleigh. "Great Scott, man, do you for one moment suppose I'd be foolish enough to give you $15?" "No, Chief—I didn't," said the panhandler, "but I sort of hoped you'd regard it as a kind of personal assessment and swear off fourteen ninety, leaving me with a dime to the good!" He got it.—Chicago Herald.

—Oswald—My love for you is like the deep blue sea. Clarissa (for such was her name)—And I take it with the corresponding amount of salt.—University of Michigan Gargoyle.

PROPOSED CONTINENTAL ARMY NOT PRACTICABLE.

Until recently, national defense was officially but an "academic question." It was a sort of "mental exercise." The administration and the War Department would have liked to see the Plattsburg idea pass away without funeral or mourners. And similarly the word was sent out that there should be no agitation for preparedness "until later." Unfortunately, the Secretary of War's dictum came by word of mouth only. Had it been over his signature, he might no longer remain in office. The horrors of Belgium unprepared meant nothing. In Washington there was then as much interest in national defense as you would have in the intestinal peculiarities of a humming bird—no more. But with the political ear close to the ground, the murmur of the crowd was heard. Politics demanded action. Something had to be done, if only a makeshift—hence the continental army. The sudden endeavor of the administration to advocate preparedness should be supported. But fake stuff must be torn to bits.

The continental army is a mathematical impossibility. The three annual contingents supposed to be raised in three successive years, amounting yearly to 133,000 men, cannot be enrolled under a voluntary system of enlistment. Records show that in time of peace it is impossible to enlist a regular army containing a mobile force greater than 140,000 men. Such is our patriotism in cold figures.

Six months' training is not sufficient to make a thorough soldier. This is demonstrated plainly in Japan and Germany. Both nations require two years' training. If they could develop a well trained and disciplined soldier in one year they certainly would not insist upon two. Then, too, look again at the example England is furnishing at this minute. In spite of a terrific demand for men, she has not permitted a single soldier to cross into France until after ten full months of intensive training, right during the progress of war.

This bill is fatally defective in that it prescribes the six months' training to be spread over three years, or two months' training each year. Employers cannot, with justice to their business, release men for such an extended period of time. Men joining the continental army would be working for the government for two months and spend the other ten months looking for a job.—Henry Reuterdahl in the February Metropolitan.

THE RETURN OF THE TAILORED WAIST.

Womankind takes a lesson from man every now and then in the matter of dress, and proof of this is the tailored waist. The season's newest are the concrete expression of trig simplicity. White linen in one is frilled on turn-over collar and turn-back cuff, and on either side of the front band with a narrow ruffle of linen, hand-hemmed. Such a waist never ceases to mark excellent taste. The other waist is also among the last words on this sartorial matter. The back and sleeves are of white linen lawn; the front and collar and cuffs are of white tucked muslin bought by the yard. The collar is a straight piece of tucking slightly curved to fit the band in front, and may be turned up on the "second day" to form the foundation and turnover points of a black satin ribbon stock an bow. Tucking by the yard may also be bought in various other groupings, and, like the fancy new dress shirts for men, can carry between tucks a row of padded white embroidery made up of dots in round or diamond shapes and tiny flowers.—Mildred Gapen Bowen in the February Mother's Magazine.

Ornamental Trees and Plants

Orange, Lemon and Grape-Fruit Trees
Assorted

7 for $10.00

Fruit Trees 3 for $1.00

Lawn Seed Bedding Plants always on hand

Bay Counties Seed Company

404 Market Street, San Francisco

MILTON TONINI, Mgr.

Phone Garfield 1625

"REFORM."

By Colonel Ralph de Clairmont, A. G. R., "An Essay on the Political, Financial and Social Conditions of the United States, Showing Dangers, Defects and Remedies."

This remarkable work, first published by the H. S. Crocker Company, before the cataclysm of San Francisco, is from the pen of a California author, and was quoted in our columns at the time of its appearance in terms of the highest praise. It is a handsome volume, bound in satin cloth, with fine gold lettering, and treats on the following subjects: I. Caveat Patria. II. Law and Justice. III. Legislative. IV. Press. V. Religion. VI. Education. VII. Finance. VIII. Federal Government. IX. U. S. Army; Constitution of the United States; Constitution of Switzerland.

"Reform," an almost prophetic book, is highly interesting and instructive; it is based on Truth from beginning to end, and has elicited the highest praise from the Press, Presidents, Statesmen, Army Officers and people of all classes of society, who have honored the author with their testimonials, of which the Colonel may be justly proud. Of the fourth and last edition there are now but a few copies left. The late State Senator Hickox was so elated with the admirable contents of "Reform" that he wanted to introduce a bill in the Legislature to have one hundred thousand copies printed for the use of our public schools as a text book, but the scheme was frustrated by his untimely death. The Richmond "Star," in quoting the contents of "Reform," says in a eulogistic article: "Many of the arguments, adduced by Colonel de Clairmont, may be very bitter, but they are too true to be controverted."

We strongly again recommend this book to our readers. Its bearing on the present critical situation in Europe and our country makes it particularly interesting.

Sold by the H. S. Crocker Company, 571 Market street, San Francisco, California. Price only $1.00.

* * *

"Journalism in California."

Any American conversant with the history of the West covering the past seventy years, will readily recognize that this unusually interesting book by John P. Young covers a field far more romantic and wonderful than most novels. The author is probably the most competent man in the world to handle the materials, for he has been one of the leaders in newspaper development in this country for the past 46 years, of which 39 were devoted to the advancement of the San Francisco Chronicle. Since 1877 he has enjoyed the sole editorial management of that thriving daily paper. The experience of the author, therefore, bridges the pioneer newspaper period with that of the present new journalism, and makes him an ideal authority.

"Journalism in California" was written to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of the existence of the San Francisco Chronicle, and was published in the Jubilee Edition of that paper. The story proved so entertaining and created such a demand for the special edition that the management was importuned to publish it in book form. The present volume is the result.

The first printed paper from a press, a small one page sheet, made its appearance in Monterey, August 15, 1846, preceding the San Francisco Star by six months. The picturesque stories of the periodicals that began to develop quickly under the rush of the invading gold seekers are unique. In the next period of development the San Francisco Chronicle furnishes an intensely interesting story in its development under the founders, Charles and M. H. de Young, boys of 19 and 17 respectively, at the time they laid its foundation in a little 10x13½ four page paper, carrying the ambitious title "The Daily Dramatic Chronicle." The keen acumen, canny newspaper sense and indefatigable industry of those two enterprising lads in finally outstripping the big newspapers of the town in providing news and finally taking the lead, is the one great romance of newspaper success on the Pacific Coast. The story of journalistic methods as developed in California are set forth most entertainingly. The book is encyclopedic on information regarding California journalism. The volume closes with biographical information on prominent men who have been instrumental in constructive achievements in developing the State.

* * *

"A Brief Guide to the Palace of Fine Arts, Panama-Pacific International Exposition," by Michael Williams.

This new-made mecum of the rearranged art gallery covers the present post-Exposition period, and possesses all the excellent points that made its predecessor so popular and instructive. It will prove invaluable to visitors for the reason that practically all the retrospective paintings which completely covered the entire history of art in America have disappeared, and have been replaced by an exhibition of contemporary work. Accordingly, visitors at this post-Exposition exhibit will view only the present, and make their own guesses as to what flight future art may take. This new exhibit is extensive and well worth careful study, and this new guide book offers observations, suggestions and comments in the same helpful way as its predecessor. The pictures in each room are numbered, and a brief comment on the artist and his painting is given; with this little guide at hand, a visitor may readily find the works of any artist or any special canvas or marble desired.

Price 25 cents. Published by the San Francisco Art Association.

* * *

"That Was a Dream Worth Building."

Louis J. Stellmann, the author, is noted throughout California for the beautiful and sympathetic photographs he develops in his study. In this little volume he has artistically eclipsed all his former camera successes. With her skillful brush, Mrs. Edith Kinney Stellmann has colored these photographs so deftly and artistically that they glow with the poetic glamour of that enlivening and mystic spirit of Dreamland which so recently diffused itself over the Exposition grounds. Nothing better has been done in this line to express the wonderful pictures of light, color and form that were so charmingly expressed by the Exposition. The accompanying letter press narrates a dream that carries the background idea regarding the material birth and being of the architectural gems and scenes represented by eighteen exquisitely colored photographs.

Price $1.00. Published by H. S. Crocker Co., San Francisco, California.

* * *

Late in February, a little time before life shows above ground in the woods and fields, there will appear an entirely new book on wild flowers. It will appear at just the right time for spring preparedness. It is by Harriet L. Keeler, who wrote "Our Northern Shrubs," "Our Native Trees," and other books of similar subject. This one is called "Our Early Wild Flowers," and describes with illustrations (some in color) all the spring wild flowers of the Northern States. The Scribners will bring it out.

* * *

The Rev. E. A. Burroughs, Fellow and Tutor of Hertford College, Oxford, will shortly publish, through Messrs. Longmans, Green & Co., a volume entitled "The Valley of Decision: A Plea for Wholeness in Thought and Life." The book will be an attempt to argue, without Christian presuppositions, to the Christian view of life as at once explaining our present troubles and offering the one hopeful basis of future reconstruction. We have to decide between "building Jerusalem" and a second and sorer Babylon, "in England's green and pleasant land;" and we are in the Valley of Decision now.

* * *

Within the next few weeks The Century Company will publish a new romance by James Lane Allen, entitled "A Cathedral Singer." In this book it is said that Mr. Allen deserts the Blue Grass Country, with which his fame has been so closely associated, for his adopted home, New York City. The new story is woven about the rising Cathedral of St. John the Divine, some of the scenes being laid in the studios of the Academy of Design close by; and it is stated to be an integral part of the book's intention to suggest the meaning a cathedral has for all those who live within its precincts.

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION IN THE MONEY CENTERS.

The money market is practically unchanged as to rates, although there can be no doubt that an absorption of funds is in progress over the country, and there are reasons for thinking that the present state of ease will not last throughout the year. Loans are rising, as shown by bank reports to the Comptroller and by the Clearing House statements, and the expansion of domestic business, higher commodity prices, the situation in security markets and the necessities of our foreign trade, all forecast further demands upon our banking resources. The comptroller's statement of the condition of all national banks on December 31st last shows that their loans had increased since December 31, 1914, by $1,010,000,000, of which not quite $700,000,000 was in New York City. A considerable portion of these loans undoubtedly are upon securities, and more of this class will have to be made.

—The annual report of the Honokaa Sugar Company estimates the 1916 crop at 7,000 tons, against an actual yield from the 1915 crop of 8,612 tons, previously estimated at 10,600 tons. Net profits on the 1915 crop after interest, sinking fund, depreciation, etc., were $161,850, equal to 8.09 per cent on the two million dollar crop. Sugar is expected to rise in price, owing to the report of a drought in Cuba. The Cuban crop usually fixes the price of sugar.

—Directors of Mexican Petroleum Company, Ltd., have declared the old time regular dividend of $2 a share on the preferred stock. This is the first dividend that has been paid on the stock since August, 1913, and the resumption of disbursements is due to the improved conditions in Mexico. The amount to be distributed when the dividend is paid April 1st, to stock of record March 20th, will total $240,000. No dividend has so far been declared on the common stock, but it is anticipated that a resumption will be announced shortly, as both dividends were cut off at practically the same time.

—On Broker Zadig's report of the excellent new ore showing recently uncovered on the 950 level in Rescue Eula of the Tonopah, that stock has jumped to the leadership in the stock exchange. The trading covered 100,000 daily, with fluctuations showing wide ranges. Broker Zadig declares this new strike the most important in the camp since the famous discovery of the big ledge in Belmont several years ago. A discovery that revived the camp and led other companies to prospect their ground with several big surprising successes.

—Net operating income of the railways of the United States for December, 1915, increased $180 per mile, or 82.3 per cent, as compared with December, 1914. This comparison, however, is between the highest and lowest December in six years. A comparison of December, 1915, with the average December of the preceding five years, shows an increase of 49.6 per cent. It was also set forth in the statement that the first six months of the current fiscal year, compared with the same period of last year, show an increase in operating income per mile of 51.2 per cent in the East, 45.5 per cent in the South, and 23.8 per cent in the West.

—The strike in the Rescue-Eula ground, south and east of the Belmont property, is truly significant of what can be accomplished in the Tonopah mining district at greater depths than have been worked. The reports are all to the effect that the strike is a substantial one, and if, as is reasonably expected, it holds out it will greatly enhance the possibilities of further strikes in the eastern section of the Tonopah camp.

—Tonopah Mining shipped bullion of an estimated value of $56,000 for the week ending March 4th, a substantial increase over the prior shipment of February 12th, $38,000.

—The Northwestern Electric Company has reported for January and the year ended January 31, 1916. January shows a net profit before preferred dividends of $24,808. After allowing for the 6 per cent accrual on $1,287,000 preferred stock, the surplus is equal to the annual rate of 2.21 per cent on the common.

—The predicted high price of $2.50 a barrel for Pennsylvania crude oil was reached yesterday, when an advance was announced in Pittsburg. The high price was reached by the Pennsylvania crude grade, the basis of the list, which advanced 10 cents.

—Tonopah Ex. shows an operating profit of $59,000 for the month of January. An unusually rich ore body has been tapped on the 1,540 level.

—The ore output of the Tonopah camp for the week ending March 4th has an estimated value of $164,488.

—The Associated Oil Company declared a dividend of $1 per share, payable April 15th, to holders of record March 24th.

Business Men's Military Training Camp

The War Department, encouraged by the success of the business men's training camps, especially the one in the East which attracted hundreds of the leading business and professional men of New York and other Atlantic cities, has planned to conduct a business men's camp of instruction at Monterey, California, beginning about July 8th; also similar camps at Salt Lake City, Utah, and American Lake, Washington, dates not yet fixed. Whether any additional camps will be established in this department will depend upon future developments and upon whether facilities become available to conduct additional camps.

At the solicitation of a number of business men who have been attending the course of military lectures at the Palace Hotel, the department will undertake to give some elementary instruction, preliminary to the camp at Monterey, for several hours at night each week, to such business men as may wish to take the course and subsequently enter the instruction camp, provided a sufficient number desire it.

It has also been suggested that some outdoor work, preliminary to said camp of instruction at Monterey, might be useful. This work will also be undertaken, provided a sufficient number desire such instruction. This outdoor work would be in the nature of marches and tactical walks, on Saturday afternoons, during which opportunity would arise for giving practical illustration of some of the principles which have been discussed in lectures. The committee in charge of the lecture course will be pleased to receive requests to be enrolled for this preliminary instruction.

Circulars giving detailed information for guidance of those intending to attend business men's camps will also be available for distribution in the near future.

President Lilienthal Still Insists on a "Square Deal"

Jesse W. Lilienthal, President of the United Railroads, returned this week from an extended visit in the East, where, among other duties, he joined in several important conferences with his principles regarding the prospects and future policy of the United Railroads Company. The open and broad policy of good friendship inaugurated by President Lilienthal will continue to prevail, and both C and D cars of the Municipal line will be allowed to use the ferry loop. Later on, the chances are that arrangements will be made for other municipal cars to use the loop. Since Mr. Lilienthal's departure East, a proposition was started here by certain supervisors to buy the Parkside line from United Railroads. President Lilienthal is opposed to a sale, as the line is now developing a promising paying business. As head of the United Railroads Company, Mr. Lilienthal remains as consistent as ever in introducing idealism as part of the policy of this big corporation. This frank spirit of fair play on his part is now being largely appreciated by the general public. In the long run it is bound to win out. Everybody admires a man who insists on a square deal all around.

Universal Dimming Law

There is a great deal of space being used in automobile journals and others advocating dimming laws without any definite idea of just what should be sought for in light control. The News Letter has been a consistent advocate of adequate protection for all concerned.

That general legislation in this direction is necessary is evidenced by the fact that during the sixty days preceding December 16, 1915, there were reported in the United States the following accidents arising direct from glaring headlights:

Accidents resulting in damage to automobiles, 149. Number of occupants of cars injured, 168. Number of deaths resulting from such accidents, 41.

While the need of legislation is plainly necessary, it is just as important that the laws enacted shall remedy the evil and not exaggerate it. There will be more accidents and more deaths arising from badly made laws which force the automobile drivers of the country to use insufficient lights, than could possibly grow out of the present condition of affairs.

Scarcely any two laws being enacted by States and municipalities are alike. Each set of law makers seem to have their own ideas as regards the remedy for the existing evil, and, unfortunately, in the large majority of cases insufficient care has been taken to make the legislation of a character that would protect equally the pedestrian, the driver himself and his fellow drivers.

Any law that will serve the purpose for which it is intended must be of so universal a character as to serve the need of every one concerned.

Signal globes placed in head lamps and high and low dimming devices are dangerous alike to drivers and pedestrians for city driving, but have the advantage of giving the driver full powered headlights for country driving.

Frosting the upper half of head lamp lenses or attaching vizards or shields to head lamps, which restrict the upward travel of the rays, removes the dangerous glare on city streets, and level country roads, but places the life of car occupants in constant danger, owing to restriction of rays, particularly on strange country roads, where dangerous culverts, washouts and abrupt turns exist, and forces the driver to one of two alternatives—procedure at a pace anything but pleasant, or the necessity of the nerve-racking task of controlling his car within a prescribed and totally inadequate range of vision.

The rays from vizard protected headlights are as dangerous on grades as the full ray of the unprotected light.

Given a first-class electric system, with a pair of high candle power headlights—sufficient at full power to give a driver ample protection on strange roads, driving at a comfortable speed—then if the laws compel drivers of automobiles to dim the left headlight in passing on-coming cars or vehicles of any character on State roads, and to dim both headlights permanently to from one to three candlepower for city use, every purpose that would seem to make headlight legislation necessary, would be served. The pedestrian in the city would be protected, the driver of the automobile would have ample light to protect himself, and in the country the drivers of vehicles and on-coming cars would be protected from dangerous glare, and the right to burn his right headlight when meeting on-coming vehicles or motor cars would show the dangers of the road to the driver and give him an outfit that would make the handling of the car on country roads comfortable and satisfactory, without in any way endangering the life or property of himself or others.

Ontario Fifth in Cars

Only four countries in the world have more cars than the province of Ontario—the United States, the British Isles, France and Germany. This interesting fact is shown by the registration figures of the provincial secretary at Toronto. Close to 35,000 cars now are registered in Ontario. This record includes over 12,000 Fords. In all, there are 347 different makes of cars. As a matter of fact the Canadian Ford company's output of 40,000 cars for this year alone will be more than half as many as the cars of all makes now in Germany, 57,000, and a third as many as are in France, 90,000.

Some Export Figures for 1915

John Bull was our heaviest buyer in 1915, taking 24,355 cars and trucks, valued at $35,055,097, or more than the total value of United States motor exports to foreign countries combined the year previous. The shipments in December, 1915, were as follows: 1,664 trucks at $3,920,533; 3,664 passenger cars at $2,710,758; and $1,791,805 worth of parts. For December, 1914, the exports were as follows: 1,279 trucks at $3,387,739; 1,297 passenger cars at $998,698, and $1,791,805 worth of parts.

World's Smallest Motor Car

P. H. Eastabrook, a mechanic at Grand Rapids, Mich., has constructed what is believed to be the smallest motor car in the world. The length over all is 72 inches; the width, 30 inches, and the height 23 inches. It is equipped with a single cylinder motor and it responds readily to the touch of Eastabrook's 4-year-old son. The tot is, without a doubt, the youngest chauffeur in Michigan.

Eastabrook purchased many of the parts of the machine, but the bulk of the forging and machine work he did himself. He assembled the car in his woodshed. The machine is equipped with electric lights, electric horn, duplex steering gear, external contracting brakes, speedometer, clock and gas pump. It has a tread of 22½ inches and a wheelbase of 50 inches. Solid rubber tires are mounted on the 14-inch wheels. It carries five dry batteries and is roller bearing throughout.

Eastabrook's son drives the machine at will about the neighborhood and occasionally goes out for a spin of a mile or more. The gears are low, and it is impossible for him to make more than 8 or 10 miles an hour.

Car Thefts Heavy in Gotham

The New York police estimate that over $15,000 worth of motor cars were stolen in that city during the final days of the Christmas shopping. These cars probably were all supplied with locks, but to insert a key, lock the machine and remove the key at every stopping place was far too much trouble, and therefore the unfortunate consequences. A law is now said to be pending before the New York legislature to make the attachment of locks on motor cars and trucks compulsory for the sake of the safety of the general public.

No Commerce Commission or Railway Commission or Public Utilities Commission is worth its salt unless it will stand unflinchingly against any popular clamor which prevents the corporation from getting ample profits, exactly as it stands against the corporation which, having secured ample profits, fails to render proper service to the public, to do justice to its employees, and to act honestly toward all men.—Theodore Roosevelt in March Metropolitan.

MELLOW AS MOONLIGHT

CASCADE

For your HI-BALL today

The finest, purest and mellowest whisky that brains and money can produce, cost to you no more than inferior grades; so why not ask for and insist on getting CASCADE.

Instead of saying whisky, just say CASCADE, you will enjoy it and feel much better.

Special enjoyable drink recipes for the asking by writing
J. H. Norton, care San Francisco News Letter

United States Now has One Car to Every Nine Families

There are 2,423,788 motor cars and trucks in use in the United States. This figure is the total number of registrations in the country, January 1, 1916, all duplicate registrations of which records are available being deducted. This is a gain of 686,998 cars and trucks, or a gain of 39.5 per cent over the 1,736,790 registered up to the end of 1914. Contrary to the general impression, over half of this increase was made during the latter half of the year.

There is one car to every thirty-eight people living in the United States. This means that out of every nine families in the country one is the proud possessor of a motor car.

Refuting the frequent statement that the buying power of the United States is nearing its limit so far as motor vehicles are concerned, we may point to the registration statistics. These form a foundation for conclusions which indisputably refute all contentions of these pessimistic prophets.

During 1915 the production of cars and motor trucks by the manufacturers of the United States reached a total of nearly 900,000 vehicles, a goodly percentage of these being exported to Europe, Asia, South America, in all, eighty countries in different sections of the globe, the number of cars and trucks shipped abroad increasing each month, as shown by the government export statistics, the increase for the year being 250 per cent, while the estimated value is $100,000,000. In considering the gain of 686,998 car and truck registrations during the year, it must also be remembered that a large number of cars must have been scrapped, their places being taken by new vehicles which necessarily makes the total gain shown somewhat lover than if these older cars had remained in commission in addition to the newer machines.

Los Angeles County Has Most Cars

The motor vehicle department has just completed the segregation of the receipts of the last six months of 1915 by counties, showing the total amount of net receipts of the State amounting to $142,269.04, of which $71,111.04 is divided among the various counties of the State.

The largest amount, $23,370.90, goes to Los Angeles County, and the next largest amount, $8,302.30, to San Francisco. Alameda receives $5,233.42. These figures are for the last half of the year, when the registration is comparatively light.

The total receipts for the year were $2,059,683. The percentage of the receipts expended in the disbursements for overhead expenses, plates, etc., was 8.18 per cent, as against a disbursing expense in 1914 of 11.6 per cent, a saving of more than 3.4 per cent in the administration. There were 40,000 more cars registered in 1915 than in 1914. The average fee per registration received in 1915 was $11,518.

Ford Leads in State

Ford automobile sales in California during the month of January, 1916, were three times greater than the next nearest car, according to statistics compiled by L. J. Reese from the records of the State Motor Vehicle Department, wherein an index of all sales is kept. The Ford sales from January 2, 1916, to February 1, 1916, amounted to 1826, while the Studebaker came second with 514.

One hundred and thirty-eight different makes of automobiles were sold in California during these thirty days. The Buick automobile was third in sales, having 484. The sale of other makes and number are as follows: Overland, 422; Maxwell, 371; Dodge, 360; Cadillac, 171; Chevrolet, 154; Reo, 104.

Superintendent H. A. French of the State Motor Vehicle Department reports the following figures for 1916 to last Saturday: Registrations—Automobiles, 150,225; motorcycles, 17,565; chauffeurs, 5,758; Automobile dealers, 1,085; Motorcycle dealers, 140. Receipts—Automobiles, $1,562,340.80; Motorcycles, $35,130; Chauffeurs, $11,516; Automobile dealers, $27,466; Motorcycle dealers, $700; Substitutions, $12,704.90. Total, $1,649,857.70.

Famous Race Driver Comes to Town

Eddie O'Donnell, of the famous Duesenberg racing team, is visiting in San Francisco and vicinity. At the close of the 1915 racing season, O'Donnell, after a very successful season of racing, concluded that he wanted a pleasure car, and in looking over the various models of cars in New York City, and trying out and driving them all himself, his choice was the Mitchell "six of '16," which he is driving here now.

Since purchasing his car, O'Donnell has driven it over 8,000 miles, and says that he has never raised the hood except to put oil in the crank case, and considers it the greatest automobile of moderate price manufactured in America to-day.

In fact, when O'Donnell drove up in front of Osen-McFarland Auto Company's place the other day, just in from Los Angeles, the man in charge of the service department offered to take his car into the shop and look it over, his reply was: "You can take it in and look it over, but that's all you will have to do, as it absolutely needs nothing done to it, after the hard usage it has been put to for the last seven or eight weeks."

O'Donnell's Mitchell is equipped with Goodrich Silvertown cord tires, which were run 1,800 miles on a racing car before being used on the Mitchell. The tires have traveled 3,000 miles, and are still in good condition.

A First-Class Garage

There are many garages in town, and the motorist is often in a quandary as to where to go, especially for permanent service. There are very few who give you the QUALITY of service of Dow & Green, in Taylor street, between O'Farrell and Geary. Here your car will receive something more than the "once over," and the prices are moderate.

TELEPHONE FRANKLIN 1836

The White Star Line

AUTO TOURING COMPANY

Touring Car, Limousine or Taxi-Car

TARIFF: 7 Passenger Touring Cars
$2.00 per hour
in San Francisco

7 Passenger Closed Cars
$2.50 per hour
in San Francisco

SPECIAL RATES FOR COUNTRY TRIPS

TAXICAB RATES FOR SHORT TRIPS to
 THEATRE or CAFE
 Day and Night Service

Our Taxicab service is the best in San Francisco. We use seven passenger cars for this service, and operate under the "Zone" rate, the charge being at a flat rate, regardless of the number of passengers. Whether 1 or 6 persons occupy the car, the rate is the same. While other companies have reduced their rates of fare, in the face of an increased operating expense, we have maintained the same low rate since starting business, and will continue to do so. We earnestly solicit your Taxicab business, and will guarantee that the rate is positively the lowest in San Francisco, the service and equipment the best.

Telephone Franklin 1836

FIRE PROOF BUILDING Phones—Park 8886, Park 5128

20---MARSHALL SQUARE---20

GARAGE

EXPERT AUTOMOBILE REPAIRING and MACHINE WORK
 AUTO SUPPLIES

NO. 20 MARSHALL SQUARE
 Opp. 8th and Market Sts. San Francisco

WHERE SERVICE MEANS SERVICE

M & H GARAGE

819-835 ELLIS ST. Between Polk and Van Ness Avenue

WHERE THE PRIVATE OWNER FEELS AT HOME

Don'ts to Prevent Theft

Reports have been published recently that automobile thieves are more active and successful than ever before. This, according to information obtained from some of the largest companies engaged in automobile theft insurance, and also from the police, is not true, but still many cars are stolen, and every precaution is urged to checkmate the thieves.

The value of automobiles stolen in New York City and its vicinity last year is placed at not less than $700,000. From the manager of the automobile theft department of one of the large insurance companies the following "don'ts" to automobile owners were obtained:

Don't leave your auto unprotected on the street. Automobiles have been taken from before office buildings two minutes after owners had left them. Ask the private watchman at the door of the building before which you stop to keep his eye on your car.

Don't leave your car unlocked, even for a short time. Every automobile that lacks an attachment for locking the mechanism should be provided with one.

Don't leave your car on an incline where, by releasing the brakes, it can be moved away on its own momentum. Locked cars left in such a situation have frequently been stolen.

* * *

What to Do When the Jack is Missing

How to change a punctured tire when the jack has been left at home is told by an owner who had the experience. He was some fifty miles from the nearest garage on a seldom traveled country road when one of his rear tires had a blowout. His car was fitted with demountable rims, and he had a fully inflated spare tire all ready to replace the damaged one. But when he looked into his tool kit, he found that the jack had been left at home.

With prospects of a long trip on the rim in view, this owner cast about him for some method of raising the wheel from the ground in order to make the change. Finding a good sized rock near, he placed it in the road directly in front of the punctured tire. Carefully running his car ahead, he raised the rear wheel on top of the rock. Then he proceeded to build a foundation of rocks, fence rails and other material under the rear axle. By hammering the rock from under the tire, the axle dropped on the built-up support and allowed the replacement of the tire.

This same motorist tells of another somewhat similar method of raising the car when the jack is not handy. The foundation of stones, etc., is built up to within a few inches of the axle. Then a good stout fence rail or limb of a tree can be used as a lever, and when the car has been raised three or four inches, another member of the party can easily slip a brick or stone between the axle and the pile of material.

* * *

Farm Trucks and Truck Farms

"It is estimated that more than 4,000 American farmers are now using motor trucks," says E. N. Brown, manager of the Baden Stock Farm at South San Francisco, "about four per cent of the total number of trucks sold in the United States. I trust Uncle Sam, by whom the estimate has been prepared, included me in the count, for I consider myself a prominent member of the 4,000, but I am almost ashamed to tell the whole truth about the uses and abuses to which I put my one-ton Federal truck."

That Brown has put his Federal truck to considerable use may easily be appreciated and understood when one considers the size of his stock farm and the fact that the truck he is using at present has been in continuous service for nearly four years. Brown and his neighbors down the peninsula declare that here is hardly an hour in the day that the truck is not in service; in service, which both Brown and his neighbors say is anything light. The demands made of the truck are such that it is generally admitted that it is remarkable that the truck does not have to be replaced at least twice during each year.

No long ago, Brown had occasion to bring seven tons of hay from the wharf at San Mateo. The hay was loaded upon a wagon body weighing 3,700 pounds, or nearly two tons. The wagon and hay was towed more than eight miles to the Brown ranch despite the fact that the total weight was nearly nine tons. The feat attracted considerable attention along the countryside, as it was the first time that anything like it had ever been tried in that vicinity.

MOTROL

"It suits because it doesn't soot"

If you want to prolong the life of your engine
If you want to eliminate smoke and carbon
If you want to reduce your oil expense

Use MoToRoL

Hughson & Merton, Inc.

530 Golden Gate Avenue

San Francisco, Cal.

PANHARD OIL

FREE FROM CARBON

BERNARD I. BILL

543 GOLDEN GATE AVE. SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

CLASS "A" GARAGE, INC.

Strictly Fire Proof Building

STORAGE SUPPLIES REPAIRS

BEST SERVICE ASSURED

735-751 POST STREET SAN FRANCISCO

TELEPHONE PROSPECT 2280

Automobile Starting and Lighting Systems

Give Satisfactory Results When Given Proper Attention

We specialize on electrical equipment, storage batteries, etc. and guarantee satisfaction.

GUARANTEE BATTERY COMPANY

639 Van Ness Ave. BRAND & CUSHMAN Phone Prospect 741

TIRES

VULCANIZING

TOM H. ELKINGTON

Long Mileage Tires and Second-Hand Tires

Everything Needed for the Bus

1135 VAN NESS AVE.—Near Geary Phone PROSPECT 1566

Tips to Automobilists

(CUT THIS OUT.)

The News Letter recommends the following garages, hotels and supply houses. Tourists will do well to cut this list out and keep it as a guide:

PALO ALTO.—LARKIN'S CAFE—Just opened. The only strictly first-class cafe on the Wishbone Route devoted to the patronage of automobile owners and their families. Corner of University avenue and The Circle.

SAN JOSE.—LAMOLLE GRILL, 36-39 North First street. The best French dinner in California, 75 cents, or a la carte. Automobile parties given particular attention.

PALO ALTO.—PALO ALTO GARAGE, 443 Emmerson St., Tel. P. A. 333. Auto livery at all hours. Tires and sundries in stock. Gasoline, oil, repairing, lathework, vulcanizing. Open day and night.

LARKINS & COMPANY

CARRIAGE AND AUTOMOBILE BODY BUILDERS

Established in 1865

1610-1612-1614 VAN NESS AVENUE

Between California and Sacramento Sts. Phone Prospect 30

Where their entire attention will be devoted to the prompt delivery of the best work that a modern plant, high-class mechanics and materials can produce.

USE LIKE AN ORDINARY TOWEL

AUTOISTS

SHOULD NEVER BE

WITHOUT

THEM

=

Your Grocer Sells 'Em

FASHION'S FADS AND FRILLS

The Spanish influence, they call our tendency this season toward ruffles, flounces, laces, full short skirts, and basques. This note was first mentioned at the introduction of the bolero, a little earlier in the season, and since the premiere of Goyescas at the Metropolitan Opera House some weeks ago—the first time, by the way, that America has been honored with a first performance of a new opera—this Spanish note is being talked of more and more. Whether it will really be an important issue in the summer fashions is yet to be seen; so far it is being noticed only in a strong leaning toward the deep Spanish flounce of lace on dance and dinner dresses, and on lingerie summer frocks.

In the fascinating Fandango, danced in the second act of Goyescas, the dancer wears a charming little frock of yellow, with two deep black lace flounces joined to veil the skirt from below a deep yoke depth; the frock is so dainty and graceful that it should incline us all to Spanish lace flounces.

The Spanish Lace Scarf.

All through the brilliant audience on opening night, as a delicate attention no doubt to the composer, one saw the Spanish lace scarf in both black and white, draped about gleaming white shoulders. Here and there in true Spanish fashion, too, a high back comb was seen, often in the shining black hair of a true Spanish beauty; and there were any number of them, keenly appreciative of their countryman's offering. There has never been anything more graceful and useful than these scarfs and any one possessing one should be more than grateful. They are a charming accessory to the formal evening gown and serve the dance frock equally well.

The Vogue of Lace.

Much lace is being used on dresses aside from flounces. One of the favorite methods is to veil a deep band of lace in the bodice, as shown in our first illustration, and another use is shown in the sleeves and front panel effect on the other frock. The metal laces, rather heavy in weave, are especially effective for veiling purposes. The gold and silver bandings are most attractive. Often in the costume blouse the lace is attached to a flesh-colored lining, or is veiled first with pale pink chiffon and the pink in turn veiled with the dark blue, black or other shade of the blouse.

Raglan and Drop Shoulders

Becoming and graceful for all types is the drop-shoulder, especially when the blouse or frock is fashioned of a soft, drapy stuff like crepe Georgette, chiffon, or one of the soft silk crepes. The fad for trimming these soft materials with colored beads is one of the most artistic and effective notions we have seen for many a day. A blouse in Russian style, imported recently by one of our smart shops, was fashioned of a dull copper-colored crepe de Chine. It closed straight down the front and the raglan shoulders were outlined front and back with a banding of burnished beads, in several tones, shading from gold to copper. The loose waist was held in slightly at the normal waistline with a twisted cord of the beads with tasselled ends. It was a garment which could be appropriately worn with separate skirt for the street without a coat.

A Charming Use of Lace

While there are some rather complex ideas this spring, the majority of frocks and blouses are simplicity itself; any one who can handle a needle can fashion them, if she will keep one or two important facts in mind: first, that the new shoulder line is sloping; second, that sleeves, while loose, should give an indication of the shape of the arm. A tight-fitting cuff will serve to do this becomingly; third, that skirts must curve over the hips, unless they are the full-gathered models, and must be as full below the hips as possible.

Many of the dainty sheer cottons, voiles, organdies, crepes and similar fabrics, are being made up in the regulation shirt-waist dress style, with perhaps a bit of colored embroidery or a band or two of ribbon for trimming. Ribbon, in the soft summer colorings, picot-edged, or plain taffeta or moire, is being used quite extravagantly on frocks and blouses of all descriptions. They are dainty, summery and may be easily tacked on or taken off when the frock requires tubbing.

Dr. Byron Haines, Dentist, has resumed practice at his office in Gunst Building, S. W. corner Geary and Powell streets.

Novel Skirt Drapery

When Mother Needs Help

EVERY mother of twins who has enough milk for one baby only, faces a serious problem. It is advisable to give each baby three breast feedings daily, supplementing these with three bottle feedings—for a little mother's milk is better than none. Thousands of mothers who could not nurse their babies have brought them safely through the dangerous first year with

Gail Borden
EAGLE
 BRAND
CONDENSED
MILK
 THE ORIGINAL

For nearly sixty years 'Eagle Brand' has been successfully used as a baby food. It received the only Grand Prize awarded on condensed milk at the recent San Francisco Exposition. Remember that 'Eagle Brand' is pure, rich milk—not only a food for babies, but an everyday household necessity. Use it in cooking. Send the coupon today.

Borden's Condensed Milk Company
 New York

"Leaders of Quality" Est. 1857

Borden's Condensed Milk Co.,
 108 Hudson Street, New York

N. L. 3-1

Please send me the booklets I have checked: "BABY'S MILK", "BABY'S DIAGNOSTIC", "BORDEN'S RECIPES".

Name _____

Address _____

INSURANCE

Fred B. Lloyd, managing underwriter of the Pacific Coast Casualty, through whose direction the business of this company was recently re-insured by the Casualty Company of America, will become vice-president of the latter concern. President Hearn is here for the purpose of looking over the business of the Pacific Coast and establishing a Pacific department.

* * *

As a result of Vice-President Whitney Palache's visit to San Francisco, F. M. Branch, former assistant manager, has been appointed manager and Harry R. Mann has been made assistant manager, of the New York Underwriters in the Pacific Department.

* * *

Charles W. Helser has resigned his position as agency superintendent of the Continental Life of Salt Lake City, and accepted a like position with the West Coast-San Francisco Life. He will arrive in San Francisco this week and enter at once upon the performance of his duties.

* * *

The published report that the Scottish Union was about to establish a department on the Coast with State Agent H. W. Fores, manager of the San Francisco, and F. W. Gaston, northwest special as managers, is without foundation. The visit of James H. Brewster has no other significance than a desire to visit his mother at Los Angeles.

* * *

Judge Bledsoe, of the United States District Court, has ordered a writ of mandamus to issue compelling Insurance Commissioner J. E. Phelps to license the Millers National in California. Former Commissioner Cooper has licensed the company, contending that its guarantee fund of two hundred thousand dollars was sufficient guarantee that its policies would be paid, but Commissioner Phelps attempted to follow more closely the letter of the law. J. H. Richards represents the company in California.

* * *

Insurance Commissioner Phelps denies the story that one hundred thousand dollars' worth of bonds are missing from the State insurance office.

* * *

G. C. Speers, of Yorba Linda, Cal., has been arrested for defrauding insurance companies by collecting insurance money after having destroyed three buildings.

* * *

At Visalia, Saturday, John Deering, aged 17, was sentenced to a term of eight years in San Quentin for arson, following a protest by the lad's father against a probation sentence.

* * *

A decision of importance in a number of industrial accident claims pending against the Commonwealth Bonding was rendered Saturday by the State Industrial Accident Commission, which held void a notice of liability filed by an employer after the Commonwealth's license had been revoked.

* * *

At a full meeting of members of the California Inspection Rating Bureau, in order to secure uniform practices regarding commission and rules, the regulations of the casualty underwriters association in effect prior to October 31st, were adopted as a temporary expedient, and the Governing Committee was instructed to prepare permanent rules with reference to commissions and fix minimum premiums reporting to the bureau two weeks hence.

* * *

United States Manager H. N. Kelsey has appointed Marsh & McLennan to succeed MacDonald & Miles as managers of the Pacific Coast Department of the Hamburg-Bremen. Burns MacDonald, of the old firm, will have temporary direction of the agency.

* * *

On the body of Professor Fulmer, killed in the railroad collision near Spokane Sunday, was found an accident insurance ticket covering twenty-five thousand dollars' insurance, obtained just before he boarded the train at Pullman, Washington.

* * *

F. A. Jones, a brother of Leonard C. Jones, local representative at San Francisco, has been appointed auditor of the Georgia Casualty for all Pacific Coast territory.

As a result of General Manager Fred B. Lloyds' three months visit to the East, a contract has been entered into between the Pacific Coast Casualty and the Casualty Company of America, by which the business of the former company is reinsured by the latter, dating from noon February 28th, and the Pacific Coast Casualty will go into liquidation. It is understood that most of the stockholders of the California company have invested in the stock of the Casualty Company of America to a greater or less extent.

* * *

A local daily claims that unless the Municipal Railroads have had a most remarkable run of luck, the conclusion is irresistible that the rates charged by the State are excessive.

The Background of the War Zone

When France in 1871 raised promptly the $1,000,000,000 for the unprecedented indemnity demanded by Bismarck, it was regarded as an extraordinary financial achievement, and it yielded Prussia a handsome profit on the war. But it would not go far in the present world struggle. By the vote asked for recently of $2,000,000,000 more, England will bring its total appropriations for the war up to a little more than $10,000,000,000. No other country has spent so much, but the others have been equally lavish in proportion to their means, and some of them have in addition suffered heavily from the ravages of war and the consequent destruction of industries. At the close of the first year the war was computed to be ten times as vast as our civil war in the cost of life and property. With the second year its scope has widened and the cost is increasing.

* * *

Spring should show whether the central powers are still able to dictate the conduct of the war as their advantage in position and their superior preparedness have thus far enabled them to do. The vigorous offensive in Flanders at a season when active operations are difficult shows that the Germans appreciate the value of time which costs England $1,000,000 an hour, and Germany not much less. Incessant and well planned activity has been the principle of the general staff from the first. Yet it is possible that the renewal of the attacks in this quarter, where the allies are strongly entrenched, indicates that the really fruitful moves have been exhausted, and that this stroke is merely in default of a better. If that proves true it will mark a new phase in the war, and possibly the restriction of German ambition to what is already held. Thus far, however, the central powers still hold the initiative and can concentrate an attack wherever they will. This is a very great advantage which the recent war council of the allies no doubt did its best to plan for. The coming campaign will be a search for the joint in the kaiser's "shining armor."

* * *

Some significant votes were cast by the Labor Congress at Bristol, England, recently. A vote was carried pledging its support to the government in the war by a majority on a card vote of 900,000. A resolution definitely approving of the action of the Labor M. P.'s who have helped recruiting was carried by a majority of 1,641,000 votes, only 206,000 votes being registered against it. By 1,796,000 votes to 219,000 votes the Congress condemned conscription, but by a majority of 1,405,000 it approved of labor representatives entering the Coalition government.

—The opening of the spring weather has turned the attention of tourists and residents to the incomparable panorama of scenic views to be enjoyed on the railway train that corkscrews its way up the sides of Mt. Tamalpais. The course is known as the crookedest railway in the world. The noble old mountain hallowed by Indian traditions, is within twelve miles of San Francisco, by ferry and train, and affords a rare view of some eight counties, the distant estuaries of San Francisco Bay and the rolling Pacific Ocean reaching to the horizon. No visitor to San Francisco should miss this memorable trip up the mountain, and a visit to lovely Muir Woods on its southern flank.

Wedding Presents.—The choicest variety to select from at Marsh's, who is now permanently located at Post and Powell streets.

The above photograph conveys Mr. Jesse T. Banfield's conception of "Autumn." The leaves are falling and the forest looks desolate, and the young woman bends her head and lets her hair fall in sympathy with her environment.

Copyrighted. Photo by Jesse T. Banfield.

Mardi Gras Pictures

Owing to extraordinary demands for the Mardi Gras Pictures of the Participants published with the SAN FRANCISCO NEWS LETTER of March 11th, the edition was entirely sold out. We have printed a second edition on heavy coated paper suitable for framing.

Price 10 Cents

SAN FRANCISCO
 THE CITY OF THE FUTURE
 NEWS LETTER
 AND
 CALIFORNIA ADVERTISER

Devoted to the Leading Interests of California and the Pacific Coast.

Vol. XCI

San Francisco, Cal., Saturday, March 18, 1916

No. 12

The SAN FRANCISCO NEWS LETTER AND CALIFORNIA ADVERTISER is printed and published every Saturday by the Proprietor, Frederick Marriott, 21 Sutter street, San Francisco, Cal. Tel. Kearny 3594 Entered at San Francisco, Cal., Post-office as second-class mail matter.

Chicago Office—Geo. Hische, 1310 Westminster, Westminster Building, Chicago.

London Office—George Street & Co., 30 Cornhill, E. C., England.

Matter intended for publication in the current number of the SAN FRANCISCO NEWS LETTER AND CALIFORNIA ADVERTISER should be sent to the office not later than 5 p. m. Wednesday.

Subscription Rates (including postage)—1 year, $4.00; 6 months, $2.25; Foreign—1 year, $6.00; 6 months, $3.25.

—Isn't it about time for Ford to start a peace expedition into Mexico?

—Here is Roosevelt's chance to do some more rough riding instead of indulging in a lot of rough talking.

—Nobody will consent to become violently excited over the fact that Portugal has got into the war.

—If automobiles keep on testing their prowess by climbing that Duncan street hill they will wear it out.

—The members of the School Board have been setting such a noble example to the youth of the city in the way of self-restraint.

—Naked Mexican caught running around the streets the other day and thrown into jail. He's safer there than he would be with Villa.

—Bryan says he approves of Wilson's course in ordering an invasion of Mexico. Somebody must have put a stick into his grapejuice.

—A bunch of red hair was found clutched in the fingers of a man murdered in this city a few nights ago. Caught red-headed, as it were.

—Our little chase after Villa, which some of us are fond of speaking of as a "war," would even be dignified by the name of a skirmish in Europe.

—Friend Husband is puzzled over the fact that though Friend Wife is wearing abbreviated skirts, the dressmakers' bills are not abbreviated.

—Chickens caught running loose in Wheatland are to be taken to the pound. That's no way to treat a girl even if she is straying loose around the streets.

—Nurse named Hoss fell and broke her leg. Her patient, rushing out to see what was the matter, slipped and broke an arm. That was a hoss on both of them.

—Woman who arrived here on a Pacific liner last week wanted a refund on meals because of seasickness. The accounts did not state whether she wanted to be paid for those she missed or those she lost, or both.

—Trapper in the Sierras reports that he has received $400 for a lot of bat skins he sent East. He should be able to go on quite a bat with that.

—If Dr. Aked doesn't meet with more success in promoting the Ford peace plans in Europe, he will have to take out a flivver agency in order to make a showing.

—Boy steals forty dollars and spends nearly half of it for soda pop. Which is a perfectly good reason for prohibiting soda pop as a beverage that leads youth to crime.

—As the beagles are not having much success in catching the jack rabbits, why doesn't society change its brand of excitement by having the bunnies chase the dogs?

—San Francisco dealer, accused of selling bad eggs to the government, says the charge is a rotten libel, and that he hasn't been working any shell game on Uncle Sam.

—Madame Rosika Schwimmer has quit the Ford Peace Board in Stockholm. As she was one of its most warlike members, the cause of peace has not been appreciably hurt.

—Boston man has been sent to prison for three years for killing a newspaper man. Some judges who have come under the journalistic probe would have given him a pension.

—Competition among undertakers has caused an Oroville man to bury the indigent dead of the county at one cent each. But the bargain price will not make burial any more popular.

—Art Smith, aviator, who sued for divorce on the charge that his wife had a lot of affinities, has been named correspondent in another suit. Isn't that enough to make one go up in the air?

—The Supervisors have decided to enlarge instead of abolish the board of moving picture censors, giving it nine members instead of three. Two steps backward instead of one forward.

—The usual Lenten fiction is being published in the newspapers to the effect that society has ceased its activities for forty days, poked its head into the ashes and draped its lately uncovered back in sackcloth.

—The Philadelphia housewives' league has put a boycott on sugar because of the raise in price. When the matinee girl does the same thing by cutting out her candy supply it will be time for the sugar men to show alarm.

—The newspapers have been excitedly telling in the headlines of a man who had his foot caught and crushed between two timbers, and to get out of the trap cut off "his own leg." It is comforting to have the ownership of the leg specified, so that the reader need have no misapprehension as to who suffered the amputation.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

VILLA AND THE WORK OF MEXICAN REACTIONARIES.

If Villa and his miscreants were creating the presents disturbances in Mexico on their own initiative, the task of rigorously suppressing them would be comparatively easy. Unfortunately there is a cabal of reactionary leaders, ex-revolutos, land barons and influential leaders of certain factions there, as well as strong financial interests on this side of the line, who are determined to acquire control of the government of Mexico, and continue to exploit it, as was done so craftily in the days of Dias. Villa is notoriously in the pay of this element. The very boldness of his raid betrays his purpose and his backers. President Carranza has shown signs of ability in replacing Mexico on its governmental feet. His crafty opponents were fearful that he might succeed, and they planned the recent raid of Villa into United States territory in order to embroil Carranza into international trouble, a situation that would offer them wider opportunities to pry him from his position. President Carranza must suppress this nest of hornets before he will be able to bring peace to Mexico, a contest that he will find far more difficult than when he destroyed the followers of Huerta and his other Mexican rivals for the presidency.

Perforce this country was compelled to take military action against the raid of Villa and his followers, and thus the reactionaries in Mexico scored the point they desired. Now it rests with President Carranza to flank them if possible by a strategic move in diplomacy and this, at the present writing, he is endeavoring to do at Washington. His proposition is simple: he asks that if the American troops are given the privilege to venture into Mexican territory in pursuit of Villa and his band that Mexican troops shall have the same privilege of pursuing him should he seek to escape into United States territory. This proposition is pro forma, of course, and is intended as a diplomatic maneuver that saves the dignity of his position and his country for there is only one chance in a thousand that Villa will leave his comparatively safe retreat in the fastness of the Mexican mountains to seek a retreat within the American border. To back his request, Carranza cites the cases of two raids by Indian bands from the United States that invaded Mexico. In 1880 and 1896. In these cases, "it was agreed between the two governments to permit the respective passage of armed forces, resulting in the extermination of the Indians." Carranza asks this government to pursue a like course in the present case in order to solve future difficulties, should they arise. He is firm in the declaration that if this government will not concede this request his government will oppose with all its power any invasion of Mexican territory by U. S. troops in pursuit of Villa. It is very likely that this diplomatic point will be satisfactory to both parties. Meanwhile, General Funston is rushing adequate preparations for a successful capture of Villa and his band. Carranza is also sending Mexican troops from the south to assist in their round up. The hunt will be a much harder one than ended the notorious Sontag-Evans band in Ventura County, this State. Villa knows every coyote hiding place and lizard's retreat in the fastnesses of Northern Mexico, and he realizes that he will never be taken alive. Like Evans and Sontag he will have the sympathy of the settlers wherever he hides, and most of them will furnish him with information regarding the movements of his pursuers; but as in the case of Evans and Sontag, and scores of other pursued bandits, some settler or follower is likely to betray his hiding place for the reward that will privately be offered. Every bandit, like every dog, has his day, and Villa is soldier of fortune enough to enjoy the chase while it lasts.

PREPAREDNESS—Johnson in Saturday Evening Post.

Villa's elimination from the political map of harried Mexico unfortunately does not clear the governmental situation, for these same reactionaries that are backing Villa's villainies can be counted on to supply another bogey to block, if possible, the administration of Carranza as President of Mexico. They will always strike to keep him in international difficulties, a form of irritation that reaches the very core of the present Pan-American sense and sentiment. Mexico will eventually find its feet, but at sad cost and sacrifice on account of these reactionaries who must win or drop into obscurity.

PROSPERITY WAVE RISING IN THE EAST.

Gasoline, sugar, paper and other commodities, together with the high cost of living, continue to mount in price till those people existing on restricted salaries or incomes wonder how they are going to make the two ends meet. The West is outside the super-profitable war munition zone, and so far has not experienced the big prosperity business wave which is deluging the East. Manager Woods of the St. Francis Hotel and John Tait of cabaret fame, who recently returned from a personally conducted tour into the heart of hotel and theatrical life in Gotham, recounted tales of the lavish expenditures of those enjoying the gay life along Broadway and Fifth avenue. Other prominent local capitalists have returned from their Eastern trips with like stories. Prices are advancing horizontally in the East. The recent voluntary advances in wages made by some of the big national corporations contributes in a measure to this rise. Low stocks in many lines of wares and goods have created a sharp demand and naturally prices are boosted. At the same time there is an inclination among certain manufacturers and producers to advance their prices under the mendacious claim that the war forces them to do so. In this particular the war is being exercised as a scape goat too persistently by these charlatans, especially in gasoline, paper and certain chemicals. In the beligerent countries the governments are taking drastic action against any merchants or agents who attempt to advance prices above the level set by natural supply and demand.

Since the war began, the balance of trade in favor of this country has climbed to $2,178,000,000, an extraordinary showing which gives this country a new position among the few money lending nations of the world. With the close of the war this huge accumulation of gold will naturally flow towards the depleted treasure chests of the European nations, where it will be used to finance their governments and pay for rebuilding properties destroyed by the war. Such a movement of gold to Europe would largely prevent inflation in this country. Every effort is being made by the leading financial interests of this country to shape the present thriving foreign trade so that it will readily and naturally slip into the new channels which are expected from the readjustments occasioned by the close of the war, readjustments that are expected to make this country stronger and greater in the realms of finance and trade throughout the world.

HATCHETS AT WORK IN THE REPUBLICAN CAMP. The acrimonious rivalry in this State between the camps of the two wings of the Republican party reflects the condition of that organization in most of the States. In Massachusetts, there is a cat and dog contest underway that fairly eclipses the splenetic exchanges of heavy calibre shells being fired daily in this State. The Massachusetts imbroglio is said to have put the nails in the coffin of Roosevelt's aspiration for the nomination. It furnished an opening for La Follette to shy his castor into the ring, a "come back" that was due him on account of the ragged way he was treated by certain inimical interests that four years ago blockaded his chances of getting into the presidential race. Roosevelt was not the least of the sinners, according to the followers of La Follette. La Follette was the original leader of the Progressive party till Roosevelt captured the leadership. La Follette will be more largely backed by delegates to the Republican convention at Chicago, this year, and is billed to punch big holes in the plans of the combination that treated him so unmercifully at the last convention. All signs indicate that the forthcoming convention will be a hum-digger in settling old grudges. Locally, the Earl group of Republicans are stirring the spleen of the "regulars" by their success in getting political results. At present they are doing very clever work in Alameda County, a Republican stronghold only second in power and voting strength to the leader, Los Angeles County. Only 33,800 signatures are required to nominate the Republican convention candidates, and the side that gets them first will have a strong edge on its rival. All kinds of charges are being bandied, but these are usually regarded as passing courtesies under the conditions.

AMUSEMENTS AS A PANACEA FOR WAR'S WOES. Amusements list high among the antidotes of war for sustaining a people through an indurating stress. Almost from the time of the opening gun, Germany and England have been coping with that problem. Naturally, their methods diverge along certain lines occasioned by temperament, but on the whole, each nation responds to fundamental responses in the human animal. Each government approaches the matter at a different angle of the compass. Germany, while rigidly enforcing the strictest frugality in clothing and food reserves, at the same time urged abundant recreation as a principle of sound economy. Every musician that was not qualified to join the colors at the front, was mustered into the many bands organized to play German operas and symphonies. Theatres are kept open in all cities and towns for the production of the plays of Goethe, Schiller and other popular native dramatists. Shakespeare is also lavishly produced, for the Germans insistently claim the great bard as their own, on the ground that his ancestors originally emigrated to Angleland from German soil. All the museums and art galleries are kept open while German home games while away the evening hours throughout the land.

As usual, it required many months, after the opening of the war, for England to find herself from a proper sport point of view. Quite naturally the conservative Briton insisted on keeping up his polo, hockey, football, horse racing and cricket. When the nation awoke to the awful prospects of the war, a counter current of intense feeling swept over the island insistently demanding that football and horseracing were disgraceful under the circumstances, and a reaction followed for a time. Gradually the English mental balance found itself, and now the nation has buckled down to its old-time sports in conservative shape, and recognized as of "good form." Both countries from their different viewpoints are endeavoring through proper amusements to ease the awful consequences of constant brooding, grief and anxiety.

THEATRICAL MANAGERS vs. OBJECTIONABLE CRITICS. For a decade or so past, New York, the hub of theatrical productions in this country, has had periodical epidemics of theatrical criticism. Of late, the rialto there has been suffering with another attack of this kind, with the result that the State court has just handed down a decision giving a theatric manager the power to exclude newspaper critics from the show if he considers the latter's criticism objectionable. The decision may be based on law and equity, but it seems un-American. The court took the position that a manager has the common-law right to do as he wishes with his property, even to excluding objectionable critics. Certainly such an application on the part of a theatre manager to the courts of the State is a confession that his judgment as a producer of plays is darkly questionable. The wave of erotic plays that rippled over this country reflects the erratic judgment of this class of managers. Theatre critics representing the newspapers, if they err at all under ordinary circumstances, slip on the business side of the paper, and incline to gush praise in favor of a production. Though the theatre managers of New York now have the bat in their hands to prevent blacklisted critics from entering their theatres, regular theatre patrons will quickly reason that there must be something weak about the show when such unusual efforts are enforced against having the truth published. Throughout the brightest and greatest periods of the history of the drama, free criticism did most to elevate it. Under restrictions and censors the drama has languished, and the attendant public has been forced to take such pleasure in homœopathic doses.

Fortunately for America at large, this New York decision covers only the jurisdiction of that State. Not until the United States Supreme Court passes on the question will the other States of the Union be bound with like restriction, and that time, let us hope, is long distant, if public opinion has any influence, and we think it has, in a public pleasure so vital to the people.

TOWN CRIER

—Smart Hillsborough is certainly in a distingue class socially, politically, patronizingly, modishly, concertedly, platonically, but not bibulously, except perhaps on certain unusually dry days at the club house. This unique distinction is illustrated in the recent raid which the Hillsborough clans made on Easton, a Lilliputian town of seventy broad acres and a solitary mansion lying on the north side of Hillsborough and named after Millionaire Easton. On April 10th next, both towns will hold an election to vote that Hillsborough shall absorb Easton and acquire its broad acreage of mellow atmosphere and one resident. On that memorable occasion the proceedings will surpass any Gilbert and Sullivan paradoxical situation. The band will play the gems of ragtime, daylight fireworks will pop, and the enthusiastic populace of Hillsborough will cheer riotously when Ansel Easton walks into the library of his home and solemnly deposits the solitary vote that transfers the municipal government of Easton to lordly Hillsborough. Ansel Easton assembles in his own suit of clothes the total voting population of Easton. A regularly impaneled board of election officers will gravely deposit his lonely vote in the ballot box, and then place their three pairs of feet on the library table, gape at the ceiling and then fix their eyes on the wall clock and silently watch the hour hand move its slow pace towards six o'clock, which marks the closing time of the voting booth. In this wise will the famous town of Easton be pried from the geographical map and Hillsborough acquire a lordly domain, shoving its northern line 476 feet nearer the British possessions on the North American continent. Nothing in the nature of war is contemplated in this geographical extension.

—Berkeley has produced another extraordinary bud in the present feminist movement. Violette Wilson, the nineteen year old daughter of J. Stitt Wilson, former socialistic Mayor of Berkeley, has left home to develop her soul. Why she selected Los Angeles as the developing environment even the prophet who proclaimed Los Angeles chemically pure is unable to answer. The first clause in her emancipation proclamation of the human soul is that "parental authority should be defied." That is a stale and somewhat overworked pronouncement to emanate from any member of the feminist movement, and the only excuse for it comes from the Rip Van Winkle splash of color on the landscape where this idealistic soul was developed, Berkeley. Most of the girls raised between San Francisco and Milpitas have been kicking their skirts and "defying parental authority" since the water came up to Montgomery street. Some of them have gone so far on the pilgrimage as to reach the "soul kiss," while others like "Big Bertha" have been content to tarry at an inn beside the road of life and eat fried sausages and dwell in content. Others have boldly grabbed meal tickets in breeches and have shelved their souls till the high price of auras, due to the feminist movement, settles down again to the bargain counter basis. It's a long way to Tipperary, but a deuced sight longer way in seeking a satisfactory soul message via the Los Angeles route, as Miss Wilson will discover.

—San Francisco's lack of a proper opera house in which to give an adequate performance is strikingly exhibited by the productions now being given at the Cort Theatre.

—As forecasted in the News Letter some weeks ago, a big rumpus has developed in the contractor's camp over the "skinning" of laborers employed in building the new railroad into Hetch-Hetchy for the purpose of transporting the necessary supplies for constructing the big dams to supply this city with water. According to the despatches, when the laborers discovered that they were being robbed they gathered up a lot of impedimenta in the camp and blew up the pile with dynamite. The Board of Supervisors have been asked to investigate the situation, but any one familiar with local proceedings of that character will readily understand that the laborers as usual will be left in the pickle. The "ring" will be strong enough to bring about that result. Charges were made by laborers that they were held up for $10 each to get their jobs, and were mulcted $1.50 per day for bed and board. Working as they are under a State law, each laborer is entitled to $3 per day. It also develops that the eight hour day law was "beaten" by shifting the men into small gangs and dubbing them "contractors." This notorious method in systematically robbing the floating laborers of the State should be vigorously attacked by the Commissioner of labor. Hundreds of thousands of dollars are robbed annually from these workers and divided as spoil between rapacious employment agents and the labor bosses in the working camps. The explosion of the dynamite in this instance is not a marker of what will develop if these shameless practices are not stopped. California is already too notorious in this respect, as the records attest.

—The ordinary impecunious clerk who makes his supper on a ham sandwich and a cup of what purports to be coffee, will tangle the expression of his mug with a grin, astonishment and a goggle-eyed trance as he reads of the distribution of the $20,000,000 estate of the late James B. Haggin, pioneer, lawyer, financier, mining man and breeder of speedy horseflesh. Half of this estate is located in California and the remainder in New York, where Haggin had his late residence. Each half of the estate is mulcted of $1,000,000 in payment of the inheritance tax. In California $500,000 has just been paid; the other $500,000 will have to pay 10 per cent additional because it is overdue. This estate is by far the biggest that has gone through probate here since the new inheritance tax was imposed, and it easily holds the record. The nearest estate to approach it in value was that of the late Honolulu sugar king, W. G. Irwin, whose estate was appraised at $5,375,800, on which was paid an inheritance tax of about $422,000. The present war is developing a new breed of multimillionaires, financial barons, as well as ordinary shoe clerks, cripples and widows, which seems to indicate that there is to be an unusually long open season for the latter class. Some kind reader should propose a Tombola or a Mardi Gras.

—The story of the frightened girl student at the State University at Berkeley, who let a pipette slip during a laboratory experiment, last week, and flooded her mouth with myriads of typhoid fever germs, proved to be an easy case to handle compared with a committee of three ladies who applied to the Democratic State Central Committee for places on the electoral ticket for the Presidency. Their mouths were full of words, words, words, and the Niagara torrent that gushed forth sent the doughty committeemen scotting to the woods; thereby again illustrating the assinine policy of unpreparedness. In the case of the University student the germs were effaced by a drench of 80 per cent alcohol. A stream of hot steam was turned on the forceful, flowing pleas of the three determined skirted aspirants for places on the Democratic presidential electoral ticket, but the steam was met with such scorn that it shriveled to icicles.

The Confessions of Tolstoy

"So long as I am alive, I shall not dare to let my thoughts be known."

When Tolstoy died on November 20, 1910, he left all his literary property to his daughter and sole executrix, Countess Alexandra Tolstoy, but four years of litigation ensued, and it was not until last March that the ownership of the property, which included a number of unpublished manuscripts, was finally settled by the Russian Senate.

These manuscripts include Tolstoy's diaries, and the first volume of these, covering the years 1895-1899, has now been published in Moscow. No clues to the true mind and heart of Tolstoy could be more valuable than those contained in these diaries, of which the first installment has now been edited by his friend, disciple and fellow-worker, Chertkov.

From these disjointed jottings of his latter years may be gleaned innumerable straws, showing Tolstoy the man in a different aspect from Tolstoy the author of impassioned polemics or Tolstoy the master of misanthropic and pitiless characterization.

According to the memoirs of one of his secretaries, Tolstoy was once asked during a walk by a companion to express an opinion upon feminism. His reply was: "So long as I am alive I shall not dare let my thoughts be known."

On the doctrine of non-resistance Tolstoy wrote:

"Our world is governed by violence—that is, by hatred. Therefore, the majority of those who constitute society, its dependent, weakly members—women, children and the unintelligent—are reared by malignity and join the ranks of hatred. But if the world were governed by Reason and Love, then this majority would be reared in Love and would join its ranks. To this end, Reason and Love must persistently assert their existence.

"Non-resistance to evil is important, not only because man ought to act in this way for his own sake to realize the perfection of Love, but also because it is non-resistance alone which can put an end to evil, absorbing it, neutralizing it, putting an end to its continuance—which is like the continuance of motion in a rebounding ball, if there be no force to absorb it. Christianity does not consist in actively creating Christianity, but in absorbing evil."

In another passage he draws a distinction between strength and force:

"The most general opinion of Christianity, especially among those new followers of Nietzsche, is that it involves the renunciation of one's dignity, is meanness, subserviency. Quite the contrary. First of all, true Christianity demands the highest consciousness of one's dignity: a tremendous strength and resolution. Quite the contrary; the worshippers of strength must cringe before strength itself."

The high literary standing of women—e. g., George Eliot, George Sand, etc.—is admitted but explained away, and, to a real extent, deprecated:

"The chief thing in an artistic production is the author's soul. That is why amongst productions of average values those of women are better and more interesting. A woman on occasion speaks out her innermost soul, and that is what is wanted, for you see at once that her love is a real thing, although she makes you believe that it is something different.

"When an author writes, we put our ear to his breast, listen and say: 'Draw in a breath; if there is anything hidden, we shall discover it.' Women do not know how to conceal. Men, on the contrary, having grasped the method of writing, immediately hide themselves behind their style, and the reader sees nothing but the stupidity of the writer. The most precious thing—the soul—is invisible.

1897—"One wonders on first thought why stupid people have such an imposing tone. But this is only right. Otherwise nobody would listen to them."

"Why is it that villains are always most keen supporters of despotism? Because under an ideal rule, which gives everybody according to his merits, they would fare very badly. Under a despotic rule, however, anything might happen."

"Why is it so agreeable to travel? Because that is the very emblem of life; life is a journey."

"Freedom is given to men to commit suicide if they so desire. The Lord does not want slaves in this life, but free workers. If one chooses to live, it means that one regards the conditions of work here as advantageous to oneself. In that case one must work conscientiously."

"Artists who possess but average genius always create something of average value, never anything very bad. But a recognized genius creates either real masterpieces or something exceedingly bad. Such are Shakespeare, Goethe, Beethoven, Bach and others."

"It is not so disastrous or so harmful to lie to others as to lie to oneself. Lying to others is sometimes, but an innocent game to satisfy one's vanity; but to lie to oneself is always a perversion of the truth, a step back, a neglecting of the demands of life."

"A man can lead a worldly life only by thinking himself infallible; neither can he lead a spiritual life unless he regards himself as a miserable sinner."

"The most precious thing in life is our good relation with other people. Good relations are not established through speech; on the contrary, they are spoiled by too much talking. You must speak little, especially with those with whom you wish to be on friendly terms."

"Nothing is so soothing to the heart as the recognition of one's faults, and nothing hardens it more than the belief in one's righteousness."

A favorite fatalistic notion of Tolstoy's was that the future should be left to look after itself. Attempts even to "rough-hew our ends" are futile:

1898—"Immediately one begins to think about the future, one descends to mere chicanery. If you are only patient enough this and that will happen. But that is madness! And it is bound to come, for to think about the future is the beginning of lunacy."

1899—"There is no future. The future is made by us."

Again he writes:

"All attempts to live on earth, and provide for oneself by one's own labors, are unsuccessful and cannot be successful in Russia, because a man of our education, in order to provide for his living, must compete with the peasant. The peasant fixes the prices, beating them down by his offers. He has been through generations fitted to lead a hard life of heavy work. We, on the other hand, are through generations fitted to lead a luxurious life and spend our time in idleness. It does not, however, follow that one must give up the idea of supporting oneself by one's own labors; but the results cannot be expected in the first generation."

Here there is a note of pessimism. It is found again the same year:

"I looked on the numerous sons of N—, how they stood there in their overcoats. He is bringing them up, making men of them. What for? You will say that you live as you live for your children's sake. Why? Why do you bring up a generation of deceived slaves, who do not know what they live for, and drag out such a joyless existence?"

—Hoyle—My dentist was a German reservist. He is fighting for the Fatherland. Doyle—Administering gas, I presume?—Town Topics.

CHAMPAGNE

PIPER-HEIDSIECK

Anc^{ne} M^{on} HEIDSIECK fondee en 1785
KUNKELMANN & C^o Succ^{rs}

REIMS

CHARLES MEINECKE & Co.

AGENTS PACIFIC COAST 314 SACRAMENTO ST., S. F.

The week has been set to the music of grand opera, and society now converses about music in that perfect pitch which comes from sustained opera-going. All the music lovers with bulging bank accounts took seats for every night, and went on a regular musical debauch. After the opera the smart cafes were crowded, and the dancing set whirled through the accustomed glides and slides and dips of the dance, the restrictions of Lent apparently placing no embargo on the dance. There is no doubt that each year finds the inhibitions and prohibitions of Lent less rigorously observed by society.

There was a time, within our own musical memory, when it was considered a very daring thing to produce opera during Lent, and San Francisco was one of the few places in America that a manager counted as a fairly safe Lenten risk—and there were many San Franciscans who resented the safety of that risk. But now Society never questions the propriety of going to the opera, and apparently there is not much question about after-opera diversion.

Mrs. Fred Sharon, who by many is considered the best amateur pianist in San Francisco, Mrs. Casserly, Mrs. Fred Kohl, Mrs. Francis Carolan, Mrs. "Ferdic" Theriot and the other society women who have never let the smart set diversions interfere with their study of music, always convert the potential quiet of Lent into an actuality, and cram that margin of quiet and study. It is women of this sort who help to give to San Francisco its reputation for appreciation—for at the concerts, symphonies and opera one always finds them listening intelligently to the music without any clothes consciousness.

Apropos of clothes consciousness, Mrs. Richard Lounsberry, who is visiting here with her sister-in-law, Mrs. Ben Ali Lounsberry, remarked the other day to the friends with whom she was enjoying tea after a matinee performance, that she had never seen such "rapt" audiences as we presented this week. She found none of that disconcerting stir and flutter that clothes and jewels beget in a Metropolitan audience. Some one suggested that perhaps it is because we don't present the same incentive, our jewels and gowns not being so loaded with dazzle dust to throw into the eyes of the bystanders. But Mrs. Lounsberry insists that there is so much musical appreciation per square aisle in the body of the house that a box party in all the naked and jeweled splendor of New York could not seriously interfere with the vibrations of the music.

For the most part, there has been little formal entertaining during the opera season. The Burlingame crowd has the "Dutch" treat habit so well ingrained now that no one minds getting up a party to do this, that, or the other thing—every man his own financial backer. There was a time when it took much apology and a bit of daring to suggest such a thing, but now even those who hold their reputation for generosity most precious have no compunctions about suggesting these pay-as-you-enter parties. During the opera season there were innumerable coteries that made up parties to enjoy the music and supper afterwards.

The success of the Fashion Show here has encouraged Santa Barbara to follow suit—not only street suits, but bathing suits and evening gowns, and all the gamut of clothes which ran at the Palace Hotel.

The general plan of that affair will be followed at Santa Barbara rather than the Fashion Show which was staged at Scottish Rite Hall for the French War Sufferers. Now that both shows are in the limbo of the past, there is general agreement that while the affair for the French was a very pretty series of tableaux, with many pretty surprises in arrangement, as a genuine Fashion Show it was not comparable with the affair staged at the Palace for the benefit of local charities. The Palace affair, like the recent Fashion Shows in New York, gave a vivid exposition of the modes, and one carried away a better idea of the newest fashions than could be obtained by reading all the fine print in the latest fashion magazines.

Wherefore, many of the frocks worn at this show will be sent to Santa Barbara, and will be donned by the belles of that town, assisted by some of the mannikins who helped to make a success here. Miss Marion Newhall has half-consented to go to Santa Barbara to take part in the Show there.

Letters from San Pedro, where the California guests of the Jackling party journeyed before embarking on the yacht, tell of the good times on the train and the auspicious sailing weather. A very congenial party set forth from San Francisco, the local guests including the Walter Martins and Miss Marjorie Josselyn. They will be joined at Panama by a number of New York bankers who have for the time being left their "war babies" in the care of competent nurses! Hayden, one of the New York men who will join the party, is credited with having increased his bank account some fifteen millions during the last year. The entire party will return to San Francisco after a tour of South America, and local society will have an opportunity to entertain the New York contingent in the party.

The recent registration would afford a very interesting study on the increasing occupational ambitions of women. The business woman usually yearns for a home, and would love to have a hearthside for a background, whereas the "home" woman who has read literature by the great Northern lights, with special illumination on Ibsen and Ellen Key, hates to write herself down as that most "amateurish" of beings, a home-maker.

Wherefore, one finds that women have registered vocations of which their most intimate friends have never suspected them. Who, for example, has ever known that Mrs. Will Crocker is a farmer. No one would have known either by scrutiny of her daily life, or inspection of her wardrobe, that her chief business in life is being a farmer; yet Mrs. Crocker's pen never wavered for an instant when it came to filling out her registration blank. She had made up her mind to be a farmer for all voting purposes, and firmly she wrote herself down as a farmer.

Mrs. Crocker has always taken a keen interest in the development of New Place, and she has taken a great interest in the "back to the land" movement. But the woman who is actually trying to make a ranch earn a living, who is getting up at three in the morning to turn the eggs over in the incubator, who is struggling to make payments and hold down the farm, would doubtless suggest that Mrs. Crocker is an agriculturist rather than a farmer!

Some one suggested to Mrs. Fred Kohl that she register as

When Mother Needs Help

EVERY mother of twins who has enough milk for one baby only, faces a serious problem. It is advisable to give each baby three breast feedings daily, supplementing these with three bottle feedings—for a little mother's milk is better than none. Thousands of mothers who could not nurse their babies have brought them safely through the dangerous first year with

Gail Borden
EAGLE
BRAND
CONDENSED
MILK
THE ORIGINAL

For nearly sixty years "Eagle Brand" has been successfully used as a baby food. It received the only Grand Prize awarded on condensed milk at the recent San Francisco Exposition. Remember that "Eagle Brand" is pure, rich milk—not only a food for babies, but an everyday household necessity. Use it in cooking. Send the coupon today.

Borden's Condensed Milk Company
New York "Leaders of Quality" Est. 1857

Borden's Condensed Milk Co., N. L. 3-16
108 Hudson Street, New York

Please send me the booklets I have checked . . . "BABY'S WELFARE" . . . "BABY'S BIOGRAPHY" . . . "BORDEN'S RECIPES."

Name

Address

"Mistress of the Beagles," and it was further pointed out that she would have the advantage of wearing smart beagling togs to the voting booths, very few occupations these days having the advantage of a special costume. I haven't heard whether Mrs. Kohl accepted this suggestion.

That society has accepted beagling cannot be gainsaid by those who predicted that it was a pastime invented for the sole purpose of adding a new set of sporting clothes to one's wardrobe, and after the newness of the togs had worn off there would be no enthusiasm about following the dogs. But there seems to be an enthusiasm that does not come entirely out of the clothes press. There is no doubt that it will last all through the summer, particularly now that Sunday morning hunt breakfasts bifurcate the day of rest.

At one o'clock last Sunday afternoon, about one hundred beaglers turned into the Templeton Crocker place for a hunt breakfast. Mr. J. Frank Judge, one of the new-comers to these parts, was on hand with his moving picture machine, and got some excellent reels of the scene.

The Crockers had entertained over the week-end the members of the court at the Mardi Gras, and after breakfast Queen Helene and her attendants put on all the royal regalia of fairyland, and in the garden setting of Uplands, the Lotus Queen, the bluebell, rambler rose, nasturtium, jonquil, daisy and all the other flowers and insects of the Mardi Gras were caught on the screen. The Crockers are planning to show both reels at an affair that they will give after the Lenten season.

Mr. and Mrs. William Letts Oliver were entertained at dinner, celebrating their ruby wedding anniversary at the Hotel Oakland Saturday night. Only the members of the immediate family were present. The table decorations were red roses, and for favors the guests received jewels from the famous Tower of Jewels.

The sixty members of the Daughters of the American Revolution met at the Hotel Oakland at 2:30 Monday afternoon in the tapestry room. A delightful tea was served at 4:30. Mrs. Barnes is president of the association.

The University of California Alumni Association will have a dinner and dance at the Hotel Oakland on Thursday, March 23d.

Thursday, March 23d, there will be a dance for the benefit of the Belgian and Servian soldiers at the Hotel Oakland. Mr. G. Van, 1427 Broadway, is in charge of the affair.

Matteo Sandona is giving an unusually attractive exhibition of his most recent canvases at the Civic Auditorium, Oakland, under the auspices of the Museum exhibition of oil paintings and pastels. His characteristic work will more than repay a visit for those interested in modern art. There are also numbers of excellent paintings and pastels on the walls from the brushes of well known local society women who are devotees of art, and also exhibits of well known artists who have won wide reputation. Among them are: Mrs. D. C. Jackling, Mrs. W. H. McKittrick, Mr. W. H. McKittrick, Miss Marion Newhall, Miss Edith Grant, Mrs. T. T. Henshaw, Miss Suzette Greenwood, Miss Mildred Bruner, Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Mullgart, Col. Geo. W. MacFarlane, and Miss Helen Hamilton. Some fifty artists have contributed generously to this exhibition, which will last three weeks.

The California Peace Preparedness Chapter of the Woman's Section of the U. S. Navy League met at the St. Francis Hotel this week. A large and interested audience listened to addresses by the Reverend F. W. Clampett and Commodore Jas. Bull.

—An old negro minister, in a sermon on hell, pictured it as a region of ice and snow, where the damned froze through eternity. "Why do you tell your congregation that hell is a cold place?" asked the visiting bishop. "I don't dare to tell them people nothing else, bishop. Why, if I was to say that hell was warm, some of them old rheumatic niggers would be wanting to start down the first frost."—Harper's Magazine.

—Her Father—The fact is, I cannot give my daughter a dowry just at present. Suitor—That's all right, sir. I can love her for herself alone in the meantime.—Boston Transcript.

THE LOOK.

Strephon kissed me in the spring,
Robin in the fall,
But Colin only looked at me
And never kissed at all.

Strephon's kiss was lost in jest,
Robin's lost in play,
But the kiss in Colin's eyes
Haunts me night and day.

Oh, I have sown my love so wide
That he will find it everywhere;
It will awake him in the night,
It will unfold him in the air.

I set my shadow in his sight
And I have winged it with desire,
That it may be a cloud by day
And in the night a shaft of fire.

What do I owe to you
Who loved me deep and long?
You never gave my spirit wings
Nor gave my heart a song.

But, oh, to him I loved
Who loved me not at all,
I owe the little open gate
That led through heaven's wall.

—Sarah Teasdale in "Rivers to the Sea" (Macmillan.)

Pears'

Pears' is essentially a toilet soap. A soap good for clothes won't benefit face and hands. Don't use laundry soap for toilet or bath. That is, if you value clear skin.

Pears' is pure soap and matchless for the complexion.

Sold in town and village

O'HARA & LIVERMORE

522 Sutter Street, near Powell

Spring Furnishings :-: Easter Gifts

PLEASURE'S WAND

"Obey no wand but Pleasure's."—Tom Moore.

MELODRAMA, MIRTH AND MELODY THIS WEEK

By HENRY McDONALD SPENCER

Alcazar Players Succeed with Full Length War Drama

To the Alcazar must be given the credit for the introduction to local playgoers of the first full length play based on the present war. "Inside the Lines" is straight melodrama, with the inevitable spy, played in this instance with the reverse English, and the audience is not let into the secret until just before the assistant stage manager reaches over to lower the curtain. While the actual identity of Captain Woodhouse (Bert Lytell) is not disclosed until the end, yet, subconsciously, the spectators feel that Mr. Lytell would not fib to Evelyn Vaughn, who played Jane Gerson, a perfectly good American girl, when he told her that she should not judge by appearances; and that something would happen to justify the supposed German spy's actions. While the play has several intense moments, as a well behaved melodrama should have, it will hardly attain the popularity of "Secret Service," which is often quoted as an analogy. The scene is in Gibraltar in August, 1914, and the arrival of a German officer assuming the identity of Captain Woodhouse of the British army is looked for by Teuton plotters. There are a collection of stranded American tourists trying to get home, including that dear old character of the American stage—the god's-own-country-e-pluribus-unum-long-may-she-wave-first-national-bank type—who should be quietly embalmed by now. I do not suppose that even Keewanee, Illinois, Los Angeles or other Middle-Western centers of light and learning, any longer supply such characters. Of course, Lytell had some love scenes with Evelyn Vaughn, intent on a "career" as the buyer for a New York department store, and she assisted him to keep out of trouble. The former is much better suited in the part of an ostensible British officer and supposed spy who turns out to belong to the English Secret Service, than he was in last week's "Traveling Salesman." No more becoming costume has been designed for men since trousers first were worn than the mess uniform of the British army, and the good looking leading man made the most of it. A suggestion to Mr. Lytell: A nostril wide mustache—the British regulation—would have added immensely to his characterization, taken away the actor man effect, and would not have lessened his attraction. Miss Vaughn made the best of a part which is obviously a feeder to the lead, and, of course, it must be admitted that melodrama does not lend itself to any very delicate shading. As the Governor of the Rock, Henry Shumer gave an excellent characterization of a general—an American general that we might see at the Presidio any day, to be sure—nevertheless his performance carried weight and dignity. The British major and spying hotelkeeper were well-portrayed by Beresford Lovett and Ernest Van Pelt, respectively, the former, indeed, being the most "convincing" in the cast. As the Mohammedan traitor against England, Ethelbert D. Hales had a well contrasted part, and got all there was in it; while Mr. William Amsdell makes the most of his rather archaic type of flag-waver, and it is not his fault if the character rings false and reeks of grease paint. As an evening's entertainment the performance was a success.

Orpheum Sketch True Comedy from Gruesome Materials

"Your friends inside will wait for you," said the sexton to the two mourners waiting for admission at the graveyard gates, in "Twice a Week;" and this grim humor in reference to the departed spouses of the visitors to the cemetery is the keynote of a most unusual and excellent sketch, which should be, if it is not, the headliner at the Orpheum this week. Anyway, a more gruesome scene for a humorous play can hardly be imagined, but, as it is written by John B. Hymer, and acted by the piquant Julie Ring, it is true comedy; that is, the comedy arises naturally and inevitably out of the situation, and is not forced by lines or business stuck there like lard in beef, as is the case with the other kind—the wrong kind. A widow and a widower arrive together at the lichen gates, and are obliged to wait while the old sexton fusses over the keys. It develops that their defunct mates were not the models of behavior that they were thought to be, and as the bereaved ones find that they are becoming interested in each other they toss aside their bouquets and beat it to the Antlers' restaurant and cabaret. But apart from the situation there were many lines worth quoting; as when the sexton says that here is not much need to lock-up a graveyard, for:

"Those who are in can't come out," and

"Those who are out don't want to go in."

Which applies equally to a jail, I suppose. Again, the widower, referring to the cemetery, asks the widow if she has a lot. "No," she says, "just one. You see, I was only married once." The playwright was most fortunate in his choice of performers, as the sardonic but delicate humor might well have been marred in less capable hands. Julie Ring, a comedienne with a subdued sparkle, gives just the right shading to the widow, and James Norval was an admirable widower. The sexton, a broader part, was handled acceptably by B. J. Murphy.

Umberto Sacchetti, heralded as coming from the Metropolitan and Boston Opera companies, in no way lived up to expectations. He showed long training and excellent control, but lacked a voice; at least quality was entirely missing. Ivan Bankoff and Lola Girlie gave examples of a number of kinds of dancing, which were, however, principally remarkable as a tour de force; an acrobatic rather than an æsthetic achievement. Mirano Bros. provided a thoroughly European atmosphere to an aerial act.

Florence Roberts, old-time San Franciscan favorite, in "The Eternal Magdalene," Columbia Theatre, next week.

Lilian Fitzgerald was the other newcomer with some saucy impersonations and insouciant fooling which were very pleasing. The two best of last week were holdovers: Dorothy Jardon, of the beautiful figure, lovely back and willing voice; and "The Passion Play of Washington Square," making up a programme which should satisfy the most exacting.

Black-Faced Semi-Circle with Lady Interlocutor at Pantages

"Gee," said the ex-leading lady in the box next to me when the curtain rolled up at Pantages, disclosing Norine Carmen surrounded by a black-faced semi-circle; "Gee, pipe the old-time makeup. If that don't tip her age, may I never get another complimentary." Thus do these lady performers love one another. However, it is just possible that the statuesque and sumptuous Norine decided on this that she might be in keeping with the archaic character of her act. If she did so, she is very subtle. Miss Carmen is the interlocutor and is reminiscent of the dear old days when horses shied at automobiles and before the 110 pound flapper leading lady was invented. She is a true queen of burlesque, and is built on the same plans and specifications as lovely Lilian Russell, the perennial idol of the American public, in spite of the present prevalence of the tubercular type. This revival was most interesting and easily made the hit of the show, displaying the old-time gags, quartettes, solos and break-downs. It was brought up to date by Norine making a second entrance up a runway from the audience.

A broadly humorous sketch in which Andy Lewis is ably assisted by Jack Martin and Vera George, helps along the afternoon; although I would take the liberty of suggesting that the business of using the curtain for a pocket handkerchief might be cut, to advantage. The performing seals have some new features, and must have had long and arduous training, while the burlesque singing of Grace Cameron gets by nicely and shows the seasoned performer. Gymnasts, a sister act by Ruth and Kitty Henry, and other song and dance features, along with the pictures, constitute the program.

Harry Green, who will present the rovelty skit, "The Cherry Tree," next week at the Orpheum.

Love and Comedy Themes of Symphony Concerts

BY BETTY

The eighth pair of concerts opened with Beethoven, included Scheinpflug and Grieg, and ended with Liszt, therein comprising sufficient variety to please all whatever his taste might be.

The Symphony, Beethoven's 4th in B flat Major, which is so seldom played and supposed to have been written under the influence of a grande passion, sings to the heart with infinite sweetness throughout. Especially true is this of the Adagio, which is surpassingly beautiful. I am told that Sunday's rendition was a more perfect one of this work, and regretted my inability to hear it played again.

Scheinpflug's "Overture to a Comedy of Shakespeare," was a very interesting novelty, and served to introduce a modern man and modern methods of handling a theme. Although it necessarily partook of the humor which must needs characterize the comedy it introduced (presumably "Twelfth Night"), yet there is a dignity about the composition which was admirably brought out by Conductor Hertz.

Then we listened to a Lyric Suite, Shepherd Boy, Norwegian Rustic March, Nocturne and Dwarf's March, from the pen of that exceptionally gifted musician of Norway. These compositions were directly inspired by the folk song of Grieg's native land, many times actually transcribed therefrom. Particularly charming was the Bridal March, while the Dwarf's Dance was quite as fanciful in parts as Peer Gynt.

The program concluded with Liszt's "Les Preludes" No. 3, a Symphonic poem which is well known, and which we have heard several times, but never more conscientiously played, which reminds me that I want to quote from a recent edition of a Los Angeles paper, telling how two hundred and fifty thousand dollars were subscribed at one sitting to rear a "Great Temple to Song Muse," while we of prosperous San Francisco withhold the necessary fund to make it possible for our orchestra men to devote the time to rehearsal needed to give us the perfect result which beyond doubt might be attained. The article read: "The dream long cherished by music lovers of Los Angeles, that the city might possess a temple dedicated to song, and become in truth the municipal capital of the Pacific Coast, was brought to realization yesterday afternoon, etc."— and went on to say that the structure would cost close to $300,000, and would be "intended for the exclusive use of the Symphony Orchestra." Incidentally the land was given outright by some one who wished to remain incognito. Now, then, are we going to sit supinely and let our sister city outstrip us, or are we going to "get together" and back up this organization to the accomplishment of better things?

Not Gray Hairs but tired Eyes Make us look older than we are. Old age and Dull Eyes—tell-tale.

Don't Tell Your age

After the Movies go home and Murine your Eyes. Two Drops will rest, refresh and cleanse. Have it handy.

Murine Eye Remedy Company, Chicago. Sends Book of the Eye upon request.

Advance Notices

Columbia Theatre.—When Florence Roberts, in "The Eternal Magdalene," comes to the Columbia Theatre this Sunday night, March 19th, theatre-goers of San Francisco will have an opportunity to see this New York success for the first time. "The Eternal Magdalene" strikes home to every one who sees it. Robert McLaughlin, the author, has shown adeptness at characterization in his play, and the people on the stage are said to be real human beings, whom you have seen and talked with in the ordinary course of life.

The play is written in a straightforward manner, and while the very nature of the subject on which the play is founded calls for a frank discussion, no half-world scenes are dragged in, and no attempt is made to appeal to mawkish sentiment.

Selwyn and Company have assembled a particularly strong company for this presentation of the play. Headed by Miss Roberts, the organization includes: Edmund Elton, Millard Vincent, Frances Younge, Carrington North, Perce Benton, Arthur Davis, Brian Darley, Taylor Carroll, George La Roe, June Janin, Howard Smith and James E. Smith. During the engagement of "The Eternal Magdalene," matinees will be given on Wednesdays and Saturdays. The engagement will be of two weeks' duration.

Orpheum.—Each of the nine acts in the Orpheum program next week will be entirely new. Harry Green, who, it will be remembered, scored a hit in the laughable farce "The Partners," not only in this country but also in London, is now heading a little company of his own, and is presenting a farce called "The Cherry Tree," which contains a moral disguised in comic attire, dealing with those who suffer through veracity.

Gara Zora India's latest exponent of symbolic dances will be seen in "Dance of the Elements," which includes "The Spirit of the Storm," "The Nymph of the Wave" and "The Goddess of Flame." William Hallen and Ethel Hunter will present a skit called "Just for Fun," in which Miss Hunter plays the violin and Mr. Hallen displays his ability as a comedy song artist. Harry Hines, who has been associated with various vaudeville teams, styles his act "The 58th Variety." It is composed of descriptive songs and comic lines. Thomas Dugan and Babette Raymond produce a funny skit called "They Auto Know Better." Olga Cook, a singing comedienne with a personality, will contribute amusing ditties. Dupree and Dupree will present a bicycle and unicycle riding act. The twelfth and final installment of the "Uncle Sam at Work" motion picture, entitled "The Heart of a Nation," will be shown. A special feature of the bill will be the popular George Damerel of "Merry Widow" fame, supported by Myrtle Vail, Edward Hume and a number of beautiful girls in the fantastic comedy, "Temptation," the music and lyrics of which were composed by William B. Friedlander. The book has for its author Will M. Hough.

San Francisco Symphony Orchestra.—The ninth pair of concerts of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra's 1915-1916 season will be given at the Cort Theatre next Friday afternoon at three o'clock and next Sunday afternoon at two-thirty o'clock. Mr. Hertz has prepared a program that has several unusual features, the most interesting being the first performance anywhere of "The Pied Piper," a symphonic Poem by Frederick Jacobi, a native San Franciscan and a brother of Mrs. I. W. Hellman, Jr. For the first time at concerts of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra two complete symphonies will be given on one program. One of the symphonies, the G Major (Breitkopf & Hartel edition, No. 13) of Franz Josef Haydn, born at Rohrau, Lower Austria, March 31, 1732, died at Vienna, May 31, 1809, is the shortest symphony ever played at a concert of the orchestra, and employs the least number of instruments. The Symphony, C Major (Breitkopf & Hartel, edition No. 7) of Franz Schubert, born at Lichtenthal, Vienna, January 31, 1797, died at Vienna, November 19, 1828, is the longest symphony ever played at a concert of the orchestra. Schubert never heard his symphony, as he died before it was performed. Mr. Jacobi, as befitting a native San Franciscan, gives us in his Symphonic Poem, "The Pied Piper," music of the most advanced sort. Still in manuscript form, Conductor Hertz and the musicians have the work in daily rehearsal, and it has made a deep impression upon the conductor and the members of the orchestra. An original composer, Mr. Jacobi, scored his work for all the instruments of the modern orchestra. The tone combinations and orchestral effects give Mr. Jacobi's "Pied Piper" a sense of "bigness."

Strong Bill at Pantages.—What is promised by the management to be the best eight act bill that the Pantages has offered its patrons in years will open at the popular Market street vaudeville house with "The Mystic Bird" topping the show. "The Mystic Bird" is a live canary which answers calls and melodies that are played on the violin by Master Paul, who works in the act. The lad and the canary have a duet, "The Mocking Bird," which is a genuine novelty. "The La Scala Sextet," composed of six well known grand opera stars that have appeared here, will render excerpts from standard operas. The sextette numbers Signora Bianca, Mme. Jennings, Signora Silva, Signor Brava, Signor Puccinni and Signor Reubens. "The Dairy Maids," a musical "tab" in three scenes, starring Eddie Foley and Lea Lutere and a flock of pretty maids; Yates and Wheeler in a singing novelty; Angelo Armita and his brothers, tumblers; Wright and Davis in "The Love Insurance Agent," are other features. The closing chapter of "The Red Circle" and the opening episode of the latest Pathe serial, "The Iron Claw," will also be shown.

W. D. Fennimore J. W. Davis A. R. Fennimore

California Optical Co.

Makers of Good Glasses

181 Post Street }
2508 Mission St. } San Francisco
1221 Broadway, Oakland

San Francisco Home of Most Important Lens Grinding Industry

There is located in San Francisco a lens grinding industry which is attracting the attention of optical people throughout the United States. A lens has been developed and perfected for far and near seeing which has revolutionized lens manufacturing. Only the highest skilled men are entrusted with this most intricate work for the secret of its success is due to the great accuracy in grinding. Distortion between the reading and distance portions is entirely overcome, each part of the lens being optically perfect. This inimitable lens is known under the trade name of "Caltex."

Pantages' Theatre

Market Street Opposite Mason

Commencing Sunday, March 19th

THE SEASON'S GREATEST SHOW

Master Paul presents the Marvelous Vaudeville Novelty, "THE MYSTIC BIRD" A Live Canary That Actually Whistles Musical Selections; LA SCALA SEXTET, International Grand Opera Stars, Excerpts from Standard Operas; Roland West Presents Eddie Foley and Lea Lutere and Fourteen Show Girls in "THE DAIRY MAIDS" A Musical Confection in Three Scenes; Closing Chapter of the Thrilling Serial "THE RED CIRCLE" and Opening Episode of the Sensational Pathe Mystery Story "THE IRON CLAW."

Orpheum

O'Farrell Street Bet. Stockton and Powell
Phone Douglas 70

Week beginning THIS SUNDAY AFTERNOON. MATINEE EVERY DAY.

AN ENTIRELY NEW SHOW

HARRY GREEN & CO. in the Novelty skit "The Cherry Tree"; GARA ZORA India's Newest Exponent of Symbolic Dances; HALLEN & HUNTER "Just for Fun"; HARRY HINES the "58th Variety"; DUGAN & RAYMOND in "They Auto Know Better"; OLGA COOK Dainty Singing Comedienne; DUPREE & DUPREE A Novelty in Cycling; "THE HEART OF A NATION" Twelfth and Last Installment of the Uncle Sam at Work Motion Picture; GEORGE DAMEREL & CO. in the Musical Comedietta "Temptation." Evening Prices, 10c., 25c., 50c., 75c. Matinee Prices (except Sundays and holidays), 10c., 25c., 50c. Phone Douglas 70.

S. F. Symphony Orchestra

ALFRED HERTZ CONDUCTOR
NINTH PAIR SYMPHONY CONCERTS CORT THEATRE

Friday Afternoon, March 24, 3 P. M., Sunday Afternoon, March 26, 2:30 P. M.
Program: Symphony No. 13, G major, Haydn; "The Pied Piper," Symphonic Poem, Frederic Jacobi, (First Performance Anywhere); Symphony No. 7, C major, F. Schubert.
PRICES: Friday, $2, $1.50, $1, 75c; box and loge seats $3; Sunday, $1, 75c, 50c; box and loge seats, $1.50. Tickets on sale at Sherman, Cline and Kohler & Chase.

Columbia Theatre

Corner Mason and Geary Streets
Phone Franklin 150
The Leading Playhouse

Two Weeks Beginning SUNDAY, March 19th; Matinees Wednesdays and Saturdays. Selwyn and Company present

FLORENCE ROBERTS

In Robert McLaughlin's play
"THE ETHERAL MAGDALENE"

Prices: Evenings and Saturday matinees 25c to $1.50;
Wednesday matinees, 25c to $1.

Gouraud's Oriental Cream

Preserves, beautifies and purifies the skin and complexion. The favorite for over 66 years.

AT DRUGGISTS AND DEPARTMENT STORES

Boston Opera Company and Pavlowa Provide Brilliant Week

While the Boston Opera Company brought us no stars of great reputation, nevertheless the performance on Monday night of Italo Montemezzi's "L'Amore del Tre Re" for the first time in San Francisco gave local opera lovers an opportunity to hear the latest non-melodic music—which may be defined as action expressed in tone. Of this work it can be said that the Italian composer out-Wagners Wagner, is more German than the Germans. There was no attempt to attach themes to roles, and the story was unfolded as an organic composition and not merely a series of characterizations more or less loosely interwoven. Perhaps we are not yet sufficiently accustomed to the new manner, but it must be admitted that we rather missed some few "hummable" bits of diatonic melody hung on the tenor or soprano, the bass or the baritone. But if this had been the case, the result would not have been homogeneous and the Verdi tinkling would have spoiled the composition as a whole, so we must get over our lust for the fleshpots of ear titivation if we are to sit with the illuminati, the pundits of modern music.

It would appear that the individual performances must be subordinated to the work of the master, so no great names are needed to enhance the presentation. Not that it is to be inferred that the singers were in any way an inferior lot. On the contrary, Jose Mardones, who sang on the opening night, Archibaldo, the aged father of Manfredo, has a voice whose gorgeous flexibility and diapason like volume, combined with the haunting quality that characterizes all great art of whatsoever nature, would have nearly justified the price of admission alone—to reduce aesthetic achievement to terms of commerce. The tenor, Giovanni Zenatello, shared with Mardones both the acting and singing honors in an opera which was primarily written for the male voices. The essentially lyrical quality of Maggie Teyte's voice was enhanced by her picturesque personality and exquisite tones. The minor roles were well taken, and Romeo Boscacci's tenor was quite pleasing, while Elvira Leveroni made the most of her small role.

On Tuesday night "Madame Butterfly," with the Japanese prima donna in the eponymous part, provided another sensation, and of a different kind. This is the first time that East has met West in quite this way on the local operatic stage, but in the glamor of the stage there was no shock to those whose sensibilities might have been offended by the suggestion of miscegenation; and Luther Long's dream of beauty harmonized by Puccini in no way suffered by the apposition. While it cannot be said that the Japanese lady's emotional quality was quite satisfactory to Western ears, yet she adopted the Italian method, and we were not asked to listen to an Orientalized version of Cho-Cho-San.

There were some who regarded Pavlowa merely as added attraction, but to others it was a Pavlowa season, and these again were not disappointed, for never in her career has the premier danseuse performed more brilliantly. Indeed, it may be said that, while like Anna Held in a quite different form of stage entertainment, she surrounds herself with a bevy of youth and beauty, yet so far does she suffer from comparison that she may be said to shine all the more radiantly. Radiant—that is the word—not scintillating or brilliant or any of the harder adjectives. The Imperial Ballet Russe—by the way, how many Imperial Ballets are there in Russia?—gave us Tschaikowsky's "Snowflakes" on the opening night, and scored the next evening with Bizet in Spanish ballet.

The Background of the War Zone

Vienna has suffered most of all in the high price of foods since the war began, according to the United States Department of Nation's Bureau. Meat that sold a year ago at 20 cents a pound is selling now for 47 cents. Many other foods have gone up in proportion. Bread prices are not given. In Berlin beef rose from 22 cents to 35 cents; veal from 22 to 38 cents; and pork from 20 to 30 cents. Bacon is selling at 64 cents, twice as much as a year ago, and ham has risen to 58 cents. Lard has doubled in price. Eggs at 80 cents a dozen are twice as high as a year ago. Prices in great Britain are given as 44 per cent more than a year ago. The rise in France has been about 23 per cent. In Italy prices have gone upward very slowly for the last seventeen months. Meats alone showed an appreciable increase. Prices in the Netherlands, the only neutral European country shown, have risen steadily within the year, but not so rapidly as in the belligerent countries. Food on the whole costs 3 per cent more in the United States now than a year ago, the bureau estimates.

An addition of 35,000 men to the authorized strength of the standing army, which the law now limits to 100,000; the expansion of this force in case of war to 275,000; the "virtual Federalization" of the militia organizations of the several States, and the increase of their aggregate strength to 425,000; and the development of an available reserve force of men who have served in either the army or the militia—these are the outstanding features of the Army Reorganization Bill fathered by Representative Hay, of Virginia. This is a step in the right direction—as long a step, perhaps, as a Democratic Congress could be expected to take. The most controversial feature of the Hay Bill is its proposal to increase Federal Control over the militia. From all sources—the regular army, the cadet corps, and the militia—there should be produced a reserve force of officers and men amounting, at the end of six years after the plan should be put into effect, to 743,000 men. Adding to these the regular army recruited to a war-footing (275,000) and the active militia (425,000), there would be available a total force of 1,443,000 trained men.

"The building expert who was sent to East Prussia to report on the damage to house property there estimates at 300,000,000 marks ($75,000,000) the sum necessary to re-erect the buildings of all descriptions which have been destroyed," says the Morning Post's Berne correspondent. "The German government proposes to reconstruct the working class homes so that, if possible, only two families, and never more than four, shall live in one house."

PASSING OF AN EXEMPLARY CITIZEN.

Frank Jameson Symmes, who passed away this week at the age of 69, possessed unusual qualities in constructive work which he enthusiastically contributed to the upbuilding of San Francisco and the development of its trade. As president and later vice-president of the Thomas Day Company, he largely extended their business into new fields, and as president of the Central Trust Company and later receiver of the Central Trust Company, he became a figure in local financial circles. He accepted civic duties as an obligatory part of his day's work, and was always at the fore front when political matters were at issue. He was among those conscientious citizens who believe that every man should give an honest hand in every effort to develop his city, State and the nation along the best course conceived. Perhaps these ideas were naturally inculcated through his early training in the U. S. Navy, where he served several years till his resignation in 1871. He was a most likable man socially and in business, and frequently was made the chairman or president of social, political and business gatherings. At the time of his demise he was an active member of at least a score of local clubs, societies and other organizations. He is survived by a widow, Mrs. Anna A. Symmes, by two daughters, Mrs. Anxon S. Blake and Miss Mabel Symmes, and by two sons, Whitman Symmes, manager of a large group of Comstock mines, and Leslie W. Symmes, consulting engineer.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS

No. 19071 N. S. Dept. No. 10

Estate of ANTON MICHALITSCHKE, Deceased.

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned Executors of the last Will and Testament of Anton Michalitschke, deceased, to the creditors of said all persons having claims against the said decedent to file with the necessary vouchers within ten (10) months after the first publication of this notice, in the office of the Clerk of the Superior Court of the State of California, in and for the City and County of San Francisco, in the New City Hall at Van Ness avenue and Market street, San Francisco, California, or to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers within ten (10) months after the first publication of this notice to the said Executors at the office of their attorney, William F. Sawyer, Rooms 411-414-415 in the Montgomery Building at No. 13 Kearny street, in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, which last named office the undersigned executor has appointed to be held in all matters connected with said estate of Anton Michalitschke, deceased.

JOSEPH MICHALITSCHKE
JOSEPH FRIEDLANDER

Executors of the last Will and Testament of Anton Michalitschke, Deceased.

Dated San Francisco, California, March 17th, 1916.

WILLIAM F. SAWYER, Attorney for said Executors.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES

BY OUTSIDER

"Outsiders see most of the game."—Old Saw.

The Sports of the Smart Set

As Seen by A. S. MacLeod

"A Bunny a Day"

Judging by the press reports of the beagle hunts on the peninsula one would think that the main object of the chase was to supply the market with deceased rabbits. Did the grammar school undergraduates who write much of this drivel ever hear of playing a game? The biological significance of sport, especially of the chase, apparently is beyond the kindergarten.

College Golf

There are 230 members of the University of Washington Golf Club at Seattle. Is there any reason why the local colleges should not have more flourishing golf organizations? Within two miles of Stanford University there is a perfectly good golf links belonging to Percy Selby, or rather to the estate of his family, and as he is a fan himself, and desirous of preserving the course, there is no doubt but what the Palo Alto College could make some favorable arrangement for its use. At present the grounds are occupied as a kind of neighborhood club.

Polo Purlings

The members of the do-you-remember-when club held a session at El Cerrito field last Sunday, when the Whites and Reds contested at polo. Old Uncle Dick (Tobin) shaved off his long white whiskers and Gaffer Tom (Driscoll) was induced to abandon his crutches to take part in a game, while Pop Hobart was hoisted to his saddle by a derrick. At least that is what one would think, to hear much of the talk that is reflected in the press, and the impression prevails that these players belong to the prehistoric period of rear entrance tonneaus and ordinary bridge. However, they were there with the same old wallop, and there is no reason to assume that an entirely new Slasher team will be chosen for some time to come.

The game started off at a lively pace. The Reds, who gave an imitation of team work, at once took the lead, Hobart and Splivalo making goals from passes by their team mates. The Whites rallied and soon were able to take a safe lead, which they maintained.

The White play revolved around Driscoll and Tevis. With long rides down the field, Tevis would carry the ball to Driscoll, who, by precise hitting, sent the willow goalward. Butters and Harry Hunt, who made his debut on the San Mateo field, also wore the white colors.

One of the prettiest plays of the match was made in the third period by Tevis. The No. 3 rode the ball at midfield, and took it through for a score. On the knock out he pulled it out again and ran down to the other goal for a second tally.

Sides—Whites: Charles Butters, No. 1; Harry Hunt, No. 2; Will Tevis, Jr., No. 3; T. A. Driscoll, Back. Reds: George Cameron, No. 1; R. M. Tobin, No. 2; R. B. Splivalo, No. 3; Walter Hobart, Back.

Watkins' Wonderful Waggle

No, when it comes to golfing, Watkins isn't all in all, Just what a careful student of the game would care to call A finished man; yet there's one thing he does with so much grace—

He makes the other players see they stand in second place. His stroke is seldom perfect, he is pretty sure to scuff, Or when his swing is not too low, it's seldom low enough; But all who chance to see him feel that, though they strive and strive,

They cannot match the waggle that he takes before the drive. I wish I could describe it, but alas! it can't be done; It's a rhythmic sway and tremor and a joggle all in one; It's a symphony of motion; an harmonious, complete, All-pervading wave of wonder from his shoulders to his feet. How he loves to pose and teeter as he gazes at the ball, And although he isn't likely to disturb the sphere at all, 'Tis of small account to Watkins, for he innocently thinks His preliminary waggle makes him master of the links.

—N. Waterman.

"Modern Art Collector."

The contents of this unique monthly magazine is filled with beautiful impressions of the printer's best and most delicate work, representing many of the most representative paintings of members of the Society of Modern Art. In this December issue are sympathetic representations in colors of the "Swiss Chalet," by Harry B. Lachman, "Ilonka Karasz" by Eugene Speicher, "Dutch Girl," by Ruth Murchison, "Spring," by Fritz Winold Reiss, "Landscape," by Elizabeth Grandin, "Autumn," by Aileen Dresser, "Elephantiasis," by C. Bertram Hartman, and numbers of capital cartoons in black and white from clever pen artists. The illustrations of highly artistic examples of commercial art are original, elevating and indicate a wider horizon opening in that field of endeavor. This issue of M. A. C. richly represents Decorative Art as well as Modern Art, and furnishes original articles on "The Problems of Art," "Modern Embroidery," and other interesting decorative realms.

Price $1. Published monthly by the Society of Modern Art, New York.

"Wild Flowers of California."

As a gift book, this is one of the most beautiful editions of its kind issued in the West. The contents cover sixteen of the most attractive and best known of the leading wild flowers of California: blazing star, scarlet and blue larkspur, baby-blue-eyes, Mariposa tulip, Matilija poppy, California azalea, scarlet paint brush, columbine, ruby lily, mission bells, California poppy, scarlet fritillaria, ground iris, Diogenes lantern and farewell to spring. The reproduction of these glorious and richly colored flowers are lifelike, and would attract the bees and insects which haunt the originals. Opposite each plate is a letter-press descriptive of the plant and its story, accompanied with a verse from the writings of the poet who expressed best the flower's meaning in this world.

Price, $2. Published by H. S. Crocker Company, 565 Market street, San Francisco, Cal.

"Democracy in Oregon."

Oregon's 14 years of experience with direct legislation has been a most valuable demonstration for the rest of the world, especially for the rest of the United States, of the possibilities and difficulties of real Democratic government. The Oregon system is reviewed historically and descriptively in a comprehensive study by Prof. James D. Barnett of the University of Oregon, entitled "The Operation of the Initiative, Referendum and Recall in Oregon." It is an impartial, though sympathetic study, and the author's method of embodying in his text liberal quotations from many sources has given the book the added value of a representative symposium. Many practical difficulties have been met with in the effort to make direct legislation express the honest and intelligent opinion of the people, but these difficulties, Dr. Barnett's review discloses, have been met as they have come up with a reassuring degree of success. On the whole the verdict is that direct legislation is a success, and that it has come to stay.

$1.00. Published by the Macmillan Company, New York.

"The Beloved Physician."

How much a man can do after he has been pronounced "down and out," has rarely, if ever, been demonstrated more remarkably than by Edward Livingston Trudeau, who went into the Adirondacks in 1873 a physical wreck, and though never regaining his health, yet lived to help thousands of other people to live, and died only last November. Two volumes are at hand telling the story of his "conquering fate by acquiescence," one a little sketch by a friend, the other Dr. Trudeau's own work, finished while he was yet able to do anything of the kind. The books are "The Beloved Physician," by Stephen Chalmers (Houghton Mifflin Company, $1), and "An Autobiography," by Edward Livingston Trudeau (Doubleday, Page & Co., $2.)

The reader who has access to both these volumes is advised to read the little one first. It is only of pocket size, 98 pages long, and serves as an admirable introduction to the autobiography. Mr. Chalmers introduces himself as a sort of Watson to Trudeau's Holmes, a man to whom the doctor chose to reveal himself as he could not to the multitude. The book begins with an extract from Dr. Trudeau's last public utterance, five years before his death, when, as president of the eighth congress of American physicians and surgeons, he delivered an address on "The Value of Optimism in Medicine," a theme which he exemplified in his own practice. Mr. Chalmers is able to say a number of things about Dr. Trudeau's large place in the medical world which one could hardly hope to find in a modest autobiography, and he packs a lot of well-worth appreciation into his brief sketch.

"Wall Street Stories."

The visitors in New York City who pauses in front of Trinity Church and looks eastward down the narrow defile between the cliff-like rows of office buildings, may well feel a wondering disappointment. "So this is Wall Street!" he exclaims, blankly. It is—and yet it is not. For Wall Street has ceased to be a topographical expression; it is a figure of speech. The true Wall Street is at once a battle-ground, a snug harbor, a lure to the unwary, a treasure island, a jungle—in fact, a miniature cosmos, with a unique and highly developed life of its own. Of the many attempts to portray it in fiction, Mr. Edwin Lefevre's "Wall Street Stories," remain the most vivid, actual, vital presentation of the most exciting and fascinating "game" in the world.

Published by Harper & Brothers, New York.

—Manager Morrisson of Techau Tavern announces that work on the new Techau Tavern Ice Palace at the corner of Eddy and Jones streets, is being prosecuted with vigor, and that the new rink will open about April 15th. A large corps of professional skaters from the New York Hippodrome has already been engaged and will repeat in San Francisco their New York successes. No expense will be spared either in the equipment of the Ice Palace or the presentation of the spectacles which will delight the public. Professional teachers will instruct novices in the art of ice skating, and give the more proficient lessons in fancy figures. Spectators will find ample and comfortable accommodations.

—Hortense—I can only be a sister to you, Alphonse. Alphonse—Then give me back my presents. Hortense—Why, Alphonse! Who ever heard of a sister doing such a foolish thing as that?—Judge.

The HELGESEN GALLERY

ANNOUNCES

A SALE WHICH WILL CLOSE OUT EVERY EXPOSITION PICTURE ON HAND

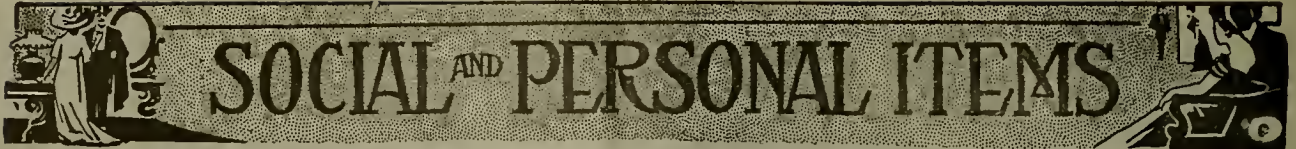

This Includes reproductions of the Fine Arts Palace, the Lagoon, the Italian Court, etc. All of these are

Hand Colored in Oil and in Beautiful Frames

$15.00 Pictures	-	Now $7.50
10.00 Pictures	-	Now 5.00
7.50 Pictures	-	Now 4.00
7.00 Pictures	-	Now 3.50
50c. Prints	-	Now 25c

All our Fine Mirrors and Framed European Pictures are also included in this sale

345 SUTTER ST. ABOVE GRANT AVE.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL ITEMS

ENGAGEMENTS.

- BROWN-MOOSER.—The engagement of Miss Florence Marie Brown, daughter of Mrs. Mary J. Brown, to Louis H. Mooser, Jr., is announced. The Brown family came here from Chicago a few years ago. Mr. Mooser's family is well known here. He is a brother of Mrs. Hart Weaver. The wedding is planned for the early fall.
- BROWN-RAGLAND.—From Washington comes the announcement of the engagement of Miss Lois Hartwell Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Colvin B. Brown, formerly of this city, now of Washington, D. C., and Rene Chastaine Ragland of Spokane. The wedding will take place in December in Washington, and the young couple will live in Spokane.
- GALE-BREDIUMS.—Mr. and Mrs. Milton Gale have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Ruth Gale, to Mr. Charles F. Bredimus. The wedding will take place this summer.
- POILLION-GUERRICH.—Of interest to a wide circle of friends in San Francisco is the engagement of Miss Gladys Poillion of New York and Francis Guerrich, who also makes his home in that city. The news has just been received in notes sent by the bride-elect. Miss Poillion is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Edward Poillion. She is well known in San Francisco, where she made extended visits. Francis Guerrich is prominent in the social and business world of New York. The marriage will take place in June.
- POWER-LIGHTS.—News comes from Washington, D. C., of the engagement of Miss Mary D'Alton Power to Lieutenant William Tupper Lights, U. S. N. Miss Power visited here a couple of years ago as the guest of her brother, Neal Power. Lieutenant Lights was formerly stationed at Mare Island, but is now in Washington, D. C. The wedding will take place after Easter.
- SAHLEIN-MYER.—Formal notes announcing the engagement of Miss Marion Sahlein and Alfred Meyer were sent out a few days ago. Miss Sahlein is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sahlein and is a sister of Miss Rose Sahlein and of Mrs. Edgar Schwabacher of Seattle. Alfred Meyer is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Meyer. Mrs. Ernest J. Sultan is his sister, and he is also a brother of Julian Meyer. The wedding will take place in June.
- WILLIAMS-HEATH.—The announcement last week of the engagement of John Heath, formerly of San Francisco, and Miss Margaret Bruce Williams of Red Springs, N. C., has created an unusual amount of interest among the smart set. The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Fitzhugh Williams. The wedding is set for early in April, and the young couple plan to leave immediately for Havana, Cuba.
- WORMSER-EPSTEIN.—The engagement of Miss Elsie Wormser of Fifth avenue, and Milton Epstein of San Diego, is announced by the mother of the bride-elect. No date has been set for the wedding.

WEDDING ANNOUNCEMENTS.

- BENJAMIN-SUSSMAN.—The marriage of Miss Ray Benjamin and Leo Sussman will be an event of the early summer, the attractive girl having chosen the month of roses for the all-important day. Miss Benjamin is the daughter of Mrs. Rebecca D. Benjamin of Laguna street. Leo Sussman is the son of Mrs. Emilie Sussman, and makes his home with his mother on Pacific avenue.

WEDDINGS.

- LUBECK-GUTERMAN.—A pretty wedding that is of interest to a wide circle of friends in this city and Los Angeles took place this week at the St. Francis Hotel, when Miss Betty Lubeck became the bride of Abe Guterman of Los Angeles. About fifty relatives of the bride and bridegroom witnessed the ceremony, which was celebrated in the Italian room. Rev. Dr. M. S. Levy officiated. After the ceremony an elaborate wedding supper was served and dancing was enjoyed. Mr. and Mrs. Guterman, on their honeymoon, will make an extended trip of the State. They will reside in Los Angeles.
- MARSHALL-HUNTER.—The friends of Mrs. Juliet Fisher Marshall and Mr. Willard Thue Hunter have received cards announcing their marriage on Saturday, March 11th. On returning from their honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Hunter will reside at 114 Twenty-seventh avenue.
- THOMPSON-AYDELOTTE.—Mrs. Laura Renfro Thompson became the bride of Captain John T. Aydelotte on Thursday evening, March 9th. The ceremony was performed at 5:30 at the home of Rev. Dr. William Guthrie of the First Presbyterian Church. Only a few intimate friends were present at the ceremony.

LUNCHEONS.

- BELL.—A group of friends enjoyed the hospitality of Mrs. J. Franklin Bell at an informal luncheon Tuesday at her home at Fort Mason.
- CASTLE.—Mrs. Neville Castle gave a luncheon Thursday in honor of her mother, Mrs. A. H. Voorhies. The other guests were friends of Mrs. Voorhies.
- CLARK.—Mrs. Crawford W. Clark entertained at a luncheon and bridge party Thursday at her home in Presidio Terrace.
- CLARK.—Major-General and Mrs. J. Franklin Bell were the honored guests at a luncheon given Monday by Captain and Mrs. Richard Clark in Berkeley.
- LAINZ.—Mrs. J. R. Laine was hostess at an informal luncheon Monday, the Francisca Club having been the setting for this affair.
- McMULLIN.—A delightful luncheon, followed by bridge, was enjoyed by a group of friends of Mrs. Latham McMullin at the Francisca Club on Monday.

- SHARON.—Mrs. Frederick Sharon gave an informal luncheon Wednesday afternoon at the Palace Hotel.
- SLACK.—Miss Edith Slack was hostess at luncheon Friday afternoon, when she complimented Mrs. Jack Mighell and Miss Linda Bryan. The luncheon took place at her home on Sacramento street.

DINNERS.

- BREEDEN.—Mr. and Mrs. Henry Clarence Breeden have issued invitations to a dinner to be given this evening at their home in Burlingame.
- GALLOIS.—An informal dinner was enjoyed by half a dozen friends of Mr. and Mrs. John Gallois Tuesday evening at their home on Russian hill.
- JURS.—Mr. and Mrs. Peter Jurs were hosts at a dinner dance at the Palace Hotel recently, giving the affair a compliment to Mr. and Mrs. Ernest L. Hueter.
- MAHONEY.—Mr. and Mrs. Andrew J. Mahoney gave a dinner party on Saturday night, having a score of guests. Dancing concluded a pleasant evening.
- PASCHEL.—Philip Paschel was host at a dinner party at the Palace on Saturday evening, giving the affair in compliment to Miss Madge Wilson and Dr. Chester Moore and Mr. and Mrs. Noble Hamilton.
- SCHEWERIN.—Ronnie Pierre Schewerin was host at a delightful dinner Sunday evening at his home at Burlingame.
- YOUNG TURKS.—Melville Bowman, whose marriage to Miss Helen Hinckley will be an event of the fall, will be the honored guest at a dinner to be given this evening by the Young Turks at the Bohemian Club.

TEAS.

- CHIPMAN.—Mrs. William F. Chipman gave a tea on Tuesday afternoon in honor of her mother, Mrs. Alfred Harrell, who is here from Bakersfield.
- HEINMANN.—Mrs. Richard Heinmann entertained Tuesday at her home at a tea in compliment to Mrs. Richard Hanna, a young matron who has recently come here to live, and Mrs. Edward Janns, formerly Miss Florence Cluff, who is here from her home in Los Angeles visiting her mother, Mrs. Willam Cluff.

RECEPTIONS.

- DAVENPORT.—Miss Eleanor Davenport was hostess Thursday afternoon at a reception at her home in California street, complimentary to Miss Amy Holman, English contralto, who came here last winter from London.
- SHAVITCH.—Mrs. Vladimir Shavitch was hostess at a reception given Friday at her home in this city.

SUPPER PARTIES.

- BRUCE.—Lewis Bruce entertained at the opera Friday evening and afterwards at supper at the St. Francis. The affair was in compliment to his fiancée, Miss Alice Chambers.
- CROCKER.—Mrs. Henry J. Crocker, who entertained a party of friends at the opera Tuesday evening, later took her guests to the Palace Hotel, where they enjoyed supper.
- GREGG.—Wellington Gregg entertained at supper at the Palace Hotel, following an evening at the opera.
- LEE.—Mr. and Mrs. Cuyler Lee entertained a box party at the opera Tuesday evening, and with their guests later enjoyed supper at the St. Francis.

THEATRE PARTIES.

- FRANKLIN.—Dr. and Mrs. Walter Scott Franklin gave a theatre and supper party Monday night in honor of Mrs. Charles Nelson, wife of Commander Nelson of Philadelphia, for whom a number of affairs are being given.

THE HOTEL PLAZA

overlooking the beautiful Plaza of Union Square, the Hotel of refinement and service, is offering special rates to permanent guests.

Hotel Plaza Company

CARDS.

CULLEN.—Mrs. W. O. Cullen will be the complimented guest at a bridge party to be given on the afternoon of March 21st by Mrs. William Hoff Cook in her attractive home on Commonwealth avenue.

PICNICS.

KARMANY.—A picnic luncheon in Vaca Valley was enjoyed Sunday by a group of friends of Colonel and Mrs. Lincoln Karmany, the trip being made by motor and luncheon served under the trees.

LEE.—Mr. and Mrs. Cuyler Lee took some friends on an automobile picnic Sunday down to the woods about Saratoga and motored to other points.

ARRIVALS.

BOCQUERAZ.—Mr. and Mrs. Roger Bocqueraz, whose marriage was an event of February 23d, arrived home Tuesday from their honeymoon, which has been passed in the southern part of the State.

KNOX.—Richard Knox has arrived from Honolulu to spend several weeks here. He is being welcomed by his many friends.

LOWE.—Mrs. James Lowe arrived Tuesday from Australia, where she has been visiting relatives and is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Wm. Matson.

McBURNEY.—Mr. and Mrs. Richard McBurney of Chicago have come to San Francisco on a visit of several weeks. They spent the week-end in Burlingame as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Mountford S. Wilson.

SCHWABACHER.—Mr. and Mrs. Louis A. Schwabacher have returned from New York, where they have spent the last five weeks, and have taken apartments at the St. Francis Hotel.

TUBBS.—Mrs. William B. Tubbs and Miss Emily Tubbs have returned from a visit of several weeks in Santa Barbara.

DEPARTMENTS.

CARDEZA.—After a delightful visit in San Francisco, during which she has been entertained at many pleasurable affairs, Mrs. J. W. M. Cardeza left Wednesday for Honolulu.

CHEN CHI.—Regretful good-byes were said Thursday to Chinese Commissioner-General to the Exposition and Mrs. Chen Chi, who sailed for their home in the Orient. Accompanying them are several members of the Chinese Commission.

DEVEREUX.—Mr. and Mrs. William B. Devereux have gone to Angels Camp, to be away a couple of weeks.

FLOOD.—Mr. and Mrs. James L. Flood left Sunday for New York. They will be away until about May 1st, and will spend part of the time at Virginia Hot Springs.

GOVE.—Admiral and Mrs. Charles Gove will sail Tuesday for Coronado with Mr. and Mrs. John D. Spreckels on their yacht, Venetia. Admiral and Mrs. Gove plan to spend several months at this popular resort, returning to San Francisco for the winter months.

LOOMIS.—Francis B. Loomis has gone to Washington, D. C. He is not expected home for a month or so, being detained on important State business.

PARK.—Miss Eleanor Park has gone to Australia, for an indefinite visit.

ROBINSON.—Mrs. Marshall Robinson and her daughter, Miss Katherine Robinson, left Thursday for their home in Washington, D. C., after having spent the past six months in San Francisco.

STILLMAN.—Mrs. Stanley Stillman left Friday for the East, planning to enjoy a month's visit in New York and Boston.

WALSH.—Mrs. Thomas F. Walsh of Washington, who has been at the Fairmont for several days, sailed Wednesday for Japan.

INTIMATIONS.

ARMSBY.—Mrs. George Armsby and her two children are at Pasadena. They are undecided about the summer, but will probably go to some Atlantic coast resort. The Armsby home in Burlingame will be occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Flier this summer.

ASHE.—Mr. and Mrs. Porter Ashe, who have been passing the winter at the Hotel Cecil, left Tuesday for San Rafael, where they will sojourn during the summer months.

COWDIN.—Mr. and Mrs. J. Cheever Cowdin will join the Hopkins family group at Menlo this summer. Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Hopkins will also be in Menlo for the summer months.

DUTTON.—Mrs. Henry Foster Dutton is sailing on Wednesday, the 23d, for Honolulu to visit her sister, Mrs. Harry MacFarlane. Mrs. Dutton will be away several weeks and has no plans definitely determined upon for the summer.

EYRE.—Mr. and Mrs. Perry Eyre and Miss Elena Eyre, who have been passing the winter in town, left Friday for their country home in Menlo Park. They were accompanied by Miss Mary Eyre, who will be their guest until her departure for Paris.

FINNIGAN.—The Misses Kathleen and Aileen Finnigan will soon move into their new house which they have built in San Mateo.

HAMILTON.—Miss Helen Hamilton has returned to town after a visit of several days in San Mateo with Mr. and Mrs. George H. Howard.

HEBNER.—Mrs. Leopold Hebner is here from New York visiting her mother, Mrs. Eugene Bress.

HEYENEMAN.—Walter Heyeneman, who left some time ago for the Orient, is en route to St. Petersburg, to be away indefinitely.

JOSSLYN.—Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Josslyn are planning to leave town April 1st, and will reopen their beautiful country home in Woodside. Their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Rathbone, will be their house guests during the summer.

NICKEL.—Miss Beatrice Nickel, who has been enjoying an extended stay in the East, is at present the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Fritz Naze in New York. Another California visitor at their home at present is Archibald Johnson.

PRITCHETT.—Lieutenant E. E. Pritchett, U. S. A., and Mrs. Pritchett, who have been at Santa Barbara most of the time since their arrival from Manila, have gone to Washington, where they expect to remain several weeks.

WELCH.—Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Welch and their children have left the St. Francis, where they have been living for a year, and have gone to San Mateo for the summer.

Birthday Greeting Given Ina Coolbrith

One of the most kindly, spontaneous and appreciative gatherings that ever took place in San Francisco was recently given Ina D. Coolbrith, the poet, by some fifty of her admiring friends at her charming home on Russian Hill. Miss Coolbrith, radiating with happiness, acknowledged that it was the first birthday party she had ever had. Special honors were heaped upon her. She is the only woman member of the Bohemian Club, and President Deering of the club was delegated to personally extend the club's compliments and good wishes to their highly esteemed member. As president of the Authors' Congress at the recent Panama-Pacific Exposition, Miss Coolbrith attained more than local distinction, and many were the compliments and honors showered upon her for the steadfast and elevating work she has done for literature in California. Miss Coolbrith was one of the first women selected by Bret Harte to contribute to the Overland Monthly, and her meritorious and favored work began with the first number, July, 1868.

During the afternoon, the guests contributed an informal program rendered as follows:

Words of Greeting, Zoeth Eldredge; "Meadow Larks," by Ina Coolbrith, read by Mrs. Ella Sterling Mighels; Recitations from Edwin Markham and Stephen White; Songs by Mrs. Knes-ter; A Talk About the Duck Baby poem, Leo S. Robinson; Songs, "In Blossom Time" and "Quest" (Overland, August, 1868, second issue), words by Ina Coolbrith, Mr. Smith; Original Poem Dedicated to Miss Coolbrith, Alfred E. Acklom; Cycle of Songs by Richard Watson Gilder, Mr. and Mrs. Knes-ter; Essay, "The Game of Words" (Julius Myrom Alexander), and original poem to Miss Coolbrith, Nathan Newmark; "Brother Felix," poem, by the author, R. E. White; Original Poem, Mrs. E. D. Donovan; Where Mother is, is Best, poem by Chas. Phillips, "After the Lights Went Out," Leo Robinson, read by Miss Craig; Poem by Ina Coolbrith, Mrs. Olivia Kingsland; Poem dedicated to Miss Coolbrith, read by the author, Mr. Turrell; Poem, "A Love Song," and humorous verse on the high rents of 1906, Mrs. Marian Taylor; "The Laurel," original poem dedicated to Miss Coolbrith at the time of her coronation, by the author, Mrs. Tompkins; Speech by Miss Coolbrith, Poet Laureate.

Frank P. Deering, president of the Bohemian Club, was introduced, and presented the felicitations of the club in a speech of fine taste and feeling. Mrs. Marian Taylor acted as chair- man. Between forty and fifty guests partook of Miss Cool- brith's hospitality, including ladies and gentlemen of promi- nence in literary, scholastic, musical and club circles.

Ornamental Trees and Plants

Orange, Lemon and Grape-Fruit Trees Assorted

7 for $10.00

Fruit Trees 3 for $1.00

Lawn Seed Bedding Plants always on hand

Bay Counties Seed Company

404 Market Street, San Francisco

MILTON TONINI, Mgr. Phone Garfield 1625

Los Angeles Pasadena Oakland

Fred Hartsook

PHOTOGRAPHS

41 GRANT AVENUE

San Jose Sacramento San Francisco

Financiers of this country unite AMERICA EASILY ABSORBING on agreeing that the manner in ITS SECURITIES IN EUROPE. which the European offerings of American stocks and bonds are being absorbed is most encouraging. At the close of last year the combined holdings of the banks and trust companies in the New York Clearing House stood at $804,251,000, exclusive of United States Government issues and mortgages owned by the trust companies. This represented an increase of $207,000,000, or more than thirty-four per cent for the year. Before the war the highest figure ever reported for such holdings was $625,200,000 in 1912. Furthermore, the loans of the New York City Clearing House banks increased during 1915 by nearly $700,000,000, of which a large part must be due to advances upon these securities purchased from abroad. Doubtless, the savings banks and insurance companies have also been large buyers of bonds during the last few months. In February, the output of bonds issued by States, cities and counties of the United States aggregated a little less than $29,000,000, which was about $10,000,000 less than the output in that month of last year. But the records show that during January and February, taken together, the total flotations of this sort reached $81,300,000, as against $64,800,000 in the corresponding period of 1915.

—Sixteen Hawaiian sugar plantations closed the year with $8,751,000 cash on hand. This fund has been built up during the past two or three years in anticipation of free sugar. Now that the likelihood of free sugar in the next few years is practically past, the fund will be kept nearly intact for the purpose of meeting this or other unforeseen vicissitudes. The fund, however, is deemed large enough by most of the plantations, so that stockholders in most instances can reasonably expect a full distribution of 1916 earnings, which promise to break all records. The amount of the cash balances on hand December 31, 1915, were:

Ewa, $593,000; Hawaiian Agricultural, $600,000; Hawaiian C. and S. Co., $1,316,000; Hawaiian Sugar, $550,000; Honoumuli, $240,000; Kekaha, $390,000; Koloa, $90,000; Maui Agricultural, $1,122,000; McBryde, $71,000; Oloa, $453,000; Oahu Sugar, $1,000,000; Onomea, $715,000; Pepeekeo, $400,000; Pioneer, $415,000; Waialua, $398,000; Wailuku, $400,000. Total, $8,751,000.

—Taking the present position of the world at large, there is no doubt whatever as to the fact of paper money inflation. Between July, 1914, and the beginning of 1916, Germany's paper currency increased $1,500,000,000, or something like 320 per cent. France added $1,519,000,000 to its note circulation within that period, or 113 per cent. In Russia, the Imperial Bank's note issues alone rose $1,783,000,000, or 217 per cent, and there was probably other currency put out. Austria has not ventured to publish the figures of her wartime paper money issues, but they are certainly very large. The Bank of England's note circulation at the end of 1915, together with the special currency—authorized when the war began, put out by the Treasury for account of the English joint-stock banks, and secured by government bonds and commercial paper—showed a total increase of $692,000,000, an expansion of 367 per cent. What might be thought to bear more immediately on the present discussion, the national banks of the United States, under a law passed shortly after the panic of 1907, issued $380,000,000 of "emergency currency" in the first three months of the European war, as against a previously outstanding national bank-note circulation of $750,000,000.

—It is understood that the volume of war orders booked by Du Pont has reached an aggregate of $400,000,000. A large portion of this enormous business was, of course, filled in the fiscal year to December 31st last, and was the potent factor in the production of the $57,840,758 of net profits which the company reported.

—The management of the Rescue-Eula Mining Company has issued the following official report on the discovery of the new vein in its property: The vein was cut in the north cross-cut, which was extended into the Eula claim on the 950-foot level. The strike is generally east and west, with a dip to the north. Drifting has taken place on this vein towards the east, with a double shift working, and at the time of the present report 40 feet have been attained. The drift is in a continuous body of ore, with an average width of 5 feet of excellent values. The first lot, milled on the 5th instant, returned $21.50 per ton, this ore coming from the point at which the vein was cut, which caused it to be more or less mixed with waste, which was broken under the conditions incident to the intersection of the vein. The second lot was milled on Wednesday, the 8th instant, and consisted of 53 tons, which gave returns material higher than the first lot. At the present time they are breaking about 15 tons per day in the drifting operations. A third lot, which will be of higher grade than the first two, owing to the consistent improvement in values in drifting eastward, will be milled Saturday.

—Revenues of forty-three railroads operating east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio and Potomac, increased by about $3,800,000 during the month of October, 1915, under the new rates authorized by the Interstate Commerce Commission in the 5 per cent case. In an estimate made public recently the Commission says this increase is estimated by taking the traffic actually handled in October and applying both the old and new rates. On freight traffic the increase was about $2,700,000, and on passenger about $936,000.

—The Crocker National Bank makes a very favorable showing in the report of its financial condition in answer to the call of the Comptroller of the Treasury as of March 7, 1916. Loans and discounts reach $16,302,476, indicating that loans are more widely made; cash and sight exchange, $15,023,659. Surplus and undivided profits aggregate $3,359,157, a notable increase, and deposits reach $26,802,080. Resources and liabilities total $34,493,053.

REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF THE Anglo & London Paris National Bank
OF SAN FRANCISCO

At the Close of Business, March 7, 1916

RESOURCES
Loans and Discounts	$16,512,643.06
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation at par	2,500,000.00
Other U. S. Bonds at par	100,000.00
Other Bonds	2,982,145.01
Other Assets	400,000.00
Customers' Liability on Letters of Credit and Acceptance	2,706,267.19
Cash and Sight Exchange	20,278,434.41
	$45,479,489.67

LIABILITIES.
Capital Stock	$ 4,000,000.00
Surplus	1,500,000.00
Undivided Profits	466,137.81
Circulation	2,461,600.00
Letters of Credit, Domestic and Foreign and Acceptances	2,706,267.19
Deposits	34,345,484.67
	$45,479,489.67

OFFICERS

HERBERT FLEISHLACKER, President
Washington Dodge, Vice-Pres. Wm. H. High, Assistant Cashier
J. Friedlander, Vice-President H. Choynski, Assistant Cashier
C. F. Hunt, Vice-President G. R. Burdick, Assistant Cashier
C. R. Parker, Cashier J.W. Lillenthal, Jr. Asst. Cashier
A. L. Langerman, Secretary.

—Anglo and London-Paris National Bank furnishes an excellent financial showing in its report to the U. S. Treasurer, as of March 7th, last. Loans and discounts are credited with $16,512,643; cash and sight exchange with $20,278,434. Surplus and undivided profits aggregate $1,966,137, and deposits total $34,345,484. Resources aggregate $45,479,489.

—Tonopah Belmont made another big bullion shipment for the week ending March 11th, the values totaling $79,020, in the first shipment, and $25,129 in the second.

Will Silver Become a Standard After the War?

Herman Zadig, a well known mining man and an authority on the production of gold and silver in the West, says that the present great conflict in Europe will make many changes, not alone in the map of Europe, but also in the financial centers of the whole world. When it comes to finances, the whole world is so closely bound together that, if a change takes place, it will affect every country throughout the whole world.

He says: "The most radical change that I believe will take place will be the remonetization of silver. It will be a bitter pill for many financiers and writers of political economy to swallow. But what can the financier do? This war has cost an enormous sum of money, and it looks as if it would be almost impossible for the different nations ever to be able to pay the interest on their outstanding obligations.

"The great banking houses in Europe, with the aid of the bankers of America, will work out a proposition which will place the finances of these different European nations now engaged in this terrible war on a solid footing. It will be quite natural that, when these bankers meet and discuss their finances, they will first find out how much gold there is available to secure the many billions of debentures issued since the war, and which the different governments have promised to protect when due. They will find that there is not gold enough in the world even to partly protect their debentures, and the only thing that will be left for them to do is to remonetize silver and thus increase the metallic currency of the world almost double.

"Naturally, a great many bankers will say that the world will be flooded with silver and that it is impossible for that reason to keep up a double standard. I maintain that nothing of the kind will happen; the more silver produced, the more money in circulation, and the better the general business. Certainly their argument might be correct if any one nation would stand out; the value of a silver dollar must be the same all over the world. That was the trouble when Bryan made his campaign for free silver; he was defeated because America alone could not have adopted the double standard. The gold would have all gone out of the country in a very short time.

Conditions have somewhat changed since then; America, through the war, is holding a greater part of the gold held before the war by England, France, Russia and Germany, and, therefore, is really not in need of any change; but from the friendly feeling existing in America towards the restoration of silver to its former standard, America will not object, but will lend its aid toward the change.

I believe that America is likely to be the first nation to propose to establish a new ratio between gold and silver, and thus help a cause that will benefit the world at large. The restoration of silver will mean a great boom to all countries using silver now. People trading with countries where silver is the standard, will know, when they buy or sell goods in these countries, that when the time comes to settle there is no difference through either the rise or fall of silver.

